Not Enough Water, So College Burns

Courier 1-7-39

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Jan. 5—(Special)—Fire of undetermined origin last night destroyed the combination shop and laboratory building at the State Agricultural and Mechanical College, located near this city, with an estimated resulting loss of $35,000.

Inadequate water facilities which would not afford sufficient pressure to enable equipment to function effectively, seriously interfered with the efforts by Huntsville's Fire Department to extinguish the flames which completely razed the structure.

Bell Named President Of Leaders

Delegates Hew Close as Possible To Set Program

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Twenty-three presidents and representatives of Negro land grant colleges in the United States closed a three day convention here Wednesday, after having heard some of the more brilliant minds in this section express their views on adult education and the Negro land grant colleges. Holding their sessions in Douglas hall at Howard university members of the convention heard the discussions which pointed toward a new field for expansion of their services.

Steering as far away as possible from any discussions of the Gaines decision as it affects their institutions, delegates made infrequent and chary references to the decision and hewed as close as possible to their prepared program.

"However," said John W. Davis, president of West Virginia State college, "this convention has accomplished two things of import. The first is bringing forcibly to our members, the proximity of adult education and its needs and values to the Negro. This is important because soon large sums of money are to be released by the federal government for the extension of this work and we want to be on the ground floor when such appropiations are made.

TALK WITH WALLACE

"Second, we had an interview with the secretary of agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, in which we placed the plight of the Negro land grant colleges right in his lap. The white South is not nearly so objectionable to progress in Negro education as are some representatives here in this section. The more money the government puts out for extension work, the less Negroes get progressively."

Thus, the charge of sidetracking the Negro was indicated and the secretary asked for some 600 additional field workers to be used in conjunction with this work.

Mr. Wallace listened attentively and promised that he would take the matter under advisement. The committee waiting on Mr. Wallace reported to the convention that some progress had been made and it was reasonable to expect some action on his part in the very near future.

The convention was divided into discussions which proved the need background, implications, problems involved; the various experiments conducted and the philosophy of adult education topped off on Wednesday by a panel discussion on the place of the college in a community.

ADULT EDUCATION NEEDED

Speakers in the first group showed the need for adult education in rural areas, urban areas, in employment and in the improvement of home life among Negroes. During one of the discussions following the initial meeting the subject of foreign languages as a necessity arose. Said one speaker in replying to Dr. Walter H. Gaumnitz of the Federal Security agency, office of education:

"Land grant colleges are too academically respectable. I fail to see the value of a language in this course. The world is full of practical experiences and languages are a window dressing from a dim and distant past."

Values of adult education were given a thorough going over and the conference heard a great deal of discussion on relative merits.

During the discussion of the background and implications involved, Dr. E. Franklin Frazier, professor of sociology at Howard, gave a scholarly review of the social trends of significance for adult education. Said Dr. Frazier:

NOT RETURNING TO FARM

"The Negro upon completion of his education is not going back to the farm. There is no place for him to go on the farm when he finishes school. In the first place, they don't need Negro labor, and the Negro is not ready to participate in some steps the government plans and undertakes in the new system of agriculture in the south.

"The Negro marks progress," he continued, "to the extent in which he has been able to break down his isolation.

"One-third of the Negro population now lives in cities," Dr. Frazier continued," and old ideas of education do not fit the present pattern of Negro life. Today, Negroes are living in an entirely different world from that of their ancestors, and new conditions have arisen which make the old methods useless. By living in the city the Negro loses his sympathetic touch."

A. Ford Hinrichs, of the department of labor, speaking on the same program, discussed the economic trends of significance in adult education.

Discussion of the problems involved, training of teachers and kindred problems occupied the morning session Tuesday, when James A. Atkins, specialist in Negro education, WPA, and Ralph M. Dunbar, chief library service, division, Federal Security agency, revealed some startling facts.

COLLEGE AREAS ILLITERATE

Mr. Atkins declared that the highest rates of illiteracy in several states serviced by land grant colleges were found in counties in which the colleges themselves were located. Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia were named as particular examples. Mr. Dunbar said that facts indicated the average reading intelligence of the entire country was around the 6th grade and emphasized the need for traveling libraries to help rectify this situation.

NEW OFFICERS

Offices elected for the coming year were W. H. Bell, Alcorn A. and M. College,, president; Felton G. Clark, Southern university vice president; R. B. Atwood Kentucky State college, secretary; and J. M. Gandy, Virginia State college, treasurer.

Educators Touch on 'Touchy' Gaines Decision, But Take No Formal Notice of It! Schools Too 'Academically Respectable'

WASHINGTON. —(ANP)—Twenty-three presidents and representatives of Negro land grant colleges in the United States closed a three-day convention here Wednesday, after having heard some of the more brilliant minds in this section express their views on adult education and the Negro land grant colleges.

College Areas Illiterate

Mr. Atkins declared that the highest rates of illiteracy in several states serviced by land grant colleges were found in counties in which the colleges themselves were located: Alabama Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia, were named as particular examples. Mr. Dunbar said tha facts indicated the average reading intelligence of the entire country was around the sixth grade and emphasized the need for traveling libraries to help recitfy this situation.

The panel discussion under the direction of Dr. Howard H. Long of the board of education of Washington attracted the largest audience of the convention. Taking part were R. O. Lanier, assistant director, division of Negro affairs, NYA; Doxey A. Wilkerson, staff member, Carnegie study of the Negro in America, President Felton G. Clark, Southern university, Louisiana and Major Campbell C. Johnson, executive director Y. M. C. A., Washington. 11-24-39

Whether or not the college was responsible for improving the civic and social life of the community evoked many interesting points. However, the general conclusion was that the college was not directly responsible for the civic and community life of the immediate community, although it could take a definite part in such activities and become an important factor thereby.

Dr. Frederick J. Kelly, chief division of higher education, U. S. Office of Education, told of the national survey of higher education for Negroes and Chester S. Williams of the Federal Security agency, office of education, also spjoke on this program.

Dr. Gandy Dissents

It was at this point that the discussions became more general. Dr. Gandy of Virginia State college, disagreed with the purpose of the survey and stated again, that just as he had voted against it when first proposed, he was against it. He also touched on the "touchy" Gaines affair here when he said that "states have their own ideas of what they are going to do. Colleges that opposed the plans are getting jittery already. I have no ill feeling to any college promoting its own welfare."

And again, President Watson, in discussing the merits of education in private and public schols of higher education:

"Negro schols are doing inferior graduate work because they try to cover to much ground." He also indicated that graduate work should not be attempted by Negro schools inasmuch as they are not prepared for it.

The question of whether or not the teachers of today, compared with the teachers of years ago, brought bitter arguments both for and against. The white teachers of yesteryear were compared with the present teachers in th colleges interestingly and as one member said: "The white teachers came out of the North with a Bible in one hand and a spelling book in the other. Today the moral side suffers."

New Officers

Officers elected for the coming year were W. H. Bell, Alcorn A. and M. college, president; Felton G. Clark, Southern university, vice-president; R. B. Atwood, Kentucky State college, secretary and J. M. Gandy, Virginia State college, treasurer. Call 11-24-39

Florida A. and M. Gets $35,000 Library Grant

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Feb. 3—Preside..t J. R. E. Lee reported this week that Florida A. and M. college is one step closer to realization of its building expansion program through the generosity of the General Education Board.

A total of $35,000 has been allotted to the college to be applied in two parts—$25,000 to the building of the library and $10,000 for library equipment. This is the first concrete evidence in the direction of the realization of this need, but sources for the remaining $145,000 to complete the proposed $175,000 structure will have to be contacted by President Lee before this part of the expansion program will be fully realized.

Farmerette

AGRICULTURE as a vocational pursuit has long been one of the most attractive features of the program of the Florida A. and M. College. The good looking, winsome lass pictured above is registered in the Division of Agriculture. Miss Jimmie Ellis, like the men registered in this division, has been interested in agriculture since her girlhood days when she planted gardens and peddled vegetables to the neighbors. Her ambition is to be a farm and home demonstration agent.

The enrollees in the agricultura division specialize in agricultura science, agronomy, animal husbandry, dairying, horticulture, poultry and teacher-training.

Seven Buildings Dedicated at Florida College

GENERAL

LAND-GRANT COLLEGES

(By Wlilam Henry Huff for ANP)

The conference of Presidents of Negro Land-Grant colleges, though 16 years old, is something new under the sun, and bids fair to be the saving grace of advanced and technical education for Negroes in the southern and border states.

The United States supreme court decision in the case of Lloyd Gaines places the larger and greater responsibility upon the shoulders of the Negro Land-Grant colleges, and without exception the states involved are going to enlarge the physical plants and endowment of these institutions in order to meet the demands of this decision as well as a growing public opinion.

The burden of Negro education from high school upward and in many instances the grammar grades has ever been borne by northern philanthropy, but the day has come when it should be borne by the proper agency the state. It should have been borne by the state all the time and naw the supreme court says it must be.

Some church schools we shall always have, but those who insist that they must exist must pay the price in order to keep them in the accredited associations. We know of colleges and high schools in the South paying their teachers as low as $20 and $25 per month, and at the same time require them to teach three or four different subjects every day! For such schools the evening shade of doom has already appeared upon the nearby horizon, and their grave diggers, spades in hand, are standing at attention awaiting the nod of time.

One must not only peep at these land-grant colleges but he must visit them in fact and inspect them in full in order to know what they are doing for the elevation of the Negro race in America at large and in the South in particular. The old prejudices against attending schools that teach students to work with their hands has died from its own weight. Of course these schools teach the student how to use the "knife and fork," but they realize that some one must use the plow and the reaper before the knife and fork can be used, so they teach both.

These schools know that drawing room etiquette will come as a matter of course when one learns how to build the house and decorate the drawing room. The world is entirely too full of women who spend hours painting their faces, lips and finger nails, and minutes or less with problems of domestic science! The world and the Negro race in particular is too full of men who focus their whole attention to outside appearance while raising the funds for such appearance by questionable means. Education, home environment and spiritualization—the old Booker Washington idea—education of the head, heart and hand are the only insurance we know of against these fickle and nefarious conditions.

Land-Grant Colleges May Be Used To Train Aviators For Next War

Mississippi Representative's Bill Would Give Us a Chance To Get In On Ground Floor of Latest U. S. Defense Gesture.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2—Under the terms of a bill offered in the House last Wednesday by Representative Dan R. McGehee, Democrat, of Mississippi, land-grant colleges would be lent airplanes and flying equipment to aid them in furnishing training in flying. All land-grant colleges entitled to the benefits of the Agricultural College Act of July 2, 1862, would be eligible for loans of airplanes and flying equipment.

There are 17 colored colleges in as many Southern States as compared with 52 institutions for white students in all sections of the United States.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of War to make such loans of airplanes and flying equipment to them as he may deem advisable, taking into consideration the demand at each college for flying instruction, the available ground facilities, and climatic conditions.

INSTRUCTORS WOULD HAVE TO BE WHITE

Before any loans of airplanes and equipment would be made, a college applying for such loans must enter into an agreement with the Secretary of War to provide instruction in flying under his supervision to enrolled students applying for such instruction and found eligible under regulations prescribed by him.

The college is also required to agree to employ as instructors Air Corps Reserve officers who have been approved by the Secretary of War as qualified, who have graduated from the Air Corps Advanced Flying School not less than five years prior to their appointment as instructors, and who have had at least one year of active duty with a tactical unit in the Army Air Corps or its equivalent.

Under this section, the instructors would have to be white. No colored commissioned or enlisted personnel has ever been detailed to duty with the Army Air Corps and there are no colored Air Corps Reserve officers.

None of the 17 colored land-grant colleges in the South has a mixed faculty. It has been regarded in most of them as against public policy to have mixed faculties and even in private institutions white [illegible] mixed faculties have been opposed

NEW COURSE AT GA. STATE IS SUCCESSFUL

INDUSTRIAL COLLEGE, Ga.—Feb. 2.—(ANP)—Dr. B. F. Hubert, president Georgia State college, announced this week that the apprenticeship teaching program in vocational agriculture, conducted in cooperation with the State Division of Vocational Education, is meeting with marked success.

F. M. Staley, teacher-trainer at the college, is in charge of the work, which began on Jan. 2 when 12 teacher-students were sent to 7 different centers in various parts of the state to get first-hand information on the many duties they will be expected to perform as teachers of agriculture.

Trainees are also required to make surveys of selected farms and obtain data on social life, the farm home, scope of production, value of farm enterprises, crop and livestock practices and farm expenses and income.

The trainees are being taught to set up farm programs, including food budgets for the family, feed requirements for animals, major and minor farm improvement projects and acreage requirements. Charts of this data, with accompanying recommendations, will be made to be used later in conduct of the classes.

After January 22, according to Director Staley, each trainee will be expected to have made operative and managerial job analyses and lesson plans for each of the 40 jobs to be taught. Actual teaching by the trainees will begin on Feb. 1, after all preparatory work has been finished. The apprenticeship teaching program, he says, is well-planned and offers a rich opportunity to traineees and a valuable service to the districts in which the seven teacher-training centers are located.

GEORGIA STATE STUDENTS TO TEACH IN WHITE SCHOOLS

STATESBORO, Ga., Feb. 9—(ANP)—Two Georgia State College students will do their practice and demonstration teaching at the Statesboro High Industrial school, white vocational school in Statesboro. The industrial school has for the past five years accepted students from Georgia State college to do practice teaching. This year the students, Marian D. Heath and M. C. J. Horton, began their work January 3, under the direction of M. M. Martin, vocational teacher.

During the past two weeks, the practice teachers have closely observed the academic and agricultural programs that have been set up for the students and farmers of Bullock county.

INITIAL PURPOSE OF PROGRAM EXPLAINED

The initial purpose of the program has been followed through successfully and a knowledge of the county has been obtained by the making of surveys and studying actual farming conditions.

During the next ten days, the trainees will check closely on information obtained and get in readiness for actual teaching.

M. C. J. Jorton will instruct the junior classes in the industrial high school, an evening class at Willow Hill public school and a part time class at the Piney Grove school. Heath will instruct the senior evening class and a part time class in the New Sandridge school.

In various schools and communities the students will give instruction, demonstrating and teaching, terracing, killing, cutting and curing meat, planning farm business and planning a year-round garden.

TRAINS FUTURE LEADERS, BELIEF

Prof. F. Marcellus Staley, State teacher trainer of Georgia State college, is pleased with the work being done in Statesboro and Bulloch county and says that he believes this to be an ideal situation for the training of students.

He authorizes and approves the surveys. The surveys have all been completed, summarized and tabulated and will be used as a basis for building up the State practice program for the individual farmer for 1939, and a long-time program which will extend through 1944.

In setting up the programs, an attempt was made to design them to meet the needs of the farmers and at the same time create a love for the farm by the boys who are the future leaders and upon whom depend the burden of prosperity.

INTER-COMMUNICATION SYSTEM IS INSTALLED

Students Complete Project at Georgia State.

An inter-communication system between the administration building and the agricultural building at the Georgia State College was completed today by students of the electrical division, Prof. B. F. Hubert, the president, stated.

The system will enable Professor Hubert to speak to the various departments in the agricultural building or listen in on the class periods from his office in the main building. The system will be extended to cover all the principal buildings on the campus, and will save much time now lost in sending messages across the campus from headquarters to the various buildings. The system provides for two-way communication and those in the other buildings can carry on a conversation with Professor Hubert and others in the administration office. Also included is a system of bells through which the change of classes can be announced simultaneously or the classes in all the buildings may be turned out on any special occasion.

The first line is 800 feet in length and is run underground. A test showed the work was a success, the boys having done a creditable job of designing and installing the entire system under the direction of Leroy Brown, the electrical instructor.

In the agricultural building are several departments, including the extension service with the farm and home demonstrations agents, the natural science laboratories and agricultural department classes.

DR. R. R. WRIGHT TO VISIT SUNDAY

Easter Programs Will Be Held at Georgia State.

The faculty and student body of Georgia State College near Thunderbolt is much interested over the prospective visit from Dr. R. R. Wright, Philadelphia bank president, who served as its first president. Dr. Wright is scheduled to arrive by airplane at the Municipal Airport about 10:15 o'clock tomorrow morning. It is understood at the college he owns the plane and uses it in his traveling despite his advanced years. He is on the way to Haiti, it is understood at the college, and plans to inquire into the Haitian coffee situation, being much interested in the sale of the coffee in the United States to aid the residents there.

Bishop D. H. Sims of the Alabama A. M. E. Church, a graduate of the college here and former president of Allen University, is to either meet Dr. Wright here or arrive with him. A delegation from the college has been arranged to meet them, President B. F. Hubert said. Leroy Brown is to head this delegation, he being head of the mechanical and electrical work at the college.

Tomorrow morning at 9:45 o'clock the students will have their Easter service and the Rev. J. O. J. Taylor, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, is to speak. There will be special music. Vesper services at 6 p. m., will feature an Easter program by the chorus and student body. It is expected Dr. Wright will attend this vesper service, though arriving too late for the morning service.

Meanwhile other phases of the college work is being pursued at the present time, President Hubert said. The college is featuring a realistic program of education, the main thought being to do for themselves as much as possible in the way of laundry work, building repairs, he explained. The students have put up booths for convention exhibits in Wilcox Hall, and they will be used at the state teachers' convention next week. The students have also installed an inter-communication system between the agricultural building and the main administrative building 800 feet away. It is telephonic and is wired underground. They have also worked over the old silent motion picture machine, made it a "talkie," and have perfected a booth in which operators can hear and determine that whatever films are being shown are properly synchronized.

M. C. J. Jorton will instruct the junior classes in the industrial high school, an evening class at Willow Hill public school and a part time class at the Piney Grove school. Heath will instruct the senior evening class and a part time class in the New Sandridge school.

In various schools and communities the students will give instruction, demonstrating and teaching, terracing, killing, cutting and curing meat, planning farm business and planning a year-round garden.

TRAINS LEADERS

Prof. F. Marcellus Staley, state teacher trainer of Georgia State college, is pleased with the work being done in Statesboro and Bulloch county and says that he believes this to be an ideal situation for the training of students.

He authorizes and approves the surveys. The surveys have all been completed, summarized and tabulated and will be used as a basis for building up the state practice program for the individual farmer for 1939, and a long-time program which will extend through 1944.

In setting up the programs, an attempt was made to design them to meet the needs of he farmers and at the same time create a love for th farm by the boys who are the future leaders and upon whom depend the burden of prosperity.

SCOTLANDVILLE, La.— Topping its silver anniversary celebration with a personal visit and speech by Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and an address by its founder, President-Emeritus J. S. Clark, Southern University returned to normal this week.

The First Lady was invited to the university on her southern tour by President Felton G. Clark, who previously along with Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, had told her of the work of the school.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that she was surprised to find an institution already worth more than $2,000,000 and still progressing as evidenced by a current building program of $1,250,000. She further congratulated the college upon having an "A" rating by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

When presented with a huge bouquet of roses by Dr. Felton G. Clark, Mrs. Roosevelt glowed over their beauty and kissed them tenderly. Her only stops in Louisiana were at the executive mansion and at Southern.

CAPITOLIA

Under the Ding Dong Domes

by JACK HANCOCK

There's a quotation in the lead paragraph of the January issue of "Library News," publication of the State Library Commission, that's worth repeating tfor the reading of every Southerner; it's by Walter Lippman, who commented: "The adventure of American life today is in the South. Everything that was ever possible to civilized man is possible here."

Little known outside educational circles and among the negro race, Alcorn A. and M. College, the only state-supported college for the colored race, is taking some long steps ahead, all of them aimed at bettering agricultural training of the students. Prof. W. H. Bell, president of the institution, reveals some of the new program in a recent letter to the governor, commenting that, among other things, that "in order that the teachers of vocational agriculture may be better trained, we are sending the trainees into rural communities to spend from two weeks to two months, to work with and under a successful teacher of vocational agriculture, that they might get experience in the type of situation, with which they will be called upon to deal when appointed as teachers themselves." The college has also constructed a community cannery, a potato curing house, a community syrup mill, a poultry plant and do community incubating in a 1,400-egg capacity electric incubator. The college has also placed 769 acres of its land in a soil conservation project to extend over five years, in co-operation with the U. S. department of agriculture, "in order to set up a model farm to serve as an example to local farmers who visit the college."

Opening a very ordinary looking letter the other morning, Governor White was greeted with "Aloha to Your Excellency and the State of Mississippi from Hawaii." It was a note from a member of the House of Representatives of the territorial legislature, seeking some information about Mississippi affairs. Closing, Rep. Francis G. Aona says "In Hawaii we say 'Hahalo annui loa, meaning I thank you very much, and Aloha."

Dings 'n Dongs—On the theory that Jackson workers who come in contact with the traveling public ought to know all about state buildings and other points of interest, the Chamber of Commerce here is sponsoring a program of having employees escorted to and through the buildings . . . first group in the New Capitol were the women employees of the Edwards hotel * * * Col Erst Long of Ripley, member of the Electrification Authority, and member of Governor White's staff, was in the other day, accompanied by his wife . . . first visit here in several months * * * Rep. Marshall Perry of Choctaw dropped in the other day to see how things were going too . . . and Rep. Sam Lumpkin of Tupelo called by to say hello to Governor White and the office staff.

A. and T. Begins Second Quarter of Rural Work

GREENSBORO, N. C. — The rural engineering department of the Agricultural and Technical College recently announced that it has opened its doors to trainees of the community.

The engineering class has just finished one of its projects for the year. Four see saws were constructed, which added much needed equipment to the play ground of the Oak Ridge School. This project was financed by the NYA under the leadership of Mrs. B. Jones.

Time has been set aside to visit each trainee's community to aid them in constructing or repairing jobs of the shop. Preparations are being made to visit communities four times each week.

The addition of new trainees has made the prospect for the new quarter a brighter one. The new members show much interest in their work and are working hard to prepare themselves for the next quarters' work in their communities. Their work this quarter will be in the shop familiarizing themselves with the procedures of the work to be done next quarter.

Sound discussions of current events are to be found weekly on the Journal and Guide's editorial page.

New Trades Building for State College, Orangeburg

Orangeburg, Jan. 7.—P. V. Jewell, dean of the division of mechanical industries at South Carolina State A. and M. college gives an account of the work, purpose, and objectives of this division in a reorganization plan that has recently been launched by the administration at the college.

The training of Negroes for gainful employment in skilled work is the primary function of the division of mechanical industries. In pursuance of the plan for the development of the college, provision is being made by President Whittaker for adequate and appropriate housing this division.

At the present time a new building (pictured above) is being constructed through the aid of the works progress administration. The central portion of the building is rapidly approaching completion and work on the two wings is expected to be released promptly. When completed the building will constitute a typical industrial layout consistent with its purpose—industrial training. Although the building is to be durably constructed, its interior finish is designed to approximate working shop areas. Simplicity and strength are the elements of its construction.

In these perplexing times when unemployment problems are of such great significance, it has been necessary for this division to critically examine its curriculum and to correct as far as possible any elements that might tend to turn out from the college any unemployables. This the members of the faculty of the division of mechanical industries under the leadership of the president of the college have endeavored to accomplish through its present reorganization program. The new building is but one phase of this reorganization. Under the reorganization plan, the division is divided into four fundamental departments, namely: (1) Building construction; (2) industrial education; (3) mechanics; (4) industrial administration.

All of these departments are co-ordinated by the dean of mechanical industries.

The functional head of the department of building construction is President Whittaker, who is a registered architect in South Carolina. The students in this department are trained in the construction and maintenance of small buildings and dwellings compatible with what experience proves to be required of competent skilled workers in South Carolina, more especially Negro skilled workers. The department offers fundamental classroom and laboratory experience for men involving basic training in drafting, carpentry, millwork, masonry, plastering, plumbing, painting and wiring.

In addition to the formal unit projects laboratories, the department uses the maintenance of the college property, buildings and grounds to give students working "experience under job conditions." This is not only an asset to the student but constitutes a great saving to the state of South Carolina in cash expenditures.

In all construction work on the college campus, properly qualified students have had an opportunity to contribute services and gain valuable experience. In the last few years students have constructed a dairy barn, cow shed, machine shed, tool house for the division of agriculture in keeping with designs approved by the United States department of agriculture bulletins.

Add to this the maintenance work in wood-frame and brick buildings on the campus and it is fair to assume that their training is definitely practical. The instruction in this department is offered by two professors and several specialized instructors. In the improved housing about 11,000 square feet of floor area is assignable to the work of these students specifically.

The functional head of the department of industrial education is Prof. H. W. Crawford, who is also connected with the division of vocational education of the state department of education. At the college his work consists in providing classroom instruction compatible with the needs of industrial teachers in the various Negro schools in the state of South Carolina. It also involves planning of laboratory shop courses and production experiences for those men who expect to become shop teachers. As an extension agent under the direction of the state supervisor of industrial education, he serves to give aid to "in service" Negro industrial teachers in interpreting the state plan of vocational education; to offer technical assistance in aiding industrial educational teachers to "put the program across"; to supply approved construction methods to teachers who are temporarily in need of engineering or architectural advice in pursuance of their practical training of high school boys; to assist the state department of education in any way possible in evaluating and standardizing Negro industrial education.

The instruction in this department involves the use of all shops and shop instructors plus one part-time professor of industrial education. In the improved housing program all shop areas and about 1,800 square feet of recitation floor space serve these students specifically before graduating. Students in this department are required to do "cadet teaching" for at least a month under specially selected shop teachers throughout the state to acquire teaching experience "under job conditions."

The functional head of the department of mechanics is Dean P. V. Jewell, a registered engineer. The students in this department are trained in the elements of engineering principles necessary for mechanical employment. Training is made accessible to students in this department in elementary land measurements, structural measurements, electrical measurements, and heat measurements which experience has proven to be required of competent skilled workers in South Carolina more especially Negro skilled workers in mechanical employment. Towards this end, the department offers fundamental classroom and laboratory experiences in practical physics, elements of surveying, machine shop practice, welding and forge work, electric wiring for illumination and motors, automobile and tractor repair, and steam boiler operations.

In addition to the formal classroom and laboratory experiences, the department uses the college power plant, illumination system, farm machinery, truck, tractors, fences, and other mechanical equipment to provide experiences for the students "under job conditions." This constitutes a valuable training to the students while at the same time it provides an element of economical maintenance for the college. The planned housing facilities provide for about 8,500 square feet of floor area planned specifically to meet the needs of these students.

The department of industrial administration is a co-operating unit in connection with the department of business administration in the division of arts and sciences. Its course of study is planned to substitute industrial experiences for certain special commercial and secretarial type subjects. Its objective is to train a student in the fundamental operations connected with a small business which will require of its operator part-time productive work and part-time business activity. Particular emphasis is placed on those businesses which experience has proven offer opportunities for one with limited capital to invest, more especially Negroes of limited capital. Industrial core offerings at present center around managing and operating tailoring shops, leather shops, electrical shops, printing and photographic shops, automobile repair shops.

In addition to these industrial courses students in industrial administration elect elementary courses in economics, business management, salesmanship, business English, introduction to accounting and business law. In the planned improved housing, 7,000 square feet of floor area is provided for these students. Curriculum requirements in this course are of necessity reasonably flexible and generally are designed to meet the need of the individual student according to his business plans.

In addition to the special training provided for students enrolled as majors in the division of mechanical industries, this division co-operates with the division of agriculture in providing agricultural shop training to all of its students. Units provided for agricultural students consist of specially designed courses in (1) Agricultural drafting; (2) farm wood shop; (3) farm metal shop; (4) farm forge shop; (5) farm painting and decorating; (6) farm leather shop.

The course in agricultural drafting represents a group of studies culled from the listed farm shop requirements. This work is offered by the division of mechanical industries as a matter of economy in housing and to assure that the farm shop instructors will have that breadth of experience and training necessary for farm shop work on an advanced level.

In order to assist the students of the division of mechanical industries in those non-technical aspects of an "employable," they are required also to get fundamental training in the practical aspects of English, mathematics, science and the fields of human behavior which will lead to making them better citizens. The improved facilities will no doubt provide a great incentive to our students and to prospective students of the college.

The primary objective of this division is training for employment. Hence, considerable attention is paid to each individual student. His needs, his interests, his aptitudes, and his peculiar personal opportunities finally decide his curriculum. Towards that end each course of study proceeds from general to specific subjects and experience. In the freshman year, general subjects constitute 78.5 per cent. of the time requirement and technical subjects 21.5 per cent. In the senior year, generalized technical or related subjects constitute 40 per cent. and specialized technical subjects 60 per cent. of the student's program.

In this way academic maturation proceeds with the student's maturation. The future of this division seems to be promising. With the provision of decent buildings and with the provision of modern equipment, a new impetus should be provided to both faculty members and students. The present trend of agricultural crop reduction and control seems to imply that more Negroes must look to specialized training outside of agriculture if they expect to become self-sufficient. The development of the Santee-River power unit will lead to more electrical work. More emphasis on low cost housing for elimination of rural insufficiencies should lead to further opportunities in building construction.

The limit of the service that this division can render to the state lies only in the limit imposed on the opportunity for employment of skilled Negro workers.

TRAINING NEGROES FOR GAINFUL EMPLOYMENT

Orangeburg, S. C., March 3—A new library and boys' dormitory at South Carolina State A. and M. college, Orangeburg, S. C., were dedicated Founder's Day, March 3, with impressive services in the morning, inspection of build ings and grounds in the afternoon and an alumni program and banquet in the evening.

The boys' dormitory, which is the first unit of President Miller F. Whittaker's five-year plan to be completed is named Miller Hall, honoring the Dr. Thomas E. Miller, Founder and first president of South Carolina State A. and M. college.

The new $80,000 library, just completed is named Wilkinson Hall, in honor of Dr. R. S. Wilkinson, former and second president of the institution.

Prominent administrators and educators of both races, alumni and friends were present at the dedication exercises to congratulate the administration and trustees. Benj. F. Hubert, dynamic president of Georgia State Industrial College, Savannah, Ga., delivered the dedicatory address.

Dr. Thomas Best, prominent dentist, Orangeburg, S. C., (acting for Dr. E. H. McGill, President of Allen University, Columbia, S. C., who could not serve on account of illness) delivered the Founder's Day address.

The junior partner, Robert Lafaye, on behalf of Lafaye and Lafaye, Architects for the new buildings, presented the keys to the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, C. F. Brooks, of Laurens, S. C., who accepted them on behalf of the Board.

In his address, President B. F. Hubert, Georgia State Industrial college, dedicated the two new buildings "to a new and deep appreciation of our obligations and our opportunities here in the South".

He stated that those who have enjoyed superior advantages and opportunities have obligations to those who made it possible for them to succeed.

These oblizations gave the basis for the subject of his address, which he called, "A Debt of Love".

In the library and dormitory dedicated, he declared, are tangible evidences of the fact that the South is beginning to realize that in the Negro, it has a chance to pay this debt of love.

He further stated that desirable progress in the South along approved lines must be initiated by the people of the South and aiding in this progress must be the Negro who has been provided real opportunity in such fields as soil technology, crop production home management, the technical arts, professions, and fine arts.

Dr. Thomas H. Best paid glowing tributes to the Founder, Dr. Thomas E.. Miller, and leaders who have made possible the present plant, buildings and grounds at South Carolina State A. and M. college.

The beginning of State college was the result of the determination of its founder, Dr. R. S. Wilkinson, the second president had left a rich heritage as a result of his 21 years service. President Miller F. Whittaker, the present president had accepted the challenge coming from these predecessors and is quietly building here a monument to eight hundred thousand Negroes and a million white people here in South Carolina.

Other prominent educators on the program included President J. J. Starks, Benedict college, Columbia, who gave the dedicatory prayer; President Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Palmer Memorial college, Sedalia, N. C., who stated she came out of love for her friends the late Dr. R. S. Wilkinson, Mrs. Marion Birnie Wilkinson, his wife and President Miller F. Whittaker. Prominent platform guests present were, I. D. Pinson, president, Morris college, Sumter; Miss Rossa Cooley and Miss Grace House, principal and vice-principal, Penn school, St. Helena Island; Dean M. G. Fraser and A. M. Graham, business manager, Winthrop college; President J. B. Randolph, Claflin college; L. L. McLain, editor Orangeburg Observer; J. B. Felton and W. A Schiffley, State Dept. Education; and E D. Smith engineer and inspector PWA.

At the conclusion of the morning program, H. W. Crawford, president of the local chapter of the Alumni association presented a gift of one thousand dollars on behalf of the S. C. State College Alumni to be used in purchasing books written by the Negro or written by others about the Negro. These books will be placed in the Alumni Reading room of the new library.

The new Wilkinson Library building is a modern fire-safe structure built of red brick, trimmed with limestone and covered with a red tile roof. The biulding is three stories in height with the main reading room on the 3rd floor. It was so placed in order that this room might have a maximum of light and quiet.

One enters the biulding to behold a commodious stairway leading to the second floor. On this floor are found the reading room for newspapers and magazines, and the Alumni room which will house the collection of works on the Negro and other rare and valuable books. Each of these rooms will accommodate 75 readers. The stairway leads on to the 3rd floor where one enters the main reading room with a seating capacity of 150 persons. In the center is the imposing circulating desk of the library, back of which are several shelves of references for immediate reference. The walls are lined with shelves for reference books of various kinds.

Back of this main reading room are found a work room, an office for the librarian and the tacks., The stacks are the latest steel type with concrete decks and extending through five stories Each story is easily accessible by a rear stairway and an electric service elevator. The stacks have a book capacity of 65,000 volumes. The first floor of the building contains two additional reading rooms, several seminar rooms and the administrative offices of the institution.

This lovely building was made possible by a donation from the General Education Board of New York City and supplemented by a grant from the State of South Carolina. It is named in honor of former President Robert S. Wilkinson.

Miller Hall, the new boys' dormitory, is a modern fire-safe building of brick with red tile roof and gray stone trim. It measures 46x118 feet and is three stories in height, with 48 rooms each accommodating two students. The rooms are light and airy, with two cclosets and modern steel dormitory furniture. There is a trunk room in the attic available by elevator and a pressing room in the basement. Each floor contains modern lavatories and show er rooms, and one enters the building thru a spacious lobby which is comfortably furnished.

The structure cost $65,000.00, which funds were supplie by the Federal Public Works Administration and the State of South Carolina. This is the first unit year expanision program. TEXAS

Prairie View College In Texas Focal Point For Problems Of Education and Trainin

AUSTIN, Tex.—The fog which drifts along the highway from Hempstead to Houston in the early morning frequently plays tricks with the traveler.

While going along about his business, engrossed in the affairs he must dispense with to keep his little world from collapsing on his hands, the spreading veils are likely to turn fickle and part long enough to show him through the rifts the mirage of a fortified city rising high on the last roll before the monotonous coastal plains set in.

Of course, it isn't a mirage. It is Prairie View Normal and Industrial College. Set off to itself, Texas' great and only state-supported educational and training institution for Negroes, only seems off at the edge of the world. Although since 1876 it has been a world of retreat, a world sufficient within itself for a group of 1200 young men and women and their instructors and leaders, its founders placed it where it is for a purpose. In the prairie secton of Waller County in southeast Texas it is in an area about which the State's Negro population is centered.

Twenty-eight buildings are situated on a campus of more than 1,000 acres. The college, under the direct supervision of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College at College Station, offers practical courses in agriculture, homemaking and the mechanical arts, as well as full courses for the training of teachers. Its academic work leads to the Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science degrees. Its faculty is composed entirely of Negro educators, eighty in number with W. R. Banks, one of the outstanding Negro educators in the South, as its principal.

There are approximately 1,000,000 Negroes in Texas today and Prairie View is the focal point for all their problems of education and training. It was founded to provide the best teachers possible to go out to spread the benefits of learning among their people in every section of Texas. From its beginning it has driven hard at this goal. Entrance requirements, other than potentialities for progress and absorption, have been made easy and light, within the power of any worthy, industrious, ambitious individual.

Side by side with education, training has always been emphasized.

Training Emphasized

"Prairie View has always believed that its program of training should drive directly at the necessary, rather than the wished-for, results," Principal Banks insists. "We must encourage intelligent young Negro women to look upon the home arts as a field of individual achievements, if their talents do not turn elsewhere. If they must make a living they should be expert in the fields where opportunities lie for employment. If they are to be homemakers they ought to be good homemakers. If those are domestic fields, they should be the best available to enter it. The same is true with our young men. If their abilities lie in the direction of porter service, butler service, helpers, mechanics, chauffeurs, gardeners, landscape artists and work of that kind, rather than in the educational and professional fields, then they should go into those fields prepared to make a living for themselves and their families and to be good citizens."

"The Negro may be condoned for the ignorance and illiteracy of his ancestors. But there is no excuse for any present-day man or woman who knows nothing."

Early in 1936 the National Youth Administration, established in Texas as a means of approaching the problems of Texas boys and girls cut off from school because of the depression or out of school and unemployed in the general business and industrial letdown, turned its attention to the specific problems of Negro youth.

"The NYA found that these boys and girls, as was the case with boys and girls of other racial groups, were thoroughly stymied," J. C. Kellam, state director, said. "They presented themselves as good material for their state, their counties, and their communities, but it was material which had to be put to use. It was material which couldn't be wasted. There were two means by which the NYA could start the ball rolling to do something By makng a start, laynig out a pattern, perhaps, it felt it would be cooperating toward the final goal of bringing all the forces of Texas together to utilize these potential citizens to the fullest degree."

Mr. Kellam pointed out that the thing the NYA could do was to keep those boys and girls between 16 and 24 who ought to be in school in the classroom. By making possible part-time jobs within the schools they attended with funds to pay them small wages, it has been able to keep a great many of them on the road to formal education and better preparation for life, he said.

"Besides these students in elementary, high school and college, there were many others out of school and through school who needed training, experience, help and encouragement to orientate themselves."

"We began looking around for some place where this sort of work could be set up and quite naturally we turned to Prairie View. It fulfilled all the requirements of a state-operated institution with full facilities."

For two years Prairie View has sponsored project after project, and the program today is emerging from the experimental stage.

"Two dormitories housing 50 NYA girls and 50 NYA boys now have been built and are in operation on the campus. The first work was begun with girls in 1936, and July 15, 1937, the boys' program was inaugurated. The courses are for six months each.

"During the time NYA groups are at Prairie View each member performs useful and necessary part-time work at the college to earn the wages which pay his or her way. By this means each member pays the college for room, board, laundry, and medical attention, and has approximately ten dollars in cash, also. This requires half the day. The other half is devoted to instruction under the supervision of the college staff. In order that a maximum of benefit may be wrung from the time spent, the work for wages is carefully keyed to fit into the training and educational program."

In the preparation and establishment of all courses, Mr. Kellam added, a thorough study was made of Texas employment records covering a long period of time. It was concluded that if these boys and girls were to be economically and socially rehabilitated they must be trained in fields which offered at least a prospect for earning a living and taking root in life.

Domestic Service Taught

"It was found that the domestic service fields offered a good opportunity for both intelligent young Negro women and men, as well. That field, like every other, had plenty of room for those who stood out from the crowd. For this reason, in training girls great emphasis has been laid on all branches of the homemaking arts. This is training both for life and for self-support."

"In the case of young men, vocational agriculture, courses in mechanics, woodworking and allied industrial fields were provided but, in addition to these, there were added landscape gardening, butler service, cooking, the driver's rudiments of auto-mechanics—in short, the things which would lead toward a good house man's job.'

The list of courses available to these NYA boys and girls at Prairie View is long and varied. It is better understood when seen first hand, in actual operation. On paper it becomes ponderous, heavy, academic. In practice it becomes intensive, progressive, living.

Boys and girls alike are called early every morning and before their breakfast is served them at the college dining hall they put their quarters in such order as will pass fussy examination. Order, method and cooperation all are taught in this commonplace duty. These things, and the rudiments of living together as neighbors, friends and co-workers.

Mornings are devoted to training or to work, depending upon the courses shaped for each individual. What is the procedure in keeping a house through the day? It can't be learned out of a book, but it can be learned in practice. So wherever one may turn about Prairie View campus during the day he will find NYA girls learning homemaking and domestic service. In the diet kitchen of the hospital? In the parlors and guest quarters of the dormitories? In all these places and under the eye and direction of competent teachers. There is classroom work, of course, but it is more rightly to be defined as the period of co-ordinating what practice has taught.

Learn By Doing

How may a young man train himself to be a good employee for someone? Perhaps he is, this morning, working on the athletic field under the supervision of a landscape gardener, learning about the soil, the grass, the shrubs, Or perhaps this gardener has him today in a campus corner where they are planning and planting a formal garden. Perhaps he is helping put in a garbage-shield of plants and shrubs for one of the campus houses. These are things a yard-man must know. In class the boy will learn the rudiments of botany and floriculture. Another boy is at the dairy barn, working in the vegetable gardens, mending fences, helping terrace wasting land, learning the fundamentals of farm carpentry, or judging animals or poultry. Yet another is in the shoe shop, the paint shop, the machine shop, the broom shop or the garage where he learns what a chauffeur ought to know about a motor car. Or he may be in the home economics laboratory learning to cook, to set a table for any kind of meal, select and buy foods.

So the day goes. The work weaves itself into the training, and when both are done, there are hours of social activity, recreation and entertainment. The whole, in the end, is a well-rounded experience in living.

State Teachers Have Program Of Expansion

Growth Of Institution Reflected In Need, Enrollment

To provide for the training of the 5,103 Negro teachers employed to serve the 230,892 Negro pupils enrolled in the public elementary and high schools of Alabama and to offer the only State-sponsored four-year college program for the 2,000 graduates annually from the 89 Negro high schools offering a full high school course, is the two-fold responsibility of the State Teachers College for Negroes located at Montgomery and now in its 65th year of operation.

This dual function was a part of the conception of the founding of the school as the "Lincoln Normal University for the Higher Education of Negroes" which was opened in 1874 at Marion and then removed after 14 years to Montgomery in 1887 and reopened first as the "Alabama Colored Peoples' University," and soon thereafter as the "State Normal School for Colored Students." Interest in the provision for the training of teachers had been uppermost in the minds of those responsible for the administration of affairs in Alabama back as early as 1868 when the State Board of Education in that year established 10 normal schools in the State, of which five were for the preparation of colored teachers. In 1870, colored normals were in operation at Huntsville, Talladega, Mobile and Montgomery. In 1871, provision was made for four normals at Montgomery, Marion, Huntsville and Sparta (in Conecuh County).

Normal After Lincoln

By 1873, more definite provision was made for the taking over entirely by the State of the American Missionary Association school at Marion and in 1874 it became the Lincoln Normal University for the education of colored people. However, not only was there the provision in the several legislative acts of the State Board of Education of that period for the training of teachers and their certification upon graduation from the prescribed course, but there was also the proposal to organize in connection therewith "a university department in which such a course of instruction shall be established as shall meet the wants of the colored race and provide for their education in the higher departments of learning, it being the intent and purpose of this act to provide for the liberal education of the colored race in the same manner as is already provided for the education of the white race in our university and colleges."

The first act of 1887, in providing for the removal of the school from Marion and its reopening at a suitable place (Montgomery), described the enactment thus: "That there is hereby created and established a University for the education of the colored people of Alabama to be called 'The Alabama Colored Peoples' University.'" The decision of the Alabama Supreme Court that a University could not be supported from the special funds set apart for public schools for Negroes made necessary another enabling act which styled the school as "The State Normal School for Colored Students," under which name the institution operated until 1929, when the addition of the upper two years at the five erstwhile normal schools at Florence, Jacksonville, Troy, Livingston and Montgomery resulted in the change to the present name, "The State Teachers College at Montgomery."

Teacher Training Predominant

The preparation of teachers has thus remained a predominating function of the institution as was the case at the very beginning when all six of the graduates of the first class of 1880 were reported by the late President William Burns Paterson in his annual report of June 24, 1881 as "all teaching now and doing well." Incidentally two of that first class of 1880 were employed at Pike Road in Montgomery County, one of whom after these 58 years is still in active teaching service in the public schools of Jefferson County.

A "five-year normal" based on the completion of a total of 13 grades of study was developed and administered by the late Prof. Paterson during his administration, which ended with his death in 1914. A total of 380 diplomas were issued to students completing this course and practically all of them, in addition to many other students who did not graduate, saw service in the public schools of Alabama. During the administration of the late Prof. J. W. Beverly from 1916 to 1920, the school operated on the remodelled basis of the normal schools of the State, in reality as a teacher-training high school that represented 12 grades of work.

With the administration of President George W. Trenholm came the reorganization of all the normal schools of the State and the initiation of a two-year junior college professional course from which the first class was graduated in 1922, beginning a new program of professional preparation of Alabama's colored teachers on the college level:

New Program Develops

This new program was destined to grow at a rapid pace as the opportunity developed not only for those who would be persuaded to postpone the beginning of their teaching career until after they had thus had 14 years of study, but quite as much for those teachers already in service who would be encouraged through Summer school (started on the full quarter basis in 1921) and through extension courses in the Winter months (begun in the session of 1921-22) to work toward graduation from high school and then from this two-year junior college professional course.

Enrollment Increases

The rapid growth of the regular year enrollment in this two-year course and the very large Summer school enrollments of the past 10 years attest to the appeal of this service and have resulted in the graduation of 1,831 students from this two-year course during the 17-year period since that first class of 1922. The most recent achievement in this direction has been the discontinuance of issuance of any type of professional certificate to any beginning teacher without the completion of this two-year course, and the elimination of the State examinations this past Summer has resulted in the minimum academic and professional qualification of a two-year course above high school for all those who are to begin teaching in the colored public schools of Alabama.

Need Increases Rapidly

The marked rise in the number of Negro high schools that numbered only 36 of any kind in 1916-17 but had reached the figure of 71 Negro high school offering some part of the high school program in 1926-27, along with the decision of the State Department of Education to make possible the opportunity for elementary school teachers to have four years of training, occasioned the addition of the upper two years of senior college in 1929 that would lead to the B. S. degree in education and that, in terms of the curriculum pursued, would enable the graduate to teach in the elementary schools or in the high schools. With the first class in 1931, the upper division of the college at the State Teachers College at Montgomery has grown rapidly and also has served both those who would graduate with a degree before beginning their teacher career and those who would use the Summer courses and extension courses to move on from the point of junior college graduation up to this achievement of the senior college diploma. Within the 16 graduating classes since 1931 (one class each Spring quarter and one class each Summer quarter) there have been 433 students thus far to qualify for the B. S. degree and for the class B certificate which now becomes the lowest certificate which a beginning teacher can obtain who desires to teach in the public high schools for Negroes in the State of Alabama.

To meet this demand for professional training as a part of Alabama's program that has moved at such a rapid pace since its inception in 1921, the State Teachers College has had to provide for an enrollment that has grown at a phenomenal rate. Just 14 college students were enrolled in that two-year program at its beginning in 1920-21. Ten years later, there were 430 in this college program during the regular year and for the past session of 1937-38, the college department reported 1,035 registrations for the regular year. The extension department started in 1921-22 with an enrollment of 363 teachers in four counties, reached as high a figure as 1,437 in 1930-31 and enrolled 1,017 teachers in 33 counties in 1937-38.

Summer School Popular

The Summer school started with 400 the first session of 1921, had reached the 1,100-mark within five years, moved up to 2,369 registrations for the Summer of 1930 and reached a new all-time high of 3,077 students in the Summer of 1936 with over 1,500 students for eight of the past 12 Summers. With a high school and elementary school maintained on the campus throughout this period, the high school being particularly large until the City of Montgomery embarked on a senior high school program in the Fall of 1937, the gross registration for the 12-month period has been quite high with a total of over 4,000 registration for 10 of the past 13 years and with the all-time high of 5,902 students for the 12-month period of 1935-36. It has thus been a service to be measured not only in terms of 2,264 graduates from the two-year or four-year course but quite as much as an opportunity for professional improvement for all the Negro teachers of Alabama, of whom over 80 per cent have received some training through this State-sponsored institution.

Plant Expands

To meet this demand for service, the plant has been expanding at an encouraging rate although not in proportion to the growth in enrollment. In 1922, a dormitory and a dining hall were erected and thereafter some alterations made to two other existing buildings. In 1928, the institution added the large area south of Thurman Street and extending from Union to what would be an extension of Seay Street on the east. At that time, a college classroom and administration building and a dormitory for women were erected. During the past year, a WPA-financed gymnasium has been in process of erection. Now, contracts have been let for a science and health building which should be ready for occupancy in September. Improvements have been made to the campus and the institution has begun to take on the appearance of a college of some proportions.

Outside Financial Aid

Fortunately for the State, most of this recent improvement has come through substantial financial assistance from the outside. Back in 1922, it was a grant of $30,000 from the General Education Board that was put with a State appropriation of $20,000 to get the two buildings of that period. Other additions of that period were made possible by solicitations of the late Prof. G. W. Trenholm. In 1928, it was a grant of $150,000 from the General Education Board and a gift of $21,632 from the Rosenwald Fund that was put with State funds and miscellaneous contributions to secure the improvements of that period that resulted in the expenditure of $534,414.13 at that time for capital outlay. Within the past three years, it has been the Works Progress Administration that has made six grants aggregating $207,765.50 toward a capital improvement program of $280,643.50 of which the balance has been financed through contributions without any specific appropriation from the State for this purpose.

Now, it is the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works that has made available a loan and grant of $89,100 of which the forty-five per cent loan will be paid through student fees extended over a twenty-five year period, without a specific cost to the State. Within the ten-year period since 1928, the State of Alabama has received capital outlay improvements at the college the extent of $915,000 of which the State has been called upon to contribute less than one-third or about $277,413.50 in special appropriations.

This function of higher education for negroes begins to be a matter of concern and of some proportions at this time. There were 944,834 negroes reported for Alabama by the 1930 Federal census — a negro population about the size of the State's total population for Oregon and larger than the total State population for each of the thirteen States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, North Dakota, South Dakota, Delaware, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, and the District of Columbia, Alabama ranks third in the nation in the number of negroes in the State, only Georgia and Mississippi having each approxibately 50,000 more negroes. In the provision for higher education, Alabama is grouped with the five other States of Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia which sponsor more than one institution of some kind for the higher education of negroes in contrast to the ten States of Arkansas, Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia that concentrated all their educational efforts for negroes, including the Federally supported land-grant college, in a single institution. North Carolina, with a negro population just below that of Alabama (918,647) sponsors five State colleges for negroes in which 2,316 students were enrolled in 1937-38.

Alabama's two institutions—a junior college and land-grant institution at Normal and the four-year teachers college here at Montgomery—enrolled 1,244 students between them in 1937-38 for the regular term. The State Teachers College at Montgomery in 1937-38 ranked fourth in size of regular-year enrollment of the State-supported institutions for the training of negroes. The 89 full high schools for negroes in Alabama which are graduating approximately 2,000 students annually, have created a demand for educational opportunity which the State Teachers College at Montgomery is being called upon to serve even beyond its function as a teacher-training institution. A per capita State expenditure of $75 per negro student in Alabama as compared with a per capita State expenditure of $99 in Georgia, $141 in Oklahoma, $160 in Kentucky and $169 in Louisiana is suggestive of the returns which have thus far come to the State and which can come in increasing measure as Alabama, in its forward educational program, finds it possible to meet in more adequate measure is obligation to the one-third of its constituency that is colored, and as the State Teachers College at Montgomery moves forward with another ten-year program for which the achievements of the past decade is it inspiration and its plea for continued confidence and increased support.

Pres. Lee Of Fla. To Speak At Ala. State

MONTGOMERY, Ala.— (SNS)—President J. R. E. Lee of the Florida A. and M. College will be the Founder's Day Speaker at the Alabama State Teachers College on Thursday afternoon, February 9, in exercises to begin at 2:30.

Founder's Day at Alabama State began with a sixth grade classroom program on the birthday of the late Professor William Burns Paterson in 1901 under the stimulus of Miss Mary Frances Terrell who is still an active member of the faculty after forty-eight years of service and who will give the history of the occasion at the 1939 exercises.

Tribute will be paid to the memory and contributions of the three deceased presidents—William Burns Paterson, John William Beverly and George Washington Trenholm—who served the institution during 47 of its 65 years of operation.

A feature of the observance will again be the annual contributions from alumni and friends who will share in the appeal for funds incident to the gymnasium building which is to be completed by May under direction of the Works Progress Administration. Alumni look forward annually to their contribution of a Founder's Day dollar as their participation in the constructive forwarding of the work so nobly projected by these preceding administrators whose memory is being honored on Founder's Day.

A basketball game between Alabama State and Tuskegee on that Thursday night will culminate the day's observance although the alumni in Birmingham will share in a similar occasion on the following day

ALLADEGA COLLEGE VICTIM OF MEANNESS OF ALABAMA NATIVES

Unrest in Student Body Follows Acts of Police Brutality; Barn Burned

Talladega, Ala., Feb. 9 (ANP)—Race relations in this peaceful little Alabama area where Talladega college is located have been a bit strained in recent weeks and school and city officials are hoping for an early return to normalcy.

The current unrest began some months ago when a white man endeavored to rob the comptroller's office. The school's night watchman caught him after shooting the intruder in the leg. White people about the town, a small village near the school, were a bit indignant about the shooting, even though the police department backed the watchman. There was some talking about blowing up one of the buildings. A little later the barn belonging to the college did burn down rather mysteriously, causing some thousands of dollars worth of damage. There was no evidence pointing to the origin of the fire.

Then two weeks ago, there was a bit of disturbance at the local theatre, which has a section for its colored patrons. Because of the tension, the girls were not allowed to attend this particular show because it was a midnight performance, but a few college boys went. A little fracas arose between the colored and white crowds, composed almost entirely of townsfolk. A college boy was struck by the police and the boy fell back on a white woman knocking her nearly under a car.

The student body talked the situation over and at present is refraining from attending the theatre. Any disturbance in the economic relationships between the school and the town, which gets a good deal of its patronage from the institution normally, merely accentuates whatever feeling exists. The mayor and chief of police have been out to talk with President Gallagher. For a time a few students were apprehensive. The situation seems to be quieting down, however, and it is hoped will soon blow over.

Negro Leader To Speak Here

A veteran in the field of education as well as a professional contemporary of the former Presidents William Burns Paterson, John W. Beverly and George W. Trenholm will be heard at the State Teachers' College auditorium on Thursday afternoon when Dr. J. R. E. Lee, president of the Florida A. and M. College at Tallahassee will make the annual founder's day address for the college in public exercises scheduled to begin at 2:30.

A native of Texas and a graduate of Bishop College at Austin, Texas, Dr. Lee started his teaching career at his Alma Mater from which he was drawn in 1899 by the late Dr. Booker T. Washington to Tuskegee Institute to begin a period of 16 years of service there as director of the academic department. While at Tuskegee, he helped Dr. Washington to organize the National Negro Business League at St. Louis in 1900 and then with the assistance of several negro educators, including the late President George W. Trenholm, of the State Teachers College, organized at Nashville in 1904 the National Association of Teachers in Colored Schools. In 1915, Dr. Lee became principal of the Lincoln High School in Kansas City, Mo.; in 1921 he became extension secretary of the National Urban League and in 1924 he took his present post at Tallahassee, Fla., where he has been responsible for an extensive program of development, including a physical expansion at an aggregate cost of $1,320,000 at the Florida A. and M. College.

Following the initial radio program over WSFA last night, the observance by the college authorities is including this afternoon a radio program over WALA at Mobile and a public program tonight at the State Teachers College Branch Junior College at Mobile preceding the public program to be held here in the college auditorium on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 when Dr. Lee will speak and when tribute through sketches and song will be paid to the memory of the former deceased presidents, William Burns Paterson, John William Beverly and George Washington Trenholm

FOUNDERS DAY OBSERVED BY SELMA P. T. A. COUNCIL

A large audience composed of members of the parent-teacher associations of the city observed the annual Founder's Day celebration at the junior high school Thursday evening. Mr. Walter M. Jackson, superintendent of city schools, presided at a program which opened with Invocation pronounced by Dr. O. V. Calhoun, pastor of Church Street Methodist Church. Addresses were made by Mrs. David Pierson, president of the P. T. A. Council, who spoke on the founding of the association and it growth into a national organization, and by Mrs. Edward Anderson, whose topic was Adult Education and the Day Nursery for Negro Children as they function in this city under her supervision.

Sixteen girls from the junior high school health class taught by Miss Jewell Spears, head of the girls' physical education department, gave exhibition dances and musical selections were given by Mrs. Blanche Carter, soprano, and Mr. Alonzo Meek, organist.

After the program a reception was held in the school library with presidents of the several parents teacher associations receiving assisted by Mrs. Frank Hutchings, Mrs. Roy Moore and Mrs. W. M. Jackson.

ALABAMA STATE HAS FOUNDERS DAY PROGRAM

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 23—Declaring that every one cannot be a founder, Dr. J. R. E. Lee, president of the Florida A. and M. College at Tallahassee, climaxed the series of programs for Alabama State Teachers College that featured the observance of Founder's Day and of National Negro History Week.

The program had begun on Sunday afternoon with a combination vesper program in tribute to Julius Rosenwald Memorial Day and to the beginning of National Negro History Week. President H Council Trenholm spoke over WSFA in Montgomery Tuesday night, and over WAIA in Mobile Wednesday afternoon as well as at the public program at the State Teachers College Branch at Mobile on Wednesday night.

The Founders' Day occasion at Alabama State dates back to 1901 when Miss Mary F. Tarrell, still a member of the faculty, gave a surprise birthday program on Feb. 9 of that year in tribute to the service of the then President William Burns Paterson. These programs have continued over the years and have become the occasion for tribute to the service of William Burns Paterson, president from 1878 to 1915, John William Beverly, president from 1915 to 1920, and George Washington Trenholm president from 1920 to 1925. Life sketches of the honored president and a review of "The State Teachers College as an Institution of Destiny" were a part of the program of this past Thursday afternoon.

In paying tribute to the founders, President J. R. E. Lee developed the proposal that "every one cannot be a founder" with emphasis upon the requisites of sincere love for people, far-sighted vision, patience and faith in one's self as well as in all people as the four requisites for the founding of any institution—particularly where the return is in satisfaction of the people for whom the institution is set up. President Lee urged that one come not to such services to pay "last respects" but rather to reconsecrate one's self to the forwarding of the task set up and to the vision which the honored leaders had.

A customary feature of the observance was the series of alumni Founder's Day Dollar contributions which were being reported on Founder's day and for which the campaign continues during the next few weeks to give opportunity for a wide-spread participation in this effort.

THE DIAMOND JUBILEE AND 75 YEARS OF RACE FREEDOM IN ALABAMA

By Ernest J. Leach

It is indeed a source of pleasure for me to write an article at the request of Bishop H. P. Porter, setting forth and describing the significance of the Diamond Jubilee Drive, celebratingter the 75 years of race freedom at Miles Memorial College, April 26, 1939.

The pleasure comes not merely from the privilege it affords to me, but more from the information and inspiration I have gained from a special study and observation of the progress that Miles Memorial College has made since its organization.

In 1619 there left a little wandering Dutch vessel from the colony of Africa with its sails set for America Landing at Jamestown, Va., off came about twenty Negroes. It was soon thought by the whites that the southand was better suited for the Negro than the north, because of the previous conditions under which the Negro had lived. Therefore, a movement was started, to localize the Negro in the south, where tobacco, cotton and corn, etc., soon became the chief products. They were driven to the fields as cattle are nowaday driven to the meadows. They had to go when their masters said go and come when they said come, but may it be everlastingly said to the credit of the Negro, that the south was made to bud and blossom like a rose, because of their laborous toil. However, these conditions could not be endured, for the Great God of the universe did not intend that one man should live by the sweat of another's brow. With this rising spirit, in great men like Lloyd Garrison, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Nat Turner, John Brown and others in sermon, speech and addresses, swept on by the spirit of Jesus the Christ, enabled Abraham Lincoln, who was at the helm of state, to denounce the great monster slavery and delivered the Emancipation Proclamation setting free the Negroes in America.

Then the Negroes were like the impotent man, who was healed at the gate "Beautiful" of the temple by Peter and John who leaped and walked to satisfy the certainty of his cure sed some time to realize that he was free and to adjust himself to the new state of his freedom.

The Negro being religious by nature, soon began to establish churches in which to worship his God, as a further expression of his freedom.

As years rolled by our fathers saw the need for a better prepared ministry. As an outgrowth of this need they established religious schools to train men for Christian leadership and the ministry.

The Colored Methodist Church imbued with this spirit, likewise has established great religious schools and colleges.

The fathers of Alabama were not deaf to this awakening spirit for about 40 years ago, they became the founders of Miles Memorial College, a great Christian institution whose aim is to train men and women for Christian leadership. Since its organization, Miles has grown by leaps and bounds in the sending out of men and women who may be found in nearly every profession of life—ministry, medicine, dentistry, civil service, law, insurance, education (teaching) and agriculture.

Due to the meager funds of the church, Miles has been limited in adequate building facilities. This growing need and the foreseen nowaday demands, caused Bishop Brown who was at the helm of state and the supporters and lovers of Miles Memorial College to erect a new administration building at an approximate cost of $150,000. A few years passed by leaving a debt of about $100,000 on the school. Bishop H. P. Porter came to the helm of state found this condition, organized the forces of Alabama and raised about $80,000 in a period of four years, reducing the debt to $20,000.

Bishop Porter has named the obliteration of the $20,000 a part of our unfinished task in Alabama. In order to give credit to the 75 years of race freedom and to give uniqueness to the name of our final anticipated effort to clear Miles Memorial College of debt, it became fitting to name this drive the "Diamond Jubilee Drive," covering years 1939 and 1940.

The plan is simple, yet far reaching in its scope. Every supporter and lover of Miles College is being contacted in Annual Conferences, district meetings and local church meetings to raise 10c for each year of race freedom.

The Montgomery district will play her part in the liquidation of the Miles Memorial College Debt.

Miles Memorial College: A Challenge To Birmingham

For 38 years Miles Memorial College has been struggling to provide for the Negro youth of the Birmingham district an opportunity to attend college without having to go a distance from home.

Throughout that period the institution has faced many handicaps, and despite the sacrifices that have been made by its supporters the college has been substandard—when measured in academic terms.

In the last three years remarkable progress has been made in retiring the accumulated indebtedness of the college, which had reached a staggering total, in reorganizing its administration and in building up such facilities as its library as a preliminary to becoming accredited.

W. A. Bell, who is recognized as one of the ablest Negro educators in the South, is president of Miles. He is providing an able and energetic leadership for the institution, and to talk to him is to be impressed with the determined effort that has been made and is being made to develop Miles into a recognized college.

The Birmingham district should have a Negro college of first rank. The vast Negro population of this area plays a vital part in every phase of our life. Whether the Negro develops his full potentialities and thereby makes his maximum contribution to our community is of vital importance to every man, woman and child, black and white, in this area.

Without an opportunity to develop leadership, the Negro suffers, and every white person who is dependent upon him in one way or another—and that includes us all—suffers likewise.

Without attracting much attention, Miles has been doing a good job and a sound one. In terms of its resources it has been doing a remarkable job. But it is not qualified in some respects for recognition as an accredited institution. The principal obstacle to that goal is the present indebtedness of the institution, an indebtedness which accumulated over a period of years, and which has already been reduced considerably.

Once the college is accredited, it will be in a position to serve the Birmingham district more effectively. Its students who are preparing to teach will be given certification for four years of college work, and its undergraduates will be assured of the privilege of receiving full credit when transferring to other colleges. The college would also be in a position to receive help from various philanthropic foundations.

Miles was established in 1901 by the Colored Methodist Church. It has received support from the Methodist Episcopal Church South, throughout its history. But Miles should not be looked upon as a purely denominational college. Its student body is composed of members of various denominations, and other groups in Birmingham have helped in supporting it.

The challenge to establish Miles on a standard basis is one which is made alike to all groups in the Birmingham district — white and Negro. To build up an institution which would serve as a center for Negro leadership in this area and which would be a source of pride and inspiration to the members of that race will improve the welfare of all.

This week the Colored Methodist Church is sponsoring a statewide rally in Birmingham which will inaugurate a "home-stretch" drive for retiring the indebtedness of the college. The response to that drive should provide the impetus for the success of the undertaking.

The Miles Campaign

One of the most important responsibilities in this district is that of Miles Memorial College for Negroes. Its opportunity for human service is so great as to be beyond all calculation. It—and only Miles—is seeking to provide higher education and college training for leadership in one of the most densely concentrated centers of Negro population in the nation.

That endeavor, now being carried out with intelligence, courage and devotion under the leadership of W. A. Bell, president of the college, is nevertheless severely handicapped by an old heritage of debt. The amount in recent months has been greatly reduced. But if the college is to qualify for further financial assistance from the great educational foundations and is to achieve standards and ratings essential to the adequate fulfillment of its purpose, it is imperative that their remainder of the debt be eliminated as rapidly as possible.

A five-day rally began Wednesday during which a concentrated attack on the debt will be made. This undertaking deserves the interest and support of all the people of this community, regardless of color.

It is a brave fight for a high cause under heavy handicaps that is being carried forward. It is the kind of fight that, when imaginatively understood, summons the admiration and support of all humanitarian citizens.

Vigorous Drive On To Erase Debt Of Miles Memorial

A DETERMINED effort on the part of Alabama Negroes to free Miles Memorial College, in Vinesville, from debt was begun here Wednesday with the first meeting of a five-day rally held at Theirgood Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

An offering of 6,000 dimes resulted from an appeal to members of the denomination all over the state to contribute one dime for each year the race has been free. Bishop H. P. Porter, head of the church in Alabama, said some members made partial payments, others paid more and some paid as high as 500 dimes.

The rally will continue through Sunday and will close with a city-wide meeting at the Industrial High School at 3 p.m. Sunday, when Bishop C. H. Phillips, senior bishop of the church, will speak.

An announcement was made during the first meeting that anyone desiring to help Miles Memorial College free itself of debt, may mail their contribution to Robert Owen, manager of the Fairfield branch of the First National Bank, custodian of the fund.

MILES MEMORIAL RALLY SCHEDULED

Ministers And Laymen Will Come Here In Interest Of School Finances

Marking the seventy-fifth anniversary of Negro freedom and dedicated to the payment of the indebtedness of Miles Memorial College, the four Alabama conferences of the Colored Methodist Church will have a rally in Birmingham April 26-30.

The call for the rally was sent out by Bishop H. P. Porter, presiding bishop of the C. M. E. Church and also president of the board of trustees of the college.

Delegations of ministers, lay members and their friends from over the state are expected to attend. The first session is to be held at noon Wednesday in the Thirgood C. M. E. Church, and will be presided over by Bishop Porter.

Other denominations of the city will participate in the rally, and Dr. D. F. Thompson, pastor of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, will make the address at the Wednesday night session, speaking on "What It Will Mean to Birmingham and Alabama to Have a Standard College for Negro Youth—Miles College."

W. A. Bell, president of the college, will outline the present status of the institution, the progress made in recent years and the steps which must be taken to gain an accredited standing. Considerable progress has already been made in reducing the indebtedness of the college, it is reported, and it is believed that if the remaining amount can be retired the school will be in a position to receive grants from various philanthropic foundations.

TRENHOLM APPEALS Courier FOR AID

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 27 —(Special)— An earnest appeal to the Alabama Legislature which reconvened at the Capitol Tuesday, to increase the appropriation by the State for the support of the Montgomery State Teachers' College, was issued on the day following by Dr. H. Councill Trenholm, president of the institution.

The college, which this year had a total enrollment of 1,094, compared with 404 ten years ago, now receives a smaller appropriation from the State than it did then, Dr. Trenholm pointed out. Though 40.2 per cent of the students at all five of the State-supported teachers' colleges, attend the college here, he said, it receives only 18.5 per cent of the annual appropriations distributed among them.

He cited further that the college he heads has the highest proportion of income from students' fees—51 per cent—of any other State educational institution, and is first of the five teachers' colleges in both enrollment and graduates.

Dr. Trenholm's appeal was submitted to the Legislative Recess Committee on Finance and Taxation, which promised to give it serious consideration before drawing and submitting the educational appropriation bills it will recommend.

ARKANSAS STATE COLLEGE MEETS ENGLISH TEAM IN INTERNATIONAL DEBATE

Englishmen Represented Manchester and Liverpool Universities; Discuss Advisability of Third Term

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—(Special)—Arkansas State college held its second interracial, international debate Thursday, December 14, in the college auditorium, the topic for discussion being, "Resolved, That the American People Should Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Presidency of the United States for a Third Term." The affair was non-decisional.

Upholding the affirmative side of the question, the Englishmen maintained that (1) because of the remarkable record he has made in an extremely difficult situation, (2) because it is inadvisable to turn over to another man our Roosevelt-initiated program, and (3) because there is no other man in America to fill his shoes in their own interests, the American people shuold return President Roosevelt for a third term.

Representatives of Arkansas State college, defending the negative, held that (1) such a move is out of harmony with our experience of 150 years, (2) that the logic of a third term makes a fourth term necessary, (3) that already Roosevelt has done his bit for the country, and (4) that the third precedent might prove dangerous in the hands of a man with less power and personality. From beginning to end, there was a generous display of logic, humor, wit and repartee. At the conclusion of the debate, the house was turned into an open forum on questions of national and international import.

Arkansas State was represented by two experienced college debaters—George T. Sims, senior of Birmingham, Ala., who also is president of the senior class, and Earl E. Evans, junior, of Wilmot, Ark., who is president both of his class and of the local Y.M.C.A. Evans debated against the Oxford-Cambridge team last year.

Composing the English team were Victor H. Parkinson of New South Wales, Australia, and a graduate of the University of Manchester, and George J. Bean, a Londoner who is a graduate of the University of Liverpool. Both hold degrees in law and both are close students of current political problems, national and international.

The English debaters, travelling under the auspices of the National Student Federation of America, are representing the National Union of Students of England and Wales. On their current tour, they have held debates in 26 American colleges and universities, in the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Kentucky.

The debate was a gesture in the direction of better interracial and international understanding.

Cobb Tells Young He'll Prove Facts About H.U.

WASHINGTON

A hitherto undisclosed report sent to Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior following his department's investigation of administration matters at Howard University was revealed, this week, by former Judge James A. Cobb.

Mr. Cobb, who was recently removed from his post as professor of law at Howard, made the revelation in answer to a letter from B. B. Young, Sr., editor of the Journal and Guide, and a trustee of the school.

Takes Issue With Young

Last week, former Judge Cobb taking exception to an editorial appearing in the Journal and Guide reviewed certain charges of mal-administration and told Mr. Young:

"If the facts with respect to the mal-administration of the university affairs were given to the public, public opinion would be such that it would force a reluctant board to do its duty."

In reply, Mr. Young said, among other things:

"Having served on the board (Howard University) since April, 1934, I am familiar with all the matters covered in your letter.

"You are aware, of course, that all of the alleged acts of maladministration, with which you charge President Johnson, have been investigated, heard, reviewed, and disposed of by both the Department of the Interior and the board of trustees, and in each and every case the president has been exonerated.

"Your continued ventilation of refuted and repudiated charges in an apparent effort to persecute the university head seems at variance with your proclaimed desire to 'serve the cause of truth.'"

The text of Mr. Cobb's reply to Mr. Young follows:

Cobb's Letter

Dear Mr. Young:

While I have no desire to prolong this discussion with you, there are two or three things which you and the board members know but the public does not.

I want to say, that if the case against President Johnson has been disposed of by the board and the Secretary of the Interior, it was not rightly disposed of and any honest mind viewing the facts can come but to one conclusion, and that is, that Johnson is guilty of malfeasance and misfeasance.

You cannot deny that the university paid back some $40,000 for improper and mis-use of government funds and that money came out of the treasury of Howard University.

Recalls Lumber Incident

Nor can you deny that $545 worth of lumber mysteriously disappeared and has not been explained.

You cannot deny that the investigation was made by Mr. Glavis and a number of agents working under him and that he recommended the removal of President Johnson, which recommendation was approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

You cannot deny that Dr. Flexner got that recommendation and sought to suppress it until he could get in touch with the secretary with political influence and have him change his mind.

Driven off Board

You cannot deny that Dr. Flexner was driven off the board because Mr. Crawford and a number of the trustees refused to stand for that sort of thing.

After political influence was brought to bear upon Mr. Ickes he placed the report in the hands of one Samuel Taylor, a lawyer in the Department of the Interior who sought to exonerate Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president. I need not here characterize the whitewash and special pleading of Taylor because it is done by E. K. Burlew, then administrative assistant, and now Under-Secretary of the Interior Department.

Burlew's Memorandum

In a memorandum to the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Burlew wrote:

"Supplementing my previous memorandum, I desire to express my views on the report of Samuel Taylor, giving the results of his study of the difficulties at Howard University.

"I consider his report a special pleading for the university authorities rather than a judicial appraisal of the facts. It consists mainly of explanations of why Mr. Johnston, the treasurer, made so many mistakes. I think Mr. Johnston should do his own explaining and that the report of a judicial review should evaluate the conflicting views and reach sound conclusions rather than to repeat excuses for inefficiency from one of the persons involved.

"It is admitted that the university could not account for $545 worth of lumber which is said to have disappeared. It seems to be sufficient for Mr. Taylor to say that since no records were kept that the transaction was clear."

I may here add, if you and others of your way of voting, had not circumvented the investigation voted by the trustee board, we, the committee, were going to prove at whose instance that lumber was taken away from Howard University and where it went and who benefited by it. Should you give us the opportunity we are in a position to prove it now.

It is illuminating and vital to this discussion to note that a large number of the trustees of the board who have been connected with Howard University long before you and who have spent and are willing to be spent for Howard, are of my opinion respecting Mordecai Johnson and his administration.

Without prolonging this letter as there are so many things could go into, I want to repea that I believe in the long ru that righteousness will prevai and to that end that some of u are going to work until this whol thing is brought into the light.

(Signed)
JAMES A. COBB.

D. C. Colored Schools Mark 75th Birthday

A special service observing the seventy-fifth anniversary of public education for colored children in the District of Columbia was held yesterday at Ebenezer Methodist Church, Fourth and D streets, southeast, site of the first free school.

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, was the principal speaker. He related incidents of the organization of the first free school for colored children, in 1862, and told of the subsequent development of the D. C. school system, first under separate white and colored boards of education within the city limits, and later as a dual system.

Greetings were extended by Col. West A. Hamilton and John H. Wilson, members of the Board of Education; Assistant Superintendents A. Kiger Savoy and Howard H. Long; John C. Bruce, supervising principal; the Rev. A. J. Edwards, the Rev. F. F. King, the Rev. J. M. Harrison and Miss Corinne Martin, who introduced several former pupils of the early free schools.

Musical numbers were furnished by the Boys' Glee Club of Dunbar High School, the Girls' Glee Club of Cardozo High School, and by R. F. Ovelton.

GERMAN PROF. TAKES ANOTHER SHOT AT H. U.

WASHINGTON, June 29—(ANP)—"It seems to me," says Dr. Julius Lips, famed anthropologist, "that the letter written by Dr. Thompson of Howard in reply to my statements on my leaving the school, is the best proof of conditions at Howard university. His statement about allowing me to 'save my face' by resignation is a joke."

Dr. Lips insists he resigned because of dissension and jealousy among the staff members and confirmed his previous story. He said he knew nothing of what was going on behind his back, and that is with particular reference to Dean Thompson's request for a memorandum on him from the department heads.

On the contrary, Dr. Lips pointed out, the only memorandum he knew about was one lauding him very highly. That one, he said, was signed by two of the very department heads who are supposed to have signed the anti-Lips memorandum cited by Dean Thompson. The names of Dr. Abram L. Harris and Dr. E. Franklin Frazier appear on both memos.

Commends 'Leadership'

The favorable memorandum of the faculty's committee on anthropology recommends that Dr. Lips, formerly a visiting professor at the university, be made a full professor and head of the department, citing his very "competent leadership."

"No person of whom we have knowledge is better qualified to undertake this task than Prof. Lips", said the report. "He has demonstrated his understanding of and sympathy with the aims of the various departments and the problems unique to Howard university. Furthermore, he is a scholar of international reputation."

Another memorandum submitted by Dean Thompson of the college of liberal arts denounced Dr. Lips and the same memo bore the signatures of both Dr. Harris and Dr. Frazier as heads of their respective departments.

"If the facts with respect to the mal-administration of the university affairs were given to the public, public opinion would be such that it would force a reluctant board to do its duty."

In reply, Mr. Young said, among other things:

"Having served on the board (Howard University) since April, 1934, I am familiar with all the matters covered in your letter.

"You are aware, of course, that all of the alleged acts of mal-administration, with which you charge President Johnson, have been investigated, heard, reviewed, and disposed of by both the Department of the Interior and the board of trustees, and in each and every case the president has been exonerated.

"Your continued ventilation of refuted and repudiated charges in an apparent effort to persecute the university head seems at variance with your proclaimed desire to 'serve the cause of truth.'"

The text of Mr. Cobb's reply to Mr. Young follows:

Cobb's Letter

Dear Mr. Young:

While I have no desire to prolong this discussion with you, there are two or three things which you and the board members know but the public does not.

I want to say, that if the case against President Johnson has been disposed of by the board and the Secretary of the Interior, it was not rightly disposed of and any honest mind viewing the facts can come but to one conclusion, and that is, that Johnson is guilty of malfeasance and misfeasance.

You cannot deny that the university paid back some $40,000 for improper and mis-use of government funds and that money came out of the treasury of Howard University.

Recalls Lumber Incident

Nor can you deny that $545 worth of lumber mysteriously disappeared and has not been explained.

You cannot deny that the investigation was made by Mr. Glavis and a number of agents working under him and that he recommended the removal of President Johnson, which recommendation was approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

You cannot deny that Dr. Flexner got that recommendation and sought to suppress it until he could get in touch with the secretary with political influence and have him change his mind.

Driven off Board

You cannot deny that Dr. Flexner was driven off the board because Mr. Crawford and a number of the trustees refused to stand for that sort of thing.

After political influence was brought to bear upon Mr. Ickes he placed the report in the hands of one Samuel Taylor, a lawyer in the Department of the Interior who sought to exonerate Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president. I need not here characterize the whitewash and special pleading of Taylor because it is done by E. K. Burlew, then administrative assistant, and now Under-Secretary of the Interior Department.

Burlew's Memorandum

In a memorandum to the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Burlew wrote:

"Supplementing my previous memorandum, I desire to express my views on the report of Samuel Taylor, giving the results of his study of the difficulties at Howard University.

"I consider his report a special pleading for the university authorities rather than a judicial appraisal of the facts. It consists mainly of explanations of why Mr. Johnston, the treasurer, made so many mistakes. I think Mr. Johnston should do his own explaining and that the report of a judicial review should evaluate the conflicting views and reach sound conclusions rather than to repeat excuses for inefficiency from one of the persons involved.

"It is admitted that the university could not account for $545 worth of lumber which is said to have disappeared. It seems to be sufficient for Mr. Taylor to say that since no records were kept that the transaction was clear."

I may here add, if you and others of your way of voting, had not circumvented the investigation voted by the trustee board, we, the committee, were going to prove at whose instance that lumber was taken away from Howard University and where it went and who benefited by it. Should you give us the opportunity we are in a position to prove it now.

It is illuminating and vital to this discussion to note that a large number of the trustees of the board who have been connected with Howard University long before you and who have spent and are willing to be spent for Howard, are of my opinion respecting Mordecai Johnson and his administration.

Without prolonging this letter as there are so many things could go into, I want to repea that I believe in the long run that righteousness will prevai and to that end that some of u are going to work until this whol thing is brought into the light.

(Signed)
JAMES A. COBB.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23—Senator Robert A. Taft has accepted an invitation to deliver the Charter Day Dinner address at Howard University, the evening of March 2, 1939, President Mordecai W. Johnson announced here on Monday.

D. C. Colored Schools Mark 75th Birthday

A special service observing the seventy-fifth anniversary of public education for colored children in the District of Columbia was held yesterday at Ebenezer Methodist Church, Fourth and D streets, southeast, site of the first free school.

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, was the principal speaker. He related incidents of the organization of the first free school for colored children, in 1862, and told of the subsequent development of the D. C. school system, first under separate white and colored boards of education within the city limits, and later as a dual system.

Greetings were extended by Col. West A. Hamilton and John H. Wilson, members of the Board of Education; Assistant Superintendents A. Kiger Savoy and Howard H. Long; John C. Bruce, supervising principal; the Rev. A. J. Edwards, the Rev. F. F. King, the Rev. J. M. Harrison and Miss Corinne Martin, who introduced several former pupils of the early free schools.

Musical numbers were furnished by the Boys' Glee Club of Dunbar High School, the Girls' Glee Club of Cardozo High School and by R. F. Ovelton.

GERMAN PROF. TAKES ANOTHER SHOT AT H. U.

WASHINGTON, June 29—(ANP)—"It seems to me," says Dr. Julius Lips, famed anthropologist, "that the letter written by Dr. Thompson of Howard in reply to my statements on my leaving the school, is the best proof of conditions at Howard university. His statement about allowing me to 'save my face' by resignation is a joke."

Dr. Lips insists he resigned because of dissension and jealousy among the staff members and confirmed his previous story. He said he knew nothing of what was going on behind his back, and that is with particular reference to Dean Thompson's request for a memorandum on him from the department heads.

On the contrary, Dr. Lips pointed out, the only memorandum he knew about was one lauding him very highly. That one, he said, was signed by two of the very department heads who are supposed to have signed the anti-Lips memorandum cited by Dean Thompson. The names of Dr. Abram L. Harris and Dr. E. Franklin Frazier appear on both memos.

Commends 'Leadership'

The favorable memorandum of the faculty's committee on anthropology recommends that Dr. Lips, formerly a visiting professor at the university, be made a full professor and head of the department, citing his very "competent leadership."

"No person of whom we have knowledge is better qualified to undertake this task than Prof. Lips", said the report. "He has demonstrated his understanding of and sympathy with the aims of the various departments and the problems unique to Howard university. Furthermore, he is a scholar of international reputation."

Another memorandum submitted by Dean Thompson of the college of liberal arts denounced Dr. Lips and the same memo bore the signatures of both Dr. Harris and Dr. Frazier as heads of their respective departments.

Dr. Johnson Honored With Birthday Supper

WASHINGTON, D. C. — On Thursday evening, January 19, the parlors of Truth Hall, Howard University, were beautifully decorated with fresh cut flowers, when the graduate students, with their hostess, Mrs. Sadie E. Gough, entertained at a formal buffet supper in honor of President Mordecai Johnson's birthday. At a table artistically set with a lace cover, a low silver bowl of pink sweet peas, and pink candles in silver holders, the Misses Mayme Brown and Waldean Stewart presided.

After the serving, Miss Mary Lou Phillips presented Mrs. Mordecai Johnson, wife of the president, with a beautiful bouquet of pink roses, and Miss Agnes Hardie read congratulatory letters, cards, and telegrams to the president.

The evening was spent in chatting and listening to intervals of music under the direction of the Misses Carolyn V. Grant and Madeline Coleman. The music included violin solos by Ursule Plinton; vocal solos by Margaret Montgomery, and selections by the Women's Quartet composed of Elizabeth Ellison, Geraldine Patterson, Berenice Norwood, and Florence Suggs.

FAMED SCIENTIST RESIGNED TO KEEP OUT OF INTRIGUE

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 22—Rumbles of dissension in the administration and faculty of Howard University were heightened last week by the resignation of Dr. Julius Lips, famed scientist and voluntary exile from Nazi Germany, it was learned Monday.

Dr. Lips, who headed the anthropology department, left Washington Saturday. Discussing his resignation, he indicated that he was motivated largely by conditions at the school.

"I dislike the ethical and scientific approach of some of the staff members," he said. "To keep out of intrigue and factionalism takes all ones' energy, and since my job was to do scientific work, my only recourse was to resign."

FOLLOWS JUDGE CAYTON

Dr. Lips' resignation followed by several months that of Judge Nathan Cayton as a law instructor. Judge Cayton made known in his letter of resignation that he was displeased with the same conditions that annoyed Dr. Lips.

A case is now pending in the Appellate Court in which former Judge James A. Cobb of the Municipal Court is contesting his ouster from the schools' staff.

Dr. Lips was reluctant to go into details about conditions at the school but he constructed his own picture of jealousy, toadying and general pettiness.

ONE PROFESSOR'S VIEW

He suggested that some idea of what is going on may be gleaned from an article written by a Negro professor in the Journal of Negro Education, published at Howard, in which it is stated:

"The Negro college is not serious about the matter of educating the youth entrusted to it . . The Negro college has no program, no one central idea. The lack of harmony and co-operation among its teaching staff is tragic. Petty jealousies, eternal conflicts, cheap competition consume the energies of its teaching force . ."

The article is, perhaps, exaggerated because of the enthusiasm of its author, said Dr. Lips, but he indicated that where there is so much smoke there must be same fire.

JOHNSON CRITICIZED

It is known that some of the faculty have shown displeasure over the emotionalism that prevails at staff meetings. The fervor works two ways, both in the tongue-lashings President Mordecai Johnson administers to some instructors, and in the oratorical heights he reaches in holding out promise to staff newcomers, according to reports.

'Faculty meetings have a kindergartenish tenor," said Dr. Lips, who made it plain he did not relish the tendency of faculty members to align themselves in cliques, laboring to cadge another ounce of influence for themselves; "trying to curry favor with Dr. Johnson one moment and betraying themselves as his sliest enemies the next."

ARROGANCE TO STUDENTS

Dr. Johnson seldom is free from attack by the alumni. Only recently alumni members circulated a diatribe against the college president.

One thing Dr. Lips found hard to understand was what he termed the arrogant attitude many of the professors adopted toward the sudents.

"There's no friendliness," he said. "The professors remain cold and aloof and seem to look down on the student as though to say, 'You are only a student and I am a professor, with a Ph.D. degree.'

"There is little spirit of helpfulness. And that is a shame, for the student body on the whole deserves something better. My association with the students themselves has been a happy one, and for their sake I can only hope that there will be a housecleaning soon."

RETIRING TO RESEARCH

Dr. Lips is planning to devote his time to research in primitive law and in that connection will go to England to collaborate on a three-volume work.

Known principally as an anthropologist and ethnologist, Dr. Lips has considerable stature as an author, having written plays and poems and scientific works, the best known of which is "The Savage Hits Back." His wife, Eva, has written a best seller, "Savage Symphony."

Both Dr. Lips and his wife are to become American citizens two months from now, when they get their final papers. The story of their thrilling escape from Germany, where Dr. Lips quit his lifetime professorship at the University of Cologne rather than bow to the dictates of the Nazis, is told in Mrs. Lips' book.

University Is Sustained In Dropping Cobb

Appellate Court Affirms Ruling; Appeal Is Lost

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Without defining the limitations of the trustee board of Howard University in according permanent tenure to faculty members, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia last Monday affirmed the judgment of the District Court dismissing the suit of James A. Cobb for a mandatory injunction to prevent his dismissal as a teacher in the Howard Law School.

In the opinion, delivered by Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge, the court held that section 7 of the original act of incorporation, which gives the trustee board the power to remove any professor, tutor, or officer of the university when in its judgment the interest of the university shall require it, precluded Mr. Cobb from having a permanent tenure status, which he claimed.

The court did not pass upon the effect of the policy of tenure adopted by the trustee board on April 28, 1933. It took the position that the tenure regulations of 1933 were not applicable in the case of Mr. Cobb and that the annual resolutions of reappointment put him on an annual basis.

JUDGE J. A. COBB

Mr. Cobb was a part-time teacher in the Howard Law School from 1917 to June 30, 1938. He was also vice-dean of the school from 1923 to 1931.

On March 23, 1938, after a telephone call from the office of Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Mr. Cobb appeared before a subcommittee in opposition to an item of $3,000 in the university appropriations for the employment of a field agent.

The trustee board on April 12, 1938, voted to terminate his services effective June 30, 1938, with the explanation that its action was taken because of his appearance before the Senate appropriations subcommittee in opposition to that item of the university's apropriations.

Mr. Cobb filed suit on May 27, 1938, for a mandatory injunction to direct the university to continue his services as a part-time professor and accord him permanent tenure as such.

The District Court held that by a letter of July 14, 1931, Mr. Cobb expressly accepted reappointment on an annual basis, that successive appointments after the adoption of a policy of tenure on April 28, 1933, were on an annual basis, and if there had been any contract giving him a permanent tenure, his action in opposing an item in the appropriations for the university justified his dismissal. From this decision he appealed.

Senator Taft Points Out Contributions of Howard

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The exclusion of Marian Anderson from the use of two auditoriums in the city of Washington was referred to as one of the "narrow prejudices" against which the Negro must continue to fight in his efforts to attain the goal of equal opportunity by Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio in a speech before alumni and friends of Howard University at the Charter Day Banquet held on March 2.

The banquet featured the celebration of the seventy-second anniversary of the founding of the college. The address was broadcast over a nationwide NBC hookup.

Senator Taft pointed out that the nationwide attempt to get federal anti-lynching legislation passed was a related example of this effort on the part of the Negro to get full equality.

Dr. C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, Durham, N. C., was the principal Charter Day speaker. Dr. Spaulding, who is a trustee of Howard, spoke in the afternoon in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel.

Others on the program included the Rt. Rev. William Y. Bell, CME Bishop of Georgia, invocation; Miss Elizabeth Ellison, soprano soloist; Frances Marie Johnson, soprano student; George Morton Lightfoot, professon of Latin; William Goodwin, Mary Formwalt, and Roy W. Tibbs, music.

The banquet was held at night in the gymnasium. The following speakers brought greetings: Mrs. Mary R. Parker, Miss Effie Simmons, Emory B. Smith, Mrs. Jimmie Middleton, John C. Payne, Nelson E. Weatherless, and Dean Emeritus Edward A Balloch.

Dr. William M. Cobb spoke briefly. The University glee club rendered selections. Remarks by President Mordecai W. Johnson preceded the address by Senator Taft.

Senator Taft, son of the late President William Howard Taft, reviewed some of the early history of the college and told of its growth into one of the greatest educational institutions of America.

The speaker said that of the 10,266 graduates of the university more than half were teachers who were spreading the influence of the university to thousands of boys and girls of their race. He pointed out that Howard University accounted for a large percentage of the Negro professionals.

PROGRESS OF RACE

"It may well be said that no institution in the world has had more to do with the progress of the colored people than has Howard University," he asserted.

Continuing, Senator Taft said: "To what has this progress been due? You have had the assistance of men like General Howard and many others. Howard University has had the assistance of the United States Government, but not to any extraordinary extent. The money appropriated, for instance, is hardly more than the money appropriated by the City of Cincinnati for its municipal university, serving both white and black citizens of Cincinnati; much less than most of the State Universities. The progress has been due to the colored people themselves, and to the inherent qualities which they posses. possess.

"Today it has become fashionable to look to the government to solve our problems and rely on government action and laws to advance the welfare of the people, both white and colored. We are too much inclined to lean on the government, which in fact amounts to leaning on other people; but very little real progress has ever been made except thru the earnest and sincere effort of those who make that progress. The government must assure the opportunity for progress. It must create conditions in which every man who has the ability to be a leader of other men can forge his way ahead, regardless how humble his origin, and furnish the inspiration on which all progress is based.

"The foundation for the progress of the colored people is found in the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, and particularly in the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. They ask nothing more than every other citizen is entitled to, the right to life, liberty and property, the right to vote, the right to a fair trial, and all the other rights which are guaranteed to every citizen. It is to guarantee these rights that the colored people are asking for and are entitled to an anti-lynching bill, to protect those federal constitutional rights which they now have in theory, but which in some places they do not have in fact.

"Abraham Lincoln said in the famous Lincoln-Douglas Debate, 'In the right to eat the bread which his own hand earns, the Negro is my equal and the equal of Judge Douglas, and the equal of every living man.' But we must see also that he is also the equal of every living man in the right to earn that bread.

WHITES WILL HELP

"And so the colored people, even more than anyone else, are interested in government policies which will stimulate private industry, and stimulate the creation of more jobs and more prosperity. If those are provided then the education provided by Howard University and many other institutons will show to colored leaders the means by which they can go forward.

"They will always have to fight against certain narrow prejudices, such as that which seems to have excluded Marian Anderson from a proper auditorium in the City of Washington, and has excluded them from employment in various industries. But in that fight they will have the support of the great majority of the white people, and all of the intelligent white leaders. Your goal is equal opportunity, the same goal as that of every other American."

HOWARD ADDS TWO REFUGEE PROFESSORS TO ITS FACULTY

WASHINGTON, April 20. (A. N. P.)—The addition of two refugee professors to the faculty of Howard university was the most startling announcement made after the annual meeting of the board of trustees held Tuesday. Dr. Seigfried Berliner, University of Goettingen, who will be lecturing professor in the department of commerce and finance; and Dr. Ernest L. Abrahamson, University of Prague, who will be an instructor in Latin and Romance languages, are the two distinguished scholars appointed to the faculty.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, head of the department of political science, was granted a year's leave of absence so that he can join a Carnegie project during 1939-40. Morris A. Raines, associate professor of botany, was promoted to a full professorship; George M. Lightfoot, professor of Latin, was retired with a rating of professor emeritus as of June 30. Professor Lightfoot has the distinction of having served the university longer than any other member of the faculty. At the recent Founder's day exercises, a full length portrait of Professor Lightfoot was presented the university.

In the school of law, Leon A. Ransom, associate professor, was raised to professor; Bernard S. Jefferson and James M. Nabritt, assistant professors, promoted to associate professors.

Despite the bitter protests over the dismissal as of June 30 of Dr. Henry A. Callis, of the college of medicine, the board refused to reconsider the previous action and reaffirmed the dismissal. Dr. Callis is now on a year's leave of absence.

An appropriation was made for development of a university social work curriculum, and for research and publication at the graduate school. The board authorized the holding of a conference on Negro life at Howard during the coming year and the appointment of a field agency to stimulate interest in the university activities.

The following trustees were re-elected for three year terms: Dr. Louise C. Ball, New York; Dr. George W. Coleman, Boston; George W. Crawford, New Haven; Dr. Y. G. B. Pierce, Washington; Dr. Chas. H. Garvin, Cleveland, Dr. John R. Hawkins, Washington; Dr. Guy B. Johnson, Chapel Hill, N. C. W. Justin Carter was elected to the board for three years as alumni trustee.

TEACHERS RAP DISMISSAL OF HOWARD PROF.

Board OK's Ouster Despite Protest

WASHINGTON, Apr. 20—(ANP)—A determined effort on the part of the Teachers' union, affiliated with the American Federation of Teachers, on behalf of Dr. Henry A. Callis, failed to impress the members of the board of trustees of Howard university in the annual meeting Tuesday, when the dismissal of Dr. Callis was upheld.

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the university, and Richard H. Hill, secretary, received numerous letters from college locals of the American Federation of Teachers and from local fraternal, civic and trade union organizations.

Not Given Hearing

Dr. Callis, for nine years associate professor of medicine at Howard, is alleged not to have received any written statement of charges nor has been granted the privilege of a hearing. The Howard Teachers' union recommended to the trustees that Dr. Callis be granted a suitable hearing prior to June 30, the date set for his severance of service with the school, and that if this could not be done, that he be reappointed.

Among those sending letters supporting this recommendation were the Minnesota Federation of College Teachers; University of Wisconsin Extension division; Chicago College Teachers union; Cambridge Union of University Teachers; Ingram County Michigan local; Ohio State university local and the New York College Teachers' union.

Nazi Exile Charges School Not Interested In Educating Youth

Dean Ch..es H. Thompson Defends School; Asserts Lips Had Wrong Temperament

WASHINGTON.—(ANP) — Howard university once again is on the defensive—this time answering charges publised in daily papers here made by Dr. Julius Lips, Nazi exile and former professor in the University of Cologne.

Dr. Lips had been a teacher in the university for a period of two years. His contract, according to officials of the university, called for a one year term and rather than dismiss the professor, the school gave him the opportunity of resigning in order to cover his case.

However, Dr. Lips immediately proceeded to the newspapers with his story.

DOESN'T LIKE APPROACH

Said Dr. Lips, "I dislike the ethical and scientific approach of some of the staff members. To keep out of intrigue and factionalism takes all one's energy. and since my job was to do scientific work, my only recourse was to resign."

The professor declared he found his two years at Howard "x-ing", despite the administrative turmoil. Quoting from the Journal of Negro Education, published at Howard, Dr. Lips pointed to the following:

"The Negro college is not serious about the matter of educating the youth entrusted to it. The Negro college has no program, no one central idea. The lack of harmony and cooperation among its teaching staff is tragic. Petty jealousies, eternal conflicts, cheap competition consume the energies of its teaching force."

Much criticism was leveiled at Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of the university, by the professor.

CRITICIZES FACULTY MEETINGS

"Faculty meetings", said Dr. Lips, "have a kindergartenish tenor," as he made it plain that he did not relish whatever tendencies there were among faculty members to align themselves in cliques, "trying to curry favor with Dr. Johnson one moment and betraying themselves as his sliest enemies the next."

Speaking of the attitude of the professors toward the students, Dr. Lips says: "There is little spirit of helpfulness. And that is a shame, for the student body on the whole deserves something better. My association with the students themselves has been a happy one, and for their sake I can only hope that there will be a housecleaning soon. "There's no friendliness", he said. "The professors remain cold and aloof and seem to look down on the student as though to say, 'You are only a student and I am a professor, with a Ph. D. degree.'"

CITES DISMISSALS

In the published article, references were made to Judge James A. Cobb, formerly identified with the Howard Law school, and two other cases where professors were dismissed from the institution.

However, in a reply to the article, Charles H. Thompson, dean of the college of liberal arts, declares that "Dr. Lips did not quit the university. At the suggestion of a member of the board of trustees, Dr. Lips was permitted to resign instead of face a recommendation for his non-appointment for cause, which had been made by the dean of the college of liberal arts, concurred in by a committee of the heads of the social science departments, and approved by the trustee committee, having direct supervision over this college."

Here follows in part the recommendation made by the dean which was approved by the committee as far back as April 11.

"Recommended, that the services of Julius E. Lips, visiting professor of anthropology, be terminated June 30, 1939.

NOT RIGHT TEMPERAMENT

"First, Dr. Lips possesses an unfortunate temperament and personality which make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for him to get along amicably with his colleagues. At the present time his relationship with his colleagues in the social sciences is either one of polite indifference or suppressed hostility, so that any sort of real collaboration is highly improbable.

"Third, Dr. Lips for some reason has attracted very few students to his courses, even after a two-year stay at the university. It will be observed that Dr. Lips has never had more than 38 students during any one of the five semesters he has been in the college, and during the current year he had only 15 students the first semester and 16 students are registered during the second semester.

Dean Thompson here introduces a statement signed by the heads of the various departments of the school of liberal arts, including Dr. Abram L. Harris, department of economics; Dr. Charles H. Wesley, department of history; Dr. Alain J. Locke, department of philosophy; Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, department of political science, and Dr. E. Franklin Frazier, department of sociology.

Concluding his communication to the editor of the paper, which published the story, Dean Thompson says:

CALLED DELIBERATE EFFORT

"The number of extraneous incidents dragged into this account would lead one to believe either that your correspondent was misinformed or that there was a deliberate attempt to make a gratuitous attack upon Howard University. Dr. Lips' case has absolutely no similarity to the cases of two other former teachers mentioned in this account, and the quotation from the Journal of Negro Education is so introduced as to lead the reader to believe that the article referred to Howard University, when as an actual fact, Howard is the last institution to which such a statement could refer. I am the editor of the Journal."

Time after time, the administration at Howard has been assailed either from one angle or another. Evidences of a determined effort against certain accepted practices at the institution are shown in the continuance of these bitter and pointed attacks. Criticism of the administration, suits against the school give rise to queries as to just what is right and what is wrong at Howard that it should be so constantly placed on the defensive.

EX-JUDGE COBB LOSES HOWARD U. JOB FIGHT

Law Professor Definitely Out; Appellate Court Upholds Discharge

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 21—Former Municipal Court Judge James A. Cobb lost his appeal this week to be re-instated in his former position as professor of Howard university's law school, with permanent tenure. In giving the decision Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge of the United States Court of Appeals, affirmed the finding of the lower court which dismissed Cobb's bill seeking an injunction to compel Howard university to re-employ him.

Judge Cobb, who now practices law with the firm Cobb, Howard and Hayes, was fired from the Howard university faculty last year, where he was part-time instructor, because he appeared before a Congressional committee in an effort to thwart an appropiation for Howard university and at the same time criticized the administration, specifically Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson.

The tribunal cited section 7 of the original act of incorporation of the university, providing that "the board of trustees shall have power to remove any professor or tutor or other officer connected with the university when, in their judgment, the interest of the university shall require it."

Justice O'Donoghue, who presided, issued the opinion that for a professor of a university to appear before a Congressional committee and oppose an appropriation showed that his action was not loyal to the university and merited suspension.

Following the decision, Attorney Cobb said that it meant that no professor or teacher at Howard university had any security.

Howard U. Will Launch Its 72d Year

Post

Many Fine Buildings Form Quadrangle Of Government-Aided Institution

Howard University will begin its seventy-second year of instruction September 26, with prospects for an increased enrollment over that of last year.

Washington

With the support and help given by the National Government, Howard University is pre-eminently fitted to train and send out its students into the various fields of endeavor. With such support Howard has been able to give its students the best in the matter of instruction and equipment.

Howard University's total assets are approximately $8,200,000. The physical plant is composed of 25 buildings estimated to be worth nearly $6,000,000, exclusive of furniture, laboratory and special equipment. Nine of these buildings are so located as to form a quadrangle which is defined by the Founders Library and Rankin Memorial Chapel on the south; by the Carnegie Building and Frederick Douglass Memorial Hall on the west; by Clarke Hall and the gymnasium on the north; by Applied Science Building, Spaulding and Miner Halls on the east.

Library Impressive

The Founders Library, a gift of the Government, costing $1,106,000, was dedicated last May. Distinguished librarians from several of the leading educational centers of the country have declared this to be one of the very best libraries in the entire field of higher education.

A unique feature of this library is the Moorland Foundation, a collection of material on Negro life and history, the nucleus of which consisted of a gift of 3,000 books pamphlets and other material combined with smaller collections on various phases of Negro life which were donated by Gen. Howard, Lewis Tappan, William Lavalette, Francis J. Grimke and others

The collection at present consists of more than 10,500 items of al kinds. Recently, there has beer added a union catalogue of 30,000 cards which is a full index of printed material on the subject of the Negro to be found in eight colleges and public libraries, including the Library of Congress. In addition, there is a special index of the 8,000 volumes of Henry P. Slaughter, which is the largest private collection on the Negro.

This central catalogue, the development of which has only begun, places at the disposal of research scholars a total of 100,000 references on Negro life and history. Combined with the special Moorland collection and other facilities in Washington, it offers the best opportunity for research in Negro life and history that can be found anywhere in the world.

In addition to the new Founders Library may be found the school of music library with more than 5,500 compositions for piano, organ, voice, violin and the orchestra; 10,000 copies of octavo music for male, female and mixed voices; 500 copies of oratorios for mixed voices and 50 volumes of phonograph records.

There are also the school of law library, containing 20,224 volumes, and the school of medicine library. This latter library contains the standard reference works and 170 current American and foreign periodicals dealing with all phases of medicine.

The men's dormitory, the latest building given the school by the Government, is now in course of erection. This building, when completed, will cost $646,200.

Courses Offered

The College of Liberal Arts offers the usual undergraduate program in English, foreign languages, natural and physical sciences, social studies, commerce and finance and physical education.

The school of engineering and architecture offers courses leading to the degree of bachelor of science in architecture, civil engineering, electrical engineering and mechanical engineering.

The school of music offers courses leading to the degree of bachelor of music in voice, piano, organ and violin, and courses in public school music leading to the degree of bachelor of school music.

The graduate division, organized in 1928 as a separate unit under the direction of the committee on graduate studies, offers the degree of master of arts and master of science.

The school of religion offers courses for graduates of standardized colleges who plan to study religion in preparation for the ministry or other Christian work.

Howard University Begins 72nd Year

Tribune 9-9-39 Washington D.C.

Howard University will begin its seventy-second year of instruction September 26, with prospects for an increased enrollment over that of last year.

Students entering Howard will find one of the most beautiful college campus in the country. It is situated in the northwest section of the City of Washington less than three miles from the National Capitol. It comprises fifty-five acres of developed land at one of the highest elevation in the District of Columbia.

McMillan Park and the Reservoir Lake adjoin the campus on the east and the grounds of the National Soldier's Home furnish a park at the northeast. On Georgia Avenue directly opposite the university grounds is Banneker Park, a large recreation center comprising athletic fields, tennis courts, play areas and a large outdoor swimming pool.

With the support and help given by the National Government, Howard University has been able to give its students the best in the matter of instruction and equipment.

Assets Total 8 Million

Howard University's total assets are approximately $8,200,000 The physical plant is composed of twenty-five buildings estimated to be worth nearly $6,000,000, exclusive of furniture, laboratory and special equipment.

Nine of these buildings are so located as to form a quadrangle which is defined by the Founders Library and Rankin Memorial Chapel on the south; by the Carnegie Building and Frederick Douglass Memorial on the west, by Clarke Hall and the Gymnasium on the north; by Applied Science Building, Spaulding and Miner Halls on the east.

The Home Economics Building is directly east of the Applied Science Building, with its main facade overlooking McMillan Park. The three dormitories for women are southeast of the quadrangle and separated from it by Fourth Street.

On the west of the quadrangle and separated from it by Sixth Street, are three buildings forming the School of Music Group Thirkield Science Hall is located on Sixth Street just south of Rankin Memorial Chapel, and the Chemistry Building is adjacent to Thirkield Science Hall.

Frederick Douglass Hall

Frederick Douglass Memorial Hall, one of the newer buildings given Howard University by the Federal Government, was completed early in 1935 at a cost of $460,000. The first floor of this building provides offices for the Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, and for the Dean of the Graduate School, a lecture hall seating 130 persons and equipped with a talking picture machine; also, nine rooms and six instructors' offices.

On the second floor there are psychology laboratories, faculty and student reading rooms, faculty meeting rooms, nine class rooms, and six instructors' offices. On the third floor there are three classrooms, twelve offices, a Statistics Laboratory, and the office of Bureau of Educational Research.

The Chemistry Building was completed in 1936 at a cost of $626,300. This is a five story building containing several elementary and advanced chemical laboratories; a number of resreach rooms equipped with gas, compressed air, hot and cold water, steam, alternating and direct electric current.

It also includes several laboratories specially equipped for work in photochemistry and microanalysis a constant temperature room, a glass blowing shop, a machine shop and dark rooms. There is also available a large variety of physical instruments and apparatus for use in connection with the advanced laboratories and the research activities of the chemistry staff.

Research students are assigned to research rooms in which they work singly or in groups of two. In addition, there is a departmental library containing over two thousands volumes of standard reference works and space for current chemical periodicals.

The Founders Library

The Founders Library, a gift of the Government costing $1,106,000, was dedicated May 25, 1939. Distinguished librarians from several of the leading educational centers of the country have declared this to be one of the very best libraries in the entire field of higher education.

A unique feature of this library is the Moorland Foundation, a collection of material on Negro life and history, the nucleus of which consisted of a gift of 3,000 books, pamphlets and other material was combined with smaller collections on various phases of Negro life which were donated by General Howard, Lewis Tappan, William Lavalette, Francis J. Grimke and others.

The collection at present consists of more than 10,500 items of all kinds. Recently, there has been added a union catalogue of 30,000 cards which is a full index of printed material on the subject of the Negro to be found in eight colleges and public libraries, including the Library of Congress.

Special Index

In addition, there is a special index of the 8,000 volumes of Henry P. Slaughter, which is the largest private collection on the Negro. This central catalogue, the development of which has only begun, places at the disposal of research scholars a total of 100,000 references on Negro life and history. Combined with the special Moorland Collection and other facilities in Washington, it offers the best opportunity for research in Negro life and history that can be found anywhere in the world.

In addition to the New Founders Library may be found the School of Music Library with more than 5,500 compositions for piano, organ, voice, violin and the orchestra; 10,000 copies of octavo music for male, female and mixed voices; 500 copies of oratorios for mixed voices, and 50 volumes of phonograph records.

There are also the School of Law Library, containing 20,224 volumes, and the school of Medicine Library. This latter library contains the standard reference work and 170 current American and foreign periodicals dealing with all phases of medicine.

The Men's Dormitory, the latest building given the school by the Government, is now in course of erection. This building, when completed, will cost $646,200.

HOWARD OPENS SEVENTY SECOND TERM SEPT. 26TH

Prospects for Increased Enrollment Evident; Assets At $8,200,000

Howard University will begin its seventy-second year of instruction September 26, 1939, with prospects for an increased enrollment over that of last year.

Students entering Howard will find one of the most beautiful college campuses in the country. It is situated in the northwest section of the City of Washington less than three miles from the National Capitol. It comprises fifty-five acres of developed land at one of the highest elevations in the District of Columbia. McMillan Park and the Reservoir Lake adjoin the campus on the east and the grounds of the National Soldier's Home furnish a park at the northeast. On Georgia Avenue directly opposite the University grounds is Banneker Park, a large recreation center comprising athletic fields, tennis courts, play areas and a large outdoor swimming pool.

Race In Need of Confid Revival, Spaulding Say

Pays Tribute to Howard University as "Capstone of Negro Education"

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"The race is in need of a revival of confidence and it can only be built by men of integrity—men who are God-fearing and who are willing to sacrifice," declared C. C. Spaulding, nationally-known business executive, in delivering the annual Charter Day adress at Howard University on Thursday of last week.

Mr. Spaulding, who is president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, Durham, N. C., is a member of the Howard University board of trustees.

"My interpretation of education, or intelligence, as I prefer to term it, is a process of broadening one's vision, whereby he becomes more cooperative and less selfish," Mr. Spaulding said. "It instills in one the desire to reach out and down—to lift up others. In other words, the more cultured a person is, the easier he is to approach, and the more congenial he is.

FORCE OF COOPERATION -- --

"I should like to impress upon us the force of cooperation, for cooperation brings about organization, organization brings about success and success alone inspires confidence. The race is in need of a revival of confidence, and it can only be built by men of integrity—men who are God-fearing and who are willing to sacrifice.

"Howard University is the hub of educational achievement in America," the speaker continued, "And America is the best place I've found in which to live.

"Now, since we have decided to remain here, we would rather live and work out our future on an amicable basis. With all our handicaps and disadvantages, America still offers our race the best opportunities for advancement."

Reviewing the accomplishments of the Negro in the field of business, Mr. Spaulding revealed that there are approximately 40 life insurance companies owned and operated by Negroes in the United States, with assets or accumulated savings totaling over 20 million dollars, and with insurance in force aggregating more than $300,000,000.

"Evidence of the Negro's ability to meet competition in business is indicated in the fact that today he is engaged as owner in over 100,000 commodity selling and personal service forms of business in the United States," Mr. Spaulding declared.

"Our life insurance companies are giving employment to over eight thousand Negro men and women, many of whom are graduates of Howard University. These companies stood the test of wars, depressions, and epidemics. Financial and industrial upheavals failed to shake the foundation on which life insurance has been built. They are bridging the gap between the theories acquired in class-rooms and the practical application of these theories in business by giving employment to actuaries, accountants, comptrollers, stenographers, secretaries, and others trained in office routine. Through mutual understanding and cooperation, the social, economic and financial interests of the race have been greatly benefitted."

TWELVE BANKS

"There are 12 banks successfully operated by Negroes under the supervision of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, capitalized at two million dollars, and with resources of over 15 million dollars," he said.

"As a race we need to label something," Mr. Spaulding continued "Any article made in Germany has the stamp, 'Made in Germany.' No article is allowed to have the stamp unless it is first class. When we speak, our countrymen want to know who's speaking What have we accomplished? Too many of us with a bicycle salary have Cadillac ambitions.

"When, and if, we work out our economic status, it will be done by living within our means — by saving a part of our income religiously. . . The highly organized world in which we live demands a higher degree of efficiency — an appreciation of the fundamental things of life. The green light of opportunity bids us gird up our loins, get our hearts right, and go forward. But we must be prepared. There are more jobs looking for qualified men today than can be supplied."

Mr. Spaulding paid tribute to Howard University as "the capstone of education for Negroes," and declared that it should be the center "to which the world should come for information and advice regarding the contributions, aims, and aspirations of the Negro; it should develop a school of thought all its own regarding the future life of the Negro in America."

PERIOD OF ECONOMIC UNREST

"During this period of economic unrest, we who contribute the country's No. 1 underprivileged group should be vitally interested in the many proposed reforms to remedy such conditions as bad housing, lack of opportunity to earn a decent living, unequal educational opportunities, and a host of other social injustices. This very definitely falls within the sphere of Negro leadership and is a matter of utmost importance. The race will succeed in proportion to his participation in the affairs of our country."

2240 STUDENTS

"After 72 years of service, the institution is a well established university with more than 2,250 students enrolled in nine undergraduate, graduate, and professional schools and colleges, and with a plant and other assets valued at a sum in excess of eight million dollars," declared Mr. Spaulding in reviewing the progress made by Howard University.

"Its 10,266 graduates have been at work in 43 states and 24 foreign countries. The faculties of the university now constitute the largest single community of Negro scholars in the world, who, in their accomplishments, represent victory over every obstacle incident to cultural development that 72 years ago seemed insurmountable," the speaker asserted.

"46 percent of all Negro physicians and surgeons now practicing in the United States are Howard graduates The university has sent forth 1,79 physicians and surgeons since its beginning.

"40 percent of all Negro dentists now practicing in the United State are graduates of Howard College o Dentistry. The College has sent ou 835 dentists since its founding.

"46 percent of the 1,200 colored lawyers now practicing in the United States are graduates of Howard University School of Law. 606 graduates have become leaders in the field of religion and compose 30 per cent of the seminary-trained Negro clergymen in urban centers of American life.

PHARMACISTS AND MUSICIANS

"246 of 497, or 49 percent of Negro graduates and teachers who have received the master's degree from Negro institutions took their degrees at the Howard graduate school.

"Of approximately 1,200 Negro pharmacists practicing in the United States today, 25 percent are graduates of the Howard University college of pharmacy.

"80 have been graduates from the school of music and are teaching in the secondary schools and colleges of the South as well as giving an account of themselves in the concert halls of the country."

Judge Cayton Mum on Law School Letter

WASHINGTON

A scathing denunciation of the attitude of Judge Nathan Cayton, District Municipal Court jurist, who resigned as a member of the law faculty of Howard University, last week, was touched in an open letter released, Monday, by four full-time professors of law of the university.

The letter, bearing the signatures of Bernard S. Jefferson, W. Robert Ming, J. M. Nabrit, assistant professors, and Leon A. Ransom, associate professor, voiced a severe criticism of Judge Cayton's protest against the manner in which the affairs of the university are administered. This protest was cited in the jurist's letter of resignation, addressed to President Mordecai W. Johnson.

Will Keep Silent

Insisting that he had no personal grievances to air, the judge had said in his message that he did feel it his duty to condemn the "indecent" manner in which former Judge James A. Cobb was 'unceremoniously booted out of his position in a star-chamber, ex-parte meeting, without notice and without hearing."

The letter also protested against the "temperamental manner in which appointments to and dismissals from the faculties have been made," and the frequent clashes between the school heads and its alumni.

May Talk Later

When asked Tuesday by AFRO reporters whether he would care to make a statement regarding the position taken by his former colleagues, Judge Cayton said:

"I have no comment to make. There may be something to say later, but for the present I would rather remain silent on the issue."

The Letter, in Part

"Having read a purported copy of your letter of resignation from the faculty of the School of Law of Howard University, as it appeared in the Evening Star of February 7, 1939, we, the undersigned full-time members of the law faculty, feel impelled to point out certain misleading statements contained therein.

"We appreciate your expression as to the harmonious relations which you have enjoyed with the faculty and students. Our relations with you have been equally pleasant and cordial.

"We concede freely your right to protest any action by the university with regard to former Judge James A. Cobb which you deem to be unfair, but we deeply deplore the fact that in so protesting you have used language which, in our judgment, is calculated to render a distinct disservice to the university which you have served for a decade.

Cites Court Decision

"As to your protest in reference to former Judge Cobb being 'unceremoniously booted out of his position,' you are aware, we are certain, that the United States District Court for the District of Columbia recently decided this contention was without merit — this decision, or course, being subject to the action of the proper appellate courts.

"We are, however, definitely of the opinion that no member of the university faculty, who has satisfactorily served a probationary period, should be dismissed save for cause determined after notice of charges and an opportunity to be heard with regard thereto.

"As to your protest, 'I protest against the temperamental manner in which appointments to and dismissals from the faculties have been made, and against the constant turmoil and uncertainty within the faculties, evidenced by numerous complaints against the leadership of the university; and evidenced further by repeated litigations in which the university has become involved,' We, the full-time members of the Law School, have insufficient knowledge upon which to base a judgment concerning other faculties of the university, although we spend all of our time teaching and studying in the university.

"On the other hand you have based sweeping generalities on a personal contact with the university limited to your presence there for a two-hour period on Saturday morning for one semester each year.

"We believe every university needs public good-will whether supported by public monies or private endowments, and this is particularly true of the only university maintained in the United States for its largest minority group.

"The participation by the members of the Law School Faculty in legal matters of national significance and their services to local and national organizations dedicated to the improvement of social and economic conditions conclusively demonstrates that they are not 'disdainful of public good-will,' but rather made every effort to obtain and to keep the same.

Say Statement Forced

"We regret very much that as members of a law school faculty it has been necessary for us to refer publicly to your letter of resignation, which is and should be a purely private and personal matter. In view, however, of the publicity which it has received, and the erroneous conclusions which have been drawn therefrom, as evidenced by the inquiries which have been addressed to us to date, we have felt constrained to make this statement.

"We assure you that we regret your resignation and tender you our best wishes for you continued success."

Cites Qualifications

The letter also cited the qualifications of the faculty and pointed out that a cursory examination of their educational and experiential qualifications demonstrates the basis for their appointments.

It further cited the membership of the law school in the Association of American Law Schools, and favorable report made at the conclusion of the periodic inspection made this year, and pointed to the recent appointment of Judge William H. Hastie as a "conspicuous portrayal of the practice of the university in selecting its personnel on the basis of meritorious qualifications."

H. U. Law Faculty Brands 'Laxity' Charges as Untrue

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23—(ANP)— Following the published resignation of Judge Nathan Cayton, white, a member of the faculty of the law department of Howard university, comes the statement, in a signed "open letter," that the charges of laxity and "temperamental feeling" in administration of affairs there are untrue. All the charges made by the part-time professors of law have been categorically denied, four members of the law faculty putting their signatures to the denial—Prof. Bernard S. Jefferson, W. Robert Ming, Jr., J. H. Marbitt and Prof. Leon Ransom.

Howard, according to the report, is enjoying the best era in its history. There is reported a 34 per cent increase in enrollment in its graduate school, and announcement has been made that within a short time a program of instruction will be considered which will make possible the beginning of work leading to the doctorate. The present development of graduate study in Negro education is limited to work for the master of arts and master of science degrees.

Enrollment Increases

The number of students has increased in the graduate school from 43 in 1926-27 to 326 in 1937-38. It is interesting to note that the distribution of enrollment is in 17 major fields of study, and 257 students holders of baccalaureate degrees. Another fact is evident, and that is that those doing graduate work leading to degrees have done their first work at such leading institutions of learning as Boston university, Mt. Holyoke, Harvard, Smith, Wellesley, the University of Michigan, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Oberlin and New York university. In addition, they come from the leading universities of the South.

Howard meets the need of those coming from the areas where live the largest per cent of the Negro population and where no provision for them is made in tax-supported institution for their training in the profession, and where there is "not a single tax-supported graduate school for the training of Negroes in education and the sciences."

How Much Education in a $9,000,000 College?

afro-American 11-4-39 Baltimore, Md.

Howard Students' Fees Same as When College Was Worth Only $3,000,000– University's 1939 Financial Report Lists Interesting Items

By JOHN JASPER

Howard students are getting from two to three times as much education as they were twelve years ago and paying no more for it.

This startling theory is deduced from the university's annual 1939 financial report distributed last week.

Here's the way it's figured out:

The university's plant equipment is worth nine and a half million dollars, which is just three times what it was in 1927.

The Federal appropriation for salaries and expenses has tripled —it is now $723,000. But, Howard students are paying into the university for tuition and fees $255,000, which is practically what they paid twelve years ago.

Medical School

Twelve years ago it cost $104,000 to operate the school of medicine and students paid $70,000 as their share of it in tuition and fees.

In 1939 it cost $171,000 to operate the same medical school and students' fees totalled only $44,000. The higher the education the less students pay.

The New Library

Even two years ago, students paid $5,344 in fees for the use of $250,000 worth of books in a library that cost $50,000. It cost just $31,000 a year to operate that library.

But, in 1939, the university moved into a million dollar library with its books worth $269,000. It cost $41,000 to operate this new plant, but students paid only $5,304 in library fees or $40 less than for the $50,000 library.

New Auditors

The university's report is sixty pages of figures audited by Lybrand, Ross Brothers and Montgomery, accountants of Baltimore. This is a new firm. Price, Waterhouse Company had it last year. They were the same auditors who figured in the celebrated McKesson and Robbins drug case.

$60,000 in Gifts

Treasurer Johnston's figures reveal a number of interesting items.

Gifts totalling $60,000 were made to the university last year. The largest, $23,435, from Dr. Conrad Hubert; the smallest, $2, from George Turitz for scholarship aid to a student in the school of music.

Between 1932 and 1936 Howard students left school owing $50,000. Everybody pays cash now and lets the credit go.

Chapel collections for the year were $647, about $18 per Sunday.

$10,000 on Athletics

The university spent $10,000 last year on athletics, which is $2,000 less than in 1938. In 1927 athletics cost $25,000. Times have changed.

Mal-Practice Insurance

The university health service takes out $90 worth of insurance against mal-practice, something I had not heard of until now. Thieves beware! The university has $427 worth of burglary and theft insurance.

The university choir cost $476 and chapel speakers, $1,075.

It cost the university $1,000 for its post office and its telephone and telegraph bill was $8,400. An additional $4,700 was paid to telephone operators, etc.

Commencement $2,461

Commencement cost $2,461 and it required $124 extra to get the cornerstone of the men's dormitory laid properly, and $448 to dedicate the library.

Courtesies to trustees cost $69 and university guests were entertained $548 worth. Trustees travelling expenses to board meetings cost $2,700. In 1927 they didn't meet so often and it cost $845.

$43,000 Oil Bill

Auditing the books cost $2,000 and lawyers' fees and expenses were $4,000.

The university spent $1,720 in concerts and $43,000 for fuel oil.

Janitors drew $35,000 in wages; and ground supervisors, $11,000; and guards, $6,800.

Fire insurance cost $5,000.

Howard values its assets at $9,500,000.

This includes a million in endowments, another million in 101 pieces of real estate near the campus; a third million in campus and improvements; six millions in buildings, equipment, etc.; and $400,000 worth of new boys' dormitory buildings under construction.

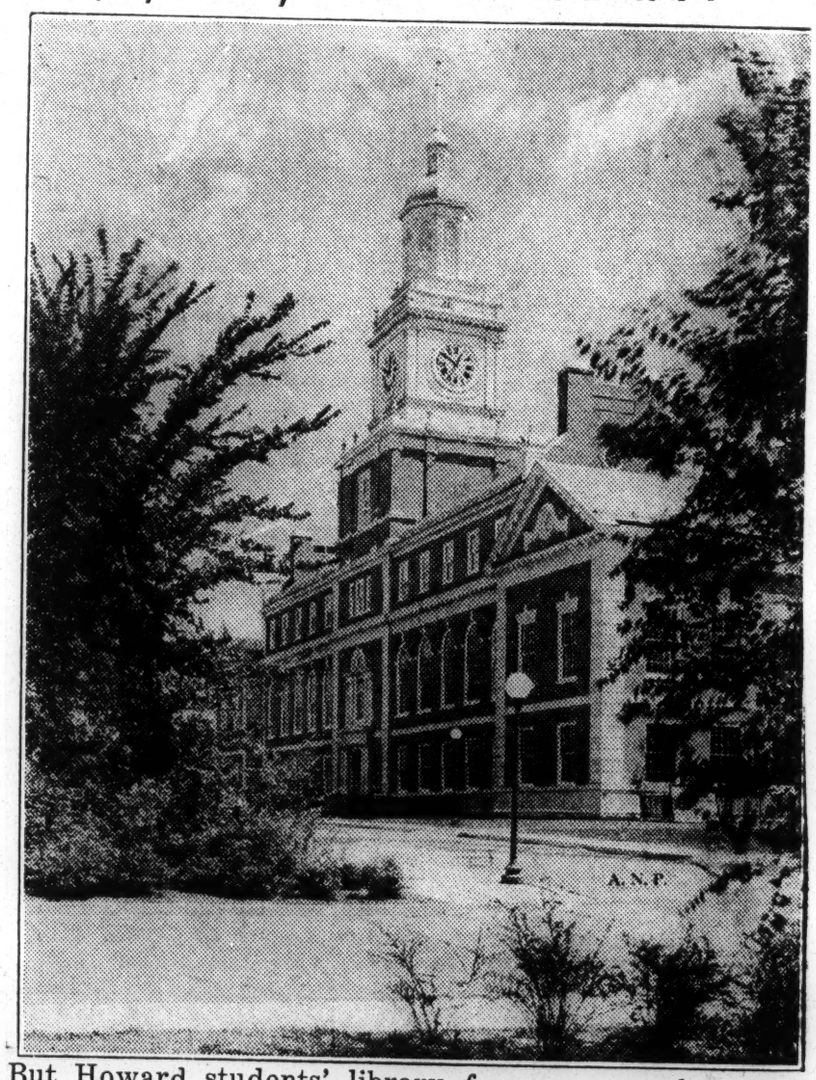
The university owns $383,000 worth of United States bonds and notes and took a $70,100 loss in selling railroad and South American bonds accumulated twenty years ago. The worst of them, a $10,000 Peruvian Government bond, brought only $600.

It purchased $37,000 worth of stock in various corporations during the year which, today on the market are worth $33,000.

It sold $5,000 worth of Broadway Realty Company stock for $194.

$1,000,000 LIBRARY



But Howard students' library fees are now less than they were when the university library was housed in a $50,000 building.

HOWARD BOARD WILL NOT OUST DR. M. W. YOUNG

Teachers' Union Supports Professor; Gets Leave With Salary

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—The Howard Teachers' union and supporters of Dr. M. Wharton Young in his conflict with the dean of the medical school consider themselves victors in the affair as a result of action of the trustee board of the university last week which refused to oust the professor, but instead gave him a year's leave of absence with pay.

The case of Dr. Young, anatomy professor in the medical school, attracted wide attention when he was asked to resign from the faculty of the school last June by his dean, Dr. Numa P. G. Adams.

Whitewashed of charges of insubordination leveled against him by a faculty committee of the medical school, Dr. Young's case was given to a committee of the board of trustees for final recommendation.

The chairman of the faculty committee was Dr. Raymond Gregory, prominent white medical scholar who resigned recently from his position as head of the medicine department in the school of medicine.

Resigns In Protest

Dr. Gregory is said to have resigned in protest against the treatment being accorded Dr. Young when Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the university, attended the meeting of the committee which was investigating the matter for report to the board of trustees.

What was considered a face-saver for the dean of the medical school was the part of the trustee's decision which provided for Dr. Young's return to the faculty on probation next year.

The professor is considered one of the most brilliant at the medical school. He had been invited to lecture on his subject at Harvard university and to sit in at a seminar at George Washington university, a white institution in this city.

Considered Unfair

His case followed that of Dr. Arthur Callis, who was dismissed from the faculty on what many consider unfair charges, without being given a hearing before the board of trustees, according to union and university regulations.

Dr. Callis' case is still being fought by the teachers' local at the university.

The resignation of Dr. Gregory last month is said to have deprived the university medical faculty of nearly all of its prominent white scholars, and the law school of all of them.

Last year Judge Nathan Cayton and Register of Wills Theodore Cogswell resigned from the law faculty under similar circumstances

LAW STUDENTS PLEASED WITH HOWARD STAFF

Senior Class Gives Its Position In Letter To The Public

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—A denial that they, at least, are dissatisfied with the present faculty came this week from the senior class of the Howard university school of law.

The letter setting forth the position of the class was signed by Victor Ashe, president; Robert Carter, chief justice of the Court of Peers and F. Love Willis, class secretary.

The letter was in answer to charges that students and alumni of the Howard law school were dissatisfied with the recent appointments of Spottswood W. Robinson III, and James A. Washington Jr. who were graduated from the school last year.

Those opposed to the appointments said they believed since neither of the two had practiced in a court of law or had passed the bar examinations of any state, they were not qualified to teach law.

The statement attributed to the senior class by the committee said in parrt:

Open Letter

"The senior class of Howard university school of law, would have the public know that reports circulated to the effect that we are dissatisfied with the recent appointments of Spottswood W. Robinson III, and James A. Washington Jr., to the Howard law faculty are suppositions contrary to fact.

"Our class has done nothing to give credence to those reports either collectively or individually. Actually we are greatly pleased and feel that—Messrs. Robinson and Washington are quite capable of conducting themselves in a manner befitting the confidence displayed by the dean and faculty which made possible this extraordinary opportunity.

"We also consider this move an exemplification of implicit assurance, that Howard university school of law is producing students as qualified as those from any accredited college of legal jurisprudence. We not only condone the appointments, but favor the precedent set."

COBB DENIED REINSTATEMENT AT HOWARD U.

Supreme Court Refuses To Compel Restoration Of Former Judge

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1—Former Judge James A. Cobb of the municipal court lost his fight in the Supreme Court to compel Howard university to reinstate him as a professor in the school of law, last week.

The court refused to review the findings of the district court where Judge Cobb had sued for a mandatory injunction to regain his position, contending that the university was not within its legal rights, according to its own regulations, to drop him from the faculty. His position was one of permanent tenure, he contended.

In asking the Supreme Court to review the lower court's decision, Judge Cobb had said that the "present case presents the broad question of importance to educators and the public generally whether a college professor may be discharged from his position whenever the interests of university shall require it' entirely in the discretion of the university."

Judge Cobb was dismissed more than a year ago from the law school faculty because he had testified against an appropriation for the university before a Senate committee, according to the reason given for his dismissal. The judge said that he testified against only one item of the appropriation, the one calling for an annual expenditure for a publicity agent.

He spoke against this item, he explained, because he believed that Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the university, had recently abolished the position of publicity agent and now wanted to create it again for propaganda for himself so as to build himself among the alumni.

Nabrit Named H. U. Secretary To Succeed Hill

Mrs. Susie Elliott of Tuskegee Okeyed For Dean of Women

At a meeting of the board of trustees of Howard University, held in Founders Library, James M. Nabrit, Jr., executive secretary to the president of the university, and associate professor of law, was elected secretary of the university to fill the position left vacant by the death of Richard Hurst Hill.

Mr. Nabrit is a graduate of Morehouse College, of Atlanta, Ga., and received a doctor of jurisprudence degree from Northwestern University where he was elected to the Order of the Coif.

He formerly served as dean of Arkansas State College in Pine Bluff, and practiced law in Houston, Texas before joining the faculty of Howard University. He is a member of the Supreme Court of the United States, and last year successfully argued the case of preme Court, in which case the Lane vs. Wilson before the Sucourt decided that the entire registration system of Oklahoma was unconstitutional.

Organized New Course

At Howard University, Nabrit organized and taught the first course in civil and political rights to be given at any American Law school.

At this same meeting, Mrs. Susie Elliott, of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., was appointed dean of women. Mrs. Elliott was born in Maryland, near Baltimore, and received her elementary education in Baltimore and the surrounding country. She completed her high school work in 1910, her normal school work in 1912, and did special work in the school of household science and arts at Pratt Institute where she received a diploma in 1915.

She received her B. A. degree in home economics in 1925 and her M. A. in 1928. She taught domestic science at the National Training School in Durham, N. C., and home economics at the Winston-Salem Teachers' College.

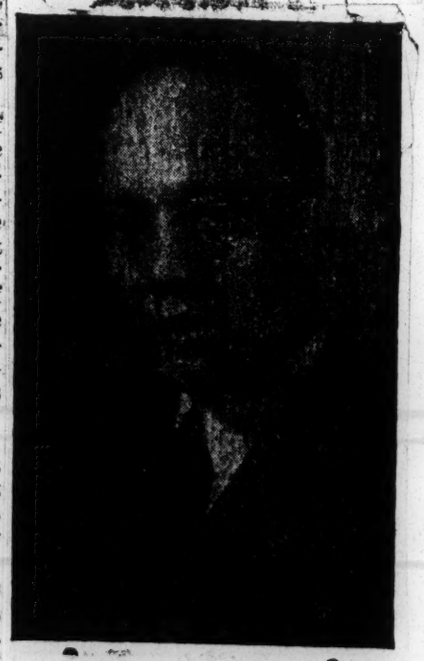
Mrs. Elliott comes to Howard University from Tuskegee Institute where she was head of the department of women's industries, the department of commercial dietetics. She also served one year as dean of women at the Winston-Salem Teachers' College.

Mrs. Elliott takes the position held by Miss Alida Banks since the death of Dean Lucy Dean Slome several years ago. Miss Banks's title, however, was acting dean.

'Concerning her future work at the university the newly appointed secretary said:

"The trustees have a very high regard for the ability of Miss Banks and she will be continued in the service of the university in a very important position in the women's dormitories."

He would not state the title or She would not state thet itle or nature of the position.



JAMES M. NABRIT, JR.

The building and grounds committee reported the complete renovation of the Carnegie Building as the future home of the school of religion, and also that the men's dormitory given to the school by the United States government will be occupied at an early date.

The board of trustees voted to set up a university-wide committee, elected by the faculty members, with tenure, for the consideration of important matters affecting the various faculties.

Miss Alida P. Banks, who has been acting Dean of Women since the death of Dean Lucy D. Slowe, was continued in the service of the University as Household Manager in the Women's Dormitories.

The Board of Trustees voted to set up a University-Wide Committee, elected by the faculty members, with tenure, for the consideration of all important matters affecting the various faculties.

The Buildings and Grounds Committee announced that on October 23rd the School of Religion entered into its new home, the Carnegie Building, which has been completely renovated and modernized. The entire moving into the new quarters was carried out by the voluntary and donated services of the faculty and students of the School of Religion.

It was also announced that the Men's Dormitory was nearing completion, and would probably be ready for occupancy the beginning of the next semester.

RECOMMENDATION OF DEAN NUMA P. ADAMS IGNORED BY BOARD

Will Be Given Leave of Absence of One Year with Pay and Will Then Be Reinstated.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2.—Although the board of trustees of Howard university indulged in a bit of face saving at its semi-annual meeting last Tuesday, Dr. Moses Wharton Young, assistant professor of anatomy, was credited with a moral victory when it refused to dismiss him upon the recommendation of Dean Numa P. Adams of the Medical school.

GETS YEAR'S LEAVE OF ABSENCE WITH PAY

The board voted to give Dr. Young a leave of absence of one year with pay and at the expiration of his leave to reinstate him in his position upon probation. This action was regarded by observers as a means of saving the face of Dr. Adams.

Charges of insubordination were preferred against Dr. Young by Dr. Adams.

Under recently adopted rules these charges were referred to a committee of the Medical school faculty. Dr. Raymond L. Gregory, white, who recently resigned as professor of medicine, was the chairman of this committee.

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the university, sat with the committee while the charges were being heard. This drew a protest from Dr. Gregory as unethical because Dr. Johnson was in a position to prejudice the case before it was presented to the trustee board. Dr. Gregory later resigned. His resignation was attributed to resentment at the way in which Dr. Young was being treated in the Medical school.

HEARING TAKES A HUMOROUS TURN

The faculty committee exonerated Dr. Young. The matter was then taken to the trustee board and referred to a subcommittee of the Medical school committee. The subcommittee met in New York last week, but upon a protest from Dr. Young that the meeting to hear the charges should be held here the subcommittee met here on Tuesday.

Dr. Russell A. Dixon, dean of the Dental college, appeared as a witness against Dr. Young, but the latter so completely nullified the effect of his testimony that the hearing took a humorous turn and even Dr. Johnson himself had to laugh.

Dean Adams asked Dr. Young to resign in June. When Dr. Young refused, the dean preferred charges against him.

NABRITT TO SUCCEED THE LATE REV. HILL

James M. Nabritt, associate professor of law, was elected secretary of Howard university to succeed the late Rev. Richard H. Hill. It is understood he will resign his position in the law school.

The board also appointed Mrs. Susie Elliott, of Tuskegee Institute, as dean of women.

Mrs. Elliott, head of the department of women's industries at Tuskegee, also served one year as dean of women at Winston-Salem Teachers college.

Board Decides Decision Made Last Year Will Not Be Changed

Attitude of D.A.R. Is Revealed in Letters To Houston, Stokes

The doors of Constitution Hall are still barred to Marian Anderson, THE TRIBUNE learned, this week, following an interview with Charles H. Houston, chairman of the Marian Anderson Citizens Committee, which has been seeking to persuade the DAR to remove the ban against colored artists.

Recent correspondence between Mr. Houston the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, and Mrs. Henry P. Robert Jr., president general, National Society Daughter of the American Revolution reveals that the board of management of the DAR has taken the position that it has not changed in its attitude of last spring, when Miss Anderson was forced to cancel her concert scheduled for Constitution Hall, the property of the DAR.

The text of the letters follow:

October 24, 1939

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, Jr.,
President General
Daughters of the American Revelution
Continental Hall,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Robert:

Word has reached us indirectly that some of your membership are concerned about a rumor that Miss Marian Anderson's manager, Mr. S. Hurok, is a Communist. We have no definite information, one way or the other, but should be much surprised if this is so. Certainly Miss Anderson is not a Communist. Her recordings of Red Army songs stand on the same basis as all her other recordings.

American Negro artists, however, would be less than human not to be affected by the courtesy and sympathetic appreciation they receive in Russia, as contrasted with the treatment they receive from most Americans. Paul Robeson, Roland Hayes, Marian Anderson, singers; Wayland Rudd, actor; and many other American Negro artists, have enjoyed a warmly human and enthusiastic reception in Russia. The word has come back to this country and has spread among Negroes everywhere and in all walks of life that Russia treats Negroes like human beings.

We sincerely trust that those of your membership who are alarmed at the possibility of Communism spreading among Negroes may recognize in such fear their own responsibilities of practising on their own doorsteps that democracy which they preach.

May we also express our hope that at this meeting of the National Board of Management of the Daughters of the American Revoluton the ban on Negro artists appearing in Consttution Hall may be lifted. We have withheld all publicity since the May 31 conference that the National Board of Management might be free to cosider the question calmly and at length. We trust it has reached a favorable decision. In these days when democracy is battling for its very existence, we submit that America's salvation lies in welding all her citizens together into one great unified nation found on mutual confidence and trust.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES H. HOUSTON, Chr.
BERTHA BLAIR, Vice Chr.
JOHN LOVELL, JR., Sec.

My dear Mr. Houston:

Your letter of the 24th is recevied . Enclosed is a copy of a letter which I am sending today to Reverend Anson Phelps Stokes.

Sincerely yours,
SARAH C. ROBERT
MRS. HENRY M. ROBERT, Jr.

October 27, 1939

Reverend Anson Phelps Stokes,

New York City

My dear Dr. Stokes:

Your letter ,together with the copies of your prepared statement, received. Since you were the official spokesman of the group who visited my office in May, I write to say that both our Executive Committee and our National Board of Management gave careful consideration to your statement. In view of the fact that the many conditions affecting the action of last spring remain the same. the decision of the Board must remain the same. The standing or artistic ability of any artist is in no way involved.

Sincerely yours,
SARAH C. ROBERT
MRS. HENRY M. ROBERT, Jr.
President General, N.S.D.A.R.

P. S. — In view of the fact that I have this week received a letter from Mr. Houston, I am taking the liberty of sending him a copy of this letter.

SAY HOWARD'S LAW FACULTY IS CRITICIZED

Claim Newly Appointed Professors Are Too Inexperienced

By FREDERICK S. WEAVER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—Charges that youthful, inexperienced law graduates are appointed as instructors in the Howard university school of law, were made by students who have returned here to resume their study at the hilltop institution.

At the law school, the newly appointed dean, William H. Hastie, confirmed reports of the appointment of James A. Washington and Spottswood W. Robinson to the law faculty for the school year 1939-40.

Washington is a graduate of Howard university and Robinson of Virginia Union university. Both were graduated from the Howard law school last June and were appointed in place of two professors who resigned last year—Judge Nathan A. Caton, of the Municipal court, and Theodore G. Cogswell, register of wills for the District of Columbia, both white.

Students Complain

The complaining students contend that the two new appointees are too young and inexperienced to fill the shoes of such professors as Caton and Cogswell.

Judge Caton was judge of the law school's moot court, but Dean Hastie stated that there would be no moot court this year. This, too, is cause for much unrest at the school.

One student, who is a member of the senior class, complains that neither of the new appointees are members of any state bar, nor have they taken any bar examination.

These two appointees bring to four the total who hove recently been appointed without membership in a state bar association.

Say Standard Lowered

"The students thought that the new dean would endeavor to raise the standards of the school," commented one student who refused use of his name, "but he is bringing the standard down when he appoints to the faculty as his first administrative act, two graduates of last year's class who have never taken any bar examination, and therefore are unable to have gained any experience in actual practice of the profession."

Another student went so far as to say that there may be some agitation on the part of the students to refuse to attend classes under the new instructors, who only last year were their classmates.

With the abolition of the moot court, students claim that they will be unable to gain any experience in court procedure, or in preparing and actually arguing cases under scrutiny of an experienced professor.

Rumor of Howard Law Student Unrest Denied

Young Alumni on Faculty Welcomed, Says Hastie

WASHINGTON—Dean William H. Hastie last week put the lie to reports being circulated to the effect that student unrest is threatening the calm of the Howard University Law School because of the appointment to its faculty of two members of the 1938 graduating class.

The newly appointed head, while confirming the appointment of Spottswood W. Robinson and James A. Washington to the law school faculty, told the AFRC that both had been cordially received by the student body and that rumors of dissatisfaction among the undergraduates were grossly exaggerated.

Rumor Spread Deliberately

Apparently disgruntled sources had spread the impression that Howard law students were protesting against the prospect of attending classes under instructors who were only last year were their classmates.

These same sources sought to establish the feeling that the two new appointees are too young and inexperienced to be taking the places of the two tried professors—Judge Nathan A. Cayton of the Municipal Court and Theodore G. Cogswell, register of wills for the District of Columbia, both white—who resigned last year.

Dean Hastie, in addition to denying that there had been any evidence of discontentment on the part of the students, stated that his critics were further in error in the assumption that Robinson and Washington had been named to succeed Cayton and Cogswell.

Not in Veterans' Places

The appointments of Robinson and Washington, he declared, were merely a solution to the problem arising out of the emergency created by the sudden withdrawal of Prof. William E. Taylor, former acting dean of the school

...ne two, Dean Hastie said, are working on a part-time basis and are not, therefore, considered successors to Cayton and Cogswell.

As for the report that indications showed an unwillingness on the part of the students to accept their new instructors, Dean Hastie said:

"In the opening days of school, the relations between Mr. Robinson and Mr. Washington and the students have been altogether satisfactory."

Explains Dropping of Court

Discontinuance of the moot court, over which Judge Cayton had presided during his association with the school, was explained by Dean Hastie as a temporary action. He hinted that while this method of instruction provided students with opportunities to familiarize themselves with court procedure and actually argue cases, there were other courses which he felt were equally as valuable in the training of competent attorneys.

Third H. U. Professor Resigns

Medico Head Takes Job at Lower Pay

Eminent Scholars Quit In Protest Against Policy, Is Report

The resignation of Dr. Raymond Gregory, white, from the faculty of the Howard University School of Medicine marks the third important position at the university vacated by white scholars within a year.

Dr. Gregory was head of the department of medicine at the university and was well liked by the faculty and students for his demeanor and mastery of his subject.

When questioned concerning the matter, the professor said that he resigned for various reasons, some of which he would not care to mention. Among the reasons for his leaving the university, he said, was his appointment to another position—head of the department of medicine at Arkansas State University.

Reports from sources close to the physician state that his main reason for resigning was his objection to the preemptory dismissals of university professors.

It is reported that he specifically pointed to the cases of Dr. Arthur Callis and Dr. Moses Young. The former was dismissed without being granted a hearing, even after several requested of the trustees to do so by the Howard University local of the Teachers' Union. The latter was reported to have been recommended for dismissal at the close of the school term last summer by the dean of the medical school. He has not been dropped however, university officials reporting that he is still a member of the medical school faculty.

Income Lower

Dr. Gregory was sent to the university by the General Education Board, under the Rockefeller Foundation, which gave the medical school a grant of $50,000. With the issuing of the first $25,000. Dr. Edward Howes, white, was appointed to the surgery department. Dr. Gregory was appointed following the issuing of the second half of the grant. He is said to be leaving a $7,500 annual salary at Howard for a $5,000 salary at Arkansas University.

The other two eminent professors resigning from Howard last year were Theodore Cogswell, register of wills for the District of Columbia, who resigned from the law school, and Judge Nathan Cayton, municipal court judge for the District, who resigned earlier. Both are also white.

Judge Cayton definitely stated that he resigned in protest of the high-handed methods practiced by the administration of the university upon its faculty members, specifically pointing out the firing of former Judge James A. Cobb, who was formerly a municipal court judge.

Although Mr. Cogswell would not publicly state his reasons for quitting the university, it was reported that among his reasons were the same objections as the others.

Both the professors who voluntarily resigned and others who have resigned under fire point to what they term uncertainty of their positions and the lack of consideration of tenure regulations demanded by teachers' unions for faculty members.

The $50,000 grant of the General Education Board may be disturbed by the resignation of Dr. Gregory it was learned. Questioned as to this, the resigning professor said that the rating of the university's medical school may not be affected by his leaving. "It is according to who is appointed in my place," he said.

Howard's Medical School Under Fire; Head Ouits

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—With reports of the resignation of the head of the department of medicine from the faculty of Howard university's medical school last week came to the realization that three professors have resigned and three others have been fired from the university during the period of a little more than a year.

Dr. Raymond Gregory, white, verified reports that he had vacated the chair of medicine, and at the same time, intimated that all was not well at the institution.

He left the position at the school to take another one, Dr. Gregory said, but when questioned further, admitted that there were other reasons for his departure from the school.

Sources close to the professor declare that he resigned in protest against the preemptory dismissals of university professors and other policies of administration.

They cite specifically the cases of the two medical school teachers who were recommended for dismissal by dean of the medical school, Dr. Nurma P. G. Adams, last year.

One was Dr. Arthur C. Callis who was dismissed despite protests of his colleagues that the university trustees violated the school's announced regulation that no one would be dismissed without a hearing.

The Howard Teachers' union has not ceased its efforts to obtain a hearing for the ousted professor.

Accepts Lower Salary

The other case was that of Dr. Moses Young who was recommended for dismissal by Dr. Adams at the end of the school term last year. After protests of the teacher's union and further consideration of the matter, Dr. Young was retained on the faculty and is teaching at the school at present.

Dr. Gregory was sent to the university by the General Education board, under the Rockefeller Foundation, which gave the medical school a grant of $50,000. With the issuing of the first $25,000, Dr. Edward Howes, white, was appointed to the department of surgery, and with the issuing of the second half of the fund, Dr. Gregory was appointed.

Whether the fund will be withdrawn because of the resignation of Dr. Gregory could not be learned. "It depends upon who will be appointed in my place," the professor said. Withdrawal of the fund is said to affect the school's A-class rating.

Dr. Gregory is reported to have left a $7,500 a year position at Howard to accept one for $5,000 a year His new job will be that of head o the department of medicine at Arkansas State university.

Two other prominent white professors resigned from the law school of the university last year under similar circumstances. They were Judge Nathan Cayton, judge of the Municipal court here, and Theodore Cogswell, registrar of wills for the District of Columbia.

They resigned last year, following the ouster of the former municipal court judge, Judge James A. Cobb.

Although Mr. Cogswell would not give his reasons for resigning to the press except to say that it was due to the pressure of business, Judge Cayton gave a public statement protesting the summary dismissal of Judge Cobb, and the general police of the administration concerning the faculty.

H. U. Prexy Gets Leave

H.U. Head Reported Given 8 Months Off and $1,000

WASHINGTON

Howard University has granted President Mordecai Johnson leave of absence.

This action was taken by the executive committee of the board of trustees, and several members of the board were first notified by the AFRO-AMERICAN Tuesday morning.

The president's office referred a reporter seeking confirmation of the report to Dr. Johnson's home, where he lies ill with grippe that nearly became pneumonia.

Mrs. Johnson told the reporter she could not make any statement and referred him to Dr. James M. Nabrit, newly-appointed executive secretary to the president.

Reports were current on Sunday that trustees had granted Dr. Johnson eight months' leave and $1000, and there was immediate speculation as to who would be named acting president.

In 1931, when President Johnson accompanied the Moton Commission to Haiti, Dr. D. O. W. Holmes, now president of Morgan College, was named acting president.

Leave Indefinite, Says Hungate

T. L. Hungate, white, chairman of the trustee board, told the AFRO in New York that the executive committee had urged Dr. Johnson:

"To take such leave as his physician would recommend.

"We want him to take a rest. We do not know yet how sick he is.

[An unconfirmed report is that Dr. Johnson is suffering from a heart ailment.—Ed.]

"We grant professors one-half to one year leave at full salary. Dr. Johnson has never had a sabbatical year in the twelve or thirteen years he has been at Howard.

Eight Months

"We told him he was welcome to a leave up to the middle of September or as much of this time as he may elect.

"No acting president will be necessary as we understand he is not going to be out of the country, but will be in and out of the city.

Won't Discuss Amount

"As to the amount of money the committee approved for his vacation, that is a matter which concerns him. It is not effective, and I don't think I ought to discuss it."

An official release from the university, late Tuesday, made no mention of a heart ailment. It stated, in part:

"At the last meeting of the executive committee of the board of trustees, the board took into consideration the fact that Dr. Johnson had served the institution for thirteen years without an extended leave of absence, and in view of the fact that he is now recuperating slowly from an attack of influenza which has kept him confined to his home for several weeks, the committee considered that the present is the most appropriate time for a leave of absence to be granted.

Off for March

"In the judgment of the committee, the affairs of the university are in a healthy and constructive condition and it therefore voted that the president is now free to take leave of the university between the present and September 15, at such time as he may consider wise."

President Johnson, it is reported, plans to leave the university immediately after Charter Day for the month of March and return to the university in time for the annual meeting of the board of trustees in April.

Reported in New York

While rumors were current that Dr. Johnson has been ill abed since the funeral of his old teacher, Dr. Benjamin Brawley, other reports were that he was in New York, Sunday. The campus buzzed with conflicting reports about the president's leave, but no one could confirm any of them.

Said one trustee: "This is the first I have heard of a leave granted Dr. Johnson. Action was probably taken by the executive committee and will be announced to the full board later."

One trustee, who asked that his name be not used, said that there was no secret about Dr. Johnson's being granted leave. The length of time and the amount of money given him, he said, were listed in his notes which he did not have at the time.

He said this was information which the president would give out himself, that it was planned before the president was taken ill recently and no date would be fixed until after the university's Charter Day celebration.

Judicial Courtesy

JUDGE Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia, has resigned as a member of the faculty of the Howard University law school. In writing his resignation, copies of which he gave to the press, Judge Cayton said, among other things of a similar nature:

> I protest the indecent manner in which Judge James A. Cobb, a distinguished alumnus and senior member of the law faculty was unceremoniously 'booted' out of his position, in a star chamber, ex-parte meeting without notice and without a hearing.

The public is probably weary of hearing of Howard's internal affairs but in view of the extraordinary exhibition of injudicial temperament as well as the lack of information displayed by Judge Cayton, these columns deem it expedient, in the interest of keeping the record correct in the public mind, to review briefly the decision of Justice Donoghue, of the District Court, in sustaining the action of the Howard University board of trustees in the Judge Cobb matter.

Be it remembered that the trustees held, and the court so held, that Judge Cobb's term as a law school professor expired June 30, 1938. The decision is subject, of course, to review by the appellate Court. The trustees declined to reelect Judge Cobb for another term. This action was taken "for cause," which will be revealed in Justice Donoghue's decision. We quote from that Court's decree:

> There has been no evidence introduced here concerning this corporation (Howard University), either in the minutes of the board of trustees or in the minutes of the executive committee or in the minutes of the law school faculty, whereby they ever agreed to employ Judge Cobb as a professor for indefinite tenure or for tenure for life or for tenure during good behavior.
> The court holds, therefore, that this university did not enter into any such contract. That being the case, the tenure was from year to year. It was terminable at the end of the year 1937-38, by the terms of the contract, and was so terminated on the 30th of June 1938.

So much for the legal grounds. Now, as to the cause underlying the action of the trustees:

> Now, with that view of the court, it would not be necessary to go further. But the court of appeals might like to see the findings all the way through the case. The court will hold, further, that for a professor of a university to appear before Congress, when the question is the appropriation of some money for that university, ostensibly at the request and with the consent and with the approval and desire of the board of trustees of the university, to go there and oppose that appropriation, shows an action that is not loyal to the university. And also in that same statement to oppose his superior, the president of the university, and to charge that superior with, in effect, misconduct and with being dishonest, in seeking that appropriation for one purpose, ostensibly, when intending to use it for another purpose, would show lack of loyalty not only to the university but to the head of the university.
> At all events, the board of trustees considered that matter; they exercised their judgment; and those are the words used in the articles of incorporation. They exercised their judgment that that constituted cause for removal, and they made a finding to that effect. . . .

That should dispose of Judge Cayton's amazing charge that Judge Cobb was "unceremoniously booted out of his position," and that there was something "indecent" about it.

If there has been anything improper in the proceedings all the way through, it was Judge Cobb's behavior, which brought about his separation from the law school faculty; and in Judge Cayton's injudicial attempt to mislead the public in an emotional defense of his former judicial colleague. If that is judicial courtesy, then we have in one District of Columbia court something to match the brand of "Senatorial Courtesy" which was recently displayed by the United States Senate.

Few men who have attained a place on any court would publicly characterize a regularly constituted annual meeting of a university board of trustees as a "star chamber, ex-parte meeting." Nor would any really informed man of judicial temperament employ the intemperate language used by Judge Cayton in submitting his resignation from the law school faculty.

Wants Howard And Freedman's Hospital To Work In Harmony

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5—Proper organized relationship with Freedmen's Hospital so as to enable the School of Medicine to operate on a sound basis is listed as one of the major needs of Howard university by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson in his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior.

Control of Freedmen's Hospital by the School of Medicine has been sought for several years, but the association of former internes of the hospital, mostly Howard graduates, has opposed the idea.

As it is now, there is a working agreement between the two institutions, both of which are under the jurisdiction of the Interior Department. But Howard is nominally a private institution receiving aid from the Government. Freedmen's Hospital was established and is operated by the Federal Government.

Howard May Get Increase Of $22,000

Library Needs To Be Met With Appropriation

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, submitted to Congress by the President last Thursday, carries an increase to meet partially only one of the urgent needs of Howard University repeatedly outlined by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, its president.

The estimates of appropriations for the university for the fiscal year 1940 amount to $745,000, which represents an increase of $22,000 over the amount appropriated for the current fiscal year.

This increase was allowed in response to a request for additional funds to purchase well-known collections of Negro works for the library. Dr. Johnson had reported that the sum of $100,000 was necessary to make important supplements to the gravely deficient book collection in the university library.

Other needs of the university in no wise met include an increase in the number of teachers in the graduate school and the clinical branches of medicine, an icrease of 26 in the number of mature teachers of professorial rank, increased funds for student aid and scholarships, and increased funds for research work by members of the teaching staff.

The budget of the university for 1940 totals $783,930 for salaries. Toward that sum the estimates of the Federal Government carry $540,000, the same amount that was appropriated for this purpose for the current fiscal year.

The total number of employees covered by the estimates remains 442 and the average salary of each position continues the same.

The university budget for 1940 totals $419,686 for general expenses. Toward that sum the estimates of the Federal Government carry $205,000, an increase of $22,000 over the amount appropriated for the current fiscal year.

The amount of the estimate for educational equipment is $38,840, which represents an increase of 25,000 over the amount appropriated for this item for the current fiscal year. But the estimate for scientific equipment is only $12,643, which represents a decrease of $3,000 in the amount appropriated for this item in the current fiscal year.

The estimates also provide $38,450 for student aid and scholarships and $3,260 for athletics, the same amounts as were appropriated for these items for the current fiscal year.

Salaries are not included in the item for athletics. They are carried in the salary estimates, which list three assistant coaches at an average salary of $217 and an athletic trainer at $150. These are the smallest salaries listed.

Problem Takes Cool Head To Handle

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—The recent flare-up on Howard university campus, during which co-eds charged that Mrs. Alida P. Banks, acting dean of women, demanded that they stay out of two popular eating shops—the University and Hollywood Grills—has served to focus nationwide attention on the trials and tribulations that beset college deans, both men and women.

It is generally accepted that the problem faced by administrative officials of colleges and universities in the matter of discipline of students is growing daily in significance and is a matter that should claim the thoughtful attention of parents interested in the welfare of their children while away from home.

Crux of the situation at Howard stems in the fact that of the women's student enrollment of 932, only 258 reside in dormitories. This, according to Dean of Women Banks, means that the other 674 women are primarily not subject to the rigid rules of the dormitory girls, because they are living with parents or close relatives who are responsible for their conduct outside classrooms.

Dean Banks said that the welfare of the young women under her supervision was her prime consideration, that she felt it her duty to "guide them right, that they might live right."

She was attempting, she said, to set up a worthwhile social and educational program in the university dormitories, but that a few, who had no knowledge of dormitory life, were inciting others against her regulations.

Referring to the eating places mentioned, she said she had not banned them, had merely suggested to the students to be more careful of the eating places they patronize.

Race Leaders Asked To Give $100 to Bethune-Cookman College

Daytona Beach, Fla.—(C)—Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of Bethune-Cookman College, sent out letters to racial leaders throughout the country on Saturday asking that they give or raise $100 for the college endowment fund by July 1. The college must raise $135,000 for endowment this year to meet the requirements of the Southern Association of Colleges. Bethune-Cookman has turned out 2,200 graduates in 35 years, and its plant is valued at $500,000.

MARY MCLEOD BETHUNE
PIONEER IN EDUCATION

By DANIEL T. SKINNER

7-29-39

(exclusive story to the Guardian)

Mary McLeod Bethune is Boston's favorite guest. We find her plain and pleasant in manner, always anxious to talk about the Bethune-Cookman College at Daytona Beach, Florida, an institution which she wrought with her own hands.

Born (1875) in a three-room house in the South Carolina cotton fields, Mary M. Bethune received her schooling at Scotia College, N. C. and the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, Ill. A love for teaching led her to begin the Bethune Girls' School in Florida, 1904, with prayer, 5 pupils, and a capital of $1.50. Today the college is valued at $800,000. For 35 years she has been to Bethune-Cookman College what Booker T. Washington was to Tuskegee. Her slogan has been "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister." The activities of Mrs. Bethune are legion; they include the founding of a "Florida Home for Delinquent Colored Girls", the presidency of the National Ass'n of Colored Women (1924-28), and the supervision of Colored workers and staffs under the National Youth Adm. Besides, Mary Bethune, who is intimate with President and Mrs. Roosevelt, threw her full support behind Marian Anderson in the late fiasco at Constitution Hall.

Mary McLeod Bethune considers education a means of enlightenment and salvation. Her influence is supreme both in Florida and all over these United States. She can say with pride that all the certified graduates of her school (1936) were placed in good teaching positions. In fact the demand for teachers in Florida exceeded the supply of qualified applicants. When we spoke with Mrs. Bethune at Symphony Hall, she assured us that she seeks now to elevate the Bethune-Cookman Junior College to a Senior status. She seemed so earnest and apostolic about her educational crusade. That is why she charms and holds people as she does. Her long career of service was crowned in 1935 when she received the Spingarm Medal. A tireless laborer in the vineyard, her life exemplifies the medieval maxim:—

"Laborare est orare."
"To work is to pray."

DEVOTES LIFE TO AID RACE TO GET SCHOOLING

NEW YORK, Oct., (ANP) — With the announcement this week of the appointment of Mrs. Arena Mallory Belden as field secretary of the Bethune-Cookman College, it became known that Mrs. Belden had resigned her post as president of Saints Industrial and Literary School, located at Lexington, Miss. Mrs. Belden has held this position since 1926.

In an interview, Mrs. Belden stated that she felt there was a wider field for her efforts and greater opportunities for her special efforts in behalf of children throughout the country in working for Bethune-Cookman College.

Her work now consists of making special contacts throughout the country, setting up local Bethune clubs, securing pledges from those interested in the college and getting people interested in the work being done by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune.

One of her first duties as secretary was to set up the initial Junior Bethune Clubs in New York. She plans branch clubs throughout the United States. These clubs will be composed of young girls from 11 to 17, who will raise funds to aid needy Southern children who attend the college.

Graduating from high school in Jacksonville, Ill., she attended the Illinois Conservatory of Music, received a master's degree from Jackson College, Miss., and while in the state had occasion to visit Lexington.

In the heart of the Delta region, on the edge of the county seat town of Lexington, Holmes county, in a seething cauldron of exploitation and peonage, where children were given only two or three months of school a year Mrs. Belden discovered a small private school of four rooms and having some 25 pupils. There was one teacher and three coal oil lamps.

Appalled and astounded at conditions, she borrowed money with which to go to California where friends gave her $900. With this money she returned to Lexington, bought desks and books and rejuvenated the school. Today, that same school, started from such an inauspicious beginning, is worth close to $200,000, has 350 acres of land, has 12 grades and 600 pupils. It is an accredited school in the Southern Association. Most of the pupils come from the terribly underprivileged homes of sharecroppers.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May (ANP) —According to a recent survey directed by Dr. Martin D. Jenkins of Howard University there are seven Negro institutions of higher learning now offering work leading to the master's degree. PROGRESS REPORT OF STATE COLLEGE

Pres. Hubert Tells of Experiments Made Recently

President B. F. Hubert of the Georgia State College for Negroes issued a progress report yesterday on experiments being carried on at the school with the view of achieving "greater prosperity on our farms here in the Southeast."

"The college is attempting to find the answer to the question of satisfactory money crops for the Southeast," Hubert explained. "It is also seeking ways in which the farmer may carry on his farm business at minimum expense and receive maximum results.

"During the past three years, ramie has been grown at the college. This experiment is being carried on in co-operation with the Georgia experiment station at Griffin and is an effort to show how the coastal lands may be economically used in growing ramie. Experiments already have been made in an attempt to determine if cloth can be produced from this product as cheaply as from cotton. . . . This plant is easily grown on low land. . . .

"An acre of land at the college is also given over to a peanut experiment project which is being carried on in co-operation with the Georgia Experiment Station. Eleven varieties of peanuts have been planted in an effort to determine the most prolific strain of peanuts for the coastal territory. . . .

"The college is entering into its third year of experimentation with sea island cotton or long staple cotton. An attempt is being made to develop a strain of cotton of the best long staple variety that will require a shorter growing season and produce a larger yield. Each stalk on this acre is checked and yields from the same are carefully recorded. Each year, improvement is shown through this selective process. . . .

Other experiments include poultry and livestock feeding, and quail raising.

"The building construction division of the college," the report stated, "is developing plans for inexpensive rural homes where the people on the farms can use most of the material on their farms for the construction and improvement of their homes. These plans will be made available soon for negro home owners."

FT. VALLEY BECOMES STATE COLLEGE WITH ROSENWALD FUND AID

FORT VALLEY, Ga.—(ANP)—It was announced here this week that the Fort Valley Normal and Industrial institute had been transferred to the state of Georgia, and would henceforh be administered as a unit of the university system. The transfer, and plans for the rapid development of the former junior college into a four-year college, has been greatly advanced by generous gifts from the Julius Rosenwald fund.

Plans on foot call for the development at Fort Valley of an outstanding college, giving special emphis to the training of teachers. Dr. Horace M. Bond, formerly head of the department of education at Fisk university, has been elected as president. Current improvements in process call for a strenghtened faculty, improved library and laboratory facilities and an immediate renovation of the physical plant.

The Fort Valley school achieved world acclaim as a result of the distinguished labors of the late Henry A. Hunt, who, in successive years, was awarded the Harmon medal and the Spingarn medal for distinguished service in the field of Negro education and race relations.

Mr. Hunt developed a great institution in Georgia. That the state has seen fit to carry on the work of this leader is considered a happy omen of the rapidly changing picture presented by race relations in the South. The aid from philanthropic sources promises to bring forth an expanded program at Fort Valley that will in short time produce a unique collegiate institution, distinguished by good facilities, an outstanding faculty and a selected student body.

The institution at Forsyth, the state teachers and agricultural college, formerly conducted by the state, has been merged with the Fort Valley institution.

Baptist College Opens Cemetery

Negro Institution Will Maintain Memorial Plot

Officials of Georgia Baptist College for Negroes, formerly Central City College, yesterday announced the opening of a perpetually maintained memorial cemetery on land set apart for the cemetery more than three years ago.

The cemetery lies east of the Forbes-Johnson Memorial park, now maintained as a park and playground center, and is separated from the park by a ravine. Walnut creek is on the other side of the burial plot.

For the last three years officials have been preparing the cemetery site and a quantity of shrubbery has been set out.

Every dollar spent in the purchase of a grave site or lot in the cemetery will be paid into the hands of a local bank and invested so that the income from the amounts so paid will be used to furnish scholarships to boys and girls who wish to attend the college in exchange for work done in maintenance of the cemetery.

Until the trust fund has been established, officials pledge maintenance of the cemetery. The project was announced by the Rev. W. M. Hall, following endorsement by the Colored Baptist Ministers' Union.

State May Take Over Fort Valley Institute

WOULD ABANDON COLLEGE AT FORSYTH IF PLANS MATERIALIZE

Says Fort Valley Is Ideally Situated To Handle Educational Needs Of Central Georgia

Atlanta, Jan. 4.—The state board of regents today considered a recommendation to discontinue the Teachers and Agricultural College for Negroes at Forsyth and acquire instead the Fort Valley Normal and Industrial School.

The recommendation was made by Dean Walter D. Cocking of the University of Georgia, who directed for the regents a survey into higher education for Negroes in Georgia.

No action has been taken toward effecting the recommendation, but serious study is being given probable methods of making such a change.

The Forsyth college is one of the three Negro institutions operated by the state, under the regents. The others are Georgia State College at Savannah, a four year school, and Georgia Normal and Agricultural at Albany, which like Forsyth, is a two year institution.

The Fort Valley school, a private institution under auspices of the Episcopal church, was described by Dean Cocking as "ideally situated" to handle Negro educational needs of Central Georgia.

"If the state could secure the plant at Fort Valley and at the same time find some means of disposing of the institution at Forsyth, then it would appear that the needs of Central Georgia for higher institutions of learning for Negroes would be met adequately for years to come," Cocking said.

He said it was conservatively estimated a million dollars would be needed to develop the plant at Forsyth "to the requirements of the situation" and advised against any further expansion there.

"Knowing of the interest of the General Education Board and the Julius Rosenwald fund in Negro education in Georgia," the dean said, "it seems entirely probable that the board of regents might interest one of both of these boards in providing the necessary funds to secure the institution at Fort Valley without any financial outlay on the part of the state."

GRADUATE JOBS

Atlanta University reports that forty-one members out of a class of 45 graduated last June, with either the master of arts or the master of science degree, are gainfully employed. They are employed as college teachers, public school teachers and in secretarial, recreational and construction work. The percentage finding employment in so brief a period since graduation is unusually high and especially during depression. All the schools and colleges where the graduates are employed are located in the South.

This fact perhaps is one of that there are good openings for teachers in Southern States and students at graduates who despair of being appointed in Northern schools might well apply for a teaching position below Mason and Dixon's line. The pay may not be precisely what may be expected but the teaching experience is valuable and besides there is a real satisfaction in being of service to the Race.

Founder's Day Is Observed At Morehouse

Dr. J. N. Nabrit Main Speaker On 72nd Anniversary

ATLANTA, Ga. — Morehouse College honored her founders last Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in Sale Hall Chapel with a program which culminated a two days' observance of the beginning of this institution.

In the seventy-two years of its existence, the college has emerged from an humble beginning into a beautiful campus of twelve acres, with modern classroom and dormitory buildings.

The principal speaker at the afternoon's exercises were Dr. James M. Nabrit, a graduate in the Class of '23, who is at present executive secretary to the president of Howard University in Washington, D. C.

The program was participated in by students, alumni, and faculty, and was open to the public. Music was provided by the college quartet and the glee club.

ORGANIZED IN 1867

Morehouse College was first organiZzed in 1867 in Augusta, Ga., under the name of the Augusta Institute. In 1879, during the presidency of Reverend Joseph T. Robert, it was removed to Atlanta and incorporated under the name, Atlanta Baptist Seminary. At this stage of its growth, the institution owned only one building, a comparatively small structure near Terminal Station. President Robert was succeeded by President Samuel Graves.

In 1889, as the surroundings of the old location in Atlanta had been unfavorable, a new site was secured, and in the spring of 1890 the school was removed to its present location. President George Sale entered upon his duties in this year.

In 1897 amendments to the charter were secured, granting full college powers and changing the name of the institution to Atlanta Baptist College. In 1906 President Sale resigned to become superintendent of education of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, and he was in turn succeeded by the late President John Hope, the first person of his race to head this pioneer institution.

DR. HUBERT HEADS COLLEGE

In 1931 President Hope resigned, and was succeeded by President Samuel Howard Archer, who had served the college since 1905 in various capacities. By a vote in 1912 of the Board of Trustees and by a change in 1913 of the charter, the institution became Morehouse College, in honor of Reverend Henry L. Morehouse, corresponding secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society.

President Archer was retired from office in October, 1938. Since March 1, 1937, Dr. Charles D. Hubert, director of the School of Religion, has been acting president of the college.

In 1929 the college was affiliated with Atlanta University and Spelman College in a university system. Today Morehouse boasts of a college of arts and sciences, a school of religion, and a summer school conducted jointly with Atlanta University and five other colleges in Atlanta.

For three days, beginning tomorrow, Frank B. Stratton, director of music at Massachusetts State College, will be on the campus of Spelman and Morehouse colleges to present a series of piano recitals for the students and faculty. Feature will be a recital on the clavichord, ancient ancestor of the modern piano.

Clark U. Observes 70th Year; Dr. Stanton Speaks

Asserting that the education of the college today must be responsive to the social structure of which the student is a part, the Rev. D. H. Stanton, secretary of the American Bible Society, Tuesday addressed a large audience at the Founders' Day Exercises of Clark University.

The Rev. Mr. Stanton traced the long history of the South Atlanta institution, pointing out certain aspects of life in the present age which present problems different from those of the founders. He said that in a time when, today discouraging extra-great pressure is being brought to bear on minority groups and influences of so destructive a nature are exerted upon them, the Negro college student is confronted with many challenging questions which require clear and serious thinking for progressive steps toward solution.

The Tuesday anniversary, which was the school's seventieth, saw attendance by delegations from several near-by cities and the presence in large numbers of district superintendents, pastors and laymen from the Atlanta and Savannah M. E. Conferences.

Professor E. Luther Brookes, Director of the Science Department brought greetings from the faculty, and Miss Grace Arnold represented the alumni. Other participants on the program were Dr. Willis J. King, president of Gammon Theological Seminary, and the Rev. J. W. Queen, district superintendent of the Rome District. A musical program under direction of Professor J. deKoven Killingsworth was presented.

An amount in excess of $2,500 was given Clark University and the benevolent organizations of the Methodist Church by the district superintendents, pastors and members of the Atlanta and Savannah conferences. This amount, according to officials, exceeded all other donations of similar nature.

Superintendents leading in the financial effort included: the Revs. J. F. Demery, Atlanta district; E. G. Newton, Atlanta East district; J. W. Queen, Rome district; E. Dougan, LaGrange district; and A. L. Haywood, Savannah district.

Dr. James M. Nabrit Urges Study Of Law In New Educational Objectives For Morehouse

ATLANTA, Ga.—If the Negro race s to achieve the maximum utilization of its rights as American citizens in the South, Morehouse College must skill students in a practical application of American politics, and thus prepare graduates to go out into new fields other than the teaching and preaching professions, as government administrators and in the domain of law enforcement, law interpretation, and a general practice of law. This is the opinion of Dr. James M. Nabrit, Morehouse '23, who was the Founders Day speaker at the celebration of the 72nd anniversary of the college. Dr. Nabrit was introduced to the large assembly by Dr. K. A Huggins, professor of chemistry at Atlanta University and acting dean of Morehouse College, who was his classmate at Morehouse.

Speaking on "New Educational Objectives for Morehouse College," Dr. Nabrit explained the part that law and lawyers could play in removing the present conditions confronting the Negro in the South. "The disabilities under which Negroes live in America and especially in the South," he said, "are of such a destructive nature that if Naziism were transplanted to the South, the mass of Negroes here would be unaware of any change in the theory of government. The Fascist South, he contnued, has by violence of the law and by enactment of illegal regulations already set up segregated schools, ghettos, prison farms, and chain gangs denying to Negroes participation in government and the right to vote, and the only difference here is that this has been done by force and public opinion, rather than by a fiat of the federal government.

"All of these disabilities are illegal under our constituton and laws, and we must develop a group of courageous, hghly-trained, public-spirited lawyers, who will be able to destroy these illegal impediments which prevent the full exercise of our rights as American citizens."

The speaker paid lofty tribute to the founders of Morehouse College and to those men who deeply embodied the immortal spirit of Morehouse College—John Hope, Samuel Archer and Benjamin Brawley. This tribute was extended also to Dr. Charles DuBois Hubert, acting president of the college.

In concluding his address, Dr. Nabrit declared he was not offering a solution for the race problems, nor advocating Communism, Fascism, Naziism, or Democratism to combat the evils in the system, but his suggestions were made in an attempt to help the Negro attain the privileges that rightfully are his in American national life.

MOREHOUSE COLLEGE'S CONTRIBUTION TO CHRISTIAN STATESMANSHIP

Colleges do not make men; men make colleges. Schools like other institutions, or enterprises, secular and religious, are rated by the value the public places upon their product. Morehouse College's products, are men, and the college gets its rating in the public regard, by what its men do in service, to God and man; after they leave school. What Morehouse contributes to the social order of their day and time, in moral, economic, political and spiritual worth, constitute the standing and reputation that Morehouse College enjoys in the public mind today.

Morehouse men have done as much for the college as the college has done for them, and the college owes them as much as they owe the college. Let's say the break is even and stop at that. Morehouse men have made good in the pulpit; in the school room, on the farm and in business. As college presidents and executive educators, Morehouse tops and holds this undisputed scepter, among Negro colleges. This reputation is based upon the work that Morehouse men have done wherever they have been called to serve God and humanity. There is a greater demand for Morehouse men today, than all other race colleges in America. This demand, is based upon fitness and preparedness, inspired by the life and service of the late John Hope, Sr., and Sam Archer, Sr., Dr. Roberts and Graves. Jesus stated the case of Morehouse and its trustees, when He said; a prophet is without honor save in his own country.

Morehouse has produced the greatest preachers in America, and we do not mean Negro preachers. What race or college has turned out greater preachers and Bible scholars, than Edward R. Carter, Emanuel K. Love and Chas. T. Walker? Greater college presidents and executives than Mordecia Johnson, John W. Davis, Chas. D. Hubert, Benj. F. Brawley, Benj. F. Hubert and H. C. Trenholm, and hundreds of others who have distinguished themselves in the fields of law, science, medicine, agriculture, politics and business. No well informed man will dispute the fact, that there is a greater demand for Morehouse men in the fields of education, ministry and race leadership than the supply.

The question is often asked, why is it that the trustees of other colleges find so much more in Morehouse's finshed product than the trustees of Morehouse can see in the men Morehouse College has prepared? Or why is it, when a vacancy occurs in the office of president at Morehouse the trustees of Morehouse College go to some other school of less significance to select a president instead of promoting, or electing a man of their own production? In all their developments has Morehouse not produced a man, the Board of Trustees can trust to carry on at Morehouse? Does not the demand of other institutions for Morehouse men for president suggests to the Trustees, that if other schools can find men at Morehouse to carry on they too could find among Morehouse graduates a man for president.

The Editor of the Union-Review, believes that he can say, without the fear of a successful contradiction, that Morehouse College has given to the world. in the men she has sent out, more real character and service than any other Negro college dedicated to education and Christianity in the world. Not being a Morehouse man, we cannot answer the oft repeated question, who do the Trustees of Morehouse College reflect on the men of their own making, by going outside of their graduates to select Morehouse presidents? Possibly, some graduate of Morehouse knows the answer. Unless its a case of a prophet being without honor only in his own country. The boys of the Alumni Association ought to find the answer, and will find it if they have enough grit in their craws, brains in their heads and guts in their bellies. If it is the failure of Morehouse graduates to show ability to raise money; then raise more money and remove the cause. The educated world wants the answer and it is entited to know why the Trustees of a college will not select any of their own graduates for president when a vacancy occurs and go to some other college of less importance and prestige to find their president. The public wants the answer, "go get it."

Nabrit Urges Study Of Law As Index To "Full Life" Today

Maximum Utilization of Citizenship Rights Depends Upon Understanding Of Politics, Speaker Declares

If the Negro race is to achieve the maximum utilization of its rights as American citizens in the South, Morehouse College must skill students in a practical application of American politics, and thus prepare graduates to go out into new fields, other than the teaching and preaching professions, as government administrators and in the domain of law enforcement, law interpretation, and a general practice of law.

This is the opinion of Dr. James M. Nabrit, Morehouse '23, who was the Founders Day speaker yesterday at the celebration of the 72nd anniversary of the College. Dr. Nabrit was introduced to the large assembly by Dr. K. A. Huggins, professor of chemistry at Atlanta University and acting dean of Morehouse College, who was one of his classmates.

RAPS FASCIST ACTIVITY

Speaking of "New Educational Objectives for Morehouse College," Dr. Nabrit explained the part that law and lawyers could play in removing the present conditions confronting the Negro in the South. "The disabilities under which Negroes live in America and especially in the South," he said, "are of such a destructive nature that if nazism were transplanted to the South, the mass of Negroes here would be unaware of any change in the theory of government. The fascist South, he continued, has by violence of the law and by enactment of illegal regulations, already set up segregated schools, ghettos, prison farms and chain gangs, denying to Negroes participation in government and the right to vote, and the only difference here is that this has been done by force and public opinion, rather than by a fiat of the federal government.

"All of these disabilites are illegal under our constitution and laws, and we must develop a group of courageous, highly-trained, public-spirited lawyers, who will be able to destroy these illegal impediments which prevent the full exercise of our rights as American citizens.

NO SOLUTION

In concluding his address, Dr. Nabrit declared he was not offering a solution for the race problem, nor advocating communism, fascism, nazism, or democratism to combat the evils in the system, but his suggestions were made in an attempt to help the Negro attain the privileges that rightfully are his in American national life.

MANY ALUMNI SPEAKERS

Formal celebration of Founders Day opened at 9:00 o'clock on Saturday morning (February 18) in Sale Hall Chapel, when alumni, students, and faculty of the College united for a joint meeting. Speakers from the alumni who brought greetings and reminiscences of their college days included President Benjamin Hubert, of Georgia State College, '09, Dr. K. A. Huggins, and Dr. James M. Nabrit. Representing the student body were the various class presidents: B. J. Anderson, '39, of Birmingham, Alabama; Wiley W. Martin, '40, of Boley, Oklahoma; Joseph Thomas, '41, of Memphis Tennessee; and William Cross, '42, of Chattanooga, Tennessee. Members of the faculty participating on the program were Prof. Kemper Harreld and Dr. L. O. Lewis.

AFTERNOON COLORFUL

The exercises on Sunday afternoon opened at three o'clock in Sale Hall Chapel with the singing of the Negro National Anthem. Reverend George Kelsey rendered the Invocation, and remarks were made by J. Wesley Dobbs, '01, and Marshall S. Cabiness, '39, president of the 1938-39 student body. Music on the program was provided by the College Glee Club and the Quartet. Before the Benediction was pronounced, the audience joined in singing the Morehouse College Hymn.

ILLUSTRIOUS FAMILY

Dr. Nabrit is a member of a distinguished family. His father, Dr. James M. Nabrit, is the president of the American Baptist Theological Seminary, in Nashville, Tennessee, and also a trustee of Atlanta University and Morehouse College. A brother, Dr. Samuel M. Nabrit, is a member of the science department at Atlanta University, and a sister, Mrs. Margaret Nabrit Curry, is an instructor in history at Spelman College.

SUMMER SCHOOL AT STATE COLLEGE

Registration Tomorrow; Work Begins Monday

The eighteenth annual session of the summer school for the Georgia State College will begin on Monday. Registration will open Saturday. It is expected that all local teachers attending the summer school will register promptly so as to be ready to begin work Monday. Teachers from a distance will register on Monday.

Arrangements have been made to accommodate a large number of teachers. Many members of the faculty will be on hand to welcome the teachers and offer courses in their respective fields. Members of the faculty who will not be present will be away for study. Their work is provided for by outstanding authorities in their field. C. P. Campbell in the field of education will return to the University of Pennsylvania, where she will complete her work for the master's degree in education. Her place will be taken by Professor Frank DeCosta, principal of Avery Institute, Charleston, S. C. Professor DeCosta is a graduate of Lincoln University and the University of Pennsylvania where he received his master's degree in education. He will teach education and assist in the department of mathematics.

E. M. Washington, instructor in art education and home economics, will study at the University of Minnesota. Her place in art education and drawing will be taken over by L. A. Dominis. Professor Dominis is a former instructor in drawing and art at the college. Since being at the college he has spent a year doing advanced work in his particular field. It is expected that many of the teachers will want to pursue courses in freehand drawing and art, taught by Professor Dominis. Maenelle Dixon, supervisor of schools in Hancock county, and a former instructor at the Georgia State College, will have charge of courses in rural education, assisted by J. H. Benjamin, principal of the College Training School, who will also have charge of the demonstration school. Vincent H. Harris, principal of the high school at Moultrie, will be instructor in a special two weeks trade course that will be offered at the college during the last two weeks in July. This course will be offered by the college in co-operation with the state department of industrial and distributive education as a means of teaching people how to find and develop for themselves jobs in their respective communities. Other special features are being arranged for summer school teachers.

The second session of summer school will be held at the Hancock County Training School in the Log Cabin Center beginning July 17. At this session, special emphasis will be placed upon the teaching of how to create wholesome rural environment. Teachers will be told how to stimulate and inspire the communities to enlarge their own social, economic and spiritual lives. A large number of teachers have already indicated their desire to attend this session. A rural electrification project has brought lights to the community since the last session. Teachers attending this second session will therefore be made to understand and appreciate the effect of lighting upon a rural community.

Program Of Atlanta University Affiliation Lauded In Memorial Service Honoring Dr. John Hope

Atlanta World

Lauding the great work done by Dr. John Hope in building up a great university system in Atlanta, Marshall S. Cabiness, of Gastonia, North Carolina, president of the Morehouse Student Body, last Friday, paid high tribute to the deceased educator at the Fourth Annual Memorial Exercises in his honor by the students of Morehouse College. Dr. Hope became president of Morehouse College in 1906 and was the first person of his race to head this pioneer institution. For twenty-five years he was president of Morehouse, and in June, 1931, he resigned to become the first president of the reorganized Atlanta University where he served from 1929 until his death on February 20, 1936.

After reviewing the life work of Dr. Hope, the speaker cautioned the students that they could not, however, thrive on the labor of others and be content with what has already been done, but that they should make their own contributions. What John Hope did for humanity, he declared, others can do.

SENIORS IN CHARGE

The program was in charge of the senior class, which appeared in academic garb for the first time this year. Following the stately procession into Sale Hall, Charles Houston, of Lynch, Kentucky, read a portion of a favorite poem of Dr. Hope, "Ulysses", and gave the prayer; Atwell B. Pride, of Daytona Beach, Florida, master of ceremonies, introduced the speaker. A musical interlude was furnished by Benjamin J. Anderson, baritone, of Birmirgham, Alabama, who sang "Hear Me Ye Winds and Waves", and by the Senior Quartet which sang the spiritual, "O The Rocks and the Mountains Shall All Pass Away". Singing in the quartet were Charles Houston first tenor; Walter R. Harley, second tenor; Augustus Council, of Savannah, Georgia, baritone; and Benjamin J. Anderson, bass.

The rapidity with which changes have taken place in the schools in the Atlanta University system, was described as breath-taking by the speaker, who declared that Atlanta University had become so thorough and so comprehensive in its educational scope that a child could be taken from its mother's arms and be prepared by the Nursery School, Laboratory School, Spelman or Morehouse Colleges, and the Atlanta University Graduate School in liberal arts or social work.

KNEW DR. HOPE WELL

Members of the senior class at Morehouse were freshmen during the last year of Dr. Hope's life, the speaker said, and those who were fortunate enough to enter school at the beginning of the term had an opportunity to come into close contact with him and to be present at a University Convocation where he expressed his ideas and ideals in the building of the affiliation.

Following the exercises in Sale Hall Chapel, the assembly, led by the senior class, gathered at the grave of Dr. Hope on the campus, where the second part of the program was conducted. Just preceding the placing of the wreath on Dr. Hope's grave by James Hubert, of Jamaica, New York, and William Reid, of Columbus, Georgia, the assemblage sang "Integer Vitae". Continuing the ceremony, the students repeated the Pledge to forever hold sacred and dear the ideals of the College as taught by Dr. Hope. After singing the College hymn, benediction was pronounced by Benjamin J. Anderson

NEGRO EDUCATION WILL BE STUDIED

Dixie Educators To Consider Professional and Graduate Facilities.

Southern University Conference closed its fifth annual meeting yesterday after authorizing the appointment of a committee to study the question of providing professional and graduate study facilities for negroes in the south.

President F. P. Gaines, of Washington and Lee University, was elected to head the conference for the coming year. He succeeds Dr. J. R. McCain, of Agnes Scott.

Action was taken on the negro question after President Harmon W. Caldwell, of the University of Georgia, agreed that subsidization of southern negro colleges by the states was possibly the best solution.

University Center.

"For example, Atlanta has a fine university center for negroes," he said. "The state might give to a private negro institution a subsidy, allowing the school to expand and set up professional schools of law, medicine and dentistry. The state also might buy the services of those institutions."

The supreme court recently ruled in a Missouri case that if a state did not furnish negroes adequate facilities for graduate study it must admit them to the state universities and graduate schools.

The committee was set up on the recommendation of Dean F. C. Smith, of the University of Tennessee. Caldwell accepted the position of chairman.

"We must do something quickly," Caldwell asserted. "Already the University of Georgia has received applications for admission from three negroes, and I understand a mandamus to force the University of Tennessee to admit six negroes, four to its graduate school and two to its law school. Similar situations doubtless exist in other southern states."

Practical Solution.

"Another practical solution," he continued, "would be the setting up of regional negro universities to which all states in the region would contribute. This arrangement would save the states a tremendous—if not prohibitive—cost of setting up separate graduate schools.

"However, if it should not meet supreme court requirements—and it might not—two other possible solutions suggest themselves:

"1. Expansion of negro state colleges to provide for adequate instruction in law, medicine, teaching, the ministry, social work and other subjects.

"2. Financial aid to privately-owned negro colleges and universities to accomplish the same purpose, provided state laws will permit this."

Separate Schools.

He discussed separate schools for negroes and whites, but termed it "an unfortunate idea."

"It would mean less financial support for white institutions, and certainly a weakening of graduate schools," he said. Caldwell also touched on the possibility of separate divisions of universities for negroes, with an exchange of equipment, libraries and faculty.

The Georgia educator observed that development of high school and college education for negroes had contributed to bring about a "greater need than ever before" for advanced training. In 1903, for example, he remarked that there were less than 4,000 negroes in colleges in the United States; now, there are approximately 40,000.

In a forum discussion on the subject, Chancellor O. C. Carmichael, of Vanderbilt, asked whether or not it would be possible for Tennessee to designate Fisk University as a state university for negroes, and have the state pay the school a fixed sum each year to subsidize professional work.

"Personally, I believe it would work," Caldwell replied, adding that he also believed the method would be legal.

Money Appropriated.

According to Dean Smith, of Tennessee, the state legislature has already appropriated money for that purpose, but no negro has yet asked for a grant to go to Fisk.

Other officers named by the conference that represents 41 universities and colleges in 13 southern states were Chancellor A. B. Butts, of the University of Mississippi, vice president, and Charles E. Diehl, president of Southwestern University, Memphis, secretary-treasurer.

Elected to the executive committee were W. P. Few, president of Duke University; F. P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; J. J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida, and Dr. J. R. McCain Agnes Scott.

EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

Please permit me through your column to express my appreciation for what Mr. J. H. Porter has done for Central City, now Georgia Baptist College, and especially for his recent gift of $10,000, toward an endowment fund for the school. This contribution should inspire Negro Baptists in particular and the friends of Negro education generally to the extent that the conditions of the gift will be met quickly and promptly and the nulceus for a substantial endowment for the school might be started.

Macon needs Georgia Baptist College. While much progress has been made here during the past decade in facilites for Negro education, Macon is still lagging in this respect in comparison with every city of its size in the state. Therefore it is heartening to see men like Mr. Porter make a contribution toward improving these facilities. It appears to me a new day is dawning for Georgia Baptist College which will prove a blessing to the Negroes of this section and a more valuable asset to Macon. I think our people generally appreciate the fine spirit manifested by Mr. Porter in helping this school and more and more regard him as a great humanitarian, a steward of the King, unrestricted by race or creed in contributing to the betterment of mankind. May God bless him to live long and may his kind increase.

Jim Porter Breaks Out Again

By W. T. ANDERSON

If Jim Porter's money bags hold out, Macon is destined to be the most friendly, sociable and best educated town in the world. The first two attributes will be of the people's own making and characters, and the third will be Jim Porter's work—well, at least half of it, anyway.

Mr. Porter has just blossomed forth with a proposal to start an endowment fund and subscribe the first $10,000 of it, provided the friends of the Georgia Baptist College will put up $5,000.

Mr. Porter has not authorized me to say so, but I strongly suspect that he will come close to duplicating this proposition for this college as many times as he is challenged. He has long been interested in getting this institution, which was formerly known as Central City College, in sound financial shape, and now he launches a plan that may lead to great things in the matter of security and permanency.

Mr. Porter paid off the mortgage on this college and then arranged it so the property could never again be mortgaged. That fixed the physical property. Now he wants to furnish it with an endowment fund that will take care of as much of the maintenance and operating expenses as possible, so the Negro children may have a place to be trained into greater usefulness. He recognizes the fact that every human being is a liability or an asset, and that it is possible to take the young ones in time and make more assets out of them than the liabilities they will grow into if allowed to run loose. Mr. Porter does not quite visualize a Tuskegee for Macon, but there is no good reason why such should not be possible. Macon has 40 per cent Negro population, and this makes apparent the importance of providing all necessary facilities to make the Negro into the greatest possible asset.

When Macon has a Red Cross or Community Chest or other drive to raise funds, it is necessary to eliminate about 40 per cent of the population, which is Negro. The Negroes are humiliated and regret this as much as anybody. They would like to do their part. They say so, and those able to do it will volunteer and buckle down to their task. But when those familiar with the income of the poor devils they have to beg, seeing them counting their coppers and nickels and dimes and dividing up their earthly goods, it looks like nothing but a shame that they should be asked to contribute. Go to their churches and see them walking down the aisles, placing coppers and nickels on the collection table, trying to raise $5 to repair the leaking roof of their house of worship. Talk about the heart-bleeding putting down the widow's mite—

Jim Porter's proposal to help them is prompted by the most generous spirit and constructive, far-seeing effort. If these people could be made self-sustaining, of the greatest usefulness and service of which they are capable, it would not be very long before we would have double the population in Macon from the standpoint of serviceable population. We wouldn't have to eliminate 40 per cent from all our calculations as to those able and willing to give.

Will Serve on School of Religion Faculty.

Dr. A. William Loos, of St. Paul, Minn., has been appointed to the faculty of Spelman College, it was announced yesterday. He will serve on the Morehouse School of Religion faculty and will teach philosophy and religion at Spelman.

He studied for one term at the University of Tubingen in Germany.

Fort Valley State College

IN THE NEW educational set up for higher education for Negroes we find the state college at Fort Valley serving a long felt need in middle Georgia. The school was founded several years ago by that illustrious leader of men and educational statesmen, John Wesley Davidson, a product of Atlanta University.

Mr. Davidson carried to Fort Valley in its very infancy the spirit of Atlanta University, just as Dr. Edmund Asa Ware Horace Bumstead and Professor Francis brought to Atlanta University the spirit and scheme of Yale.

Fort Valley saw its best years under the able leadership of Dr. Henry A. Hunt, himself a graduate of Atlanta University.

Leaving a fine post at Biddle University, Dr. Hunt came to Fort Valley because of its pivotal promise. Located in the heart of the farming black belt, the school sponsored an industrial type of education. Like the famous Tuskegee, it was to in time leave the swaddling clothes for the greenfields of liberal education.

In the selection of Fort Valley for the state college, the state board of regents made a fine choice. Here in the heart of a rich farm belt and in or near the center of the state, youth may converge on a first class college for the completion of its work.

We heartily congratulate Fort Valley for her good fortune. Under the able leadership which is hers and that fine corps of teachers and workers, much will be expected. We wish her bon voyage on her maiden sail and there is every evidence that the fine faith of our fathers who wrought so long and well will be redeemed.

STATE'S COLLEGES JAMMED BY 13,545

Sanford Says Financial Crisis Is Precipitated by Record Enrollment

The largest enrollment in the history of the University System of Georgia was recorded this fall and Chancellor S. V. Sanford attributes the ever-increasing number of students to child labor laws, minimum wage and maximum hour laws.

The record enrollment of 13,545 students will precipitate a financial crisis, the chancellor said, as more professors will be required and the system does not have sufficient funds to pay those already employed.

Analyzing the record number of students, Dr. Sanford said:

"I think the explanation to record enrollments in our colleges and others throughout the nation, is due primarily to the child labor laws that prohibit the children from working and to the minimum wage laws which give the parents a little extra money which they are saving and scraping together to pay for a college education for their sons and daughters."

The chancellor pointed out that since the children couldn't work, parents saw to it that they went to grammar and high schools. Then to give their children a better education than they might have had, parents who before might have laughed at college degrees, are sacrificing to give son or daughter a good education, Dr. Sanford said.

System Faces Crisis.

As for the increase in the University System of Georgia, Chancellor Sanford interpreted that as a "clear indication that the people of Georgia are pleased with the progress of the University System and have confidence and faith in its work."

The system faces a crisis, however, Dr. Sanford said, in paying for the professors necessary to teach the ever-increasing number of students.

The chancellor pointed to the University System building program which is almost complete.

"With this large enrollment in the system, our present dormitory and classroom facilities are almost as inadequate today as they were at the beginning of the building program," he said. "With this increased enrollment, additional teachers must be added and the money is not available.

Only 60 Per Cent Paid.

"The University System can not operate on its present appropriation, even if paid in full. With only 60 per cent now being paid, a real crisis faces us."

Enrollment by colleges follows:

University of Georgia, 3,352; Georgia Tech, 2,590; Atlanta Extension Center, 1,520; University of Georgia School of Medicine, 164; Georgia State College for Women, Milledgeville, 1,445; Georgia Teachers' College, Statesboro, 500; Georgia State Women's College, Valdosta, 351.

Junior colleges: Georgia Southwestern College, Americus, 372; West Georgia College, Carrollton 444; Middle Georgia College Cochran, 423; South Georgia College, Douglas, 305; North Georgia College, 589; Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, Tifton, 407.

Negro institutions: Georgia Normal and Agricultural College, Albany, 304; State Teachers and Agricultural College, Forsyth, incomplete; Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, 215; Georgia State College, Savannah, 564.

Total increase for the entire system is 688 over the same date in 1938.

Enrollment Totals 1,487 In Atlanta Univ. System

Extension Work Begun at Fort Valley College

Fourteen hundred and eighty-two students have been enrolled in the various schools and colleges in the Atlanta University system, President Rufus E. Clement announced this week. In the graduate school of liberal arts and sciences, 146 students are registered for courses leading to the master of arts or master of science degree; and of this number 89 are full time students, and 57 part time.

This year Atlanta University is inaugurating an extension service at the State College in Fort Valley, Georgia, whereby students in that vicinity may enroll for graduate work in the department of education under the supervision of Dr. Horace Mann Bond, visiting professor of education at Atlanta University. Twenty-nine part time students have been registered in these courses.

President Clement has also announced that this year Atlanta University has enrolled the largest number of boarding students since the new dormitories were opened in 1933.

84 SEEK PROFESSIONS

In the Atlanta University School of Social Work, which is entering its second year as a member of the University affiliation, there are 84 students enrolled for the professional courses leading toward the degree of master of social work.

Registered for undergraduate work at Morehouse College are 172 students, and of this number 85 are classified as seniors, 53 as juniors; 95 as sophomores; 133 as freshmen, and five as special students. Two of the registrant's are unclassified. Approximately seven per cent of the students enrolled are working toward the B. D. degree in the School of Religion.

Spelman's enrollment of 360 is an increase over what it was at this time last year President Florence M. Read has announced. To date there have been registered 135 freshmen, 94 sophomores, 76 juniors, and 55 seniors.

The Atlanta University Laboratory School, which serves as a demonstration school for the University's department of education, has 367 pupils in attendance and the Nursery-Kindergarten, 119 children. In the elementary division, from Grades 1-6, there are 156 pupils, and in the high school division, from Grades 6-12, there are 211 pupils.

CONTINUE COOPERATION

After nine years of combined service, the affiliated schools are continuing their program of cooperation with Atlanta University carrying the graduate work in liberal arts and sciences; the Atlanta University School of Social Work professional work in this field, and Morehouse and Spelman Colleges the undergraduate and pre-professional work.

The large enrollment is indicative of the fact that no longer does the Southern youth find it necessary to travel hundreds of miles to secure an education equal to that provided elsewhere in the country, or right in the heart of the deep South is the Atlanta University system, providing a complete education beginning with the preschool training and ending with the granting of graduate and professional degrees.

Notwithstanding the opportunity open to students living in this section of the country, the appeal of the Universitys' program extends over even greater distances. This year's registration shows students have come from distances as far as California, Nebraska, and Canada to earn their master's degree at Atlanta University, and last year a student was enrolled from the University of Paris.

Morris Brown In Founder's Day Exercise

IN VIRTUALLY a homecoming for the old guard and a renewal of the fealty of devout African Methodist, Morris Brown Collgee went over the top in one of its most successful convocations of Founder's Day. Long standing out as an emblem of self-help and emphasizing the same principles to the youth in the race for the getting of an education, this school has commanded the respect of the entire nation. From every corner of the nation it has received help and high praise. It passed out of its experimental stage long ago and came on the forefront in the field of Negro education. It is one of the few remaining schools holding firm to the staff of Christian education.

Atlanta and the country salute Morris Brown College. It is a fixed tradition and wherever the emphasis of self-help and what our people are willing to do for themselves, Morris Brown is cited. 3-11-39

A short while ago the school was placed on a permanent basis. It received a valuable contribution from the General Education Board and substantial friends. It did not stop at this, however. In its habitual struggle for its own existence, it launched a drive to build up a permanent endowment. This endowment was initiated purely among African Methodists with a pledge of every minister and leading layman of one hundred dollars each. This drive while having a modest beginning, has already gained momentum in the paying in of the one hundred dollar pledge by many of the ministers and strong laymen.

Looking on this move of sacrifice and self-help the country at large will not fail Morris Brown in helping to swell this endowment fund. In this way the ministers and laymen can breathe an air of relief from the hard struggle that has marked the Methodist ministry in the field of education for fifty years.

There has been no let up. Those strong servants of God have reported periodically at Morris Brown whenever the call was made. At no time was there an occasion when things were given up as hopeless. These brave people have made a way out of no way and today they stand in a class by themselves in the field of pioneering in self-help.

Congratulations to the brave African Methodists all over the state who have made this great gathering a success. Morris Brown will now go forward on the assurance that seventy-five thousand Methodists in the state are behind its dreams one thousand per cent.

MOREHOUSE COLLEGE

Morehouse College was first organized in 1867 in Augusta, Georgia, under the name of the Augusta Institute. In 1879 during the presidency of Reverend Joseph T. Robert, it was removed to Atlanta and incorporated under the name, Atlanta Baptist Seminary. At this stage of its growth, the institution owned only one building, a comparatively small structure near Terminal Station. President Robert was succeeded by President Samuel Graves.

In 1889, as the surroundings of the old location in Atlanta had been unfavorable, a new site was secured, and in the spring of 1890 the school was removed to its present location. President George Sale entered upon his duties in this year.

In 1897 amendments to the charter were secured, granting full college powers and changing the name of the institution to Atlanta Baptist College. In 1906 President Sale resigned to become superintendent of education of the American Baptist Home Mission Society and he was in turn succeeded by President John Hope, the first person of his race to head this pioneer institution. In 1931 President Hope resigned, and was succeeded by President Samuel Howard Archer, who had served the college since 1905 in various capacities. By a vote in 1912 the Board of Trustees and by a change in 1913 of the charter, the institution became Morehouse College, in honor of Reverend Henry L. Morehouse, corresponding secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society. President Archer was retired from office in October, 1938. Since March 1, 1937, Dr. Charles D. Hubert, director of the School of Religion, has been acting president of the college.

In 1929 the college was affiliated with Atlanta University and Spelman College in a university system.

Today Morehouse boasts of a college of arts and sciences, a school of religion and a summer school conducted jointly with Atlanta University.

GEORGIA STATE COLLEGE

In the salt water country some six miles from Savannah, Georgia State College, for negroes, was founded 49 years ago. Its purpose was to raise the standard of literacy among negro boys and girls of the state, as well as to prepare them for careers of usefulness in industry, agriculture and commerce.

That this institution is serving its intended purpose is well known. Within the last 10 years enrollment has increased from less than 20, of high school level, to close to 700 during the present term, not including extension and correspondence students. Student teachers, interested in improving the educational standard of their race, are registered from over 100 Georgia counties. Upward of 1,200 summer students now attend regularly whereas, only eight years ago, less than 100 enrolled for the summer courses.

Fortunately for this institution, which is a part of the State University System, it has, as its president, a man of unusual attainments. Benjamin F. Hubert, early inspired by his association with Booker T. Washington at Tuskegee Institute, has provided a quality of leadership which would elicit commendation in any field of endeavor. His sound views on agriculture are known throughout the state. Ten years ago, as an indication of his usefulness and value to the community, he was awarded first prize for the best essay on Savannah, present and future, by the unanimous decision of a committee composed of the mayor and four other influential citizens.

Obviously, under such leadership, together with the wise policies of the board of regents of the university system, Georgia State College continues to grow in usefulness. New buildings are under construction. Roads have been paved on the campus grounds. Curricula and physical equipment are constantly undergoing improvement.

This institution is an asset of which all the people may well feel proud, providing, as it does, an opportunity for the negroes of the state to acquire a better understanding of their own problems. Not only a better understanding but an opportunity to prepare themselves to meet and solve these problems.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Think for Yourself and Let Others Enjoy the Privilege to Do So.—Voltaire.

THE BOARD OF REGENTS

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

The Georgia State College, Savannah, is honored this week (Saturday April 29) by being host for the meeting of the powerful board of regents of the university system of Georgia. As far as we know this is the first time in the history of Negro education in Georgia that the regents have met at one of the colored units. It is not only an important gesture of friendship toward the local institution but it speaks well for the interest of the white citizens of the state who comprise the membership of the board in developing an adequate system of higher education for the colored people of the state. Having this meeting at the campus of the Georgia State College will give every member present an opportunity to see for himself what our leadership has been able to do in the direction of developing an outstanding institution with the limited resources they have been provided with.

It is our opinion that this visit will greatly increase the interest of all the members in this question of larger educational opportunities for the colored people through education which they themselves can direct in such a way as to make the younger people better and more useful Georgia citizens. We feel certain that much good will come from this meeting because of the character of the men who compose the board of regents. We believe that the university system has never had a stronger board of control than it now possesses. As all of our readers may not know the entire personnel of this body of men who hold the destiny of our group in their hands so far as our opportunities of higher education are concerned we list the personnel of the board here: Hon. E. G. Rivers, governor of Georgia, ex officio; Hon. Marion Smith, Atlanta, chairman; Hon. L. W. Robert Jr., Atlanta, state-at-large; Hon. T. Jack Lance, Young Harris, state-at-large; Hon. J. Knox Gholston, Comer, state-at-large; Hon. George Hains, Augusta, state-at-large; Hon. John G. Kennedy, Savannah, First Congressional district; Hon. J. D. Gardner, Camilla, Second Congressional district; Hon. George Woodruff, Columbus, Third Congressional district; Hon. Cason J. Calloway, LaGrange, Fourth Congressional district; Hon. Clark Howell, Atlanta, Fifth Congressional district; Hon. Miller S. Bell, Milledgeville, Sixth Congressional district; Hon. C. M. Milam, Cartersville, Seventh Congressional district; Hon. John W. Bennett Sr., Waycross, Eight Congressional district; Hon. Sandy Beaver, Gainsville, Ninth Congressional district, and Hon. Abit Nix, Athens, Tenth Congressional district. Other officers who will be present at the meeting are: Doctor Stedman V. Sanford, chancellor of the university system of Georgia; Mr. Leonard R. Siebert, secretary of the board of regents and Mr. W. Wilson Noyes, treasurer of the university system.

All these gentlemen are friends of the colored people of Georgia and deserve honorable mention for the work they have done in the past and the great plans they have for the future development of the Georgia Normal College at Albany, the Georgia State College here at Savannah and the new colored unit at Fort Valley. These men represent wisdom and courage enough to put Georgia out in front where the Empire State of the South belongs in this matter of democratic education for all the people of a great commonwealth.

SOCIAL WORK STUDY MADE BY 87 HERE

India, 22 States Represented at Atlanta University.

Eighty-seven young negro students from India, the District of Columbia, and 22 of the United States enrolled at the Atlanta University School of Social Work last week.

Forty-two colleges and universities, situated in a widely scattered area of the nation, are represented by this group of young people. Twenty-two of these students are being helped by their native states in the matter of travel, living expenses and tuition, in pursuing this graduate training which cannot be received within their own localities.

The local negro accredited colleges, Morehouse, Spelman, Morris Brown, Clark and Atlanta University, have alumni among these students who have registered for the course in social work.

COLLEGE PURCHASES FOUR FEEDER CALVES

PRESIDENT HUBERT BUYS TWO MORE FOR EXPERIMENT

Georgia State College bought four feeder calves at the live stock show yesterday, and President B. F. Hubert bought two, all six of the animals to be used experimentally in trying to develop an economical feed for use of Georgia negro farmers.

The college's calves will be tested bi-weekly or monthly, and President Hubert will carry on an equally scientific experiment with his calves.

President Hubert estimates 250 to 300 calves will be bought by negroes at stock shows in the state this year, and he says it is the business of the college to show the way in the most profitable, economical manner of feeding.

Eventually, probably within the next few years, it is hoped the college can have a live stock show for animals of negroes of Georgia and South Carolina. Preliminary discussions with this hope in view have already been held by President Hubert and A. J. Nitzschke, county agent.

The college will set up a swine sanitation project at the coming Georgia-South Carolina Fair. A sow, pigs, and possibly a sire will be shown. Other stock might possibly be shown, also.

President Hubert will be at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama next week to participate in a Farm Security Administration program under sponsorship of the Department of Agriculture. He will speak Monday night on "The Negro Rural Community, Its Significance in the South," and lead a forum discussion to follow. President Hubert was for six years a member of the Tuskegee faculty, serving as head of the Agriculture Department and director of Vocational Education.

This term's enrollment at Georgia State is probably the largest in the institution's history. There are already 520 registered in the regular college work, and a few upper classmen are still coming in. There are 100 NYA students, and about 160 in the Training School, making a total enrollment of 780.

The college's football team plays the alumni this afternoon, and will meet Voorhees Institute of Denmark, S. C., next Saturday afternoon. Both games will be played on the college gridiron.

Dixie Educators Will Study Negro Educational Question

Committee To Consider Providing Professional, Graduate Facilities in South; Georgia's President Caldwell Accepts Post of Chairman.

Southern University Conference closed its fifth annual meeting yesterday after authorizing the appointment of a committee to study the question of providing professional and graduate study facilities for negroes in the south.

President F. P. Gaines, of Washington and Lee University, was elected to head the conference for the coming year. He succeeds Dr. J. R. McCain, of Agnes Scott.

Action was taken on the negro question after President Harmon W. Caldwell, of the University of Georgia, agreed that subsidization of southern negro colleges by the states was possibly the best solution.

University Center.

"For example, Atlanta has a fine university center for negroes," he said. "The state might give to a private negro institution a subsidy, allowing the school to expand and set up professional schools of law, medicine and dentistry. The state also might buy the services of those institutions."

The supreme court recently ruled in a Missouri case that if a state did not furnish negroes adequate facilities for graduate study it must admit them to the state universities and graduate schools.

The committee was set up on the recommendation of Dean F. C. Smith, of the University of Tennessee. Caldwell accepted the position of chairman.

"We must do something quickly," Caldwell asserted. "Already the University of Georgia has received applications for admission from three negroes, and I understand a mandamus to force the University of Tennessee to admit six negroes, four to its graduate school and two to its law school. Similar situations doubtless exist in other southern states."

Practical Solution.

"Another practical solution," he continued, "would be the setting up of regional negro universities to which all states in the region would contribute. This arrangement would save the states a tremendous—if not prohibitive—cost of setting up separate graduate schools.

"However, if it should not meet supreme court requirements—and it might not—two other possible solutions suggest themselves:

"1. Expansion of negro state colleges to provide for adequate nstruction in law, medicine, teaching, the ministry, social work and other subjects.

"2. Financial aid to privately-owned negro colleges and universities to accomplish the same purpose, provided state laws will permit this."

Separate Schools.

He discussed separate schools for negroes and whites, but termed it "an unfortunate idea."

"It would mean less financial support for white institutions, and certainly a weakening of graduate schools," he said. Caldwell also touched on the possibility of separate divisions of universities for negroes, with an exchange of equipment, libraries and faculty.

The Georgia educator observed that development of high school and college education for negroes had contributed to bring about a "greater need than ever before" for advanced training. In 1903, for example, he remarked that there were less than 4,000 negroes in colleges in the United States; now, there are approximately 40,000.

In a forum discussion on the subject, Chancellor O. C. Carmichael, of Vanderbilt, asked whether or not it would be possible for Tennessee to designate Fisk University as a state university for negroes, and have the state pay the school a fixed sum each year to subsidize professional work.

"Personally, I believe it would work," Caldwell replied, adding that he also believed the method would be legal.

Money Appropriated.

According to Dean Smith, of Tennessee, the state legislature has already appropriated money for that purpose, but no negro has yet asked for a grant to go to Fisk.

Other officers named by the conference that represents 41 universities and colleges in 13 southern states were Chancellor A. B. Butts, of the University of Mississippi, vice president, and Charles E. Diehl, president of Southwestern University, Memphis, secretary-treasurer.

Elected to the executive committee were W. P. Few, president of Duke University; F. P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; J. J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida, and Dr. J. R. McCain, Agnes Scott.

Court Ruling And Negro Applications Cause Concern At Georgia University

ATLANTA, Oct. 31—(AP)—A supreme court ruling that a state must provide Negroes the same opportunity to study law, medicine and other advanced subjects as white residents came before southern educators for study today.

"We must do something quickly," asserted President Harmon W. Caldwell of the University of Georgia, discussion leader at a conference of representatives of 41 colleges and universities situated in 13 states.

"Already the University of Georgia has received applications for admission from three Negroes and I understand a hearing is to be held soon on a petition for a mandamus to force the University of Tennessee to admit six Negroes, four to its graduate school and two to its law school. Similar situations doubtless exist in other southern states."

The supreme court held in a Missouri case that if a state did not furnish Negroes adequate facilities for graduate study it must admit them to the state universities and graduate schools. Dr. Caldwell said he did not believe it is feasible "just now" to admit Negroes to southern institutions used by white students.

"The most practical solution," he continued, "would be the setting up of regional Negro universities to which all states in the region would contribute. This arrangement would save the states of a tremendous—if not prohibitive—cost of setting up separate graduate schools.

"However, if it should not meet supreme court requirements—and it might not—two other possible solutions suggest themselves:

"1. Expansion of Negro state colleges to provide for adequate instruction in law, medicine, teaching, the ministry, social work and other such subjects.

"2. Financial aid to privately-owned Negro colleges and universities to accomplish the same purpose, provided state laws will permit this."

College Presidents Fear Race Applicants Will Have To Be Admitted

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 10—Bent on denying members of the Race admission to southern graduate schools in compliance with the United States Supreme Court's decision in the Gaines case, Dixie educators considered three solutions in a meeting held here this week.

Evidence of their alarm over the ruling which stipulates that members of the Race must be provided with the same opportunities by each state for advanced training and professions was expressed by Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia.

"We must do something quickly," asserted Caldwell, discussion leader at a conference of representatives of 41 colleges and universities situated in 13 states.

Received Applications

"Already the University of Georgia has received applications for admission from three Negroes and I understand a hearing is to be held soon on a petition for a mandamus to force the University of Tennessee to admit six Negroes, four to its graduate school and two to its law school. Similar situations doubtless exist in other southern states."

Dr. Caldwell said he did not believe it is feasible "just now" to admit Negroes to southern institutions used by white students.

"The most practical solution," he continued, "would be the setting up of regional Negro universities to which all states in the region would contribute. This arrangement would save the states a tremendous—if not prohibitive—cost of setting up separate graduate schools.

Other Solutions

"However, if it should not meet Supreme Court requirements—and it might not—two other possible solutions suggest themselves:

"1. Expansion of Negro state colleges to provide for adequate instruction in law, medicine, teaching, the ministry, social work and other such subjects.

"Financial aid to privately-owned Negro colleges and universities to accomplish the same purpose, provided state laws will permit this."

Dr. Caldwell observed that development of high school and college education for Negroes had contributed to bring about a "greater need than ever before" for advanced training. In 1903, for example, he said, there were less than 4,000 Negroes in colleges in the United States; now, there are approximately 40,000. "We must meet that need some way or another," he said.

Georgia Educator Suggests Regional Negro Universities

President Caldwell Of University Of Georgia Also Sees Subsidizing Of Existing Negro Colleges With State Funds As Solution Of Old Problem

Atlanta, Nov. 1.—(AP)—A southern educator today suggested setting up regional Negro universities or subsidizing existing Negro colleges with state funds as possible solutions for providing Negroes with professional and graduate study in the south.

Discussing the question before the southern university conference, President Harmon W. Caldwell of the University of Georgia said he believed the subsidization plan was "the best solution."

"For example, Atlanta has a fine university center for Negroes," he said. "The state might give to a private Negro institution a subsidy, allowing the school to expand and set up professional schools of law, medicine and dentistry. The state also might buy the services of those institutions."

The question was discussed in the light of a supreme court decision in a Missouri case requiring states to furnish Negroes adequate facilities for graduate study or admit them to their state universities and graduate schools.

On the recommendation of Dean F. C. Smith of the University of Tennessee, the educators authorized appointment of a committee to study the question of higher education for Negroes in the south. Caldwell was named chairman.

Dr. Francis P. Gaines of Washington and Lee university, Lexington, Va., was elected president of the conference, representing 41 colleges and universities in 13 southern states. Chancellor A. B. Butts of the University of Mississippi, and Charles E. Diehl, president of Southwestern university, Memphis, Tenn., were named vice president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

Discussing subsidization of private Negro colleges, Chancellor O. C. Carmichael of Vanderbilt university asked if it would be possible for Tennessee to designate Fisk university at Nashville as a university for Negroes and "subsidize" it for professional work. Fisk is one of the few Negro colleges in the south with a graduate school.

"Personally, I believe it would work," Caldwell replied. "Also, I personally believe it would be legal."

Dean Smith of the University of Tennessee asserted the Tennessee legislature had "appropriated money for that purpose" and added "that not one penny has been called for to send them to Fisk."

Smith reported the University of Tennessee faced mandamus proceedings in court Monday seeking to force the institution to admit four Negroes in its graduate school and two in its law school.

South Must Do Something Quickly to Meet College Needs of Negroes

JIM PORTER BREAKS OUT AGAIN

W. T. Anderson
In The Macon Telegraph

If Jim Porter's money bags hold out Macon is destined to be the most friendly, sociable and best educated town in the world. The first two attributes will be of the people's own making and characters and the third will be Jim Porter's work—well, at least half of it, anyway.

Mr. Porter has just blossomed forth with a proposal to start an endowment fund and subscribes the first $10,000 of it, provided the friends of the Georgia Baptist College will put up $5,000.

Mr. Porter has not authorized me to say so, but I strongly suspect that he will come close to duplicating his proposition for this college as many times as he is challgneed. He has long been interested in getting this institution, which was formerly known as Central City College, in sound financial shape, and now he launches a plan that may lead to great things in the matter of security and permanency

Mr. Porter paid off the mortgage on this college and then arranged it so the property could never again be mortgaged. That endowment fund that will take care of as much of the maintenance and operating expenses as possible, so the negro childrn may have a place to be trained into greater usefulness. He recognizes the fact that every human being is a liability or an asset, and that it is possible to take the young ones in time and make more assets out of them than liabilities they will grow into if allowed to run loose. Mr. Porter does not quite visualize a Tuskegee for Macon, but there is no good reason why such should not be possible. Macon has 40 per cent negro population, and this makes apparent the importance of providing all necessary facilities to make the negro into the greatest possible asset.

When Macon has a Red Cross or Community Chest or other drive to raise funds, it is necessary to eliminate about 40 per cent of the population, which is negro. The negroes are humiliated and regret this as much as anybody. They would like to do their part. They say so, and those able to do it will volunteer and buckle down to their task. But when those familiar with the income of the poor devils they have to beg, seeing them. uounting their coppers and nickels and dimes and dividing up their earthly goods, it looks like nothing but a shame that they should be asked to contribute. Go to their churches and see them walking down the aisles, placing coppers and nickels on the collection table, trying to raise $5 to repair the leaking roof of their house of worship. Talk about the heart-bleeding putting down thew idow's mite—

Jim Porter's proposal to help is prompted by the most generous spirit and constructive, far-seeing effort. If these people could be made self-sustaining, of the greatest usefulness and services of which they are capable it would not be very long before we would have double the population in Macon from the standpoint of serviceable population We wouldn't have to eliminate 40 per cent from all our calculations as to those able and willing to give.

Kentucky Has a "Lloyd Gaines" Student Problem to Solve In Its State Law School

President of School Says State's Statutes Prevents Whites from Teaching Blacks

Governor Supplements Student Aid Fund

LOUISVILLE.—(ANP)—The State of Kentucky was "put on the spot" educationally last week with the application of Alfred M. Carroll, 27, for admission to the University of Kentucky's college of law.

Carroll's case parallels that of St. Louis Law Student Lloyd Gaines, who unsuccessfully sought to enter the University of Missouri law school, and with his attorneys fought the case to the U. S. supreme court, which last Dec. 8 ruled in Gaines' favor, ordering the U. of Mo. to admit him or provide equal educational facilities within the state."

Thus in Kentucky, the high court ruling favors Carroll's admittance to U. of Ky., as a law student, but the state law expressly forbids it. Carroll, now a student at Howard university, Washington, D. C., said in a letter to U. of Ky. officials that he was a native of Louisville, that he sought transfer to U. of Ky. because of "inadequate funds," and wanted admission before the second semester so his studies "would not be interrupted."

Dr. Frank L. McVey is president of the University of Kentucky and Carroll's application is the first received from a Negro since he became president 22 years ago. Dr. McVey said a state law, passed in 1904, forbids the teaching of Negro and white students in the same school and his action regarding Carroll's application would be guided by the law.

At Frankfort, Ky., Gordie Young, assistant superintendent of public instruction, said he thought Carroll was among the colored students for whom the state was unable to furnish tuition fees at Negro colleges outside the state, because the annual appropriation of $5,000 had been exhausted.

It was explained that a maximum of $175 tuition fees is paid for Negroes to take courses outside the state, similar to courses offered at U. of Ky., but to which colored students are not admitted.

Added interest was given the case last Saturday when Gov. A. B. Chandler announced he had appropriated $1,600 from his emergency fund to supplement the depleted Negro education appropriation, thus enabling Carroll to continue his education in an out-of-state school. The governor reportedly that he "understood from President R. B. Atwood of Kentucky State college, that Carroll "would be satisfied if we put up the money for his schooling.

Gov. Chandler said that Carroll's case was "one of the reasons why I wanted a first class colored school." He added that state college for Negroes "is a first class school, and although not ready to take care of law students, he believed it would be soon.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL REPLACES COLLEGE AT PADUCAH, KY.

First Year of New Type Of Training Proves Satisfactory to Students and Public

PADUCAH, Ky.—(Special)— The West Kentucky Vocational School, established as recently as 1938, to take the place of West Kentucky Industrial College, which has been merged with the State College at Frankfort, begins its second year under favorable conditions, chief of which is the high favor with which a trades school has been received by Kentuckians of both races.

The president of the Vocational School is Prof. M. H. Griffin, former principal of Dunbar Trade School, Lexington, Ky., and formerly connected with the State Department of Education of Alabama.

The program which the Vocational School is carrying out is as follows:

Several important trades will be thoroughly taught along with the academic course of a 4-year high school. Vocations taught last year were beauty culture, home economics (clothing and foods), wood-working, tailoring, brick-masonry and plastering and electrical servicing. Auto mechanics and barbering will be added this year.

The physical plant is composed of a boys' dormitory, girls' dormitory, administration building, home economics building and auto shop. Last year 250 students were enrolled, in spite of a late start of the school. Applications were received in large numbers all during last year from young men and women interested in learning trades, assuring a larger enrollment for this year. Persons eligible to enter high school or who have finished high school may enter. Many persons with college training were enrolled last year.

The faculty is composed of trained teachers, all of whom have acquired at least an A. B. degree. The school stresses the need for more young people to learn trades in order to get desirable employment in this age of specialization.

Dillard To View Premiere Of 2 Plays

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 16.—The world premiere of two plays and the New Orleans premiere of a third will constitute the fourth appearance during the current season of the Dillard University Players Guild on Thursday and Friday with the author of all three, S. Randolph Edmonds, as director.

"Gangster Over Harlem" and "The High Court of Historia," which will receive world premieres, were written in Ireland last year, while Mr. Edmonds was studying amateur drama on a Rosenwald Fellowship. The third play, "Bleeding Hearts," received its first production in Columbus, Ohio, by the Civic Theatre Guild, two years ago, and is included in Mr. Edmonds' book of folk plays, "Six Plays for a Negro Theatre."

"The High Court of Historia," a fantasy, was written especially for production during Negro History Week, and stresses the importance of teaching Negro history in high schools. The other plays are based on two currently interesting sociological problems, the numbers racket in Harlem and a sharecropper family in the deep South.

Dillard University Names Dormitories

NEW ORLEANS, (ANP)—Seymour Straight Hall and Hartzell Hall were names given respectively to the women's dormitory and the men's dormitory of Dillard University. These names were authorized by the Dillard Trustees in their recent meeting in New Orleans.

Mr. Seymour Straight, for whom the women's dormitory is named, was a generous contributor to Straight college,, one of the schools merged to form Dillard University and which also bore his name. He was a produce merchant of Hudson, Ohio, and of New Orleans.

Bishop Joseph Crane Hartzell, for whom the men's dormitory is named, served as Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal church in New Orleans, and in Africa and as a minister and bishop performed notable services in the interest of the race.

Dillard Univ. Offers Eight New Nursery Courses

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 24.—Eight courses in the field of nursery school education will be among the new offerings available to Dillard university students when they return this fall, Dean J. Max Bond announced last week. Although emphasis will be placed on the development of workers skilled in the techniques of nursery school education, the courses at Dillard are expected to be of equal benefit to those young women who will eventually become homemakers and mothers.

The nursery school movement had its origin in Europe in the sociological upheaval during and immediately following the World War. The establishment, in 1924 of a child development center at Columbia university marked the formal beginning of the movement in America. While nursery school education was not planned to afford research, workers in the fields of medicine and psychology were quick to discover that it offered wide opportunities for the study of behavior patterns in the young child and the means by which their formation might be controlled. These aspects of the field will be stressed at Dillard and Behavior Problems and Mental Hygiene are among the courses to be offered.

Refugee Is Xavier Librarian

VIENNA REFUGEE HOPES WAR WILL RESTORE LIBERTY

Walter Goldschmidt Fears Short Conflict Will Favor Hitler

A refugee from his country when it became a part of Germany, Walter Goldschmidt, formerly a Vienna publisher but now a librarian at Xavier university, Tuesday expressed a paradoxical hope that the present war in Europe will last a long time.

Not unmindful of the bloodshed and property loss that would be involved, of the possible consequences to members of his family who still live in Austria, of the danger of other nations being drawn into the conflict, he said: "It will be a long war, I hope."

He was not making just a bald statement. He had reasons for his hope.

Lacks Resources

"If it is a long war, Austria may be an independent country again," he continued. "If it is a short war, it means that Hitler will win. Because Hitler's war machine is well greased for fast action, but can't endure a long period of fighting.

"His air force definitely is superior to the French and English. But war equipment suffers excessive wear in a few weeks of war and Hitler hasn't the resources to rebuild."

Mr. Goldschmidt has had opportunity to make such observations. Before he was forced to leave Austria in May, 1938, he was chief of the Vienna government propaganda office.

He and his son, Harry, 16 years old, have taken up residence at 6030 Freret street. The boy was given a two-year leave by the German government to visit his father.

Hopes for Liberty

"I have worked in the interest of the Committee for Catholic Refugees from Germany since I came to this country," Mr. Goldschmidt related. "I have been in New York. I hope to organize an Austro-American society here, to remind the Austrians in this country that their homeland was once independent and hopes to be again."

Asked if a long war might mean that his son would be called back to Europe to fight in the German ranks, he said:

"He might not go back at all. If it's a long war, Austria will be free again, and then both of us will be willing to go back."

DILLARD UNIV. OBSERVES 5TH FOUNDER'S DAY

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 26—Dillard university announced early this week final plans for the fifth annual observance of Founders' Day on October 25. The day's program will begin with exercises in the university auditorium at noon, at which Leo M. Favrot, general field agent of the General Education Board from 1923 until his retirement this spring, will be the principal speaker. Following these exercises members of the alumni association will be entertained at a luncheon in the Trustees' Dining Room of the Refectory Building.

In keeping with a custom of two years' standing, a radio program will be presented late in the afternoon. It will be broadcast from Station WSMB, New Orleans, at 4:30, and will feature a brief address by President Wm. Stuart Nelson, and music by the University Chorus. The day's activities will be brought to a close with a presentation by the Dillard Players' Guild of Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts", a play which gained for them wide and favorable comment when it was presented last spring.

Mr. Favrot, the principal speaker of the day, is a native of Louisiana and attended Tulane university at the time Dr. James Hardy Dillard, for whom Dillard university is named, was dean of the college. Before his association with the General Education Board, Mr. Favrot was state agent of Negro schools in Louisiana.

MORGAN COLLEGE SOLD TO STATE FOR $225,000

Transaction Must Be Approved by Public Works Board

BALTIMORE — Trustees of Morgan College, Saturday, agreed to sell the school "in its entirety" to the State of Maryland for $225,000.

Although the sale must be approved by the Board of Public Works before the institution will become a State college for Negroes, the trustees and the commission appointed by Governor Herbert R. O'Connor expect no opposition.

James H. Carter, secretary of the board of trustees, said that, in agreeing to the sale by the adoption of a resolution, the trustees abandoned their original request to be permitted to retain two acres of ground and a building for use as a religious and recreational center on the campus.

The trustee board is working out plans to purchase ground adjacent to the college campus and erect a suitable building for religious and education purposes with funds received from the sale, according to the secretary. The center will be known as a Wesleyan Foundation.

The institution will be known as Morgan State College, according to President Dwight Holmes, and it is expected to go under State control October 1 if the transaction is approved by the Board of Public Works at that time.

If and when the school is certified as Morgan State College it will be under the direction of a nine-man board to be appointed by the Board of Public Works, of which Governor O'Conor is head.

No Change in Scholarship

Governor O'Conor said, this week, he propises that the $30,000 which has been allotted annually by the State to the Maryland Commission on Higher Education for Colored People be continued.

"The entire plan for the purchase of the college by the State is in keeping with our sincere desire to afford to the colored persons substantially equivalent facilities for education as are now enjoyed elsewhere in the State," the governor said.

"It is no exaggeration to [illegible] that this development is the most far-reaching in regard to higher education for colored people ever taken by our State and is in fulfilment of our program to see that there is no race discrimination," he concluded.

Maryland Law School To Admit Another Negro

BALTIMORE — (AP) — The University of Maryland Law School will admit another Negro student this year — the third in its history.

He is William H. Murphy of Baltimore, Oberlin College graduate and nephew of Carl Murphy, editor of the Afro-American, Negro daily newspaper here. Murphy filed his application last February.

Donald G. Murray, the first Negro student admitted to the law school, and since graduated fought successfully through the State courts when the institution at first denied him admission. The Court of Appeals ruled the university was required to accept Murray as a student. Another Negro law student is now enrolled.

MORGAN NOW STATE INSTITUTION

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Attending the meeting of the Land Grant College presidents, assembled here in their seventeenth annual convention, Dr. D. O. W. Holmes, president of Morgan college, addressed the group Tuesday and in the course of his remarks after his speech declared that the deal whereby Morgan became a state institution, was consummated last Thursday

Four Race Men On Morgan College Board Of Regents

Four colored civic and educational leaders were among the nine-man board of regents appointed by Governor O'Conor November 21 to govern Morgan College, recently taken over by the State of Maryland.

They included Willard W. Allen insurance man and State Grand Master of Maryland Masons; Josiah Henry, attorney; Carl J. Murphy, editor of the Afro-American, and Carrington L. Davis, high school principal, and president of the American Teachers' Association.

The white members include Judge Morris A. Soper, present head of the Morgan College Board; Dr. Ivan E. McDugle, Chief Judge Benjamin A. Johnson, Bliss Forbush and H. Milton Wagner, Jr.

MARYLAND ANSWERS THE SUPREME COURT

THE CAMPAIGN initiated by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to compel Southern states to provide equal opportunity for graduate training within each state for Negro as well as white citizens, has resulted in some radical changes in the setup of many Negro colleges. The latest of these changes was made recently when the State of Maryland took over Morgan College of Baltimore, for $200,000, and announced plans to develop a graduate school for Negroes at this sixty-years old college.

The Afro-American complained editorially last week that a state college with a majority of the trustees white would cause Morgan to lose much of its independence. Said The Afro:

"All in all, it looks as though we are trading a good little private college for a state college that, to begin with, will be up to its ears in politics."

But politics is not the worst phase of the situation. In circumventing the mandate of the Supreme Court as expressed in the Gaines Case of Missouri, the Southern states have taken the position that graduate schools can be created overnight. Aside from the vast expenditure of money for a physical plant and faculty, any graduate school will require several years to acquire a grade A rating. Educational institutions need to await the results of their teachings in the lives of their graduates before they can gain prestige and standing with the public.

Any new university is thus handicapped, as witness the case of Duke University in Durham, N. C., which has the best that money can buy in the way of appointments, physical plant and even a large student body but nevertheless must wait years for an alumnus' to prove the value of its teachings.

How easy and how much cheaper would it be for state universities in the South to admit those Negro students who qualify to their graduate schools. But to keep up a tradition, millions will be spent for an inferior substitute.

What price racial prejudice?

Morgan Is Sold for $225,000

Expect State to Take Charge About Oct. 1

BALTIMORE—The board of trustees of Morgan College, headed by Judge Morris J. Soper, white, unanimously agreed to sell Morgan College to the State for $225,000, at a meeting held Saturday morning.

The action followed negotiations on the part of a commission headed by John E. Semmes, white, appointed by Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, to take over the school for the State.

Speedy Shift Seen

According to President Dwight O. W. Holmes, the college will be known as Morgan State College, and it is expected to go under State auspices by October 1, provided the Board of Public Works approves the transaction.

Some time ago, the governor's commission made the recommendation that the State take over the operation of Morgan College as a State school for collegiate and higher learning, and as a result of this, the governor recommended to the Legislature that some action be taken.

Religious Center Denied

The Legislature then passed a bill providing for the commission headed by Mr. Semmes to study the situation and enter into negotiations with the trustees. The trustees agreed to take not less than $200,000 with a provision for reservation of two acres of land to be used as a religious foundation.

However, the committee refused to make any reservations and offered $225,000 without making provisions for the establishment of the foundation, although it is expected that the trustees will purchase land adjacent to the college for this purpose.

Nine-Member Board Planned

If and when the school becomes a State college, which is contingent upon favorable action by the Board of Public Works, it will be under the direction of nine persons who are to be appointed by the Board of Public Works, which is headed by the governor.

Questioned as to whether the terms of the transaction made any provisions for annual appropriations to Morgan College or any appropriations for improvements and expansion, Dr. Holmes stated that it did not.

Governor Herbert R. O'Conor told the AFRO on Tuesday, that he proposes that the $30,000 which has been allotted annually by the State to the Maryland Commission on Higher Education for Colored People be continued. His statement follows:

Governor's Statement

"In conjunction with the proposed purchase of Morgan College in order to afford adequate educational facilities to colored persons, there is one phase of the situation which, I think, deserves especial consideration. I refer to the present policy of the State in the grant of scholarships, for which $30,000 annually has been appropriated.

"While eventually, it would be considered unnecessary to expend this appropriation, after Morgan State College has been in full operation for a sufficient period, I think it would be desirable for the State to continue to make these scholarship awards at this time.

"I believe that the entire amount, or certainly substantially all of the present appropriation ought to be continued. This would avoid any difficulties in the handling of present cases and would insure the continuance for the present by the students to whom scholarships have been awarded.

To Submit Proposal

"While the question as to the expenditure for these scholarships will be determined by the new Board of Trustees of Morgan State College, when and if, the Board of Public Works approves the purchase, I shall submit for the consideration of the new board a proposal that these scholarships be continued for the time being.

"Incidentally, I have discussed this phase of the mater with John E. Semmes, chairman of the commission, which has done such splendid work in connection with the acquisition of Morgan College and I find that Mr. Semmes is in accord with my own ideas with regard to this scholarship matter.

"The entire plan for the purchase of the college by the State is in keeping with our sincere desire to afford to the colored persons substantially equivalent facilities for education as are now enjoyed elsewhere in the State.

"It is no exaggeration to state that this development is the most far-reaching in regard to higher education for colored people ever taken by our State and is in fulfilment of our program to see that there is no race discrimination."

Dicker To Buy Morgan College To Turn Race Influx From State Uni

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 22—Efforts of the state of Maryland to purchase Morgan college here to use as a branch of the white state university for Race students were revealed this week when it was learned that an offer of $225,000 had been made to the university's trustees by the commission appointed by Governor O'Connor to negotiate with the trustees of the institution.

Rumors to the effect that Morgan college would be purchased by the state to offset the influx of Race students to the state university, since it was compelled by the courts through activities of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People about four years ago to enter a Race student in the law school.

He was Donald Murray, who was graduated from the law school of Maryland State university last year. The application of another Race student to enter the same law school is now under consideration by the school authorities.

The report that the state plans to purchase Morgan college comes at a time when the N.A.A.C.P. is making a concerted drive over the country to seek entrance for Race students into schools supported by the states that do not offer the courses sought to Race students in any other institution.

It is believed that if the state of Maryland buys Morgan, it will be able to prevent the white school from accommodating a large number of Race students, although Mr. Murray spoke well of the treatment he received at Maryland State.

Should the offer of the state for the university be accepted by Morgan college trustees, a daily press release stated, the state will have an additional $125,000 to improve the school as a state institution, since the last session of the state legislature authorized $350,000 for the purchase price.

MARYLAND TO PAY $225,000 FOR INSTITUTE

Funds Will Be Used For Purchasing Site For Church Training

BALTIMORE, Md., Spt. 28—The entire plant of Morgan college, including its buildings and grounds, will be sold to the State of Maryland for the sum of $225,000, it was agreed by the board of trustees of the institution last week.

With funds received from this sale, trustees are planning to purchase ground adjacent to the college campus to erect a building for religious education to be known as the Westaven Foundation.

The action followed negotiations between a commission appointed by Governor Herbert R. O'Connor, and headed by John E. Semmes, white.

According to President Dwight O. W. Holmes, the college will be known as Morgan State college after the sale is approved and consumated. This is expected to be October 1.

When the trustees were first approached by the state commission, they requested that they retain two acres of the grounds for the construction and operation of a religious and recreational center, and sell the remaining land and buildings for $200,000. This plan was later abandoned.

The sale must be approved by the board of public works of the state. After this is done, the school will be under the direction of a nine-man board to be appointed by the public works body of which Governor O'Connor is the head.

N.A.A.C.P. Also Acting On State Universities In Missouri, Tennessee

"We have succeeded in keeping the doors of the University of Maryland open to Negro students," Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced here, as the organization's fight to open the doors of southern and border-state universities to Negroes moved forward in three states this week.

Marshall made the statement following receipt of a telegram from George B. Murphy, of Baltimore, Md., announcing that his son, William, had been enrolled in the University of Maryland Law School on Wednesday, September 10th.

Murphy represents the third student to be admitted to the Maryland law school since the N. A. A. C. P. won its victory before the Maryland Court of Appeals in 1935. At that time the high court decided that the University of Maryland had to open its law school to Donald Gaines Murray until such time as identical facilities could be set up in Maryland. Murray finished his course at school last year and has since passed the state bar examination.

William Murphy, whose case represents the first victory in the Association's roster of eight cases now under way this year, applied for entrance to the University of Maryland Law School last February. A graduate of Oberlin College, he has attempted several times to get an answer to his application from the registrar, W. M. Hillegeist, without success.

On September 9 he conferred with President Curly Byrd, at the latter's request. At this conference, he said that President Byrd told him that unless he withdrew his application he would not be notified whether he would be accepted or rejected.

Following this conference the N. A. A. C. P., whose assistance Murphy had asked for, drafted a letter for him which was sent to the registrar of the law school demanding an immediate answer to the application. In the letter Murphy advised Hillegeist that, unless he received an immediate answer or if his application was refused, he would take the necessary legal steps to protect his rights.

As a result of this letter, President Byrd phoned Carl Murphy, uncle of the student, on September 16, stating that Murphy would be accepted for registration. Murphy was represented by Thurgood Marshall, special N. A. A. C. P. counsel; Edward Lovett, of the organization's national legal staff; and W. A. C. Hughes, jr., of the association's Baltimore Branch.

"The successful conclusion of this case," Marshall said, "means that we have to keep this school open to Negroes. The important gain in the Donald Gaines Murray case, was not only that we succeeded for the first time in opening the doors of a southern university to Negroes, but that he was accepted by the students of the school without friction, was graduated in the first third of his class, and subsequently passed the state bar. Thus the basis for the claim that scholarship laws or separate state universities are necessary or wise is completely destroyed. The determination of the N. A. A. C. P. to keep the University of Maryland open to Negroes is a symbol of our program for full educational opportunities for Negro citizens."

Action Pending In Missouri

The University of Missouri, despite the Supreme Court ruling handed down December 12, 1938, ordering the school to open its doors to Lloyd Gaines, refused for a second time to do so, when Miss Lucille Bluford, managing editor of the Kansas City Call, appeared on the campus and sought to enter the school of journalism September 14. According to Registrar S. W. Canada, Miss Bluford should have made application to Lincoln University for these courses. He refused to heed the plea that Lincoln University offers no such courses.

Since the Supreme Court decision in the Gaines case, the Supreme Court of Missouri has reversed itself and ordered the law school to be opened to Negroes or equal facilities supplied within the state. The state has set up a Negro law school in St. Louis, with an appropriation of $200,000 as its answer. Wednesday, when the school's nineteen students appeared to register, they were met with a picket line of Negroes protesting that the school was a "makeshift" arrangement that did not meet the court's decision. The pickets urged that Negroes be admitted to the University of Missouri law school.

Action in both the Gaines and Bluford cases is being prepared by Sidney Redmond and Charles H. Houston, both members of the Association's national legal staff. The Kansas City, Mo., branch of the association has sent a check for $150 to continue the Gaines case.

Applicants Ready In Tennessee

L. A. Ransom, chief counsel in the Association's fight to gain admission for six students to the University of Tennessee, annouced at Knoxville, that students, none of whose applications have been acted upon by the university board of trustees, will present themselves on the campus of the school for enrollment, September 25, 26. They will be accompanied by Carl Cowan, local N. A. A. C. P. attorney.

Ransom, in association with Cowan and Z. Alexander Looby, Nashville attorney, has been in Knoxville during the past week, inspecting the minutes of the university's trustee board, interviewing the applicants, and inspecting the university's records.

The trustees have not rejected the applications, Ransom said (no court action can be undertaken unless the students are rejected) but the secretary of the university Hess, arranged a conference Wedesday, September 20, between President James Hoskins and the lawyers. At this conference, according to Dr. Ransom, President Hoskins urged the N. A. A. C. P. to have the applications withdrawn in order not to impair "good race relations." The suggestion was refused. All of the applicants have also refused to withdrawn their applications, he said.

Tougaloo College Gets Its First Race Dean

TOUGALOO, Miss., April 28.—President Judson L. Cross of Tougaloo college announced this week the election of Prof. Lionel B. Frazier as dean of the college. Mr. Frazier becomes the first Race dean of the college. Dean Frazier has been a teacher at Tougaloo for nine years. He holds the master's degree from Harvard university, and has recently completed a year's work at the university of Chicago. Three years ago, Mr. Frazier was offered one of the superintendencies of education in the Virgin Islands.

Tougaloo college is one of the five schools of collegiate rank that is being supported by the American Missionary Association. Dillard university in New Orleans, LeMoyne in Memphis, Talladega in Alabama, and Tillotson in Texas, are the other colleges.

Missouri Governor Asked To State His Stand On Lincoln Universitv

St. Louis Legislators Censored For Voting For House Bill 195, Also Reducing Numbers of Negro Curators.

ST. LOUIS, April 6. (Special)—An appeal was made last week by the St. Louis Negro Welfare Association, affiliated with the Missouri Negro Welfare Association, to Governor Lloyd Stark for a frank and open statement on his attitude on Lincoln university, House Hill No. 195, which would pretend to make Lincoln university have a graduate school the equivalent of that of the University of Missouri for only $200,000 and for his reasons for cutting down the number of Negroes on the board of curators of Lincoln.

Local political leaders, especially Republicans, are citing the fact that each of the nineteen St Louisians in the Missouri House of Representatives voted in favor of House Bill 195. This action has met with severe criticism and much apprehension on the part of large numbers of the Negro Democrats responsible for their being in office.

"Wide-spread apprehension of Negroes has resulted from your changing the Negro membership of the Lincoln Board of Curators from four to three," the special message sent by the St. Louis Negro Welfare association to Gov. Lloyd C. Stark states, "On its face, your action in this matter looks unfair to us. We are inclined to associate a white majority on the board of curators as being in keeping with the spirit of House Bill No. 195, which, in some respects, is in direct opposition to the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Gaines case as well as being contrary to the will of the Negroes and of fairminded white people.

"When you consider the fact that four Negroes and three whites constituted the board of curators of Lincoln university under two of your immediate predecessors as governor of the state, as well as during the first two years of your administration, you will understand why your latest act with reference to this board creates a suspicion in the minds of the Negroes that this move is intended for their disadvantage.

"In view of the many conjectures, among Negroes and friends of Negro higher education, a statement from you setting forth your reason to reducing the number of Negroes on the Lincoln board and also giving your attitude on the House Bill 195, would allay further misapprehension. May we have such a statement from you?"

Dr. A. N. Vaughn is president of the group, C. B. Broussard, general secretary, and Editor J. E. Mitchell of the Argus, treasurer. Other members of the executive committee are Dr. G. A. Gaikens, H. S. Williams, the Rev. B. F. Abbott, the Rev. Frank Madison Reid, Constable Jordan Chambers, John Anderson, U. S. Donaldson, Zaid Lenoir and F. L. Williams.

Speculation is rife as to whether or not the chief executive of the state will answer the communication as he has either ignored or taken his time about answering past letters from the league. It was this same group that received the run-around in its efforts to see that the Negro of Missouri was given due representation and recognition at the World Fairs in New York and San Francisco this year.

LOST OPPORTUNITY.....GOVERNOR STARK

Governor Lloyd C. Stark has signed the Taylor Bill, recently passed by the Legislature, which would compel the Board of Curators of Lincoln University to take steps to establish graduate schools at Lincoln University wherein students of the colored race may go to study law, medicine etc. The bill, according to a statement by its framers and supporters, was designed to circumvent or to make null and void the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Gaines case, that tribunal having decreed that Lloyd Gaines must be admitted to the law school at the University of Missouri or a law school must be established elsewhere in the state comparable to that furnished by the state for white students. In passing such a bill, the author, or authors, and those supporting the said bill, knew that such a law was a "joke" so far as its practicability was concerned. And, too the expense of establishing and maintaining a law school equal to that at the University of Missouri will, of course be an uncalled burden on the taxpayers of the state. These facts, and many others of equal importance in the case, were well known to Governor Stark at the time he signed the bill.

Of course, the Governor followed the usual line of procedure, that is, the bill having been passed by a large majority in both the House and the Senate, it would necessarily require a pretty big man to veto the bill. As a matter of fact had it not been for the Governor's action in the Kansas City situation that won for him national attention as a fearless defender of right and justice, we would have let his signing of the bill pass unnoticed. But having won this acclaim, we naturally thought he was getting above the fog into God's sunlight which would enable him to do the right thing because it was right. We thought that the courage he must have necessarily had to attack the great Pendergast organization would reflect itself in a case equally as important in in the affairs of the people in this state.

What an opportunity! What an opportunity to get out of the old rut of racial prejudice, was Governor Stark's before he signed the Taylor Bill. Political fights are complex and politics makes strange bedfellows and causes men to do seemingly strange things. The fellow, who has the political power today may be shorn of that power tomorrow, or next week, or next year, and those who vied to do him honor will flee from him like rats from a sinking ship. But doing a big thing like attacking a wrong because it is wrong and defending human rights because all men are human, will, no doubt, come to Governor Stark but once in a life time.

Governor Stark was showered with petitions and importunities urging him not to sign House Bill 195. If he took the time to consider them he evidently saw merit in the request. We do not doubt but that his mind and his superior judgment suggested that to give heed to these petitions would make him a big man, and that he was almost persuaded to follow the course of those advising him along this line, but he, in the language of the poet, was "almost persuaded, almost, but lost."

Let Missouri Obey the Law

Missouri has ordered the president of Lincoln university, its employe, to establish a law school in the university. By rules already in force that school must operate two years at an approved standard before it can become accredited. In the meanwhile Missouri makes no provision to give Lloyd Gaines the education in the law which the supreme court ordered it to give. The court's mandate should be complied with now, not two years hence. Until Missouri does that, it treats the orders of the court with contempt and refuses to obey the law of the land. It is not for Lloyd Gaines and other Negroes seeking equal education to be patient. It is for Missouri to be law-abiding.

COURT RULING BRINGS NEGROES' LAW SCHOOL

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 1. (INS)—Complying with a mandate of the United States Supreme court, President Sherman D. Scruggs of Lincoln University For Negroes, said Saturday a law school would be opened in September. The Supreme court ruled recently that the University of Missouri must admit Lloyd H. Gaines, 25-year-old St. Louis negro, to its law school unless the state provided comparable educational facilities in another school. Gaines had been refused admittance to the University of Missouri.

Lay Plans For Lincoln U. Jim Crow Law School

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (ANP) President Sherman D. Scruggs of Lincoln university last Saturday announced that Lincoln's board of curators has ordered the immediate establishment of a school of law at the university, to be ready at opening of the fall term on September 1.

This action was taken despite the protests of colored leaders throughout the state who point out that the new setup will be inadequate as it takes years of effort and expenditure of much money to develop a law school worthy of the name.

BOARD AUTHORIZES

President Scruggs was authorized by the board to employ the necessary instructors and obtain proper facilities for starting the school, whose cost will be charged against the $200,000 fund earmarked by the state for Lincoln's expansion program. Just how much of the appropriation would be spent on the law school could not be determined.

However, observers pointed out that only a small portion can be used for the law school, as the board of curators has named a committee to cooperate with President Scruggs "to study plans for starting graduate work and other professional schools at the university when the need arises."

The board's activity in getting the law school started is stemmed in the U. S. supreme court's decision (last December 8) in the U. of Missouri-Lloyd Gaines suit, in which the high court ordered U. of M. to admit Student Gaines to its law school or "provide equal facilities within the state". Representative Taylor's bill in the lower house was designed to meet this ruling.

When the Taylor bill passed the legislature and was signed by Governor Stark, the latter appointed a board of curators composed of four Negroes and five whites, whereas the previous board was predominantly Negro. The balance of power, on issuse vital to Lincoln's educational program, thus passed to the whites.

Observers this week pointed out that higher education for Negroes, if "provided on an equal basis" at Lincoln, would mean setting up schools not only in law, but in medicine, dentistry, journalism, engineering, post-graduate liberal arts and other branches of learning now available at the white University of Missouri. To establish all these schools at Lincoln, the $200,000 state appropriation would only be "a drop in the bucket", these citizens declare.

THE LAW SCHOOL AT LINCOLN

The Board of Curators at Lincoln University at Jefferson City, under a mandate from the Missouri legislature, is undertaking the job of setting up a Law School at Lincoln for Lloyd Gaines and other members of the race who are qualified to apply for such a course.

Viewing the situation from a distance and not being informed of all of the factors that will enter this case before Gaines is finally admitted to a Law School in this state, we confess that it looks to us as though the curators of Lincoln are faced with a herculean task.

We are not among those who have any harsh criticism of the members of this board just because they are members. But we are, as no doubt the majority of the members of our race on the board are, suspicious of the action of the white members on this board. Governor Stark in naming this board took particular care and was quite purposeful in making the majority of the members white. This, we take for granted, was done so that he would be assured that his (Governor Stark's) wishes would be carried out. Therefore, our suspicions are stronger than ever that it was, and is, the intention of the governor to "put something over" on the Negroes judging from the complexion of the greater number of members on this board.

Neither are we among those who are ready to condemn President Scruggs of Lincoln University for carrying out the mandate of the board, that is by going ahead with the plans for the Law School in accordance with the action of the the board as long as he is president. Then, too, it is too early in the game to know the ultimate outcome of the so-called Board of Curators. It is his duty to carry out the wishes of "Law School" at Lincoln University.

We think it is the popular opinion of the people of the state, both white and black, that the governor has no intention of giving the colored people a Law School at Lincoln to equal that for whites at the University of Missouri. That may appear to him as being right and just, but to us it seems as though he is using every trick in the deck to circumvent the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Gaines case, and of course he has the power, for being the appointing officer of the board he is able to enforce his wishes by resignations, etc.

However, we do not advise the members of the board to rush to lay their resignations on the table. We doubt seriously the wisdom of such a move. Remember that this matter has not had its last hearing in the courts of equity.

In consulting with attorneys and national officers of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People they, themselves, are unable to determine what the next legal step in the matter will be. It is generally understood, however, that we will wait and see what kind of makeshift the state will offer in the form of a Law School at Lincoln to equal that of the University of Missouri at Columbia. When we see that, then the next move will be determined.

In the meanwhile, students and other qualified residents of Missouri who desire graduate work in such courses as law, journalism, medicine, engineering, etc., are urged to make their application at Lincoln University.

Let Missouri Obey the Law

Missouri has ordered the president of Lincoln university, its employe, to establish a law school in the university. By rules already in force that school must operate two years at an approved standard before it can become accredited. In the meanwhile Missouri makes no provision to give Lloyd Gaines the education in the law which the supreme court ordered it to give. The court's mandate should be complied with now, not two years hence. Until Missouri does that, it treats the orders of the court with contempt and refuses to obey the law of the land. It is not for Lloyd Gaines and other Negroes seeking equal education to be patient. It is for Missouri to be law-abiding.

Missouri U. Lawyers Inform Court Of 'Paper' Law School at Lincoln

State Court Upholds Ban Against Lloyd Gaines

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—Missouri university's ban against Negro students was upheld by the state supreme court sitting en banc Tuesday on the grounds that a law school was being established at Lincoln university and it would first have to be determined if these facilities are substantially equivalent to those afforded at the University of Missouri.

At the same time, it was announced that William Adwin Taylor, who since 1935 has served as acting dean of the Howard university law school, has been named dean of the Lincoln law school scheduled to open in September.

The supreme court Tuesday, in an opinion prepared by Judge C. A. Leedy, Jr., sent back to the Boon county circuit court the proceedings by which Lloyd Gaines of St. Louis sought entrance to Missouri U. This is the original jurisdiction of the famous case. Boon county must hold future hearings to determine the rights of Negroes under the new Taylor bill creating the Lincoln law department.

After the Gaines case went to the U. S. supreme court and was returned to the state high court following the ruling that Gaines must receive equal educational facilities within Missouri's borders, new hearings were held here. But meanwhile the Taylor bill had been rushed through the state legislature. So Missouri U. attorneys argued that sufficient provision was now made at Lincoln for Gaines' education.

"We are unwilling to undertake to determine the constitutional adequacy of the provision now made for Gaines' legal education within the borders of the state," said the opinion rendered Tuesday. "Orderly procedure requires that the question be submitted to in the first instance.

"If the facilities at Lincoln university to be available at the commencement of the next school term, which is in September, are in face substantially equivalent to those afforded at the University of Missouri, the writ (of mandamus) should be denied; otherwise, it must issue, as a denial under these circumstances would amount to an arbitrary exercise of discretion."

William Edwin Taylor, dean of the new law school at Lincoln, was a normal graduate there in 1917 and holds bachelor of arts and bachelor of laws degrees from the University of Iowa. He has been teaching law at Howard since 1929.

President Scruggs said the new school will be organized in strict accordance with standards set forth by the American Association of American Law schools and that Will Shafroth, white, chairman of the legal education committee of the American Bar association, and Harold Shepherd, white, secretary of the American Association of American law schools, have been invited to Lincoln to help start the new school.

Missouri Vs. The Supreme Court

Lincoln University's new law school, hastily created last year when the Missouri legislature was brought face to face with the historic Gaines decision of the United States Supreme Court, will open to would-be lawyers among our race in Missouri on September 20.

The school, according to present plans will be housed in the old Poro College building at St. Louis and will be able to accommodate sixty students. William E. Taylor, a graduate of the University of Iowa, will be dean.

This experiment in "getting around" the Gaines decision will no doubt be keenly watched by other states with separate schools, and of course, affected by Lloyd Gaines' effort to enter the University of Missouri law school.

For it is apparent even to those least familiar with the workings of law, that "getting around" is all the Missouri legislature has attempted. Only $200,000 was appropriated to make Lincoln University "equal" to the University of Missouri, which was given three millions of dollars by the same legislators.

The legislature has been placed in the position of a person trying to hold his hands over the holes in a leaking dyke. Mr. Gaines sued to obtain admission to the state university law school, so the legislators created a law school, stopping up only one hole.

Left still leaking were the "holes" of medicine, education, journalism, pharmacy, art, chemistry, all of which are offered at the University of Missouri from which Negro Missourians are barred. The Gaines decision as handed down by the Supreme Court covered not only law, but every other professional and graduate as well as undergraduate school maintained by the state. The court ruled that they should be equal and that providing funds to send citizens out of the state did not mean the legal requirements.

But the Missouri legislature thumbed its nose at the Supreme Court and its black citizens in the same gesture by at the last minute appropriating $50,000 for colored students to go elsewhere for study. This is a clear violation of the Supeme Court ruling.

In the face of these affronts black Missourians should become all the more determined that their state legislature will not get away with this gross insult to their intelligence. They should make it extremely plain that it would be far better and cheaper for Missouri to make honest efforts to observe the Gaines' ruling, rather than resort to all too apparent subterfuges to get around it.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT REFUSES TO SHUT DOOR OF UNIVERSITY TO GAINES

Jefferson City, Mo., Aug. 4.—The supreme court of Missouri handed down this week an opinion reversing the decision of the Boone County circuit court rendered originally in the Lloyd Gaines Case in which Gaines was seeking admission to the University of Missouri Law School.

This latest action in the famous University of Missouri case is in conformity with the opinion of the U. S. Supreme Court, delivered last December 12.

The state's highest court by its opinion does not order the university to admit Gaines to its law school but does not shut the university to him. It takes notice of the fact that the State of Missouri, since the U. S. Supreme Court opinion, has directed the establishment of a law school for Negroes at Lincoln University, and has appropriated a sum of $200,000 for this purpose.

The court holds in its opinion that it cannot decide at this date whether the law school to be established at Lincoln University is the equal of the law school at the University of Missouri. It holds that this question must come before the trial court and be decided upon its merit after the school is established.

The supreme court's present opinion holds that if the lower court should find as a fact that the newly-established law school at Lincoln is not "substantially equivalent" to the facilities offered at the University of Missouri then the writ must issue.

The judgment of the Boone Circuit Court was the original decision in the Gaines case, and denied him a writ of mandamus compelling the university to admit him. From this decision an appeal was taken to the Missouri Supreme Court which affirmed the denial of the writ. From this decision an appeal was taken to the U. S. Supreme Court which reversed the Missouri Supreme Court.

Lincoln University President Thinks St. Louis May Get New Missouri Law School

Sweets Thinks Faculty Cannot Be Secured in Time For Fall Opening

Must Have Library of 10,000 Volumes

ST. LOUIS.—(ANP)—President Sherman D. Scruggs stated Wednesday the seat of Lincoln university's law school may be in St. Louis. He was here last week to inspect suitable buildings preparatory to establishing the school next month in line with the supreme court decision.

Present plans are to rent a building with part of the $200,000 appropriated by the state legislature to establish the school and maintain it two years. Lloyd Gaines, whose suit to enter the University of Missouri resulted in this action, was barred under a state supreme court ruling August 1 from entering the state university until the Boone circuit court decides whether the new school is equal to that at Missouri U.

Although Drk Scruggs said he considered $200,000 ample to begin the law school in a rented building, many other Negro leaders consider the sum inadequate. N. A. Sweets, business manager of the St. Louis American, who met with the president, questioned whether a faculty could be obtained in time for the scheduled opening in mid-September.

The institution must have a library of 10,000 volumes, a librarian, four professors and a clerical staff in addition to suitable quarters to be accredited by the American Association of Law Schools. Failure to win this rating may mean Gaines could force admission to the state university law school.

Dr. Scruggs said there was not enough space at Lincoln university in Jefferson City, and St. Louis offered advantages for students in contact with practicing lawyers and proximity to two white university law schools whose faculty members might be available as part time lecturers.

The school will provide for about 20 students the first year. Seven have been the most to apply in previous years. The state paid their tuition outside Missouri.

LIVELY SCENE AS DEPOSITIONS ARE TAKEN HERE

NAACP and Univ. of Missouri Represented

When depositions in the Gaines Case were taken at the Lincoln University Law School, Dean William E. Taylor occupied the witness stand for more than two hours on Tuesday and amply defended the School, by answering all questions exacted by Attorneys Charles Houston and Sidney R. Redmond, attorneys for the N.A.A.C.P. in the Gaines case as well as those questions of Attorneys R. E. Murry, William S. Hogsett and Judge Fred L. Williams, representing the University of Missouri. Although under steady direct questioning from Attorney Houston, Dean Taylor never faltered any of his answers which were to clarify the procedure of the school and to qualify the professors.

Depositions were taken of each professor as to his training and experience. Along toward the end of the session the attorneys for the University of Missouri called for Gaines' deposition and were informed by Attorneys Houston and Redmond, that they had received no message from Gaines since March, and that they, along with Gaines' mother, were exhausting every possible means of locating his whereabouts. This situation finds the N.A.A.C.P. attorneys in a very embarrasing situation, for they are presenting a case and cannot produce the client. The opposing attorneys however, offered every means at their disposal in helping to locate the client.

Attorney and Witness Clash

At several times during the direct testimony, Dean Taylor answered questions of Mr. Houston by referring to similar tactics that he, Houston, had employed while raising the rating of the Howard University Law School. At two or three times Dean Taylor refused to answer questions and asked Mr. Houston what he was attempting to arrive at, and stated that he would give only those answers which he thought were relevant. At the end of Dean Taylor's examination, Judge Williams entered his objection to the manner in which the questioning had been conducted by the plaintiffs to which Attorney Houston replied that he did not believe the questioning objectional.

Much time was spent in determing the qualifications of the professors, as to their scholastic training and regular practice. Attorneys for the plaintiff attempted to stress the matter of graduate degrees and actual practice as necessary in properly qualifying a competent instructor. To these questions, Dean Taylor cited the faculties of the leading law schools of the nation and stated that the majority of these professors did not have graduate degrees and neither had they practiced one day in the courts. He continued by naming several famous law school deans, who have no graduate degree, have never practiced and have never been admitted to the bar. He said that the majority of the members of the American Bar Association had declared practice was not necessary for a law instructor, and that more than five law school instructor, exceptions being granted. He also cited several instances of the country's most famous law educators as men who were chosen for their respective faculties during their senior year in school and immediately went from the classroom as a student to the professorship.

Much time was spent on the salary question, as to the comparison of the salaries of the Lincoln University Law School with the salaries of the Missouri University Law School. The basis for the salaries being paid was argued as to their comparison with the minimum salary schedule as suggested by Dean Taylor before his employ. Direct questioning finally brought out the salary scale which ranged from $2256 to $5000, the other two being, $2650 and $3.000.

Dean Taylor displayed excellent knowledge of law school, their requirements and sources of necessary material. He stated in answer to a question from the state's attorney that he had ten years of experience in establishing a rating for Howard Law School and as a result of that he knew what was necessary to establish a first class school in Missouri.

In answer to questions as to why he did not select teachers with teaching experience, he stated that there were only two Negro teachers with experience outside of Howard University and they were Attorney Charles Houston and himself, as there was no other school but Howard to get experience and only the two named had left there. In answer to Attorney Houston's question as to the possibility of securing experienced white teachers, he replied that he had never considered employing a white teacher, for he believed that Negro teachers should be employed. He gave his personal knowledge of each of his instructors and testified that they were the best possible to be found in the country, as each of them had either rated number one or two in his class while in school.

Professors Richardson, Bush and Lucas were questioned only briefly as to their training, class rating and actual experience.

Lincoln Law School Gets Favorable Action From A.B.A. Examiner

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 7. (SPECIAL)—An announcement from President Scruggs' office this week stated that Mr. Will Shafroth, chairman of the Section of Legal Education of the American Bar Association, examined the Lincoln University School of Law at St. Louis Thursday, Sept. 28, and reported that the school "was now worthy of admission to probationary status among the approved schools of the Association." His appraisal was made "after a very critical survey and evaluation of the physical plant, the faculty, the students enrolled, the curriculum, the library, the whole of the university, the records and the like."

According to the announcement, "Admission to probation is a definite policy in the accrediting of law schools by the Association. All schools of law are admitted only on a probationary basis for a period of two or three years and examined periodically before being fully approved."

The School of Law is to undergo another appraisal soon by the Examiner from the Association of American Law Schools, the highest rating body for law schools in America.

PICKETS PARADE BEFORE MEETING AND DENOUNCE SEGREGATED LAW SCHOOL

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 22—As members of the Missouri State Negro Seachers' association met last week at Vashon high school, whose principal is Frank L. Williams, a member of the board of curators of Lincoln university, pickets representing the Colored Clerks Circle marched in front of the building carrving signs denouncing the Jim-Crow Law school of Lincoln university.

Earlier in the day, while tribute was being paid to Burt Mayberry of Kansas City, secretary of the state association and a former president of the group, lauding him as being responsible, to a great extent, for the increase in the number of members of the Lincoln University Board of Curators (the group that authorized the Jim Crow Lincoln Law school set-up) a speaker from the floor facetiously remarked "and did he play a great part in the creation of the Lincoln Law School."

OPPOSE EXTENSION OF EDUCATIONAL SEGREGATION

Among the resolutions passed was one placing the Missouri Association of Negro Teachers on record as being opposed to the extension of educational segregation of Negroes and wades into fields where it has not already been established.

"Further," the resolution introduced by A. A. Dyer, editor of the associations journal, stated, "that the Association go on record as especially opposing the establishment of segregation in the fields of Graduate and Professional education, where a duplication of facilities is impractical and uneconomical.

A second resolution, sponsored by Editor Dyer, authorized the executive board to allow a sum not to exceed $100 for the continuance of the study of the needs for an agricultural and vocatinal high school in Southeast Missouri."

A third vital resolution urged that the Association continue its studies of the inequalities in educational provisions for Negroes in the State, and undertake, with the cooperation of other organized groups, to correct these conditions, giving both moral and financial support wherever necessary.

REPORTERS DON'T SEE COPIES OF MINUTES

It was the thought of this latter resolution, principally, which threatened, at the start of the convention, to disrupt proceedings and start a mud-sliging session that would be marked by a bitter fight

Members were charging that the recently increased dues were put into effect to provide a fund to help fight the Gaines case and to start a legislative battle for the equalization teachers' salaries.

Such, however, was not the case. Secretary Mayberry and President C. C. Damel of Jefferson City asserted, and, although they said that the minutes would speak for themselves, failed to show reporters copies of the minutes in which the disputed statements or motions were carried.

CLAMOR FOR ACTION ON SALARY QUESTION

Some Missouri teachers, disgruntled over the failure of Missouri teachers to take any steps towards a fight for the equalization of salaries when such action had been taken in a number of states, clamored for action and made numerous charges.

They claimed that they had approved an increase in the annual fee in order to help push the fight for better economic conditions and equality in pay. Some threatened to withdraw from the Association.

President Damel told the press that while a small amount of money had been spent for stationery, stamps, telegrams, etc., that there had been little work done with the so-called "legislative" or special fund. The report of Miss Dayse F. Baker of Farmington, Mo., treasurer of the organization for a number of years, shows that, on October 31, 1939, the organization had a balance of $669.94 in the disputed special fund. During the past year, through the placing of 50 cents of the fees collected from each of the 1,156 members, a total of $578 was added to the fund. Officials claim that the fund has not been earmarked.

DYER ELECTED AFTER HE HAD APPARENTLY QUIT

There was considerable heat displayed on the part of A. A. Dyer, St. Louis, editor of the Journal of Education, official organ of the association. Editor Dyer claims that 40 cents of the membership fee belonged to the journal, that something like $470 was available for the publication and that, so far he has received only $205 for that purpose. Dyer, who accuses the administration of lacking cooperation, also pointed out that Postmaster Jackson of St. Louis had called him in question for stating that the magazine came out only three times when it is entered in the St. Louis post office as a quarterly magazine.

However, when the smoke of the election cleared away, Dyer, who to all intents and purposes had given the Journal up in disgust, stating that he was surrendering "with jubilation the burden I have so joyously borne" was returned to office, defeating an opponent from Kansas City.

The association took other forward steps when it urged the cooperation of the race group with the Missouri State Teachers' Association (white) and urged an advisory committee to work with the state department of education. It was also ordered that the provisions of the Traveling Libraries and the facilities of the reading circle be investigated immediately and steps taken to make them avalable for Negro children.

Officers were installed at the banquet by J. L. Herriford of Kansas City, the parliamentarian. They include: President, Miss Emily Russell, St. Louis; first vice president, John L. Howell, Kansas City; second vice president, A. C. Shropshire, Festus; treasurer, Miss Dayse F. Baker, Farmington; assistant secretaries, Miss Daisy Trice, Kansas City and Miss Adel Dehoe, St. Louis; historian, W. A. Daugherty, Kansas City; editor of journal, Arthur A. Dyer, St. Louis; statistician, L. S. Curtis, St. Louis, and auditor, Everett H. Colbert, St. Louis. Progress committee, Earl D. Thomas, Kansas City; Miss Kitsy D. Townsend, St. Joseph, and Miss Arsania M. Williams, St. Louis.

"Decoy Students," read one of the signs, "you are swapping a birthright for a mess of MISEDUCATION. Don't follow crum-minded Negro MISLEADERS who personally benefit by this Jim Crow Law School."

Said the second ign: "We retire now, but remember, citizens, this is a waste of taxpayers' money. A Hitleristic policy. None of these have any place in America. Democracy Begins at Home."

Advisor of American Bar Association Says Lincoln University's Law School Fulfills Requirements

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 22—Mr. Will Shafroth, advisor to the section on legal education and admissions to the bar of the American Bar Association, in a letter to Lincoln University with reference to his inspection of the law school had the following to say:

"I have just transmitted my report regarding the law school to the executive committee of the board of curators, to the gentlemen who accompanied me when I visited the school last month and to Dean Taylor. The report states that in respect to the library, the physical equipment, the number of full-time teachers, admission requirements and the length of course, the school fully complies with American Bar Association requirements. These are what we term the external requirements, which can be definitely measured and ascertained. Compliance with these requirements at so early a date after the organization of the law school indicates that your university is making every effort to establish a law school of high standing.

That I found this to be the case when I inspected the school was no surprise to me, because I knew at that time that some $30,000 had already been expended on the law school and that a man of ability and scholarly attainments had been secured as dean. I have known Mr. Taylor and been acquainted with his work for some eight years and in my opinion, he is the best selection you could have made for the deanship. As a teacher and as acting dean of the Howard University Law school in Washington which has been on our approved list since 1931 and which has been a member of the Association of American Law Schools during the same period, he has acquired a background in the best colored law school in the United States, which will be of great value to him. I am sure you agree with me that the speed with which he organized your law school in St. Louis shows his efficiency.

I should like to say on the basis of my inspection, that every effort is being made to establish a first class law school. The institution is not a make-shift in any respect, and any one who visited when I did cannot fail to be impressed by what has been accomplished, and in the short space of two months. Though the opening of the school had only been announced in August, on the 28th of September there was an enrollment of 23 students in the first-year class, more than half of whom had college degrees. This enrollment is in excess of that of the first-year enrollment of Howard University Law school last year.

CITIZENS BANQUET LINCOLN U. LAW SCHOOL FACULTY

Courier 12-5-31

A banquet in honor of Dean William E. Taylor of the Lincoln University Law School, and his staff, was given by a group of interested citizens at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. Friday night, Dec. 1. The speeches, for the most part, were in a welcoming vein, assuring the dean and his associates that they were welcome to St. Louis and that they were regarded as spokes in the great wheel of the progress of our race.

In his introductory remarks, Attorney George W. Wade stated that it had been in the minds of many St. Louisans that some expression of appreciation for the dean and his staff since coming into our midst should be made and that he felt all the support and encouragement possible should be given to the young people who had register ed for the law course at the school in order that they migh make the most of the opportu nity given them.

Mr. Frank L. Williams, a member of the Lincoln University Board of Curators, gave a brief resume of the factors leading up to the establishment of the Law School in St. Louis and of the part he and other members of the Board played in its establishment. Other speakers included Attorney Delancy Ingram, Leonard Harris, A. B. Green, Attorney Lewis B. Clymer, John R. Steele Fred A. Jones John W. Hayes, Zaid D. Lenoir and Attorneys Freeman L. Martin, Noah W. Parden, W. D. Shavers, John A. Davis, Rev. Fred A. Hughes and George W. Lewis. Responses were made by Attorneys Virgil Lucas, Jas. T. Bush and Scovel Richardson, assistant professors at the Law School.

Others present were: George Williams, J. E. Mitchell, Attorney W. H. Parker, R. Edwin Parker, Harold E. Young, E. D. Johns, J. B. Bemis, Charles Evans and Perry Townsend.

Attorney Silas E. Garner acted as master of ceremonies; Attorney George W. Wade co-chairman.

CARL SANDBURG SPEAKS TO STUDENTS AT LINCOLN U.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—Students, faculty members and townspeople crowded into Page Auditorium last Tuesday night to hear Carl Sandburg, famous American poet, whose poetry is thought by many to be the most authentically American if any poetry written since Whitman. Sandburg, who has just completed Abraham Lincoln, The War Years, the fourth volume of his biography of the great emancipator, charmed the audience by the ease of his manner and had them amused or serious as he shifted from anecdotes of common to shrewd analyses of the vital issues of today. He gave the impression of a common man seeing with the eye of a prophet and speaking with the tongue of a poet as he warned against the danger of a people losing their sense of perspective in times like these and allowing themselves to be swayed by propaganda. He might have been talking informally to an ordinary household group as he ranged from Abraham Lincoln to the Dies committee, and from George Washington Carter to Babe Ruth. In everything he said could be discovered the insight of a genius' mind.

Turning to his poetry he read several selections from his latest book of poems, The People, Yes, and the members of the audience were quiet and attentive as they listened to the rythmical music of poetry which said something about them, and said it in language that they could understand. Sandburg concluded his recital with several selections from his American Songbag, a collection of American folksongs which has brought to him almost as much fame as has come to him because of his poetry and biography.

After the recital the distinguished writer was guest at an informal reception with members of the Lincoln University faculty at President Sherman D. Scrugg's home. Sandburg displayed a keen interest in the institution and expressed his regret that he would not be able to linger long enough to search for new songs for his American Songbag. Before leaving, he presented an autographed copy of The People, Yes to the University's library.

Lincoln U. (Mo.), Chicago U. Debate

DUCKING THE ISSUE

The Missouri state legislature is ducking the issues raised by the U. S. Supreme Court's recent decision in the Gaines case.

It is preparing to act on a bill to appropriate $200,000 to provide at Lincoln University, the state's colored college, with graduate and professional schools for Negro students in order to avoid admitting them to similar schools already established at the University of Missouri.

It is amazing to what lengths some of our white people will go to violate the letter and spirit of the law where we are concerned.

If this bill is passed, it will not only require more than $200,000 but many years before the graduate schools at Lincoln University will be equal to those at the University of Missouri.

It takes more than buildings to make graduate schools.

The Missouri legislators know this but they hope that this inadequate provision will close Negroes' mouths and enable the state to continue to flout the Federal tribunal.

The enlightened Negroes of Missouri and elsewhere will not be satisfied with this makeshift.

Missouri Negroes help to maintain the University of Missouri and they have a right to its facilities in acquiring the education they seek.

Jim Crow Educational Bill For Lincoln U. Fought By McLemore; Curators Named

Former Board Member Says Missouri Cannot Produce, in Few Months for Negroes, What It Took 75 Years to do for White University

Taylor Bill Would Be Staggering Load

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—A new board of curators for Lincoln University, composed of three colored and three white men, was named last week by Governor Stark to remove the school from the alleged political domination which had caused the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges to place Lincoln on the probation list last year.

At the same time Joseph L. McLemore of St. Louis, attorney, who was chairman of the board until his resignation, announced he was launching an open fight against the Taylor bill which has already passed the house and is up for consideration in the state senate. The bill, an attempt to circumvent the Lloyd Gaines decision, would provide $200,000 to make Lincoln "equal" to the University of Missouri.

The new curators are Dr. J. Edward Perry, Kansas City, Mo., physician and surgeon, who succeeds Dr. Wm. J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds in Washington; Frank L. Williams, principal of Vashon high school, St. Louis, who succeeds McLemore and C |C. Hubbard, principal of Lincoln high school, Sedalia, whose resignation was refused by Governor Stark. The white curators are Dr. F. L. McClure, president of Westminister college, Fulton; Cliff Scruggs, owner of a lumber business here, and W. Wallace Fry, lawyer of Mexico, Mo. The white appointees are known to be liberal in their attitude toward the race.

After Lincoln was placed on the probation list, an investigation by the North Central Association showed politics to be too dominant a factor on the board. The association had stated it would drop Lincoln entirely from the accredited list unless this condition were remedied. The new board is expected to restore the institution's previous status.

Contending that the old board of which he was a member was unalterably opposed to the Taylor bill and stating that he believed the new board would also oppose this measure calculated to make Lincoln a full "jim crow university," McLemore made public a letter addressed to Michael Kinney, state senator, in which he called for defeat of the bill in the senate.

The letter stated that this bill "proposes to prevent Missouri Negroes from entering Missouri university by setting up at Lincoln some fashion of graduate work" in an effort to follow out the supreme court decision. It would be impossible to establish at Lincoln a school of law by next fall when Gaines will be ready to begin his law course, the former curator said.

"Let us analyze the picture more fully, bearing in mind that the attempt here is to produce the equal of what exists at Missouri," said McLemores' letter. "Does Mr. Taylor, the author, contend that with six months' time and $200,000 there can be produced at Lincoln University what it took 75 years to produce at Missouri university? What manner of super-people does he think Missouri Negroes are? Frankly, whether Mr. Taylor knows it or not, they are not that smart.

"The fact that his bill provides $50,000 to pay tuition outside of Missouri, pending the development of Lincoln, does not help the situation one iota. That provision is directly in the teeth of the decision. The decision held: the payment of tuitions outside does not satisfy the law for Gaines is entitled to be educated in the state of Missouri."

Declaring that the law would also create a "staggering tax burden" and a waste of public funds if schools had to be established for those who wanted graduate or professional training, McLemore wanted to know just how Taylor would go about establishing at Lincoln a school of juornalism equal to that at Missouri, generally recognized as the finest in the nation, when such states as "New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and all the rest" have failed to do so.

After stating that the measure was undemocratic and places Negroes of Missouri in the same position as Jews in Germany, McLemore declared it was resented by many persons of both races, and was a subterfuge to circumvent the supreme court decision.

DEBATERS OF A. AND T. TO MEET LINCOLN TEAM

Lincoln university debaters, of Missouri, will meet A. and T. college debating team tonight in Dudley Memorial auditorium at 8 o'clock. The question for discussion is: "Resolved: That the economic advancement of the negro at present is dependent upon his exercise of the vote."

Speakers for A. and T. in tonight's debate will be William Gilmore and J. Archie Hargraves. The debate will be non-decision.

AT JEFFERSON CITY

The largest delegation of Negroes in the history of the state, interested in pending legislation, was at Jefferson City last Monday, the occasion being to register, not only in words, but by their presence, their opposition to House Bill No. 195 known as the Taylor Bill, which is now before the State Senate.

As these men and women gathered in the Senate chambers the expressions on their faces were not indicative of holiday festivity of curious sightseers, but rather their countenances bore expressions of earnest devotion to a cause which affected their very lives, and more.....the welfare of their children was at stake. Speakers for this committee discussed equity and justice. They made pleas for fair play and warned the Senate committee that two wrongs never made one right.

In the meanwhile, we were thinking about how some of the members of the legislation were fighting to keep the state of Missouri in the backward state class. It was just last week that Missouri was given a "black eye" when the University of Notre Dame in Indiana, and the University of Wisconsin refused to allow their track teams to compete at a meet because the Missouri University was afraid to compete with the University of Wisconsin which had a Negro, Ed Smith, as a member of its track team. However, there was some reaction by the student body of the University of Missouri to this undemocratic principle. These young men and women, as a protest, circulated petitions letting the world know that they did not approve of this practice of bygone days for they understood that they are living in a new day and in a new world far removed from the world as it was twenty and forty years ago. We understand that the students of the state university took their action after conferences with faculty members during which the students attempted to show the faculty the fallacy of barring a Negro from competing on its track, but not being able to show the faculty and coach the wisdom of their plea they immediately signed petitions and made an appeal to the University of Notre Dame not to come.....and it did not come.

There is no doubt in our mind but that it took courage and "guts" on the part of the students to do this thing, but they perhaps realized that "eventually, why not now?" And this reminds us of the editorial appearing in the University of Missouri student paper last December entitled "The Inevitable Mr. Gaines."

We mention this incident in connection with the visit of the Negro delegation to Jefferson City as an indication of the trend of the times in which we live. There is a large number of people now from whose eyes the scales of prejudice are falling fast. This country will either be democratic or it will fall. It cannot continue to preach democracy to the world and deny its principles to its own citizens. When coach Faurot of the University of Missouri refused to take part in a track meet with the University of Wisconsin team because the latter had a Negro on it, it did not hurt Wisconsin, but it did make Missouri University look small. It lowered the people of Missouri in the eyes and estimation of other cities. It caused others to see how little Missouri is.

If the appearance of colored citizens before the Senate committee serves in any way to help that committee to do its plain duty, the state will be pleased. But if these so-called statesmen blindly go ahead and pass the bill, Governor Lloyd C. Stark will have the opportunity to correct their mistake.

W. E. TAYLOR IS APPOINTED BY CURATORS

Permanent Location For Institution Remains To Be Decided

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 11—Organization of a law school at Lincoln university here moved a step nearer completion this week with the selection, Saturday by the Board of Curators of Lincoln university, of William Edwin Taylor as dean.

Dean Taylor, a normal graduate of Lincoln university in 1917, has since 1929 served as a professor of law at Howard university, and since 1935 has served as acting dean of the law school at that institution. He holds the bachelor of arts and the bachelor of laws degree from the University of Iowa.

Although the location of the law school has not been definitely settled at this time, it is likely that at least for the first year, the Lincoln university law school will be located in Jefferson City.

The law school, according to President Scruggs, will be organized in strict accordance with the standards as set forth by the Association of American Law Schools, accrediting body for American law schools.

Will Shafroth, chairman of the committee of legal education of the American Bar association, and Harold Shepherd, secretary of the American Association of American Law Schools, have been invited to Lincoln university to aid in the establishment of the law school.

Several other additions to the instructional staff of the university were announced by President Scruggs, following the meeting of the board of curators Saturday.

Dr. Scruggs announced the appointment of Carroll C. Damel as field secretary and assistant professor of education. Professor Damel is a son of the late Prof. J. W. Damel whose association with Lincoln university covered a period of 40 years. Damel Hall, the mechanic arts building, is named for the late Professor Damel.

30 STUDENTS REGISTER FOR STUDY DESPITE PROTEST OF ST. LOUIS ORGANIZATIONS

Members of Colored Clerk Circle and Youth Forum Insist Segregated School Deprives Negroes of Rights

ST. LOUIS — (Special) —Twenty-five pickets, protesting unequal educational opportunity, were slapped on the new Lincoln university law school in the old Poro college building Wednesday, Sept. 20, by the Colored Clerk Circle under the leadership of Frank M. Jones, its president.

The opening of the law school marked the culmination of a long fight on the part of certain newspapers of the state and numerous civic organizations who are protesting the "fraud" which has been set up by the state to satisfy the supreme court ruling which commanded Missouri to provide educational opportunities for Negro students equal to those for whites.

Started Last Winter

An unsuccessful fight was begun last winter in the general assembly when a bill introduced by Representative Taylor advocated the establishment of a separate law school for Negroes.

The Taylor bill passed both houses of the legislature and was signed by Governor Stark. To put the bill into effect, the legislature appropriated $200,000 for the establishment of the institution. Many leaders who fought the bill contended there were not sufficient funds to establish a law school equal to the one at the University of Missouri when the Columbia institution was allotted $3,000,000 to maintain an already established institution.

Lloyd Gaines set up the pins for the fight for equal education in Missouri when he sued after being denied admission to the Uni- 1936. After suffering defeat at the hands of the Boone county circuit court and the Missouri supreme court, Gaines finally won an appeal taken before the supreme court of the United States.

Equal Opportunities

The gist of the high court's opinion provided that the state of Missouri must provide equal educational opportunities for all of its citizens within its own borders either by establishing comparable separate schools within the state or by admitting all races of students to the state's school at Columbia. The state supreme court has concurred in this opinion and has remanded the case to the Boone county court for a retrial. It is now the duty of the court below to determine whether or not the Lincoln university law school which opened in St. Louis Wednesday is equal to the existing law school at the University of Missouri.

Dissatisfaction with the present setup of the law school has been expressed from time to time by various leaders of the state, chief among them being N. A. Sweets, publisher of the St. Louis American newspaper. It was Sweets who promoted the idea of picketting the law school and he reports that it is having desired effects.

Frank M. Jones, president of the Colored Clerks Circle, and field marshal of the picketting forces, told reporters Wednesday afternoon that his organization was prepared to continue the picketting until victory had been won.

Jones said such a school wa, "an insult to the Negro people" and that such a school was set up only to "defeat the ruling of the supreme court in the Gaines case."

Doors of New Department Shut After 5 Days

DURHAM, N. C.—(ANP) Last week, despite elaborate planning and preparations for the past year, despite a state appropriation of $14,000, a law library and a faculty composed of distinguished professors recruited from the University of North Carolina and Duke university, the law school of North Carolina College for Negroes closed its doors. Reason, only ONE qualified student enrolled.

The school opened on Sept. 25 and closed on Sept. 30, according to a statement by President James E. Shepard. Decision to postpone operation of the law school until September, 1940, was reached after a number of conferences among members of the faculty, the president, the college's board of trustees and Governor Clyde Hoey.

Fine Law Faculty

The lone student who had enrolled entered the graduate school of the college, it was explained, and will reenter the law school when it reopens. One of the best law faculties in the country had been made available to Negro students at N. C. C.'s law school. The staff had been recruited from the law faculties of Duke university and the University of North Carolina and included such distinguished scholars as Professors M. S. Breckenridge, John P. Dalzell, Fred B. McCall, Douglas Maggs, D. W. Markham and J.

Douglas Poteat.

The law school experiment at N. C. C. which had been widely heralded, had met with state-wide approval, encountered no opposition but still attracted only one student, is in marked contrast with a similar experiment being undertaken by the law school of Lincoln university, located in St. Louis' old Poro college building.

Controversy in Missouri

In the Missouri experiment, the State appropriated $200,000 for the colored law school which has been a controversial subject from the start. One group of objectors wants the law school housed at Lincoln U., in Jefferson City so that work may be provided for an enlarged Negro teaching staff, and another group insists on Negro students being admitted to the white University of Missouri Law school. This latter school was the storm center of theer Lloyd Gaines—U. of M. case, where Gaines, denied admission as a student, carried the case, through counsel, to the U. S. Supreme court, resulted in the High Court's famed decision of last December 8, ordering the State of Missouri to admit Gaines to U. of M., or "provide equal facilities for Negro students within the State."

The Lincoln university law school, opened recently in St. Louis was the direct result of that decision. As enrollment started, pickets paced back and forth in front of the school trying to persuade students not to sign. Despite this oppisition, however, the school opened on schedule, with more than 25 students registered.

Name Librarian And Secretary

ST. LOUIS. — (Special) —Thirty students began the study of law, Thursday, September 21, when the newborn school of law of Lincoln university opened its doors to those interested in age-old profession, on the first and mezzanine floors in the Poro building at Pendleton and St. Ferdinand avenues in St. Louis.

While others register to make a reality of their dreams of the opportunity to study law, the school's faculty, headed by Dean William E. Taylor, is carrying forward its plans to make the school one of the finest of the country.

NAME LUCAS TO FACULTY

ST. LOUIS.—Attorney Virgil H. Lucas, practicing attorney here for five years, has been named as the fourth member to the faculty of the Lincoln university law school. Attorney Lucas received his A. B. and LL. B. degrees from Howard university.

James C. Bush of Cleveland and Scovel Richardson of Chicago have already been elected to the faculty.

A native St. Louisan, Mrs. Alda Polkinghorne-Young was named last week as secretary to Dean Taylor, while Mrs. Constance Mapp Barbour of Washington, D. C., was elected law librarian.

Mrs. Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Polkinghorne of St. Louis, is a product of Banneker, Sumner and Stowe Teachers college. After graduation from Stowe, she taught for several years at the old Montgomery school, prior to her marriage.

Native of Washington

Mrs. Barbour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Mapp Sr., of Washington, D. C., after completing the public schools of Washington, was graduated from the Miner Teachers college of Washington. After a year of library work at Miner, she worked under Dean Taylor for a year at Howard university. Mrs. Barbour is a member of the National Educational association and of the Miner Teachers college alumni.

In a statement Wednesday, Dean Taylor expressed satisfaction at seeing a complete law school established in such a short time. "It has been a great job," he said, "but we are now ready with one of the finest law schools of the country." The dean, himself an honor graduate of the Iowa university law school, the recipient of numerous honorary laurels and with the background of several successful years of actual law practice and teaching of the same, said he has no ington university professor was of the opinion that no new law school had ever made such progress as the Lincoln university law school.

The dean vouched for the efficiency of Mrs. Young, and said Mrs. Barbour was selected largely because she is competent both as a librarian and as a secretary. He said it was difficult to find a qualified law librarian since there are only a few such persons in the country.

Richardson, who has charge of registration, told of the great interest being demonstrated by the new students, especially married women who are elated because of the opportunity to study law. Richardson told of one student who had chosen the new Lincoln school in preference to the law school at Howard.

Others interested in studying law may still contact Dean Taylor at the law school.

"apologies to make for his faculty, since both Richardson and Bush stand at the top of the profession as students and attorneys of law, fully qualified to teach even at Harvard."

"We haven't wasted the taxpayers money in the establishment of this school," Dean Taylor said, "neither have we had to stint since we have had full cooperation in the privilege of buying whatever was necessary in equipment. The salary level of our faculty is higher than 50 per cent of the 90 law schools of America."

Nineteen of 29 Who Enrolled at Lincoln Law School Still on Hand

Kansas City Mo.
Call 11-12-39

ST. LOUIS. — (Special) —Nineteen of the 29 students who enrolled this fall at the new Lincoln university law school in Poro building are still studying law, according to a statement to the Call by Dean William E. Taylor.

Of the 29 students who did enroll, the dean said 14 of them had college degrees, one had an M. A., eight the A. B. degree, while five had B. S. degrees. Dean Taylor said none of the students who enrolled had less than two years of college credit. The 29 students came from the following colleges: Miner Teachers college, Lincoln university, Jefferson City, Illinois State normal, Douglass university, West Virginia State college, Stowe Junior and Teachers college, East Illinois State college, Xavier university, University of Iowa, Talladega college, Paul Quinn college, and Columbia university.

Appointed To Committee

Dean Taylor was notified this week by Eppa F. Elliott, clerk of the Missouri Supreme court, that the court has appointed Dean Taylor as a member of a committee to assist in making amendments to the code of civil procedure which will speed up the trial of cases and reduce the cost of appeal. The first committee meeting will be held in the Supreme Court building in Jefferson City on December 2. The drafted resolutions will be presented to the next general assembly.

Will Shafroth, advisor to the section on legal education and admissions to the bar of the American Bar association, praised the progress that has been made by the new law school. In the letter sent recently to Lincoln university officials, Shafroth said:

Praises Progress

"I have just transmitted my report regarding the law school to the executive committee of the board of curators, to the gentlemen who accompanied me when I visited the school last month and to Dean Taylor. The report states that in respect to the library, the physical equipment, the number of full-time teachers, admission requirements and the length of course, the school fully complies with American Bar association requirements. These are what we term the external requirements, which can be definitely measured and ascertained. Compliance with these requirements at so early a date after the organization of the law school indicates that your university is making every effort to establish a law school of high standing.

"That I found this to be the case when I inspected the school was no surprise to me, because I knew at that time that some $30,000 had already been expended on the law school and that a man of ability and scholarly attainments had been secured as dean. I have known Mr. Taylor and been acquainted with his work for some eight years and in my opinion, he is the best selection you could have made for the deanship. As a teacher and as acting dean of the Howard university law school in Washington, which has been on our approved list since 1931 and which has been a member of the Association of American Law Schools during the same period, he has acquired a background in the best colored law school in the United States, which will be of great value to him. I am sure you agree with me that the speed with which he organized your law school in St. Louis shows his efficiency.

Time Will Tell

"By what I have said above, I do not intend to imply that the school at the present time is ready for approval by the American Bar association. Even more important than what I have termed our external requirements are the scholarship standards of the school, the quality of the teaching and its excellence as an educational institute. Whether or not it measures up in these respects can only be judged when the school has seasoned to some extent and become a more firmly established institution.

"I should like to say, however, on the basis of my inspection, that every effort is being made to establish a first-class school. The institution is not a make-shift in any respect, and anyone who visited when I did must fail to be impressed by what has been accomplished, and in the short space of two months. Though the opening of the school had only been announced in August, on the 28th of September there was an enrollment of 23 students in the first-year class, more than half of whom had college degrees. This enrollment is in excess of that of the first-year enrollment of Howard University Law School last year.

"I congratulate you on the start which has been made toward providing sound legal education for colored students in Missouri. You are at liberty to give this matter such publicity as you see fit."

"SELL-OUT" NEAR AS MISSOURI GOVERNOR HAND PICKS BOARD

Dissenting Members Fired From Board of Curators At Lincoln University — Small Appropriation Fought By Leaders.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 23—(Special)—According to reports coming from all parts of the State, Negroes of Missouri are getting ready to resist the efforts on the part of Governor Lloyd Stark and white politicians of Missouri to have so-called leaders of the race agree to a "sell-out" of the race in a compromise on Negro education that would be a distinct nose-thumbing at the order of the United States Supreme Court to the state of Missouri to either permit Lloyd Gaines to attend the University of Missouri at Columbia or to provide equal facilities within the state for his further education.

NEW BOARD OF CURATORS APPOINTED AT LINCOLN U.

Two "nasty" moves have been made during the past few days. One of these was the appointment of a new board of curators; the other was the slashing of the appropriation sought by officials of Lincoln university for the 1938-40 biennium. Both moves are causing bitter protest on the part of Negroes in all sections of the state.

Named to the new board of curators are three Negroes and three white members.

The white members are: Dr. F. L. McClure, president of Westminster college, Fulton; W. W. Frey, Mexico, lawyer, and Cliff Scruggs, Jefferson City. All of the new appointments will expire on January 1, 1943.

Negro members of the board are Dr. J. E. Jerry, Kansas City, succeeding Dr. William J. Tompkins, Kansas City, whose forced "resignation" has been rumored for the past three months, ever since the rendering of the Gaines decision; Frank L. Williams, principal of Vashon high school, St. Louis who succeeded Attorney Joseph L. Mc-Lemore of St. Louis, who is said to have maintained a silent but firm opposition to making Lincoln university a graduate school and C. C. Hubbard, Sedalia school principal, the only board member re-elected. It is reported that Prof. Hubbard attempted to resign but that his resignation was not accepted.

APPOINTMENTS MADE TO "SAVE" UNIVERSITY

Governor Stark claims that these appointments were made to save Lincoln university's accredited standing, it being pointed out that Lincoln is now on the probation list because an investigation by the North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, revealed politics to be the dominant factor on the board of curators. The time was fast approaching for Lincoln to be dropped from the list unless the college was taken out of politics.

Records of all of the board members, especially the Negro members, especially the Negro scanned by Negro leaders who charge that Governor Stark selected only those men whom he could handle and who would be favorably inclined toward the establishment of a graduate school for Negroes at Lincoln university.

Missourians recall that Dr. Perry was a member of the board of curators back in 1921 when Lincoln first became a university. He has served under every governor of Missouri since that time and it is alleged that, because of his wealth he has maintained a constant "colored citizens be dammed attitude," and has been largely responsible for the delay experienced in making Lincoln a full fledged university.

RECORD OF MEN ON BOARD OF CURATORS

Principal Williams of Vashon high school, St. Louis, is reputed to have acquired quite a bit of property but many look askance at his being placed on the board due to his silence in the Vashon site dispute. His silence was particularly noticeable when civic groups of St. Louis raised the indignant howl and went into court to win a fight that prevented St. Louis Board of Education from placing the new Waring elementary school in the back yard of Vashon high school. He also is believed to be a favorite of the governor who appointed him on his Negro Missouri Survey Commission, a group that foretold the recent sharecropper demonstration but which had no force to see that changes were made.

Prof. Hubbard, who has been secretary of the board, is believed to be too old and plastic to forcefully demand that the Negroes of Missouri be given that which they are justly entitled to.

Further bad faith is also being charged against Representative Taylor, author of the much disputed House Bill 195 which pretends to authorize the curators of Lincoln university to make that institution the "equivalent" of the University of Missouri, as ordered by the United States Supreme Court but which, at the same time, provides only $200,000 for that task.

TAYLOR DISPLAYS LACK OF REAL FAITH

Representative Taylor displays still more lack of real faith toward the Negroes of Missouri when he introduced a new appropriations bill, as chairman of the house appropriation committee, seeking $406,000 for the operation of Lincoln until 1940.

The sum asked by Taylor is $107,000 less than the $513,000 which President Sherman Scruggs stated was needed for the mere operation of Lincoln.

By no stretch of the imagination can the figure be made to include the $890,000 listed by President Scruggs for buildings and other equipment to make LINCOLN AN ACCREDITED UNDERGRADUATE INSTITUAION!

Further disregard for Negroes of Missouri is shown not only in the fact that Lincoln's appropriation, as recommended by Taylor, is less than any of the other state supported schools but that while Chairman of Appropriations Committee Taylor slashed the Lincoln university appropriation to $3,997,963 recommended for the University of Missouri is an increase over the amount asked for by officials of the school.

Contrasted with other recommended appropriations, Lincoln's $406,000 is small compared to Maryville Teachers $490,000; Warrensburg Teachers, $540,000; Cape Girardeau Teachers College, $495,000; Springfield Teachers College, $555,000 and Rolla School of Mines $917,500.

Even Debaters Can Dance, L. U. Students Find

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Three Chicago University Debating Union representatives "made themselves at home" when they came here last week for a wordy clash.

The group ate, slept, studied and danced with Lincoln students.

The three of them included one girl, Miss Louise Landman of New York, who has a rabbi as a father and two newspaper reporters as brothers. Walter Briggs of Columbus, Ohio, is the son of a trustee of Wiley College. The third member of the group, Dan Ridge, of Chicago, is a first-year law student.

In the informal debates and discussion Lincoln was represented by Leonard McConnell, William McKinney and Harold Holliday.

Bill Would Make L. U. Board Of Curators Non-Partisan

Call

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — A bill affecting the board of curators of Lincoln university was introduced in the lower house of the Missouri legislature Tuesday, February 14, by Representative H. P. Lauf of Jefferson City.

2-17-39

Bill Would

The bill would make the curators' board a non-partisan one, with the six-year terms of members expiring in different years.

Th measure increases the number of curators to nine and stipulates that at least four members must be Negroes. The present board has six members.

An emergency clause is attached to the bill so that it becomes effective immediately after passage.

The Bill:

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, as follows:

Section 1.—That Section 9619, of Chapter 37, Article 19, of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1929, relating to Lincoln university and to the tenure of office of the board of curators, be and the same is hereby repealed, and in lieu of said section two new sections enacted relating to the same subject and dealing with Lincoln university, tenure of office of the board of curators, and their ion said sections to know as Section 9619 anl Section 9619A, and to read as follows:

Section 9619.—The Board of Curators of Lincoln university of Missouri, which hereafter consists of nine members who shall be appoin ed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. No person shall be appointed a curator who shall not be a citizen of the United States and who shall not have been a resident of the State of Missouri two years next prior to his appointment. Not more than five curators shall belong to any one political party, at least four of the curators shall be Negroes.

Section 9619A.—The term of service of the curators shall be six years, the term of three expiring every two years, the first expiration occurring on the first day of January, 1942, and succeeding expirations of three members every two years thereafter. Said curators while attending the meeting of the board shall receive their actual expenses which shall be paid out of the ordinary revenues of the university.

Section 2.—It is specifically declared and determined by the Sixtieth General Assembly of Missouri that this bill shall be considered a revision bill, as provided for in Constitutional Amendment No. 2, Section 41, of Article 4, of the Constitution of the State of Missouri.

Section 3.—Since the status of Lincoln university in the regional accrediting associaton of educatonal institutions in this area is jeopardized because it is not administered by a board organized within the meaning of this article, therefore this act is neccessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety, and an emergency has been created and exists within the meaning of the Constitution of this state, and this act shall take effect, and be in full force and effect from and after its passage and approval.

Plan Greatest Expansion Program ever Started At Race Educational Institution

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—The State of Missouri last week took definite steps to comply with the December 8 ruling of the U. S. Supreme court in the now famed U. of Missouri-Lloyd Gaines case which held in effect that qualified Negro students should be enrolled at U. of M. or the state must provide "equal educational facilities within the state" for colored students.

Last Friday a bill authorizing the Board of Curators of Lincoln university, state institution for Negroes at Jefferson City, to expand the school's program and bring it to the standard of U. of M. was introduced in the legislature by Representative John D. Taylor of Charlton county.

Introduction of the bill followed a conference Thursday of members of the legislature, lawyers and officials and members of the board of Curators, U. of M. Pending completion of Lincoln U's expansion program, the curators would be authorized to pay the tuition of "qualified Negro residents" in colleges and universities of other states, offering courses of study now provided at U. of M.

Since the High Court's ruling two colored students have sought to enroll at U. of M., but were not accepted by officials on the ground that the test case has not been disposed of finally. Under the Taylor bill Lincoln U's curators "shall be authorized and requested to reorganize the institution so that it shall afford to the Negro people of the state an opportunity for training up to the standard furnished at the state University of Missouri."

The bill provides authority for the curators to establish any new school, department or course of instruction, to purchase necessary additional land, erect new buildings and provide additional equipment at Lincoln, U. How much this program will cost is a matter of speculation, some observers setting the figure at between two and three million dollars. At any rate, it will concededly be one of the greatest expansion programs ever started at a colored educational institution.

Missouri Supreme Court Decision Neither Opens Nor Shuts Doors of M.U.

Leaves Them Ajar, So That If Law School at Lincoln U. Does Not Measure Up, Negroes Will Be Admitted

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. —The supreme court of Missouri handed down this week an opinion reversing the decision of the Boone county circuit court rendered originally in the Lloyd Gaines case in which Gaines was seeking admission to the University of Missouri Law school.

This latest action in the famous University of Missouri case is in conformity with the opinion of the U.S. Supreme court, delivered last December 12.

The state's highest court by its opinion does not order the University to admit Gaines to its law school, but does not shut the university to him. It takes notice of the fact that the State of Missouri, since the U.S. supreme court opinion, has directed the establishment of a law school for Negroes at Lincoln university, and has appropriated a sum of $200,000 for this purpose.

Must Compare Schools

The court holds in its opinion that it cannot decide at this date whether the law school to be established at Lincoln university is the equal of the law school at the University of Missouri. It holds that this question must come before the trial court and be decided upon its merit after the school is established.

The supreme court's present opinion holds that if the lower court should find as a fact that the new established law school at Lincoln is not "substantially equivalent" to the facilities offered at the University of Missouri then the writ must issue.

The judgment of the Boone circuit court was the original decision in the Gaines case, and denied him a writ of mandamus compelling the University to admit him. From this decision an appeal was taken to the Missouri supreme court which affirmed the denial of the writ. From this decision an appeal was taken to the U.S. supreme court which reversed the Missouri supreme court.

Accords With High Courts

Reargument of the case before the Missouri supreme court was held May 22, with Charles H. Houston, of the New York office of the N.A.A.C.P., and Sidney R. Redmond, of St. Louis, member of the national legal committee, appearing for Gaines.

The present opinion of the state supreme court reverses its affirmation of the denial of the writ by the Boone circuit court, and remands the case to the circuit court for further proceedings.

The opinion said in part:

"Respondents (the State of Missouri) urge that Sec. 9618, supra, as amended, (the new law directing the establishment of a law school at Lincoln university) makes proper provision for relator's legal training within the borders of the state, and affords him an opportunity for such instruction equal to that available to whites at the University of Missouri; and that, by invoking the rule of law presuming right acting on the part of officers charged with a mandatory duty under a statute (i.e., the curators of Lincoln will perform their legal duty to establish a school of law equal to the one in the University of Missouri) appellant's constitutional rights will have been satisfied, and, therefore, the writ should be denied.

Although expressly conceding that the new act 'eliminates the discretion left to the curators and places on the curators an unconditional obligation to open new schools and new departments,' appellant (Gaines) says, 'But assuming, for the purpose of argument only that the curators did create some sort of a law school by September, 1939, this court could not determine by judicial notice whether such law school satisfied the constitutional requirement of equal protection of the laws. That would be a matter of evidence to be presented to and weighed first in the trial court.' In this we think appellant (Gaines) correct.

"The Supreme Court of the United States said of former section 9618: 'It appears that the policy of establishing a law school at Lincoln university has not yet ripened into an actual establishment and it cannot be said that a mere declaration of purpose, still unfulfilled, is enough.'

Must Be Equivalent

"We are unwilling to undertake to determine the constitutional adequacy of the provision now made for relator's legal education within the borders of the state by the expedient of coupling judicial notice with a presumption of law. Orderly procedure requires that the question be submitted to, and determined by the trial court in the first instance. If the facilities at Lincoln university, to be available at the commencement of the next fall term, which is in September, are in fact substantially equivalent to those afforded at Missouri university, the writ should be denied; otherwise it must issue, as a denial under those circumstances would amount to an arbitrary exercise of direction. The judgment is, accordingly, reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity with the views herein expressed."

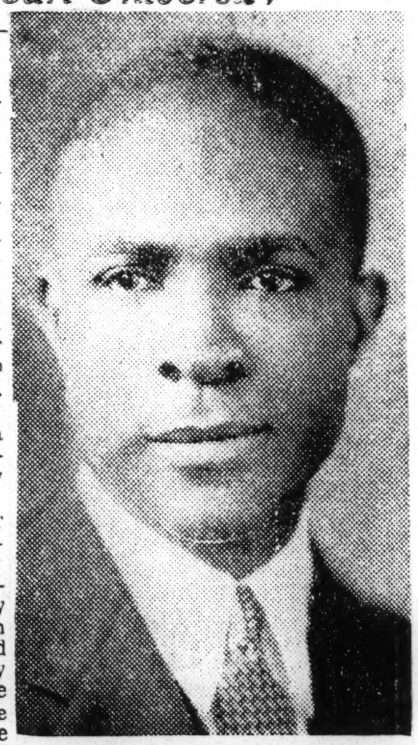
Dean Taylor Says School Will Accommodate 60 Students; Claims Facilities to Equal Those at Missouri University



DEAN W. E. TAYLOR

ST. LOUIS. — (Special) — Lincoln unversity's law school, affording a library of 10,000 to 10,500 new volumes of law, with four faculty members, and with a curriculum directed to meet the requirements of the Association of American Law Schools and the American Bar association, will open September 20 and will be ready for occupancy August 21, at the Poro college building, Pendleton and St. Ferdinand.

Dean William E. Taylor, in a special interview with a representative of The Call, outlined briefly plans for the school.

Facilities have been leased for 10 years, with an option for increase in space should requirement demand. Four teachers will comprise the first faculty. A library of 10,000 to 10,500 volumes has been provided for in the budget and approximately 8,000 have already been packed for delivery to the school premises. "This," said the law school head, "will make the school equally as good as that of Missouri U.'s with the exception that all law class rooms will not open directly onto the library."

The library will have every reported document of England and America, according to the dean.

Sixty students will be accommodated. They must have two years of college work and preferably should have received degrees from accredited institutions. Students living in Missouri long enough to have established residence will be admitted without tuition.

Taylor said: "As an old Missourian and graduate of schools here I am very anxious that this thing go over in a big way. This is an unusual time. I recognize the fact that persons have been hostile to the idea, but I hope for the full cooperation of all, as well as of the press. Within 60 days a law school, one that will meet all the most stringent requirements, will be established."

Places in St. Louis convenient for establishing a school were investigated last Wednesday by President Sherman D. Scruggs of Lincoln university.

Dr. Scruggs said there was not enough space at Lincoln university in Jefferson City, and St. Louis offered advantages for students in contact with practicing lawyers and proximity to two white university law schools whose faculty members might be available as part-time lecturers.

Dean Taylor comes to Lincoln U. from the acting deanship of the Howard university law school. He holds these degrees: A.B., L.L. D., and J.D.

William E. Taylor is a native of Mississippi. He was graduated from Lincoln U. in 1917 and received his law degree from the University of Iowa in three years. Taking the bar examination in 1923 he passed and became part of a firm with Attorney Howard. He commuted between Des Moines and Chicago. In 1934 he was part of the law firm of James, Cashin and Dickinson and was title examiner for Cook county, Ill.

Dean Taylor taught at Howard from 1929 to 1938 and is now on an unconditional leave of absence. From 1929 to 1932 he was assistant professor of law; from 1932 to 1939, professor, and from 1935 to '39, acting dean.

He belongs to the Order of the Coif, highest honorary organization in the field of law. He was the only Negro member of the council on property and status of the American Bar Association and also of the committee on tenure.

The new dean's wife, Mrs. Pearl Mildred Taylor, prominent musician, will join him in St. Louis.

LINCOLN U. LAW SCHOOL TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 20

New Unit Will Be Housed in Poro Building

Washington, D.C.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The newly created law school of Lincoln University will be housed in the Poro College building at Pendleton and St. Ferdinand with a law library of 10,000 to 15,000 books, it was learned here, this week.

Dean William E. Taylor said the faculty will be composed of four members and the curriculum will meet the requirements of the Association of American Law Schools and the American Bar Association. The school will open on September 20.

Accommodate 60 Students

The library, according to Dean Taylor, will have every reported document of England and the United States. The school can accommodate sixty students who have had at least two years of college work. Preference will go to those who have received their degrees in accredited institutions.

Students who have lived in Missouri long enough to have established residence will be admitted without tuition.

Dr. Sherman D. Scruggs, president of Lincoln University, at Jefferson City, Mo., said that there was not enough space at the university proper to accommodate the law school. St. Louis, offered advantages for students in contact with practicing attorneys and in proximity to two white universities whose faculty members might be available as part-time lecturers.

LAW PROF.

Attorney Scovel Richardson, Chicago, was named last week as associate professor of the new law schol of Lincoln University, Missouri, which will be opened for the first time this month with Dr. William E. Taylor as dean. The law school was set up by the State of Missouri as a result of the attempts of Negroes to gain admission to the State University. Lincoln's law school will be located in the Poro College building in St. Louis.—ANP.

Mo. Law School Meets Bar Ass'n Approval

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 1 (ANP)—The new Lincoln university law school opened in September in the old Poro college building, has complied fully with American Bar association requirements and is therefore an accredited institution, it was announced to the Lincoln board of curators last week by Will Shafroth, advisor to the section of the association on legal education and admissions to the bar.

Praising the admistration of Dean Louis E. Taylor, Shafroth said he found the library, physical equipment, number of full time teachers, admission requirements, length of course and number of students "entirely satisfactory" and asserted the institution was not makeshift in any respect.

PETITIONS URGE LEGISLATORS TO DEFEAT MEASURE

City Flooded With Requests That Law-Makers Fail to Pass Bill Which Would Add Graduate Courses at L. U.

Call 2-17-39 Kansas City Mo.

The city is being flooded with petitions against House Bill 195 pertaining to Lincoln university, now pending in the lower house of the Missouri legislature.

The petitions, which will be circulated throughout the city for the signatures of thousands of citizens and voters, urge legislators to vote against the bill when it comes upon the floor of the house for consideration. The bill, introduced January 3, by John D. Taylor, of Charlton county, is now in committee.

Addressed to "Our Legislators," the petition reads:

"We, the undersigned voters, strongly urge you, our representatives in the sixtieth Missouri legislature now in session at Jefferson City, to vote against House Bill 195, dealing with Lincoln university. We oppose and urge the defeat of the bill for the reasons set forth in the articles printed on this petition."

On the petition are two editorials taken from The Call, "Two Schools, Double Costs," from the February 10 issue, and "Neither Fair Nor Decent," from the February 17 issue.

The petitions have been placed in the hands of ministers, who will ask members of their congregations to sign them Sunday. They are in the offices of the Paseo Y. W. C. A., the Paseo Y. M. C. A., the Urban League, 1408 the Paseo; the People's Finance corporation, The Call office, drug stores and other public places, so that all who oppose the bill may signify their opposition by their signatures.

Provides No Funds

House Bill 195, against which citizens are protesting, provides that "the board of curators of Lincoln university shall be required to reorganize said institution so that it shall afford to the Negro people of the state opportunity for training up to the standard furnished by the University of Missouri."

It authorizes the curators to "purchase necessary additional buildings, to open and establish any new school, department or course of instruction, to provide necessary additional equipment and to locate the respective units of the university wherever in the state of Missouri in their opinion the various schools will most effectively promote the purposes of this article."

The bill makes no provisions for the appropriation of funds to carry out its terms.

The bill further provides that "pending the full development of Lincoln university, the board of curators shall have the authority... to arrange for the attendance of any qualified Negro at a college or university in some other state.... and to pay the reasonable tuition fees for such attendance."

Not Granting Full Rights

The Supreme court decision in the Gaines case specified that in paying tuition outside the state, the state of Missouri is not granting Negro citizens their full rights.

House bill 195 was introduced four days after a Negro attempted to enter the University of Missouri in compliance with the December opinion of the U. S. supreme court in the Lloyd Gaines case. Gaines, a St. Louis graduate of Lincoln university, sued for the right to enter the Missouri U. law school. The supreme court granted him that right, saying that the state of Missouri must admit Gaines to Missouri U. in the absence of a law school for Negroes within the state.

The petition is being circulated by members of The Call staff, members of the N. A. A. C. P. branch of which Elmore Williams is president, by the local council of the National Negro Congress, of which Miss Elsie M. Mountain is president, and by clubs and other organizations.

Opposition to the bill is based upon the premises that Lincoln university as an undergraduate school is not up to the standard of Missouri university's undergraduate school and the graduate and professional schools which would be established there would not equal those at Columbia.

It has been estimated that at least $1,000,000 is needed at Lincoln U. to bring it up to par with Missouri university's undergraduate schools.

Lincoln Gets 3 Negro Curators

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Mar. 30—Governor Stark appointed three Negroes on the new Lincoln university Board of Curators, it was announced last week. The board's three other members are white.

The new appointees are Frank L. Williams, principal of the Vashon high school, St. Louis; Dr. J. E. Perry, physician and surgeon of Kansas City and C. C. Hubard, principal of the Lincoln high school in Sedalia.

The governor's action, it was pointed out, has opened the way for Lincoln university to be restored to the list of colleges accredited by the North Centeral Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

An investigation last year by the North Central Association revealed that the board of directors at Lincoln figured too preeminently in politics and the university was placed on the probation list.

DR. J. E. PERRY ONLY KANSAS CITY CURATOR

The Call

Replaces W. J. Thompkins; C. C. Hubbard Only Old Member Reappointed

3-17-39

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. —Governor Stark picked three educators, a physician, a lawyer and a business man—none with political leanings—to form the new board of curators for Lincoln university which he announced Wednesday, March 15.

The new curators, three Negroes and three white persons are:

DR. J. EDWARD PERRY, physician and surgeon of Kansas City.

FRANK L. WILLIAMS, principal of the Vashon high school in St. Louis.

C. C. HUBBARD, principal of the Lincoln high school in Sedalia.

DR. F. L. McCLURE, white, president of the Westminister college, Fulton.

CLIF SCRUGGS, white, owner of a lumber business in Jefferson City.

W. WALLACE FRY, white, lawyer of Mexico.

Lloyd King, state superintendent of schools, is an ex-officio member of the board.

The new board of curators will hold its first meeting Friday morning March 17, at 9:30 o'clock in Jefferson City for the purpose of organization.

Mr. Hubbard is the only member of the old board who was reappointed.

Those retiring from the board are:

Attorney Joseph L. McLemore, St. Louis, chairman of the board, who resigned.

Dr. William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds of Washington, D.C., who resigned.

L. B. Boler, Cape Girardeau, whose term expired.

Dr. J. D. Elliff, professor at the University of Missouri, Columbia, whose term expired.

S. D. Bedford, white, Jefferson City, whose term expired.

Mr. Hubbard submitted his resignation from the board, but the governor refused to accept it.

Governor Stark named Dr. McClure to succeed Dr. Elliff, Attorney Fry to succeeded Mr. Boler, Mr. Scruggs to succeed Mr. Bedford, Dr. Perry to succeed Dr. Thompkins and Mr. Williams to succeed Attorney McLemore.

With the appointment of the new board, Governor Stark has opened the way for Lincoln university to be restored to the list of colleges accredited by the North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

Lincoln U. was placed on the probation list last year and an investigation by the North Central Association found politics to be too dominant a factor on the board of directors.

The time was nearing when the school would be dropped from the accredited list unless some move was taken to take the college out of politics.

Member of First Board

In naming Dr. J. E. Perry a curator, Governor Stark returns to the board a man who served as a member of the first board of curators appointed when Lincoln became a university in 1921. Dr. Perry, first appointed by Governor Hyde, has served under every governor since then. He was reappointed by Governor Baker, Governor Caulfield and his term extended over into the administration of Governor Park. He left the board when Governor Park made several political appointments during the last years of his administration.

A fighter through the years for equal education for Negro youth in Missouri, Dr. Perry believes that a university can be built only on high ideals and principles. "I have no preferences," he says, "except merit."

Clif Scruggs, Jefferson City lumber man, also is a former member of the board. Mr. Scruggs owns the largest lumber business in the county. He is well thought of by the Negro citizens of the capital city.

Has Liberal Attitude

Attorney Fry of Mexico is a former president of the Missouri Bar Association and is believed to have been chosen as a curator because of his liberal attitude.

Mr. Williams, principal of the Vashon high school in St. Louis, was chairman of the Governor's Commission to Survey the Needs of Negroes of Missouri. He has been in the school system of St. Louis for many years and is one of the active leaders in the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. He also is a member of the Missouri State Association of Teachers.

Mr. Hubbard has been principal of the Lincoln high school in Sedalia for many years and is recognized as the No. 1 citizen of Sedalia. He served as secretary of the retiring board of curators.

The term of Dr. Perry, Mr. Williams and Mr. Hubbard expire on January 1, 1941. The terms of Dr. McClure, Attorney Fry and Mr. Scruggs expire January 1, 1943.

A bill is now pending in the house of representatives of the legislature which would increase the membership of the board to nine. The curators would be appointed for six-year terms, the terms of three members expiring every two years.

Negro Education—Governor Stark of Missouri has signed a bill to bring the standards of Lincoln University up to the level of the University of Missouri, in order to meet the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Gaines case, ruling that Negroes must be admitted to the university in the absence of other equal educational facilities in the state. Governor Stark stated that schools for training in law, medicine, dentistry, engineering, and other professions should be established immediately by the new board of curators of Lincoln University. The new board of nine members must, under the measure creating it, include at least four Negro members, and not more than five can be from one political party. The curators will serve six-year terms.... In Georgia, in what is generally considered a move to keep Negroes from applying for admission to the state university system in accordance with the decision in the Gaines case, Attorney General Ellis Arnall has ruled that "white teachers cannot legally teach Negro children in the public schools of Georgia."

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 27—(ANP)—President Sherman D. Scruggs of Lincoln university and two other officials were named in a suit filed against them in circuit court here Monday by J. O. Brown, chef at the institution.

Mr. Brown charges that President Scruggs, Mrs. Myrtle Bowen and Harry H. Mrs. Bowen is director of the university cafeteria, and Mr. Williams is a proctor of one of the dormitories.

Brown alleges in his petition that the defendants presented affidavits damaging his character and causing him to lose his position, for which he asks $10,000 and costs of the case.

CASE REMANDED TO DETERMINE ON LINCOLN U.

Says Gaines Must Be Admitted If School Lacks

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.— All justices of the State Supreme court excepting Justice Hays who was absent concurred in findings Tuesday in remanding for trial the question of determining the adequacy of the law school scheduled to open at Lincoln this fall. The high court declined to pass on whether the school to be established under an act of the recent legislature complies with the requirements of the U. S. Supreme Court decision last December in the Lloyd Gaines case. The highest tribunal held that Negroes must be admitted to the graduate schools at Missouri U., or equivalent schools made for them at Lincoln U.

The case will go to the Boone County Circuit Court for determination of the adequacy of provisions made for the Lincoln Law School.

The 1939 Legislature appropriated $200,000 for the establishment of a law school at Lincoln and the Lincoln curators ordered President Sherman Scruggs to proceed with plans to open the school next fall.

Opinion Given

Judge C. A. Leedy, who wrote Tuesday's opinion said:

"We are unwilling to undertake to determine the constitutional adequacy of the provision now made for relator's legal education within the borders of the State by the expedient of coupling judicial notice with a presumption of law. Orderly procedure requires that the question be submitted to, and determined by the trial court in the first instance. If the facilities at Lincoln University, to be available at the commencement of the next school term, which is in September, are in fact substantially equivalent to those afforded at Missouri University, the writ should be denied; otherwise it must issue, as a denial under those circumstances would amount to an arbitrary exercise of discretion. The judgment, accordingly, reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity with the views therein expressed."

High Court Acted

The Circuit Court and State Supreme Court ruled against Gaines, but he obtained a reversal in the United States Supreme Court, which held he was entitled to admittance to the University of Missouri law school, "in the absence of other and proper provision for his legal training within the State."

The 1939 Legislature put through an act, with an emergency clause, authorizing and diversity to reorganize the school, to provide educational opportunities equal to those of the University of Missouri and the board recently established a law school, to open in September.

Existence of this law, and the order for establishment of the school, were urged in connection with a second argument of the case before the State Supreme Court on questions on which it was remanded from the highest court, as meeting the requirements.

Gaines filed for entrance to the school more than two years ago.

TRIAL JUDGE TO RULE ON ADEQUACY OF LAW SCHOOL BEING SET UP AT LINCOLN

Whether Taylor Bill Meets Requiremets of U. S. Supreme Court Decision to Be Argued at Columbia

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—The Missouri supreme court Tuesday sent the Gaines case back to the Boone county circuit court, the justices being unwilling to determine whether adequate law facilities will be available at Lincoln university by September or whether Negroes should be admitted to the University of Missouri.

The decision as to where Lloyd Gaines will attend law school in the fall now rests with the trial court which first denied Gaines the right to enter Missouri U.

The question to be decided is whether through the Taylor bill the state has met the requirements set down by the U. S. supreme court in the Gaines decision of last December.

The Taylor bill, passed by the state legislature last spring and signed by the governor on May 4, provides that a law school and other professional and graduate courses be established at Lincoln university. The Lincoln U. board of curators has ordered President Sherman D. Scruggs to have a law school ready for opening on September 1.

Will School Be Equal?

Will the law school at Lincoln U. be equal to the law school at the University of Missouri?

This is the question which the state supreme court has given to the Boone county circuit court to decide. If the court decides that the Lincoln U. law school meets the requirements of the U. S. supreme court, then Gaines will be denied a writ of mandamus which he sought to gain entrance to Missouri U. If the L. U. law school is not equal to the Missouri U. law school, then by law Gaines should be granted the right to enter M. U. according to the U. S. supreme court decision.

In sending the Gaines case back to the trial court, the supreme court of Missouri stated:

"We are unwilling to undertake to determine the constitutional adequacy of the provision now made for Gaines' legal education within the borders of the state. Orderly procedure requires that the question be submitted to and determined by the trial court in the first instance.

"If the facilities at Lincoln university to be available at the commencement of the next school term, which is in September, are in fact substantially equivalent to those afforded at the University of Missouri, the writ should be denied; otherwise, it must issue, as a denial under those circumstances would amount to an arbitrary exercise of discretion."

The U. S. supreme court handed down its momentous decision last December 12, granting Lloyd Gaines the right to enter Missouri U "in the absence of other and proper provision for his legal training within the state."

May Go To U. S. Court

To halt the entrance of Negroes into Missouri U., John D. Taylor, Chariton county representative in the legislature, introduced a bill providing for the establishment at Lincoln U. of a law school and other courses which Negroes might desire. Despite the opposition of Negro citizens, the bill was rushed through both houses of the legislature and signed by Governor Stark.

It became law and in accordance with that law, the Lincoln U. board of curators plan to have a law school ready by the opening of the fall term.

Whether that school is adequate to give the Negro law student the legal training equal to that received by white students at M. U. is the issue which the trial court must decide.

The whole case may be taken back to the U. S. supreme court for a decision on the Taylor bill.

William E. Taylor Named Dean of L. U. Law School

Member of Howard U. Faculty Elected To Head Professional Course Being Established at Jeff City

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—The organization of the newly proposed law school of Lincoln university, is now one step nearer realization with the selection Saturday by the board of curators of Lincoln university of William Edwin Taylor as dean.

Dean Taylor, a normal graduate of Lincoln university in 1917, has since 1929 served as a professor of law at Howard university, and since 1935 has served as acting dean of the law school at that institution. He holds the bachelor of arts and the bachelor of laws degree from the University of Iowa.

Although the location of the law school has not been definitely settled at this time, it is likely that at least for the first year, the Lincoln universiy law school will be located in Jefferson City.

The law school, according to President Scruggs, will be organized in strict accordance with the standards as set forth by the Association of American Law schools accrediting body for American law schools.

Will Shafroth, chairman of the committee of legal education of the American Bar association, and Harold Shepherd, secretary of the American Association of American Law schools, have been invited to Lincoln university to aid in the establishment of the law school.

Both of these eminent legal authorities will visit Lincoln university during the last of this month and early in September.

New Lincoln Law School Gets Dean

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—(ANP)—Missouri university's ban against Negro students was again upheld by the state supreme court sitting en banc Saturday on the grounds that a law school was being established at Lincoln University and it would first have to be determined if these facilities are substantially equivalent to those afforded at the University of Missouri.

At the same time, it was announced that William Edwin Taylor, who since 1935 has served as acting dean of the Howard University law school, has been named dean of the Lincoln law school scheduled to open in September.

The supreme court Tuesday in an opinion prepared by Judge C. A. Leedy, Jr., sent back to the Boon County Circuit court the proceedings by which Lloyd Gaines of St. Louis sought entrance to Missouri U. This is the original jurisdiction of the famous case. Boon county must hold future hearings to determine the rights of Negroes under the new Taylor bill creating the Lincoln law department.

RUSH THRU BILL

After the Gaines case went to the U. S. supreme court and was returned to the state high court following the ruling that Gaines must receive equal educational facilities within Missouri's borders, new hearings were held here. But meanwhile, the Taylor bill had been rushed through the state legislature. So Missouri U. attorneys argued that sufficient provision was now made at Lincoln for Gaines' education.

"We are unwilling to undertake to determine the constitutional adequacy of the provision now made for Gaines' legal education within the borders of the state," said the opinion rendered Tuesday. "Orderly procedure requires that the question be submitted to and determined by the trial court in the first instance.

"If the facilities at Lincoln university to be available at the commencement of the next school term, which is in September, are in face substantially equivalent to those afforded at the University of Missouri, the writ (of mandamus) should be denied; otherwise, it must issue, as a denial under those circumstances would amount to an arbitrary exercise of discretion."

UP TO STANDARD?

William Edwin Taylor, dean of the new law school at Lincoln, was a normal graduate there in 1917 and holds bachelor of arts and bachelor of laws degrees from the University of Iowa. He has been teaching law at Howard since 1929.

President Scruggs said the new school will be organized in strict accordance with standards set forth by the American Association of American Law schools and that Will Shafreth, white, chairman of the legal education committee of the American Bar association and Harold Shepherd, white, secretary of the American Association of American law schools have been invited to Lincoln to help start the new school.

St. Louis Youth Forum Pickets Lincoln Law School Located In Poro Building

20 Register When Doors Open For Enrollment: Howard Dean Has Difficulties

Placards Say School Is Makeshift

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(ANP)—Last Wednesday, despite picketing by St. Louis Youth Forum members, the new Lincoln University School of Law, located here in the old Poro college building, 4300 St. Ferdinand avenue, opened its doors for student enrollment, the first 20 registered being mainly from the section around St. Louis.

Dean William E. Taylor, formerly of Howard U., in charge of registration, said that applicants would be accepted until next Wednesday, but that late registrants, without adequate excuse, would have to pay the $5 late registration fee. Some applicants last Wednesday were persuaded not to enroll by the pickets, later phoned Dean Taylor, saying they had been told the school was to close. The dean told them it was to remain open.

Signs carried by the pickets proclaimed the law school a "makeshift" compliance with the U. S. supreme court decision (last Dec. 8), which ordered the state to admit Negro students to the University of Missouri, or "provide equal facilities for Negroes within the state."

Those sponsoring the picketing want colored students admitted to the white University of Missouri, declare the picketing will continue indefinitely. The new law school at Poro was established under a $200,000 appropriation by the State for expansion of the facilities at Lincoln. Classes started on Thursday. So far, only first year students have enrolled, but applications have been received for the full three-year course. Dean Taylor said he hopes to have the advanced classes under way this year.

S LINCOLN U. LAW SCHOOL ANY GOOD?

'ITS ALL RIGHT'

Says Bar Association Officer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 13—Will Shafroth, chairman of the section of legal education of the American Bar Association, following an examination of Lincoln university School of Law at St. Louis, Thursday, Sept. 28, reported that the school "was now worthy of admission to probationary status among the approved schools of the association." 10-14-39

His appraisal was made after a very critical survey and evaluation of the physical plant, faculty, the students enrolled, the curriculum, the library, the whole of the university, the records and the like."

The school of law is to undergo another appraisal soon by the Examiner from the Association of American Law Schools, the highest rating body for law schools in America.

'LET COURT DECIDE'

Declares The N. A. A. C. P.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—The court and not the legislature of Missouri, must decide the law school recently opened at Poro college in St. St. Louis, meets the requirements laid down by the United States supreme court, of equal educational facilities for the Race within the state.

This was the statement issued here Oct. 2, by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's committee on administration, in connection with proposed action in the Lloyd Gaines case.

Gaines won a victory before the United States Supreme Court December 12, 1938, when the high court ruled that he had to be admitted to the University of Missouri law school 'in the absence of other proper provision for his legal training within the state."

Since that time, however, the legislature of Missouri has appropriated $200,000 for a law school in St. Louis for Race students.

The school, which opened this week, despite a vigorous picketing campaign, is housed in the building formerly occupied by the Poro hair products company. The association will therefore move for a rehearsing of the Gaines case in the trial court of Missouri, where the case was first heard.

West, Howard University, who had completed the two terms in office allowed by the Constitution.

The deans accepted the invitation of North Carolina State College to convene there next year. A second invitation came from Prairie View State College. Hope was expressed that Prairie View would repeat the invitation next year so that the Association might meet year after next in Texas.

N. Y. A. SERVES NEGRO YOUTH

The Division of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration was established in 1935 with the beginning of the entire NYA program. Two nationally known Negro educators were members of the National Advisory Committee and sat in on the first deliberations with the President of the United States.

This Division has insured the active integration and participation of Negroes in the NYA program from the beginning. There are now twenty-three State Supervisors of Negro Activities in twenty-three state offices and approximately five hundred or more project supervisors throughout the country. There are sixty-five Negro members on State Advisory Committees in twenty-seven states, the District of Columbia, and New York City In addition, there are three states with special State Negro Committees. Local committees with Negro representation are stablished throughout the country in the planning of local Negro projects.

NYA Employment Figures

According to the 1930 census, Negroes represent 9.7 per cent of the total population. Negro youth represent 10.9 per cent of the youth between the ages of 15 and 24. In March, 1939, it is estimated that approximately 65,400 Negro youth were employed on the Student Aid and Work Programs of the NYA out of a total employment of 614,000. This represents 10.6 per cent Negro youth on the NYA program. Of this number, 36,900 are NYA school, college and graduate students and 28,500 are employed on the Work Program.

Student Aid

Under the 1938-39 College and Graduate Aid Program, 113 Negro colleges received an allotment of $420,420. A special Negro college and graduate aid fund of $100,000 was also distributed to almost 600 college and graduate students who otherwise would not have been included in the regular college and graduate quotas. This makes a total of $520,420 which went directly to Negro students within the NYA College and Graduate Aid Program. In addition, Negro youth received Student Air from the regular fund allotment in colleges open to both white and colored students. Of the 36,900 Negro Student Aid recipients, 6,700 were receiving College and Graduate Aid.

MRS. MARY Mc. BETHUNE

NYA Negro Students Win Honors

Negro students participating in the National Youth Administration's Student Aid Program not only keep pace with but also, in many instances, excel other students both scholastically and in extracurricular activities, it was announced today by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Director of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration. A survey of outstanding Negro institutions revealed that many NYA students have won the highest scholastic honors, have been elected to and hav received the most coveted selected for important positions, ed school or college awards.

"This survey", said Mrs. Bethune, "was conducted in order that we might learn to what extent Negro students were really taking advantage of the opportunities offered them through the National Youth Administration. The results of the survey are most gratifying and indicate definitely that the Federal Government's money has been well invested in these NYA students".

At Kentucky State College for Negroes, this NYA survey showed, Louise Comer, who as NYA worker was assistant librarian, graduated Magna Cum Laude in 1939. She was also a member of the Honorary Society. At the same college Hubert Clay, Susa Cunningham, Margaret Ryan and William Stovall received Departmental Honors. At Lincoln University in Missouri Ethel Rhodes graduated Summa Cum Laude June 1939; Gertrude Whitley graduated Magna Cum Laure; Pauline Combs, Harold Holliday and Colette Logan graduated Cum Laude. All were NYA workers at the university.

NYA student Sallye M. Bell, at Miles Memorial college, Birmingham, received her B. A. degree with honors. Paul Von Henderson, NYA student of the same with honors. Lucille Henry, in school, also received his B. A. addition to receiving her B. A. with honors. was a member of both the Debating Society and the Varsity Debating Team, and received a key in debating last year. Barbara Browne of Selma University in Alabama won the Tyler Medal for 1939 in the oratorical contest and was also President of the BYPU. Lucille White of the same university was President of the YWCA and graduated with the highest honors of her class.

At State A. & M. Institute in Alabama NYA student Lucindia Bullard made an "A" average for the second uarter, and the following NYA workers were members of the Varsity Debating Team for three years: Mamie Goins, Gwendolyn Roper, Sadie Sparks, Richmond Bell. Anne Smith.

At Stillman Iinstitute, Alabama the secretary of the dramatic club member of the college choir, class poet, and student with the leading rol in the class play last year was Emma Alexander, an NYA worker. Bernard Brown, NYA student of the same school, was Vice-president of the Athletic club. Ruviel Jones of Stillman not only was on the college honor roll during the year, but was Chairman of the Social Service Committee of the YWCA and was an active member of the Negro Literature club. Ruth Roulhac had the third highest average of all students in the junior college and was a member of the college sextette. Geneva Williamson had the highest two year average of all students in the junior college. Ledell Virdure, in addition to his NYA duties, was captain of the football team for two consecutive years, was President of the 4-H club and Secretary of the Atheltic club. In the high school department of the same school NYA worker Edgar Roulhac had the fourth highest average of the graduating seniors, was elected business manager of the school paper and Secretary of the YMCA for the year. Jon O. Taylor graduated with the highest honors of the high school department. "In this group of NYA students," Mrs. Bethune said, "we find an encouraging mixture of scholastic honors attained and participation in extracurricular affairs."

Margaret B. Bush of Talladega, another Alabama university, was held out by the NYA survey as an outstanding example of the successful NYA student. She was chosen by the Julia Derricotte Memorial Foundation as the recipient of a scholarship granted this year to two Negro women undergraduate students to study in India and other countries of the Orient. She sailed from New York May 3rd for Southhampton. Her trip includes London, Paris, Marseilles, Port Said and Cairo, Egypt, Colombo and other points in Ceylon, China and Japan. During July and August she studied at Santineeketan Tagore's university. From September to December she will pursue courses at the University of Calcutta. She will return from Yokahoma to San Francisco in time to finish her school work and graduate from Talladega in the spring 1940.

Spelman College, Atlanta, Ga., has its share ofsuccessful NYA students. Grace E. Days, '39, received the Seymour Finney Prize, given to the graduating senior with the highest scholarship. Ollie May Franklin, '40, was awarded the Lucy Upton Prize, given to the student who stands highest in the community for character, leadership and scholarship. Helen Louise Brazeal, '41, for her work in biology was given the second prize by the Biology club. C. Louise Gaillard, '40, for her work, was given the first prize in Comparative Anatomy. Ida B. Wood, '39, obtained third prize in the Chamberlain Scripture Reading contest.

Fort Valley Normal and Industrial School in Georgia states that in the junior department NYA workers Mary Bullock, Mattie Lowman, Margaret Perdue and Zelda Rosser received honors, and in the high school department Annie Amos, William Arnold, Inez Lester and Mart Pierce attained honors in scholarship.

At Bowie Normal school in Marvland, an NYA girl was elected May Queen. Also at this school two NYA students received Honfour were first honor students. At orable Mention in scholarship and Morgan College, Baltimore, six NYA workers received Honors in scholarship. Princess Anne, in Maryland, had three NYA students who were received in Phi Beta Sigma and two who won Hon ors in scholarship. At Dillard in Louisiana there were three NYA students who graduated Magna Cum Laude last June and two NY A workers were elected to high campus positions. Leland College in Louisiana reports that there were nine NYA students on the Honor Roll; Xavier University, New Orleans, Louisiana, states that three of their students graduating Magna Cum Laude were NYA workers and thirty-three NYA students were on the Honor Roll.

At Cheyney State Teachers College in Pennsylvania five NYA students received high scholastic atings. At Bluefield State Teachers College, West Virginia, Burnon Connolly and Paul Starling graduated Magna Cum Laude; Helen Hill, Marie Howard and Taft Johnson—all NYA workers—graduated Cum Laude.

"This is merely a superficial survey of honors attained in some of our Negro schools by NYA workers," Mrs. Bethune said. "There are many, many more. We are proud of these few, however We ar proud of what the National Youth Administration has done for them, and, more than proud of what they have done with the opportunity offered them by the National Youth Administration."

NYA Giving Badly Needed Aid To Negro Younasters

25 Supervisors Now Serving, Says Mrs. Bethune

The National Youth Administration has 25 state supervisors of Negro activities on the administrative staff in the field, and 15 Negro supervisors on the project staffs it was announced by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of the division of Negro affairs of the National Youth Administration.

"In these times of economic unrest and social readjustment," said Mrs. Bethune in making this announcement, "the Negro more than ever needs guidance and help, and needs the assurance that in the formulation and carrying out of the new governmental policies and programs he will be given definite consideration and the right to be included in those programs that will be of benefit to him."

GIVES NEED HELP

"One of the most important ... by the ... Mrs. Bethune continued, "has been the National Youth Administration. Here the government takes the problems of youth and attempts to help them adjust themselves through school and work programs, to the tempo and changes of our times."

"In 1935," Mrs. Bethune said, ... were 11 State supervisors of activities, in 1936 there were 21 and there were 23, and at present there are 25 Negro administrative ... ations working in the States. ... feel very proud of the progress this office has made so far."

In Alabama, the Negro Supervisor is Mrs. Venice T. Spragg, whose office is situated in Birmingham. Mrs. Spraggs has her own office, her own secretary, and in addition to her salary is given a travel allotment so that she can supervise field work in her State.

In Arkansas, Holloway Smith is state supervisor of Negro activities. He has an office, a secretary, and a monthly allotment which enables him to supervise the Negro work in the State.

DONE FINE WORK

Mrs. Vivian Marsh of California, Edward Goin in Connecticut, and Mrs. Sadie Mays in Washington, D. C., all administrative supervisors, have done outstanding work in the attempts to correlate the Negro program with the general NYA program.

In Florida, Henry T. Coleman has just recently been appointed supervisor of Negro activities, taking the place of Edward Rodriguez, who, after four years of splendid work, resigned to continue his studies. William H. Sheli, Georgia Assistant on Negro Affairs, has demonstrated by his work in Georgia with Negro youth his interest in vocational guidance. Under Mr. Sheli the Negro personnel in the state office has an unusually fine set-up, including an Office Assistant, Gabriel Alexander; an Educational Supervisor, Nathaniel P. Tillman; an Assistant of Forums. Moss H Kendrix; an Employment Supervisor, William E. Inmon; and a Project Coordinator, Plemon L Wheatley.

Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Michigan all have Negro state supervisors. Charles P. Browning whose office is in Chicago, is supervisor for Illinois; William Vernon Shields is the Indiana supervisor; the Kentucky supervisor is Harvey C. Russell; and Edward Swan has recently been appointed supervisor of Michigan. "These men have all done a splendid job in the integration and participation of Negro youth in the NYA work and school programs," said Mrs. Bethune.

EASTERN STATES HELPED

New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey are some of the eastern and southern states with Negro administrative assistants. Rufus Watson is doing an excellent job in Pennsylvania; Elder Russell of Maryland is particularly ... in recreation problems. Welton Henderson, former high ... principal and at present Assistant Field Secretary for the Negro Organization Society in Virginia, has only recently been appointed Negro supervsor, but is continuing the fine work of his predecessor. Massachusetts has Miss Cutler who has just been appointed; New Jersey has William A Smith; New York City has Robert Ely; and Edward V. Taylor is Supervisor for New York State.

Other Negro Supervisors on the administrative payroll are Herbert Mack in Louisiana, James Russell in Missouri, J. P. Bond, Jr. in North Carolina, Alexander Gaither in Chio, Mrs. Anne Caution in Oklahoma, Mrs. Josie G. Hazel in South Carolina, and Robert Clay, Tennessee. They have all been concerned with correlating Negro youth activities with the general NYA program, with seeing that Negro youth is included in every phase of the program, and with solving problems of vocational and social guidance.

In addition to those administrative assistants, Mrs. Bethune said, 25 project supervisors are doing admirable work in the field, in numerous southern states as well.

Mrs. Bethune, Dr. Johnson To Meet With President

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla., and Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, are members of the advisory committee of the National Youth Administration which President Roosevelt expects to meet in a formal session arranged tentatively for Hyde Park, September 7, the Federal Security Agency announced last Monday.

This meeting, which depends on whether Mr. Roosevelt feels free to leave Washington, will follow an initial session of the committee in New York City on September 6.

The New York session will be addressed by Mayor La Guardia and Aubrey Williams, administrator of the NYA. If the Hyde Park session is held, Mrs. Roosevelt and Paul V. McNutt, security administrator, will be present.

The committee will review the accomplishments of the NYA, which supplies work for about 750,000 persons a year, and will endeavor to draft a program of broader cooperation with the local public agencies and private employers.

NYA Negro Students Win Honors

Negro students participating in the National Youth Administration's Student Aid Program not only keep pace with but also, in many instances, excel other students both scholastically and in extracurricular activities it was announced today by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Director of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration. A survey of outstanding Negro institutions revealed that many NYA students have won the highest scholastic honors, have been elected to or selected for important positions, and have received the most coveted school or college awards.

"This survey" said Mrs. Bethune, "was conducted in order that we might learn to what extent Negro students were really taking advantage of the opportunities offered them through the National Youth Administration. The results of the survey are most gratfying and indicate definitely that the Federal Government's money has been well invested in these NYA students."

At Kentucky State College for Negroes, this NYA survey showed, Louise Comer, who as NYA worker was assistant librarian graduate Magna Cum Laude in 1939. She was also a member of the Honorary Society. At the same college Hurbet Clay, Susa Cunningham, Margaret Ryan and William Stovall received Departmental Honors. At Lincoln University in Missouri Ethel Rhodes graduated Summa Cum Laude, June 1939; Gertrude Whitley graduated Magna Cum Laude; Pauline Combs, Harold Holliday and Colette Logan graduated Cum Laude. All were NYA workers at the university.

NYA student Sallye M. Bell, at Miles Memorial College, Birmingham, received her B. A. degree with honors. Paul Von Henderson, NYA student of the same school, also received his B. A. with honors. Lucille Henry, in addition to receiving herB. A. with honors, was a member of both the Debating Society and the Varsity Debating Team, and received a key in debating last year. Barbara Browne of Selma University in Alabama won the Tyler Medal for 1939 in the oratorical contest and was also President of the B. Y. P. U. Lucille White of the same university was President of the Y. W. C. A. and graduated with the highest honors of her class.

At State A. and M. Institute in Alabama NYA student Lucindia Bullard made an "A" average for the second quarter, and the following NYA workers were members of the Varsity Debating Team for three years: Mamie Goins, Gwendolyn Roper, Sadie Sparks, Richmond Bell, Anne Smith.

At Stillman Institute, Alabama, the secretary of the dramatic club, member of the college choir class poet, and student with the leading role in the classs play last year was Emma Alexander, an NYA worker. Bernard Brown, NYA student of the same school was Vice-president of the Athletic Club. Ruriel Jones of Stillman not only was on the college honor roll during the year, but was Chairman of the Social Service Committee of the Y. W. C. A. and was an active member of the Negro Literature Club. Ruth Roulhac had the third highest average of all students in the junior college and was a member of the college sextette. Geneva Williamson had the highest two year average of all students in the junior college. Ledell Virdure, in addition to his NYA duties, was captain of the football team for two consecutive years, was President of the 4-H Club and Secretary of the Athletic Club. In the high school department of the same school NYA worker Edgar Roulhac had the fourth highest average of the graduating seniors, was elected business manager of the school paper and Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for the year. John O Taylor graduated with the highest honors of the high school department. "In this group of NYA students," Mrs. Bethune said, "we find an encouraging mixture of scholastic honors attained and participation in extracurricular affairs."

Margaret B. Bush of Talladega, another Alabama university, was held out by the NYA survey as an outstanding example of the successful NYA student. She was chosen by the Julia Derricotte Memorial Foundation as the recipient of a scholarship granted this year to two Negro women undergraduate students to study in India and other countries of the Orient. She sailed from New York May 3rd for Southampton Her trip includes London, Paris Marseilles, Port Said and Cairo Egypt, Colombo and other points in Ceylon, China and Japan. During July and August she studied at Santineeketan Tagore's University. From September to December she will pursue courses at the University of Calcutta. She will return from Yokahcma to San Francisco in time to finish her school work and graduate from Talladega in the spring 1940.

Spelman College, Atlanta Georgia, has its share of successful NYA students. Grace E. Days, 39, received the Seymour Finney Prize, given to the graduating senior with the highest scholarship. Ollie May Franklin, '40, was awarded the Lucy Upton Prize, given to the student who stand highest In the community for character, leadership and scholarship. Helen Louise Brezeal, '41 for her work in biology was given the second prize by the Biology Club. C. Louise Gaillard, '40, for her work, was given the first prize in Comparative Anatomy Ida B. Wood, '39, obtained third prize in the Chamberlain Scripture Reading Contest.

Fort Valley Normal and Industrail School in Georgia states that in the Junior department NYA workers Mary Bullock, Mattie Lowman, Margaret Perdue and Zelda Rosser received honors, and in the high school department Annie Amos, William Arnold, Inez Lester and Mart Pierce attained honors in scholarship.

Leland College in Louisiana reports that there were nine NYA students on the Honor Roll; Xavier University, New Orleans, Louisiana, states that three of their students graduating Magna Cum Laude were NYA workers and thirty-three NYA students were on the Honor Roll.

At cheyney State Teachers College in Pennsylvania five NYA ratings.

At Bluefield State Teachers College, West Virginiia, Burnon Connolly and Paul Starling graduated Magna Cum Laude; Helen Hill Marie Howard and Taft Johnson —all NYA workers—graduated Cum Laude.

"This is merely superficial survey or honors attained in some of our Negro schools by NYA workers," Mrs. Bethune said. "There are many, many more. we are proud of these few, however. We are proud of what the National Youth Administration has done for them, and more than proud of what they have done with the opportunity offered them by the National Youth Administration."

Bethune Issues Challenge To Youth In Talk

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—As principal speaker Sunday on the "Wings Over Jordan" program broadcast over a national hookup, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, president and founder of Bethune-Cookman College and head of the Negro division, NYA, declared:

"As one concerned with the problems of youth, I dare to challenge American youth of all races and creeds. Always, I have liked the word 'challenge. It suggests chivalrous combat, the opportunity to fight, to labor and not to count the cost, to give and not to get, to love and yet be willing to endure hate and resentment, to be a Christian fearlessly walking through a changing world."

Dr. Bethune's address was presented in connection with the week-end (Dec. 1-3) Moral Re-Armamet observance, nation-wide in scope. She concluded:

"..Today over half the civilized world has again restored to hate, greed and warfare to solve its problems. Youth are again marching to destruction under banners that carry suffering and destruction under relative security—free men in a free and democratic nation, where peace and quiet reign. But our security will be permanent only when every American realizes the need of a working philosophy that will insure the attainment of lasting world peace and realization of the democratic ideal.

"Will you join me and one hundred million others throughout the world—black, brown, yellow and white—in ushering in this awakening by listening to the living God? That is the program this week-end of the forces of Moral Re-Armament. This great movement is no respector of persons, or races, or classes, or creeds or ideologies. It applies to all. It appeals to all. It must become the common life of all."

NYA Confab Is Called By Williams

*See: Race Problem-U.S. for report of Conference

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Administrator Aubrey Williams of the National Youth Administration has issued a call for the second conference on problems of the Negro and Negro youth under the auspices of the National Youth Administration, to be held in Washington January 12-14, 1939.

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Director of the Division of Negro Affairs of the NYA, will officiate as director of the conference. Mrs. Bethune today issued the following statement regarding the meeting:

"Two years ago under the auspices of the National Youth Administration, a cross section of Negroes from every walk of life and representing various types of Negro organizations and thought was called together in Washington to study and think together on the status of Negroes in the United States with regard to their participation and integration into the program of the Federal Government and to formulate suggestions and resolutions from their own point of view as to what the Federal Government could do to guarantee more liberal action on the part of the government.

These recommendations were presented to the chief Federal officer, the President of the United States, members of his cabinet and other Federal officials.

"A similar conference at Washington is being called for January 12, 13, 14, 1939 to evaluate the progress or lack of progress which we have made and to think together on the next steps to be taken.

"This conference is definitely non-partisan. The problems of the Negro and Negro youth, regardless of political or religious affiliation are the concern of this conference.

Those of you who are on the outside looking in will be prayerful and thoughtful of us on the inside attempting to work out constructive plans for a more full participation of the Negro in the program of the American government."

NYA FUNDS FOR 35 STUDENTS AT TROY COLLEGE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—(AP)—The college and graduate aid program of the National Youth Administration for 1938-39 will reach 1,354 students in Alabama where educational institutions will receive $182,730.

Aubrey Williams, administrator, announced today the program would embrace 13 1-3 per cent more students this year than during the preceding academic year, or a total of 87,886. Colleges and universities were assigned quotas of students on the basis of 9.3 per cent of the total number of resident undergraduates and graduate students, 16 to 21 years of age enrolled on October 1, 1936.

College students may not receive more than an average of $15 a month and graduate students are restricted to an average of $30 a month. The average payment has been reduced, Williams said, because the applications for student aid far exceed the number who can be given assistance. This permits the program to reach a greater number.

In November, 1938, the NYA paid an average of $12.11 to 112,984 college and graduate students. The average for undergraduates was $11.94, while that for graduate students was $17.98. The total allotment for the school year was $11,838,555.

A special fund of $100,000 was set aside for negro students. This enabled 539 students to receive an average monthly wage of $20.60.

Midstate NYA Draws $76,545.00

Allotment Is Made For 13 White and Three Negro Schools

The National Youth Administration has allotted $76,545 and student and graduate aid in Middle Tennessee universities and colleges, according to notices appearing in the state press.

The NYA has provided $62,910 for its 1938-39 aid program in 13 schools for white students and $13,635 for Negro students in three schools in this area, the Washington report said.

Vanderbilt University will get the largest portion, the grant to students in this school totaling $17,685. Only one other school in the state received more money the University of Tennessee whose grant was $42,525.

Administrator Aubrey Williams of the NYA said in Washington that the total program in the United States would affect 3½ per cent more students this year than during the preceding years.

The program will reach 1,596 students in Tennessee, Williams said, who will receive a total of $215,460.

Under regulations college students may not receive more than an average of $15 monthly and graduate students are restricted to an average of $30 monthly. The average payment has been reduced, Williams declared, because applications for student aid far exceed the number which can be given assistance.

Tennessee schools which will benefit and the amounts they will receive are:

Vanderbilt University, $17,685; David Lipscomb College, $3,240; Peabody College, $7,560; Scarritt College, $540; Madison Training College, $2,970; Andrew Jackson University, $2,295; and Treveca Nazarene College $810; Austin Peay Normal, Clarksville, $1,890; Cumberland University, Lebanon, $6,885; Martin College, Pulaski, $1,350; Middle Tennessee Teachers College, Murfreesboro, $7,155; Tennessee College for Women, Murfreesboro, $2,160; Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, Cookeville, $5,400; and University of the South, Sewanee, $2,970.

Negro schools are Meharry Medical College, $1,620; Tennessee A. and I. College, $12,015.

THE NATIONAL YOUTH ADMINISTRATION

Amidst all the criticism of New Deal policies and administrations, it is noteworthy that there has been no criticism of the National Youth Administration.

Stones have been thrown at the PWA, the WPA, the CCC, the SEC, and numerous agencies an administrations, but the NYA has escaped.

Perhaps one reason why nothing but good is said of the NYA is because it has been doing a so obviously necessary work in aiding young people to complete their schooling and to adjust themselves to the developing social order. .

Aubrey Williams, the NYA administrator, has just reported that for the present academic year 13.5 per cent more college students are being assisted than last term, or 77,886, as compared to 75,993.

Negro youth has received its proportionate share of this assistance, according to all reports, and Mrs. Bethune and her assistants have been zealous in their work for the good of Negro youth.

Thousands of young Negroes would have been forced to stop their schooling had it not been for this valuable government agency.

MRS. MARY McLEOD BETHUNE

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, National NYA Director of work with Negro Youth, President and Founder of the Bethune-Cookman College, will address a mass meeting Sunday afternoon at 4:00 p.m. at the Pine Street Y. M.C.A., under the auspices of the Inter-Fraternal Council.

Mrs. Bethune is one of America's outstanding women and has made a great record in the National Youth Administration. She has been very interested in the Federation of Colored Women's Clubs and spent quite a bit of her time in the interest of her school in Florida. On the program with Mrs. Bethune will be the St. Louis Choral Club under the direction of Wirt D. Walton of Sumner High School. Mr. Z. D. Lenoir will preside. The public is invited to this meeting which will begin promptly at 4:00 p.m.

Negro Education Bill Wins Favor

RALEIGH, Feb. 9.— (AP) —The house committee on higher education this afternoon reported favorably a redrafted bill to provide graduate and professional courses for Negroes at the State-supported North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham and the Agricultural and Technical College at Greensboro.

Governor Hoey recommended such a measure in his biennial message in view of the Supreme Court's ruling that Missouri must provide specialized courses for Negroes.

Earlier the house had passed and sent to the senate a bill to provide that the Yadkin education board may recompense Negroes for reasonable boarding expenses when they leave the county to attend high school. The county has no Negro high school now.

N.C. College Heads Divided On Graduate Study Plans

Conflicting Views Bared at College Conference

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.—A decided division of opinion concerning the matter of graduate study facilities for Negroes, was revealed at the 13th annual meeting of the North Carolina Negro College Conference held at the Fayetteville State Teachers College here Friday of last week.

Spirited discussions were held on the recent report of the Legislative Commission to study Public Schools and colleges for Colored People in North Carolina at the meeting of which Dr. Robert P. Daniel, president of Shaw University, presided.

Many of the delegates felt that the development of graduate schools at Negro colleges will better serve the needs of our students, while others contended that Negroes should be admited to leading white universities. Neither Dr. F. D. Bluford, president of A. and T. College, Greensboro, nor Dr. J. E. Shepard, president of the North Carolina College for Negroes, were present to participate in the discussions.

W. J. Trent, Sr., president of Livingstone College, Salisbury, N. C., was elected president succeeding Dr. Daniel.

SESSIONS DIVIDED

The sessions were divided into two sections. The morning's program opened at 10 o'clock after which committees were appointed and a discussion on "The Best Procedure in the Administration of Practice Teaching" was led by Dr. Nelson Harris, of Shaw University, and Miss Juliette Phifer, of Fayetteville State College.

"Special Experiments Underway In The Colleges of N. C." was discussed in an open forum, and representatives of the colleges made brief statements on some special procedure or technique which is being followed by their institutions.

At the afternoon session J. Percy Bond, Jr., director of Negro activities of the NYA in North Carolina, spoke from the subject, "The Signs Are Before Us." He pointed out that the challenge, if we are to aid youth, is to all educational leaders who must act in terms of real independent action and regeneration.

"Though we have, to a great extent, lost control and ownership," said Mr. Bond, "squandered our heritage and slipped into the abyss of tenancy, the vision of youth is still there to be brought into evidence when we, the people, discover and realize a philosophy of action. Such a philosophy of action must be administered in terms of youth by those who not only love youth but by those who have a right conception of human excellence as well."

Conference Head W. J. Trent of Livingstone Named President

Prof. W. J. Trent of Livingstone College who was elected president of the North Carolina Negro College Conference at its annual session at Fayetteville State Normal College last Saturday. President Trent succeeds Dr. Robert P. Daniel of Shaw University. The next session will be held at Winston-Salem Teachers College.

VALUABLE TIME LOST

"Without proper guidance the individual youth tends to select for himself occupations remote from his aptitudes and abilities, and as a result, he loses valuable time, or else becomes another misfit."

Mr. Bond closed with the warning that Negro youth is not being given the educational training which will equip him for the successful securing of employment. It is not a question of remaining where we are, he said, unless we build our strength and carry forward, the dangerous doctrines of militarism and forced economy will. "Let youth have a chance . . let youth get one glimpse at the values that can accrue from a real guidance and training program, make youth liable to appreciate that which can accrue from real democracy; and youth will then feel for the first time his own innate strength and power."

to provide graduate and special ized courses for Negroes at tw
State-supported Negro colleges.

The measure provides that whe demand warrants it, such course shall be instituted at the Nort
Carolina College for Negroes a
Durham and the Agricutural and Technical College at Greensboro.

Representative Murphy of Rowan, author of the bill, told the House it was an answer to "the mandate of the United States Supreme Court which we must follow." He referred to a ruling that Missouri must provide graduate and specialized courses for Ne groes.

"This is the only way we ca prevent Negroes from entering our white institutions," said Mur phy. "Its enactment will preclude that possibility. It is a measure o justice and right we cannot evade." The solon praised the relationship between the races in the State.

The measure carries no specific appropriation, and the House refused the request of Caffey of Guilford that it go to the appropriations committee to have a figure written in.

Senators with only two or three dissenting votes passed and sent to the House the "fair sales law" bill designed to prohibit sales of any merchandise at below cost.

Senator Council of Columbus introduced a bill to permit the federal government to use Lake Waccamaw as a hydroplane base. He said there had been "some talk" that the government might develop and use the property if it were made available.

Representative Sebastian of Wilkes sent in a bill to allow fishing with rod and reel and hook and line in any stream in the State without securing a fishing license.

Three Senators, Lumpkin of Franklin, Eagles of Wilson and Frink of Brunswick, offered a res olution petitioning Congress to in vestigate administration of the federal housing act in North Car olina. Lumpkin said the State wa lagging behind the other 47 "i loans closed" and cited that Flor ida, with half as much population as North Carolina, "has three times as many loans closed."

The joint finance committee this afternoon worked along on taxes on railroads, bottlers and other interests as it neared the end of its work on the biennial revenue bill.

The joint group on appropriations took up highway fund allotments—the last major proposals before it can report the 1939-41 spending bill to the floor. The committee also was to decide, whether it would give teachers another hearing on pleas for salary raises.

No action was taken by a House judiciary group after a two hour hearing on a bill to abolish the State dry cleaning commission.

The House election laws committee will meet early this evening to hear reports from its sub-committee on measures to revise the State's voting statutes.

Negro Graduate School Bill Passes House

Raleigh, Feb. 14.—Graduate courses for negro institutions in Greensboro and Du ham made half the grade today in the general assembly when the Murphy bill passed the house unanimously after brief debate on the proposal to send the bill to the appropriations committee.

By the terms of the bill the Greensboro A. and T. college would get the technical graduate school and the Durham North Carolina College for negroes the professional courses for law, pharmacy and such others as fit into its academic pattern. In speaking on the bill, Major Murphy said that he asked this simple justice to the negroes as a member of the dominant race whose duty it is to do justice. But he spoke also under supreme authority of the country. The United States Supreme court recently has held that the states which have separate race schools must furnish both races such graduate instruction as they have a right to pursue. He referred to the recent Missouri case in which the highest court held Missouri bound by the constitution to admit a negro to its courses.

"I want it distinctly understood that I am first a North Carolinian," Major Murphy said. "I am a United Stateser second. I believe we can attend to our own affairs in this state without the aid, consent or interference of Washington. But the United States Supreme court has held this to be our duty, and I wish our state to do its duty in its own way. There may be times in our history, there may be recollections that are bitter, but this is an act of simple justice by the dominant race."

North Carolina House Passes Bill to Establish Graduate and Specialized Work at Negro Colleges.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 23—(Special)—Establishment of graduate and specialized courses for students at North Carolina College, located at Durham, and the Agricultural and Technical College at Greensboro, both state-supported Negro colleges, is provided for in a bill already passed by the House of Representatives of the North Carolina legislature, and now pending in the State Senate.

The bill, presumably, is designed to meet the requirements of the decree of the U.S. Supreme Court in the recently decided test case originating in Missouri, that all states must provide equal educational facilities and advantages for all their citizens, regardless of race.

Special provision contained in the pending measure whose ultimate enactment into law is regarded as certain, is expected to be made effective immediately.

N. C. College For Negroes Now Has A Graduate School

Marks New Era In Higher Education For Race In State And Represents Friendly Spirit Of Good Will Between Races.

DURHAM, July 4.—Announcement of the faculty for a graduate school at North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham marks not only a new era in higher education for the Negro race in the State but also represents the friendly spirit of goodwill and co-operation that exists between the races here. Outstanding educators from Duke University in Durham and the University of North Carolina in nearby Chapel Hill, for stated periods, have been secured as teachers.

Incidentally, the graduate school is also the State Assembly's unanimous answer to the decision of the U. S Supreme Court, which ruled that Negroes are entitled to graduate work in the State. Its establishment, however, comes as the direct result of a well-planned movement started some years ago by progressive leaders of both races to cope with a problem that had been fast coming to the front. Young Negroes who graduated from colleges in the State were forced to go elsewhere to secure advanced training. Impressed with the need for more educational opportunities for these young men and women, a group of representative leaders of both races united in an effort to remedy this deficiency, and their dreams were brought to a happy fruition in the last session of the General Assembly when a legislative appropriation was secured for this purpose. North aCrolina College for Negroes was selected as the most highly qualified liberal arts institution through which to offer these advanced educational facilities to the Negro youth of the State.

Dr. James E. Shepard, president and founder of the college, has voiced high praise for the spirit of mutual friendship between the races that has made this program possible. Governor Clyde R. Hoey, State legislators, educational leaders throughout the State, and interested citizens of both races have been staunch friends and advocates in this forward movement.

President Shepard also points out that educational opportunities of the first magnitude are now open for the first time within this State to Negroes seeking advanced training. For next year, starting in September, the graduate school will include, for stated periods, outstanding members of the faculties of Duke University and the University of North Carolina, as well as additions to the regular faculty.

In addition to the graduate school of education, schools of law, pharmacy, and medicine are in prospect. During recent years, N. C. College has made unprecedented expansion. Many new buildings have already been erected to provide for its increasing sphere of service, and five more are now in process of construction. Under the new program, the institution bids fair to become one of the foremost state-supported Negro colleges in the country.

The present faculty includes many eminent Negro educators, and more will be added as time progresses. Latest addition is Dr. W. Edward Farrison of Bennett College, who will head the English department. On its present faculty are Dean A. Elder, lately granted a degree of Doctor of Education by Columbia; Dr. J. S. Lee, who received his Ph. D. from Michigan in June in the field of biology; Miss Zora Neale Hurston of Florida, great authority on Negro folklore; Dr. L. H. Knox, who won his doctorate from Harvard; and Gow W. Bush, who will receive his degree from Iowa University.

Authorized by the legislature of 1939 to give these courses, the Durham institution is preparing its regimen for the graduates in the liberal arts division. The general assembly which created this post graduate work voted unanimously in favor of it and received from all parts of the country commendation for its generous mood toward the race. North Carolina takes the lead in advanced education for Negroes and in furnishing the school some of the best teachers in the nation, North Carolina gets far in the lead.

From Chapel Hill, the University of North Carolina, will come to the department of education three distinguished members of the school of education: Dr. Edgar W. Knight, Dr. A. M. Jordan, and Dr. H. R. Douglass. Dr. Knight will teach fall, Dr. Jordan, winter, and Dr. Douglass spring courses.

In history, Dr. Hugh T. Lefler will give fall, Dr. A. R. Newsome winter, and Dr. F. M. Green spring lectures. These members of the University of North Carolina historical faculty made wide reputation before they went there.

Dr. W. W. Pierson of the department of political science, will give the fall series, and in sociology, Dr. Howard W. Odom will have the fall Dr. R. B. Vance the winter, and Dr. Edgar T. Thompson of Duke University will have the spring classes Dr. A. S. Pearse of Duke, will have work in zoology and Dr. D. C. Allen assistant professor of English at Duke, will take classes in English literature.

Dr. Calvin B. Hoover who spends the summer in Russia pursuing his studies, will serve as chairman of the advisory committee of Duke and Carolina faculty members and will give his cooperation to the plans now announced.

Dr. Hoover as dean of the Duke graduate school of arts and sciences is a world authority in his field. He is so well known in Russia that he may not be welcomed in the Soviet union. But whether he gets through easily or with difficulty, he will be available for the help to North Carolina College in working out its courses. Dr. N. C. Newbold of the State department of education will conduct a regular seminar on race relations.

These twelve educators coming from the nearby two great institutions are to swell the instructional force which makes North Carolina College scholastically fit from the start. Dr. W. Edward Farrison, head of the department of English in Bennett College, Greensboro, has resigned to head the English literature division of North Carolina College.

Miss Zora Neale Hurston of Florida, national authority on Negro folklore, becomes a member of the faculty which now has such members as Dr. V. V. Oak, Ph.D.,

May the Same Spirit Abide

Not since the death of Peter W. Moore, founder of the Elizabeth City State Normal, now Elizabeth City State Teachers College for Negroes, has Elizabeth City suffered the loss of a Negro educator comparable to President J. H. Bias, who succeeded Moore as head of the Negro college here.

President Bias picked up the work at the Elizabeth City State Normal where P. W. Moore laid it down, and carried it on in the same spirit as did his predecessor.

As a result the institution has not only grown and burgeoned out into a four-year college, but also it has held its place in the regard of the Elizabeth City community which points to its State Teachers College for Negroes with daily increasing pride.

May the spirit of Moore and Bias continue to abide in and bless the Elizabeth City State Teachers College and keep it free from outside criticism or internal strife.

Livingstone Adds School Of Theology

Hood Seminary Culmination of Founder's Dream

SALISBURY, N. C.— Dr. W. J. Trent, president of Livingstone College, recently announced the opening of the Hood Theological Seminary as the school of theology of the college. A formal school of theology is the realization of a dream of the founders of the institution, a dream that there should be some sort of regular theological training at Livingstone.

For many years the school has offered courses in religious education and the school of theology is the final step in the formalizing of religious training at the college. The Hood Theological Seminary will operate in conjunction with the college of liberal arts at Livingstone, and will offer courses leading to the bachelor of divinity degree, as well as a special certificate in theology for those students who are not prepared to pursue the regular degree. Provision has also been made for part-time work by pastors in service who will not have time to enroll as full-time students in the school of theology.

The idea that there should be formal religious training at Livingstone College has its conception in the mind of Dr. Joseph C. Price, founder of the school. Later, it found concrete expression under the leadership of Bishop John Walker Hood and during the administration of the late Dr. William Harvey Goler.

The school of theology will attempt to train ministers for the pastorate, prepare workers in the field of religious education, assist in personal religious orientation, and develop and promote a knowledge of Christ. It is interested in preparing men for the parish ministry and has set itself to the accomplishment of this task through a curriculum which arose out of a study of the needs which parish ministers are expected to meet.

The school of theology occupies the Hood Theological Seminary building. The building is used for class-rooms, chapel, dormitory, library, and administration purposes. The library and seminar room in the building house the most important books and periodicals required by theological students. The library files include the leading secular and religious newspapers and the leading monthlies and quarterlies.

The faculty of the school of theology consists of the following educators: Rev. Prof. H. Satterwhite, A.B., B.D., S.T.M., professor of religious and christian education; Rev. Prof. James A. Clement, B.A., B.D., professor of practical theology and christian missions; Prof. S. W. Garlington, B.A., M.A., professor of social problems; Miss Lucille C. Mills, A.M., professor of music; Miss Carolease Faulkner, instructor in public speaking.

Special lecturers will speak to students from time to time.

LIVINGSTONE COLLEGE ADDS FORMAL SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY

Long Awaited School To Open With Fall Semester Of Livingstone College

By JOHN S. LASH

Dr. W. J. Trent, president of Livingstone College, announces the opening of the Hood Theological Seminary as the School of Theology of the college. The announcement of a formal School of Theology is the realization of a dream of the founders of the historic Methodist institution, a dream that there should be some sort of regular theological training at Livingstone College.

Later, it found concrete expression under te leadership of Bishop John Walker Hood and during the administration of the late Dr. William Harvey Goler.

Star of Zion

The idea developed into the steady aim of providing opportunity to young men who wished to enter the ministry. The School of Theology has progressed rapidly under the present administration and Dr. Trent has worked zealously to have a formal seminary established. It is the opinion of Dr. Trent that there is a strong possibility that the pew will become more intelligent than the pulpit, thus reducing the effectiveness of the ministry.

The School of Theology will attempt to train ministers for the pastorate, prepare workers in the field of religious education, assist in personal religious orientation, and develop and promote a knowledge of Christ. It is interested in preparing men for the parish ministry and has set itself to the accomplishment of this task through a curriculum which arose out of a study of the needs which parish ministers are expected to meet.

Law School At N. C. C. N. Postponed When Only One Student Qualifies

Operation Of Department Is Put Off Until 1940 After Officials Confer

There will be no law school this year at the North Carolina College for Negroes after all, because only one applicant was able to qualify for the work.

Following a consultation of officials yesterday, it was decided to wait until next year to begin that phase of graduate study at the college.

In the meantime the lone qualifying student, Logan Delany, has decided to take other graduate studies until next year.

Law work at N. C. C. N. was to have been introduced this year as part of a general program of graduate work, authorized by the North Carolina legislature upon the recommendation of a special commission and the governor, and in the light of a recent supreme court decision ruling that Negroes must have educational opportunities within their own states comparable to those of white citizens.

College officials yesterday issued the following statement on postponement of the law school:

"For the reason that only one qualified student enrolled, the operation of the law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham has been postponed until September, 1940, it was announced here today by President James E. Shepard. The school was opened on Monday, September 25, and closed on Saturday, September 30. Decision to postpone the operation of the law school was reached after a number of conferences between members of the faculty, the president, the board of trustees of the college and the governor of the state.

"During the intervening months Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the law school of the University of North Carolina, who served as acting dean of the Negro law school, will continue in an advisory capacity. The law library, collected and organized by Miss Lucile Elliott, law librarian of the University of North Carolina, and housed on the second floor of the library of the North Carolina College for Negroes, will be available to law students and to members of the bench and bar.

"The single student who had enrolled in the law school has entered the graduate school of the North Carolina College for Negroes, and will reenter the law school when it reopens next September.

"The teaching staff of the law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes was recruited from the law faculties of the University of North Carolina and of Duke university, including Profs. M. S. Breckenridge, John P. Dalzell, Fred B. McCall, Douglas Maggs, D. W. Markham and J. Douglass Poteat. It is expected that this group will constitute the nucleus of the faculty when the law school opens again in September, 1940."

NEGRO COLLEGE GETS ALLOTMENT

Council of State Provides $114,800 for Graduate Work at Durham College

An allotment of $114,800 for the next two years for graduate work at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham was voted yesterday by the Governor and Council of State under authorization of an act of the last legislature providing for such courses.

Graduate work to be offered at the Negro Agricultural and Technical College in Greensboro is yet to be worked out, but it is understood that the amount needed there will not be as much as that required for the Durham College. The A. and T. trustees meet in Greensboro today and may name a committee to study what graduate courses will be required for the term beginning in September.

While all details for the Durham graduate work have not yet been completed, present plans call for courses in law, pharmacy, general graduate work and possibly medicine. Cost of work in medicine makes that course uncertain, it is understood.

State officials hope that some plan may be worked out for the Durham College under which professors from the University at Chapel Hill and from Duke University will be able to give some of the graduate courses. Such a program, it was pointed out, would keep expenditures down.

No Duplication.

The act authorizing the graduate work provided that there should be no duplication of courses offered at the two institutions. To see that those instructions are followed, a committee headed by Dr. Clyde Erwin, State superintendent of public instruction, studies in detail all proposed work before money is appropriated for it by the Council of State.

Provision for the graduate work followed the opinion of the United States Supreme Court in the Missouri case. The court ruled a State must provide graduate work for Negroes or allow them to attend institutions for white persons giving such work.

The contingency and emergency fund from which the allotments were made is $1,000,000 for the next two years.

The Council also approved yesterday formal transfer from the prison division to State College of part of the Camp Polk property for use as a college dairy unit. It also allotted $7,040 from the contingency and emergency fund for the Morganton State Hospital to purchase 20 dairy cows and farm and dairy equipment.

Negro Law Department To Open September 25

Full Details Announced by Dean M. T. Van Hecke of State University

Durham, Sept. 4.—The North Carolina College for Negroes announces the opening of its Department of Law September 25. It will undoubtedly be one of the most outstanding departments of law for Negroes in the South, officials say. Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the University of North Carolina, has agreed to be the acting dean for a period of one year.

President Shepard, in making the announcement, stated that one of the most fortunate things which could occur was the acceptance of Dean Van Hecke of the University of North Carolina. The same, he said, applied to the fine instructors who have agreed to serve for one year; that "it means much for the cooperation of the races in the State and in the South along all helpful lines."

Professors John F. Dazell, Donald W. Markham and Fred B. McCall, all of the State University and Professor Douglas Maggs, of Duke University, will teach in the first semester, while in the second semester Professors Millard S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina and Douglas Poteat, of Duke University, Law School will be instructors.

In an accompanying statement, Dean Van Hecke said:

"The arrangement whereby the instructional, library and administrative work of the Law School of the North Carolina College for Negroes will be carried on this year by members of the faculties of the law school of Duke University and of the University of North Carolina should be regarded as temporary and provisional in character, to be continued only until qualified Negroes can be recruited for the service. Meanwhile these representatives of the neighboring law schools are proud of the opportunity to cooperate with the authorities of the North Carolina College for Negroes during the new law school's formative period. Every effort will be made to extend through this school to members of the Negro race the same opportunities for a legal education as are afforded now at Duke University and at the University of North Carolina.

Use Semester System.

"The Law School will be operated upon the semester system instead of the quarter system and the fall term will open on Monday, September 25. The spring term will open early in February. During the fall semester the curriculum will consist of courses in contracts, personal property, real property and torts. Each course will meet three hours a week and will be taught, respectively, by Professors John P. Dalzell, Donald W. Markham and Fred B. McCall, all of the University of North Carolina, and by Professor Douglas Maggs of Duke University. During the spring semester the curriculum will consist of courses in Agency, Civil procedure, contracts and torts. The last two subjects mentioned will be continuations of the courses begun in the fall and will be carried on by the same instructors and for the same amount of credit. The course in Agency will be taught by Professor Millard S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina and the course in civil procedure by Professor Douglas Poteat of the Duke University law school. As indicated, during the year 1939-1940 only a first year program of study will be offered. The second year curriculum will be added in 1940-1941, and a third year, in 1941-1942.

New Law Library.

"The Law Library will be purchased, installed and organized by Miss Lucile Elliott, law librarian of the University of North Carolina. And I will take charge of the administration of the School for the year or until a qualified Negro law school administrator can be secured.

"The entrance requirements and the standards of work which will have to be met by students in the law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes will be the same as those in effect at the University of North Carolina. Thus those seeking admission to the Law School must have completed with an average grade of C the first three years of college work leading to an academic degree from the North Carolina College for Negroes or some other Negro college approved as a Class "A" standard four year college by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. If the student comes from a college rated as Class "B" by this Association he must have graduated with a Bachelor's Degree and with an average grade of C on all of his undergraduate work.

"We earnestly hope that everyone interested in legal education in North Carolina will join with us in helping this new venture to get started under the most encouraging conditions and constructvie auspices."

NEGRO COLLEGE GETS ALLOTMENT

Council of State Provides $114,800 for Graduate Work at Durham College

An allotment of $114,800 for the next two years for graduate work at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham was voted yesterday by the Governor and Council of State under authorization of an act of the last legislature providing for such courses.

Graduate work to be offered at the Negro Agricultural and Technical College in Greensboro is yet to be worked out, but it is understood that the amount needed there will not be as much as that required for the Durham College. The A. and T. trustees meet in Greensboro today and may name a committee to study what graduate courses will be required for the term beginning in September.

While all details for the Durham graduate work have not yet been completed, present plans call for courses in law, pharmacy, general graduate work and possibly medicine. Cost of work in medicine makes that course uncertain, it is understood.

State officials hope that some plan may be worked out for the Durham College under which professors from the University at Chapel Hill and from Duke University will be able to give some of the graduate courses. Such a program, it was pointed out, would keep expenditures down.

No Duplication.

The act authorizing the graduate work provided that there should be no duplication of courses offered at the two institutions. To see that those instructions are followed, a committee headed by Dr. Clyde Erwin, State superintendent of public instruction, studies in detail all proposed work before money is appropriated for it by the Council of State.

Provision for the graduate work followed the opinion of the United States Supreme Court in the Missouri case. The court ruled a State must provide graduate work for Negroes or allow them to attend institutions for white persons giving such work.

The contingency and emergency fund from which the allotments were made is $1,000,000 for the next two years.

The Council also approved yesterday formal transfer from the prison division to State College of part of the Camp Polk property for use as a college dairy unit. It also allotted $7,040 from the contingency and emergency fund for the Morganton State Hospital to purchase 20 dairy cows and farm and dairy equipment.

Negro Law Department To Open September 25

Full Details Announced by Dean M. T. Van Hecke of State University

Durham, Sept. 4.—The North Carolina College for Negroes announces the opening of its Department of Law September 25. It will undoubtedly be one of the most outstanding departments of law for Negroes in the South, officials say. Dean M. T. Graduate School For Negroes Urged

North Carolina College for Race Stresses Need for Professional Training

The North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, its physical plant greatly enlarged in recent years through Federal aid and with State support for operation, has been dreaming of a graduate school and last week Governor Clyde E. Hoey recommended to the Legislature that funds be provided for this purpose.

This marks the progress of an institution of which the president, James E. Shepard, said a decade ago: "It has comparatively nothing except a beautiful campus."

In the last two years the Public Works Administration and the Works Progress Administration have spent or authorized about 400,000 for the campus. When matched by State funds, the total is imposing.

The college traces its history back to 1910. Dr. Shepard's hope is that the institution can soon have a graduate school. In 1910, Dr. Shepard, then pastor of the White Rock Baptist Church of Durham, founded the National Religious Training School and Chautauqua after observing the poor equipment of Negro preachers.

Before long the theological aspects were dropped. There were financial difficulties and reorganization, and then in 1921 the State assumed support of the institution, calling it the Durham State Normal School. In 1936 it was renamed the North Carolina College for Negroes. During the 1925-26 term the college had forty-seven students. The enrollment for the current term is 463.

Last year the PWA built an auditorium, library, dormitory, and six faculty cottages. Contemplated under the same agency are a science building, another dormitory, a laundry and a combination home economics building and senior cottage. The WPA has built an athletic field, a gymnasium and a garage, besides doing much grading and draining.

Three degrees are offered: Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Science in Commerce.

The National Resources Committee, in its recent study of population trends, stated that an increasing number of persons is being employed in professional and distributive endeavors, and commented: "If the trend established in the past decade continues in the future, most of the new jobs must be sought where there is opportunity for taking part in complex industrial and commercial processes or in servicing community needs."

The proportion of North Carolina's population engaged in what the census calls "professional service" is small. Of the 2,251,629 white persons in the State recorded in the 1930 census, 41,503 or 1.843 per cent was engaged in professional service. Of the 918,647 Negroes counted, 9,789 or 1.066 per cent was engaged in professional service.

Dr. Shepard asserts that the Negro is being crowded out of such "traditional" jobs as barbering, elevator operating and street cleaning. The condition has been aggravated by the depression. He expresses the belief that Negroes trained in the professions can practice among members of their own race and find sufficient outlet for their talents. He envisions a graduate school that would be guided at the beginning by nearby Duke University and the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Shepard has a simple argument for Negro education.

"A trained anything is better than an untrained one," he says.

Johnson C. Smith University In Expansion Program At Estimated Cost of $1,500,000

CHARLOTTE, N. C. — (CS)— Founded in 1867 as the Biddle Memorial Institute and named in honor of Major Henry Biddle, Pennsylvania philanthropist whose wife made the first generous contribution, the school was later chartered by the State Legislature and operated on eight acres of land donated by Col. W. R. Myers, a wealthy citizen of Charlotte.

In 1871 the charter was changed by the Legislature of North Carolina and the name of the school became Biddle University. In recognition of the generous benefactions of Mrs. Johnson C. Smith of Pittsburgh, Pa., who, during the academic year of 1921-22 gave considerable funds for the erection of a Theological Dormitory, a Science Hall, Teachers' Cottage and a Memorial Gate, the Board of Trustees voted to change the name of the institution to Johnson C. Smith University. And so, the charter of the school was, accordingly, amended March 1, 1923, by the Legislature of the State of North Carolina. From 1918 until her death in October, 1929, Mrs. Smith gave funds for the erection of five more buildings, including a church.

Has 22 Buildings

Today, with its present site containing 75 acres of land and easily accessible in an area that is conducive to study, Johnson C. Smith, with 22 up-to-date buildings on a beautiful and commodious campus is the centre of higher training for the ambitious mind interested in Liberal Arts, Sciences and Theology. Operated under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, it is, nevertheless, non-sectarian.

McCrorey, who assumed the presidency of the institution is the distinguished and nationally known educator, Dr. Henry

At the helm of this progressive institutive in mind, secured over a period of years, considerable moral and financial support from such philanthropic individuals as Messrs. Andrew Carnegie and James B. Duke. He also succeeded in maintaining such highly trained members of the faculty and efficient scholarship among the more than 350 students that the institution is now fully accredited as Class "A" by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and holds full membership in the American Council on Education, and the Association of American Colleges.

Each member of the faculty has had graduate training and received degrees at such universities as McGill, Ohio State, Howard, Lincoln, Columbia, Michigan, Boston, Fisk, Atlanta and Chicago. Also Oberlin College and Hampton Institute. With such a well-qualified faculty, the student at J. C. Smith is assured of thorough training based on Christian principles. For, in keeping with the ideals of its founders, religion plays an important part on the curriculum. A certain period each day is devoted to worship in the chapel, primarily for the purpose of having students inculcate certain religious ideals during the formative period of their college lives.

Affiliated with Johnson C. Smith is the Barber-Scotia Junior College for Women, Concord, N. C. Close contact is maintained between Smith and Scotia, with the result that graduates of the latter are admitted to the junior class with full standing. Within the past six years, women have been admitted to the senior division of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

The University maintains several literary societies and clubs. Debates, dramas and athletics are engaged in by students, as part of the extra-curricula activities. Football, basketball, baseball, boxing and tennis are played under the direction of the Board of Athletic Control, which is a member of the North Carolina Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association, and the Colored Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association. There are also several Greek-letter fraternities, in which many students take an active part.

In Expansion Program

The University Press is modernly equipped and is responsible for the excellent output of such University publications as the Quarterly Review of Higher Education Among Negroes, edited with the cooperation of the faculty, the Johnson C. Smith University Bulletin, including catalogue issues, Student Manual, the University Student, and the Smith Bull.

President H. L. McCrorey has issued an urgent appeal to all persons for their wholehearted and generous support in his effort to raise $125,000 for the erection of a much needed girls' dormitory which is to be part of the expansion program at a cost of $1,500,000.

The Truth About Livingstone College

"Have you visited Livingstone College within the last two or three years? If you have you beheld both that which pleased and displeased you. You saw a beautiful campus dotted with stately, sturdy maples. You were thrilled when you stood and looked with bared head at the mausoleum which jealously guards the sacred bones of Dr. Joseph Charles Price, its reputed founder, and certainly its first president. You saw a group of as fine a staff of instructors as can be found anywhere. They come from some of the most celebrated colleges and universities in the world today, and have the ability to impart knowledge so that it will 'stick.' You saw a group of young men and women whose countenance was beaming forth with that something which bespoke their grim determination to remain there and absorb all that Livingstone had to offer by way of mental development—despite the handicaps. You felt a genuine welcome, peculiar to Livingstone College, and witnessed many other things which inspired you while there.

"On the other hand you beheld things which displeased you, and no one has the right to censure you for the feeling which came over you. You saw the J. C. Price Memorial Administration building and the central heating plant behind it, which has for years been standing uncompleted, and despite the fact that the material used in their construction was costly, they are beginning to depreciate. You saw just above the Price Memorial building the Hood Theological Seminary building. —yes, completed, but no longer being used for the sacred purpose for which its donor dedicated it. But instead, this building is being used primarily as an administration hall, and incidentally as a boys' dormitory and chapel. You saw that the dormitories elsewhere were too obsolete, too crowded and too cold in winter. In a word you saw a college which would make the grade if given 'a half a chance,' but which at present is far from being what you would like to have it be. This fact has been far reaching in its influence, and has been the occasion of very grave concern.

The Big Connectional Rally

"Now, the Connection has launched a rally to raise the money Livingstone needs to make it the kind of college we feel it ought to be. It grew out of the Livingstone College Quadrennial report at Greensboro, N.C., in 1936.

"At the 1936 session of the A. M. E. Zion General Conference at Greensboro, N.C., the report of the president revealed the fact that the school, as measured from the standpoint of equipment, failed to come up to the standard as prescribed for an 'A' rated college. This revelation caused alarm among those who had Livingstone College at heart. So, the delegation at once began to seek through discussion for some plan by which the school could be placed on the proper footing. Many suggested borrowing the money needed to give it an A-1 rating. But to offset this proposal Bishop Kyles showed that the school was already dangerously involved in debt and that it would be very unwise to make the obligation bigger, when at present we had nothing to pay on the debt already made. So it was agreed that instead of trying to borrow the money, the Connection launch a rally and raise the money to pay off the present debt, then take the remaining cash to complete the unfinished buildings and make the other necessary improvements. But by all means to restore the Theological department; renovate and make comfortable the obsolete dormitories and bring the college up to par. They found that it would take at least one hundred thousand dollars. In reporting this money at the Founder's Day celebration on February 10, 1938, the Bishops brought to Livingstone and laid into the hands of the treasurer $25,000.00 and the celebration ended the jubilee.

But More Than This Happened, Thank the Lord

"When the news reached the members of the local churches back home, the members rejoiced and joyfully admitted that to raise the money instead of borrowing it. and eliminate the enormous interest the creditors would charge for their money was by far the wiser plan.

Now Look What Happened, More Good News

"According to a trustworthy source of information, the trustees of the college went to the president of the firm to whom they owed $46,000.00, more or less, and told him that if he would cut the debt to twenty-five thousand dollars, Livingstone College would pay it then and there. The creditor smiled and said, "I accept your proposition." They paid him. The note was cancelled, and the trustees left the building rejoicing over the fact that Livingstone was for the present out of debt.

"But there was another task awaiting them. It was the Price Administration building and the central heating plant just behind it, standing there uncompleted, and the money spent to bring them where they are—wasting; the Hood Building standing there, but not being used for that sacred purpose for which it was dedicated—no Theological department—making no preachers of our own—must look to other denominations for our trained ministers. The dormitories old, and needing renovation—but the renovation could wait for awhile, if the buildings could all be made comfortable for every student in winter. The science department needing to be brought up to date—what about all this? The trustees of the college said, "We will go back to the people and ask them for what we want. If we tell them what we are trying to do, and do the thing we promised them. the people will not let us down.' The people heard their plea and answered, 'We are behind you.' This good news rang from every corner of Zion.

The Movement Should Be Supported

"Livingstone College is our chief institution of learning. It is the biggest thing we have in the way of a school. As our chief institution, it should be as well equipped in every way as the chief institutions of other denominations of Zion's standing financially. . . ."

White Youth Seeks Entrance To A.&T.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (SNS)—Carl S. Pugh, 21, white university senior, editor of the Carolina Buccaneer, campus humor magazine, said Tuesday night he would apply for entrance to A. and T. College for Negroes in Greensboro for the spring quarter. Commented Pugh:

Work on New Negro College Unit Is Begun

Issuance of a permit from the office of Building Inspector G Clayton Hill yesterday formally started construction of the new library and administration building at Winston-Salem Teachers College which will cost $73,663.

Meantime, contractors are razing Lamson Hall, the oldest structure on the campus, to make room for the new building.

Lamson Hall, located on the main eminence of the campus, was erected in 1896. It housed all activities of the college for many years. Dormitory space was provided on the third floor, chapel and matron's rooms were on the second floor, classrooms were on the first floor and kitchen, diner and home economics laboratories were in the basement.

Much sentiment is attached to this old building, because it dates back to the struggling infancy of the school. It was acquired through hard work of Dr. Simon Green Atkins, founder of Slater Normal School (now the college). Preceding Lamson Hall, the schoo was housed in a shabby little building a few blocks west of the present campus.

The razing has advanced rapidly and it is anticipated that within another two weeks actual construction of the new building wil start. W. H. Nelson and Company contracted the work.

Other permits issued yesterday from the office of the building inspector were:

J. W. Angel, to erect a garage a the corner of Lexington road an Clemmonsville road, $75.

O. B. Eaton, to repair fire dam age at 323 Glenn avenue, $300.

E. M. Shepherd, to repair s store building located at 527 South Main street. $500.

Southernaires Share Spotlight With Graduate

GREENSBORO, N. C. — Students, faculty members and patrons who attended the Founder's Day exercises of A. and T. College November 2, heard a favorite son Austin W. Curtis, Sr., bring back fond memories of the school's early struggles under the leadership of the late James B. Dudley.

Professor Curtis is head of the department of agriculture at West Virginia State College and one of A. and T.'s first graduates. He was introduced by President F. D. Bluford.

A second feature of the A. and T. Founder's Day program was the presentation of the Southernaires, famed radio quartet, in the college gymnasium.

The official program for the "Day" began at 11 a. m. with a procession led by the College band in which there were representatives for classes back to 1843.

The Speaker, Professor Curtis, traced the history of the school from the time he entered in 1896 to the present time. The early teachers, aside from President Dudley, according to the narrator, were a Mr. Epps, from Cornell, a Mr. Stevenson from Michigan State, both white, who taught mechanical arts and agriculture respectively; Dr. Charles Moore and a Mr. Hayes, who taught academic courses along with the president.

Professor Curtis pointed out that the supervision and training was extensive and the teachers assisted the students at all hours of he day. He told of how the college dairy, of which he was appointed head back in 1897, had grown from two jersey cows, a barn, and a spoon to its present status of 70 jersey cows under the management of a Ph. D., in dairy husbandry.

Concluding his discourse the speaker said, "the way has been hard and tedious but the inspiration and diligence exercised by the late James B. Dudley has produced one of the finest land grant colleges in the south, now piloted by an able administrator with an "A" rating.

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov 10—A wonderful story, having all the elements of romanticism, was told of the rise of a great land grant college under the leadership of the late James B. Dudley by Austin W. Curtis Sr., one of its first graduates speaking at the annual founders celebration at A. and T. college last week.

Prof. Curtis is, at present, head of the department of agriculture at West Virginia State college. The speaker, a noted agricultural leader and a distinguished alumnus of A. and T. was introduced by President F. D. Bluford.

Led by the college band, a full procession made up of students, alumni and faculty assembled on the main campus and marched to the gymnasium by classes with the freshmen in the front rank. At the door of the gymnasium, the order was reversed with the faculty and guests entering first followed by the seniors and thence down in retrogressive order of the class of 1943.

Prof. Curtis told the inspiring story of how he came to the college in 1896 which was then composed of Dudley hall, North hall, a greenhouse, and a barn. The old Dudley hall served as a kitchen, dining room, administration and academic building, and girls' dormitory.

Less Than 100 Students

At that time, Prof. Curtis said, students came from nearby counties and all were from North Carolina. During these early days, there were less than 100 students and five faculty members, three Race and two whites. Major subjects were agriculture and mechanic arts. A Mr. Epps from Cornell and a Mr. Stevenson from Michigan State taught respectively mechanic arts and agriculture.

There were no Race teachers qualified in these fields at that time. Academic courses were taught by President Dudley, Dr. Charles Moore, and a Mr. Hayes. The training and supervision were intensive rather than extensive and the teachers assisted the students at all hours of the day. In retrospect, the educational philosophy of the college seemed to be good health, learning, social adjustment, and good character.

Had Only Two Cows

The speaker told the story, how in 1897, he was appointed to head the college dairy which then consisted of two jersey cows, a barn and a spoon. One day, he made some butter by skimming the cream stirring it with a spoon. The pound of butter was then placed on Dr. Dudley's table in the dining hall. The late president, calling Curtis to his table asked how the butter had been produced since no equipment on the campus existed for its manufacture with a spoon as he had seen his mother do. Dr. Dudley then made Curtis a doctor of philosophy in dairy husbandry.

Devotions were led by Rev. L. M. Tobin, college minister. Music was rendered by the college choral society and Bernard Mason and his violin. As a special feature of the forty-sixth anniversary of the college, the lyceum committee presented "The Southernaires," famed radio quartet in the college gymnasium Thursday.

Bennett College Celebrates 66th Anniversary Wednesday

Rufus E. Clement, of Atlanta, Ga., Will Deliver Founder's Day Address—Growth of School Noted.

Another milestone is being reached this week in the history of Bennett college, as the local woman's college, one of the few institutions exclusively for the higher training of negro women in the country, Wednesday celebrates its 66th birthday. The Founder's day address will be delivered by president Rufus E. Clement of Atlanta university, Atlanta, Ga.

Bennett college was first established as a coeducational institution. It was not until 1926, at the beginning of the administration of President David D. Jones, that it became a college for women. At this time Bennett had only 10 college students, a few inadequate buildings, and a budget of approximately $45,000. Today the student body numbers close to 350, representing 26 states and the District of Columbia; it has 18 modernly equipped, well-planned buildings, and capital resources of $1,500,000. It has "A" rating from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and holds membership in the American Council of Education and the Association of American Colleges.

The college is supported jointly by the board of education and the Woman's Home Missionary society of the Methodist church. However, substantial gifts have come from other organizations and individuals. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pfeiffer, of New York city, have alone contributed $447,000, which sum has been matched by the general education board of New York. The Julius Rosenwald fund, Carnegie corporation, and Phelps-Stokes fund, as well as local citizens of Greensboro, have all been generous in their support of the work of Bennett college.

From the outset, Bennett college has stressed home-making and the community ideal. Every Bennett girl must take some work in home-making, and much of the work offered at the college extends to actual service to the Bennett college community. In these activities, such as the nursery school, parents' council, and the home-making institute, the students participate. In a recent study made by Dean Flemmie P. Kittrell, it was revealed that of the 237 graduates of the college since 1930, more than 33 per cent were married and homemakers. This number is much in excess of the average percentage of married graduates of women's colleges, it was pointed out.

Early History.

In 1873 a parochial school was started in the basement of St. Matthew's Methodist Episcopal church, Greensboro, by the Freedman's aid and the Southern Education society of the Methodist Episcopal church. For the first four years the school was patronized largely by local students. However, in 1877, with the aid of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, the present site of the college was purchased. The interest of northern friends was solicited. Shortly after Lyman Bennett was in conversation with Abraham Lincoln on the question of the education of negroes in Troy, N. Y., Bennett sent $10,000 to Greensboro for the erection of Bennett hall, the first building of the college on its own campus. This building later was partially demolished by fire. The part now remaining is Carrie Barge chapel.

W. J. Parker was the first principal and Dr. Edward O. Thayer, who on December 4, 1939, will celebrate his 87th birthday, was the second president. He was followed by Wilbur Fletcher Steele. Dr. Charles N. Grandison, the first negro president of the institution, succeeded Dr. Steele. Among the administrators for the 50 years that followed were President Jordan D. Chavis, Silas A. Peeler, James E. Wallace, and Frank Trigg.

It is of interest to note that the late Judge William Tourgee wrote "A Fool's Errand", a book which elicited unusual response from the literary world, in one of the rooms of Bennett hall, as a member of the Thayer household. Wilbur Daniel Steele, celebrated short story writer, son of Wilbur Fletcher Steele, was born on the campus of Bennett college.

GRADUATE WORK DRAWS NEGROES

Approvals for Tuition Differential Payments to Require $7,200 Allotted

The State has approved enough applications for out-of-State graduate study by Negroes to require the entire $7,200 allotted for that purpose for this school year to the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, Dr. Clyde A. Erwin, State superintendent of public instruction, said yesterday.

This is the first year the State has allotted funds for such study, the allotment being included in the $50,000 yearly appropriated by the Governor and Council of State for graduate work at the Durham institution. The Council also appropriated $63,000 for the biennium for graduate work at Agricultural and Technical College for Negroes at Greensboro, but the number of students outside the State under that institution's allotment has not yet been determined.

The A. and T. board of trustees will hold a regular meeting in Greensboro Wednesday at 2 p. m. Dr. Erwin said no special business was scheduled but that the trustees might discuss the graduate work program recently approved.

Negroes desiring graduate work not offered at either of the institutions are granted a "tuition differential" and transportation to the institution they will attend outside the State. The differential is the difference between tuition for a similar course at Chapel Hill and the actual charge made by the institution the student will attend.

Dr. Erwin said most of the applicants under the Durham college's grant will study medicine, second or third year law or are working for M. A., or Ph. D. degrees. The Durham college does not give medicine, gives only first-year law this year and facilities are not yet available for graduate work in some of the liberal arts fields. It will be the first year the State ever has offered graduate work for Negroes.

The Supreme Court decision in a Missouri case that a State either had to provide adequate graduate instruction for Negroes or allow them to attend State universities giving such work led the last Legislature to authorize the graduate couses.

Dr. Erwin pointed out that the number of law students receiving out-of-state tuition differential payments would drop next year, when the Durham College begins giving second-year law, and would disappear altogether when Negroes now studying at out-of-state law schools complete their work. The Durham law school will be giving all three years law instruction within three years.

President James E. Shepherd of the Durham College approved the applications for the differential payments and sent them to Dr. Erwin for his approval which he gave.

Only One Registers For Law In N. C.

DURHAM, N. C. (ANP)—Last week, despite elaborate planning and preparations for the past year, despite a state appropriation of $14,000, a law library and a faculty composed of distinguished professors recruited from the University of North Carolina and Duke University, the law school of North Carolina College for Negroes closed its doors. Reason: Only ONE qualified student enrolled.

The school opened on Sept. 25 and closed on Sept. 30, according to a statement by President Jas. E. Shepard. Decision to postpone operation of the law school until September, 1940, was reached after a number of conferences among members of the faculty, the president, the college's board of trustees, and Governor Clyde Hoey.

The lone student who had enrolled entered the graduate school of the college, it was explained, and will reenter the law school when it reopens. One of the best law faculties in the country had been made available to Negro students at N.C.C.'s law school.

Negro Law School Suspends

Because of a Supreme Court decision last year requiring a certain Southern state to provide higher educational facilities for colored folks or to admit colored students to the state university, the 1939 Legislature made an appropriation and authorized the trustees of the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham to establish professional schools. The first to come was a law school and the result was that only one student came to study law. The law class was suspended and the matter will rest until next September.

The establishment of the law school, and other professional training courses later, at Durham, was thought the best thing to do, because the University at Chapel Hill and also Duke University had agreed to co-operate to the extent of furnishing certain professional instruction and library facilities. This would keep the cost down to a minimum. But so far it seems colored youth in North Carolina is not desirous of studying law in its own colleges. The law school was the most pressing need, so said the president of the college at Durham and others of his race, who came before the legislature to press the case.

Johnson C. Smith Is Widely Recognized

Charlotte Institution Has Developed Into One Of Leading Institutions Of Higher Learning For Negroes In United States.

Johnson C. Smith University, established in 1867, has been peculiarly fortunate in having a succession of really outstanding Negro educators at the head of the institution. Through the years, the university has graduated literally thousands of Negro men and women for the ministry, for medicine, and for civil life. Recognized throughout the country as an exceptionally well conducted college, it is perhaps even more honored in its own home, Charlotte, where it has always been held in highest esteem by thousands of its friends of both races.

Approximately 75 per cent of the Negro Presbyterian ministers in the entire South are graduates of the Theological seminary, one of the few seminaries which requires a degree of bachelor of arts for entrance. Numbers of former students now hold positions of importance, two having become members of the New York State Legislature and one a judge of the municipal court in the District of Columbia.

The teaching staff is made up of about 30 men and women of excellent background and training, and the college itself is a Grade A college, according to the standards of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The institution is also a member of the Association of American Colleges and of the American Council of Education.

10 PER CENT GET AID.

Total annual registration, including the winter roster of from 350 to 400, the summer school registration, and extension students, is in excess of 1,000. Happily, the Work Aid program and an annual income of $6,000 available for scholarships make college possible for many deserving and able young men and women who might otherwise miss the chance to show what they really can accomplish when given the chance. More than half the student body receive assistance from one or the other of the student aid agencies. About 10 per cent are remaining in college through National Youth administration assistance.

Pre-medical work is supervised by the American Medical association, and students finishing in this course usually continue at Howard university at Washington or the Meharry Medical college at Nashville.

Athletics are encouraged, but not exaggerated in relative importance. The first colored intercollegiate football game ever played was staged here in 1892 between the university and Livingston college. baseball, basketball, tennis, boxing, and other sports are enjoyed by the students.

FRATERNITY CHAPTERS.

Honorary scholastic and scientific fraternities having chapters here are Alpha Kappa Sigma, scholastic; Beta Kappa Chi, scientific; Delta Phi Delta, journalistic; Rho Omicron Sigma, debating; the English Philological society, and Le Cercle Francais. Social fraternities are Omega Psi Phi, Alpha Phi Kappa, Kappa Alpha Psi, and Phi Beta Sigma.

Dr. H. L. McCrory, president of the university, has been in that capacity now for 32 years, having taught previously, and even before that, having been himself a student at old Biddle University. His predecessor, Rev. Dr. Daniel J. Sanders, had served from 1891 until 1907. Prior to that administration the presidents had been of the white race.

The name of Biddle University was changed to Johnson C. Smith university in tribute to the munificence of Mrs. Johnson C. Smith whose contributions to the institution in the years from 1921 to 1928 amounted to $702,000. Establishment of the Duke Endowment brought an additional major source of income to the University. The Duke appropriation for Johnson C. Smith amounted to $1,300,000.

Buildings and equipment are in good condition, the library and the laboratories comparing favorably with those of much larger institutions. But the greatest endowment through the years has been that of a fine leadership.

A Monument to Co-operation

Sunday was a red letter day in the life of Winston-Salem Teachers College. "To service of God and advancement of humanity," three new and thoroughly modern buildings including the Fries Auditorium, named in honor of Henry E. Fries, long-time chairman of the college board of trustees and a loyal friend of the institution through the years, were dedicated on the campus.

The opening of these new buildings marks the steady growth under hardship and handicaps of a small Negro school which began operations in 1892 with 25 pupils into one of the outstanding teachers' colleges for the race in the South.

To the late Dr. S. G. Atkins, the founder of the institution which was formerly known as the Slater Normal and Industrial School, much of the credit for the continued existence and development of the college belongs. The genius of Dr. Atkins was employed in training Negro youth to work with their white neighbors in the building of a better and more prosperous South, and in his administrative contacts he won the friendship and co-operation of many local community leaders who helped him keep alive the struggling school which has come to mean so much to the race in North Carolina and the South.

President F. L. Atkins and Executive Secretary Jack Atkins have efficiently and conscientiously carried on the program and upheld the ideals of their illustrious father in the operation of the college since his death, and they have not lacked for the co-operation of white civic leaders like Mr. Fries, who have stood by the college from the beginning and the active interest and support of younger men who appreciate the importance of the institution and its influence upon Southern culture and interracial relationships.

These men are convinced that facilities for the education of Negro youth must be expanded in the South. The new buildings at the Teachers College, made possible through the co-operation of local citizens, the state government and the PWA, signify that this conviction is being translated into progressive action in behalf of Negro education.

ACT IS PASSED

A. and T. College to Get Technical Courses, Durham School Others.

RALEIGH, April 7.—(AP)—The 1939 general assembly took steps to authorize professional and graduate courses at two North Carolina negro colleges, in compliance with the Missouri decision of the United States Supreme court.

The legislature did not go beyond the legal requirements of the situation, however. It killed an appropriation of $98,500 for the biennium to implement the act, and required that, if the two colleges do not have funds available, they must petition the governor and council of state to make an allotment from the emergency and contingency fund.

Clyde A. Erwin, state superintendent of public instruction, said provision would probably be made first for awarding a master's degree in education at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham.

Examination Planned.

An examination of the demand for other graduate work will be made before courses will be offered in other fields, said Erwin. He added that by far the largest demand is in the teacher training group.

The bill, sponsored by Representative Murphy, of Rowan, provides for graduate and professional courses at A. and T. college, Greensboro, and at the Durham college.

Courses in law, pharmacy and library science are the only preparation in professional training mentioned in the new act. A. and T. college would offer the graduate work in technical courses, and the Durham college the advanced courses in liberal arts. The law specifically forbids any duplication of graduate work by the two colleges.

Erwin said he thought professors at Duke university and the University of North Carolina might aid in giving graduate instruction.

Murphy offered a companion appropriation bill to his measure, but the house balked at providing the $98,500 in extra funds asked to inaugurate graduate work. However, future assemblies will be nalled on for specific appropriations.

Professional And Graduate Courses To Be Established For N. C. Negroes

By JOHN PEELE

RALEIGH, April 7—(AP)—The 1939 General Assembly took steps to authorize professional and graduate courses at two North Carolina Negro colleges, in compliance with the Missouri decision of the United States Supreme Court.

The legislature did not go beyond the legal requirements of the situation, however. It killed an appropriation of $98,500 for the biennium to implement the act, and required that, if the two colleges did not have funds available, they must petition the governor and council of state to make an allotment from the emergency and contingency fund.

An examination of the demand for other graduate work will be made before course will be offered in other fields, said Erwin. He added that by far the largest demand is in the teacher training group.

The bill, sponsored by Representative Murphy of Rowan, provides for graduate and professional courses at A. and T. College for Negroes at Greensboro and at the Durham college.

Courses in law, pharmacy and library science are the only preparation in professional training mentioned in the new act. A. and T. College would offer the graduate work in technical courses, and the Durham college the advanced courses in liberal arts. The law specifically forbids any duplication of graduate work by the two Negro colleges.

Erwin said he thought professors at Duke University and the University of North Carolina might aid in giving graduate instruction.

The law also provides that Negro students going out of North Carolina to get graduate training they are unable to obtain in this state are to have their tuition and certain other expenses paid by the state.

Murphy offered a companion appropriation bill to his measure, but the House balked at providing the $98,500 in extra funds asked to inaugurate graduate work.

However, future assemblies will be called on for specific appropriations.

The legislature also changed the names of the Fayetteville and Elizabeth City Normal School for Negroes to the Fayetteville State Teachers College and the Elizabeth City State Teachers colleges.

The two new schools have expanded their curricula this year to provide a full four-year college courses to train "A" certificate Negro school teachers.

Dr. Jas. E. Shepard Honored By N. C. College Alumni

Journal and Guide 4-29-39

By WILLIAM A. TUCK

DURHAM, N. C. — About 75 members of the North Carolina College Alumni Association gathered in the college dining hall Friday evening, April 21, to pay tribute to President J. E. Shepard, founder of the institution, who is in his 28th year of service.

DR. SHEPARD

The occasion was a testimonial dinner and speeches and testimonials were made by the alumni officials as well as by Prof. W. G. Pearson, principal of Hillside Park high school, and Dr. C. C. Spaulding of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, both of whom have been friends of Dr. Shepard since their boyhood days.

Dr. James M. Hubbard, (class of 1915) president of the general alumni association, was toastmaster, and in his introductory remarks he paid excellent tribute to Dr. Shepard, his wife, and mother. He said:

". . .Lest we forget, the great achievement of this institution was carried out by an earthly trinity, his mother, Mrs. H. A. Shepard, his wife, Mrs. Annie Daye, and himself. His mother to guide and council with him her prayers; his wife to grasp the reins and drive along with him, and himself to take position in the front lines of battle to protect us. . . .We pledge our souls to protect and we will not stand for ingrates, reactionaries, and radicals to destroy overnight what has taken thirty years to build."

Greetings from the Durham Alumni Association came from Herman Riddick, (class of 1933) president, who paid tribute to President Shepard for his traits of helpfulness to humanity, faithfulness to an institution, and to an ideal.

"The spirit that men and women get at this institution," said Prof. Pearson, "is the kind of spirit that builds the world. . . .Like Abraham Lincoln's work, the work of Dr. Shepard will continuously be reenacted until some of you youngsters begin to make more worthwhile accomplishments."

Dr. Spaulding said: "Dr. Shepard is a genius; he is an artist. The art found at N. C. College has been transferred to the hundreds of young people who have gone out and transferred it to other young people."

Miss Juanita Yeates (class of 38) rendered a vocal solo which was followed by an original poem of tribute by Miss Morine Dixon. Dean James T. Taylor, general alumni secretary, read messages from several members of the alumni who were unable to attend the dinner. There were messages from the various cities in North Carolina as well as Massachusetts, Virginia, Indiana, and New York.

The feature of the evening was the presentation of a beautiful loving cup to Dr. Shepard from the alumni by H. M. Michaux, chairman of the testimonial committee. In response to this very fine expression of affection and esteem, Dr. Shepard said:

"I'd rather have the affection of the graduates of tihs institution than to have the love of any group in the world."

He commended the alumni for giving honor to his wife and mother who have always given their unstinted physical and moral support to the progress of the institution.

Presentations to Mrs. Annie D. Shepard and Mrs. H. E. Shepard were made by Mrs. Beatrice Underwood (class of '20), of Louisburg

Around 75 members of the alumni association of the North Carolina Colleges for Negroes paid tribute to President James E. Shepard, now in his 28th year as head of the institution, at a dinner Friday night.

Those on the program included W. G. Pearson, principal of Hillside Park high school and C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance company, both of whom have been friends of Dr. Shepard since boyhood.

Dr. James M. Hubbard of the class of 1915, president of the general alumni association, was toastmaster.

A cup from the alumni was presented to Dr. Shepard by H. M. Michaux, chairman of the testimonial committee. In response Dr. Shepard declared:

"I'd rather have the affection of the graduates of this institution than to have the love of any group in the world."

Messages from alumni unable to attend the dinner came from various cities of North Carolina, Massachusetts, Virginia, Indiana, New York and Florida.

Greetings from the Durham alumni association were given by Herman Riddick of the class of 1933.

NCCN LAW SCHOOL TO OPEN SEPT. 25

Dean M. T. Van Hecke To Serve As Dean Of Department For First Year

The North Carolina College for Negroes announces the opening of its department of law on September 25. Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the University of North Carolina has agreed to act as dean of the department for a period of one year. The department is expected to be one of the most outstanding schools of law in the south.

President James E. Shepard in making the announcement said: "One of the most fortunate things which could occur was the acceptance of the post by Dean Van Hecke and other instructors who have agreed to serve for the year. He said the acceptances mean much for the co-operation of the races in the state and in the south along all helpful lines.

Professors John F. Dazell, Donald W. Markham and Fred B. McCall of the University of North Carolina and Professor Douglas Maggs of Duke university will teach during the first semester, while in the second semester Professors Millard S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina and Douglas Poteat of Duke university law school will serve as instructors.

In an accompanying statement, Dean Van Hecke said:

"The arrangement whereby the instructional, library and administrative work of the law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes will be carried on this year by members of the faculties of the law school of Duke university and of the University of North Carolina should be regarded as temporary and provisional in character, to be continued only until qualified Negroes can be recruited for the service. Meanwhile, these representatives of the neighboring law schools are proud of the opportunity to co-operate with the authorities of the North Carolina College for Negroes during the new law school's formative period. Every effort will be made to extend through this school to members of the Negro race the same opportunities for a legal education as are afforded now at Duke university and at the University of North Carolina.

"The law school will be operated upon the semester system instead of the quarter system and the fall term will open on Monday, September 25. The spring term will open early in February. During the fall semester the curriculum will consist of courses in contracts I, personal property, real property I and torts. Each course will meet three hours a week and will be taught, respectively, by Professors John P. Dalzell, Donald W. Markham and Fred B. McCall, all of the University of North Carolina, and by Professor Douglas Maggs of Duke university. During the spring semester the curriculum will consist of courses in agency, civil procedure I, contracts I and torts. The last two subjects mentioned will be continuations of the courses begun in the fall and will be carried on by the same instructors and for the same amount of credit. The course in agency will be taught by Professor Millard S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina and the course in civil procedure 1 by Professor Douglas Poteat of the Duke university law school. As indicated, during the year 1939-1940 only a first year program of study will be offered. The second year curriculum will be added in 1940-1941, and a third year in 1941-1942.

"The law library will be purchased, installed and organized by Miss Lucile Elliott, law librarian of the University of North Carolina. And I will take charge of the administration of the school for the year or until a qualified Negro law school administrator can be secured.

"The entrance requirements and the standards of work which will have to be met by students in the law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes will be the same as those in effect at the University of North Carolina. Thus those seeking admission to the law school must have completed with an average grade of C the first three years of college work leading to an academic degree from the North Carolina College for Negroes or some other Negro college approved as a class "A" standard four-year college by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. If the student comes from a college rated as class "B" by this association he must have graduated with a bachelor's degree and with an average grade of C on all of his undergraduate work.

"We earnestly hope that everyone interested in legal education in North Carolina will join with us in helping this new venture to get started under the most encouraging conditions and constructive auspices."

Dr. Jackson Selected to Head Trustees of Bennett College

Successor to Bishop Brown Chosen At Board Meeting At Which Mrs. Pfeiffer Is Honored—President Jones Reports.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—At a meeting of the board of trustees of Bennett college, convened here yesterday, Dr. W. C. Jackson, administrative dean of Woman's college, Greensboro, N. C., was elected chairman to succeed Bishop Wallace E. Brown, of Chattanooga, Tenn., whose membership with the board terminated with his transfer from the district. Dr. Jackson was formerly vice chairman of the board of trustees and chairman of the executive committee.

A testimonial in honor of Mrs. Henry Pfeiffer, of New York city, who, together with her late husband, has given to Bennett college nearly half a million dollars, was tendered her by the board of trustees in the early evening Monday, and there followed a conference in interest of Bennett college and the education of women in the south. Both meetings were held at the national headquarters of the Young Women's Christian association. Friends of the college and the board were invited and declared themselves highly gratified with the work of Bennett college.

Mrs. Millard L. Robinson, of New York city, a member of the board of trustees, presided at the evening conference. Guest speakers included Virginia Simmons, class of '34, Bennett college, recently returned from a year of study at Grenoble, France, and Dr. Jackson Davis, of the General Education board, New York city, who expressed the gratitude of his organization for the work being done by Bennett college in the cause of the education of negro womanhood.

Board's Interest Shown.

The interest of the General Education board in Bennett college has been manifested through gifts totalling a sum almost equivalent to the gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Pfeiffer. The most recent gift of the board was the Thomas F. Holgate library, which was matched in endowment by Mrs. Pfeiffer.

The meeting was interspersed by piano renditions by Dr. R. Nathaniel Dett, noted composer and conductor, of his own compositions, and the singing of the Bennett Alumnae quartet, under his direction. Dr. Dett is director of music at Bennett college.

At the morning meeting of the board of trustees, President David D. Jones gave his annual report in full. Many matters of importance were deferred at the April meeting, because of the death of Mr. Pfeiffer, until the meeting Monday. The recommendation of the building and grounds committee, of which Mrs. Julius W. Cone, of Greensboro, N. C., is chairman, that faculty cottages be constructed, and approved. Construction will begin immediately, it was learned here. Mrs. Millard Robinson was added to the investment committee.

NEW PEAK ATTAINED AT A. AND T. COLLEGE

With 811 Enrolled, Previous High Record Surpassed. Freshmen Number 300.

A report from the office of the registrar at A. and T. college lists the enrolment figures for the fall quarter to date as the largest in the history of the institution. Eight hundred and eleven students are enroled for the fall term as compared with 732 for the same period last year.

It was also reported by the registrar's office that all dormitory space is taken. Many students have been turned away for this reason.

The school of education and science leads in enrolment figures with a total of 316 students registered as compared with 294 for last fall term. The school of mechanic arts is second with 237 students as compared with 222 last fall term. Last, is the school of agriculture with 223 students as compared with a total of 236 last year.

Twelve students are enroled in the graduate school and 23 are unclassified as to departmental work. The freshman class is the largest in the history of the institution with 300 enroled.

LOGAN DRUMAND DELANY,

DURHAM, N.C. — Because Logan Drummond Delany was the first and only colored student enrolled in the law school of the North Carolina College in Durham, which opened on September 25, closed its doors on Saturday, September 30, with the hope of re-opening in 1940, it was announced by President James E. Shepard.

Nephew of Hubert Delany

Mr. Delany, who is a nephew of Hubert T. Delany, tax commissioner of New York City and a graduate of St. Augustine College, Raleigh, has entered the graduate school of the college, expecting to re-enter the law school when it re-opens in September, 1940.

The decision to postpone operation of the school was reached after numerous conferences among members of the faculty, President Shepard, the board of trustees of the college, and Governor Hoey.

The teaching staff of the law school, recruited from the law faculties of Duke University and the University of North Carolina, are expected to constitute the nucleus of the faculty when the

Law Classes At N. C. College Discontinued Temporarilly

Only One Student Enrolls For First Class; To Reopen In September 1940

DURHAM, N. C.—Classes of the newly instituted law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes were discontinued early last week when only one applicant qualified for entrance before the deadline set for registration.

M. T. Van Hecke, dean of the University of North Carolina, in charge of the administration for this year or until a qualified Negro law school administrator could be secured, explained that the study of law required discussion groups and that a class of one student was not only a hardship on the instructor but unfair to the student.

The school began at the regular opening of the school year, September 25 and registration ended September 30. It was first thought that at least 10 students would comprise the first class.

Dean Van Hecke described the sole student as "apt and able to grasp the study" and the other representatives of the neighboring law school faculties had appeared anxious to have the opportunity to cooperate with the authorities of the North Carolina College for Negroes during the new law school's formative period.

Logan Delany, sole student of the school, was offered an opportunity to study at another school in another jurisdiction, but he thought it best to study another course at college and make the change next year.

Unless present plans are altered, the school will reopen September, 1940.

Rufus E. Clement, Atlanta University President, In 66th Anniversary Message

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—(SNS)—Another milestone was reached last week in the history of Bennett College, as the local woman's college, one of the few institutions exclusively for the higher training of young women in the country, Wednesday celebrated its 66th birthday. The Founder's day address was delivered by President Rufus E. Clement, of Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga.

Bennett College was first established as a coeducational institution. It was not until 1926, at the beginning of the administration of President Davis D. Jones, that it became a college for women. At this time Bennett had only 10 college students, a few inadequate buildings, and a budget of approximately $45,000. Today the student body numbers close to 350, representing 26 states and the District of Columbia; it has 18 modernly equipped, well-planned buildings, and capital resources of $1,500,000. It has "A" rating from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and holds membership in the American Council of Education and the Association of American Colleges.

The college is supported jointly by the board of education and the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Church. However, substantial gifts have come from other organizations and individuals. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pfeiffer, of New York City, have alone contributed $447,000, which sum has been matched by the general education board of New York. The Julius Rosenwald fund, Carnegie corporation and Phelps-Stokes fund, as well as local citizens of Greensboro, have all been generous in their support of the work of Bennett College.

From the outset, Bennett College has stressed home-making and the community ideal. Every Bennett girl must take some work in home-making, and much of the work at the college extends to actual service to the Bennett College community. In these activities, such as the nursery school, parents' council, and the home-making institute, the students participate. In a recent study made by Dean Flemmie P. Kittrell, it was revealed that the 237 graduates of the college since 1930, more than 33 per cent were married and homemakers. This number is much in excess of the average percentage of married graduates of women's colleges, it was pointed out.

In 1873 a parochial school was started in the basement of St. Matthef's Methodist Episcopal church Greensboro, by the Freeman's aid and the Southern Education Society of the Methodist Episcopal church. For the first four years the school was patronized largely by local students. However, in 1877, with the aid of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, the present site of the college was purchased. The interest of northern friends was solicited. Shortly after Lyman Bennett was in conversation with Abraham Lincoln on the question of the education of Negroes in Troy, New York, Bennett sent $10,000 to Greensboro for the erection of Bennett hall, the first building of the college on its own campus. This building later was partially demolished by fire. The part now remaining is Carrie Barge chapel.

K. J. Parker was the first principal and Dr. Edward O. Thayer, who on December 4, 1939, will celebrate his 87th birthday, was the second president. He was followed by Wilbur Fletcher Steele. Dr. Charles N. Grandison, the first Negro president of the institution.

It is of interest to note that the late Judge Willam Tourgee wrote "A Fool's Errand", a book which elicited unusual response from the literary world—in one of the rooms of Bennett hall, as a member of the Thayer household. Wilbur Daniel Steele, celebrated short story writer, son of Wilbur Fletcher Steele, was born on the campus of Bennett College.

Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown To Open Series Of "Charm" Schools

To Lecture At Florida College First

SEDALIA, N. C.—(SNS)— Presidents of some of the leading colleges are taking advantage of Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown's pioneer experience and successful efforts in building up the most unique school in our group which emphasizes a cultural approach to life.

Palmer Memorial Institute adopted the program of the New England finishing schools and for twenty-five years or more has been singled out because of the cultural atmosphere it has created and the mark of refinement exhibited by its graduates in other schools and in the communities where they go.

The school has remained small so that the personal contact with the president might insure results from practice as well as theory. As proof of this, many schools like Wellesley and Radcliffe where the students have entered and taken high rank offer scholarships to Palmer ranking graduates for further work.

AT FLORIDA FIRST

Dr. Brown will conduct "Charm Schools" at the Florida A. and M. College, Tallahassee, Florida; Alabama A. and M. Institute, Normal, Alabama; State Teachers College, Montgomery, Alabama; Tuskegee Institute; Georgia State College, Savannah, Georgia and S. C. State at Orangeburg.

This and succeeding tours to other colleges precedes the publishing of a book on etiquette for the young and old which will naturally have a wide distribution because of the reputation of this indefatigable educator, herself a woman of refinement and culture, always a credit to the race in private or public performance.

DROPS COLLEGE DEPT.

So anxious is Dr. Brown to get this program of culture and common sense, which lauds the work of the hand and the cultivation of the heart, she is petitioning the Trustees to drop the Junior College Department that she may devote all of her time to the school which will do Junior and Senior High School work as an "A" grade college preparatory school, and she hopes to reach out into the college life of the members of our race through the "Charm School" idea which, at the invitation of these college presidents, she will conduct from time to time.

No woman in the race is more fitted to be selected on the authority of social usage, and parents will hail with much delight the peer and equal of Emily Post in the Negro group.

Leading Colleges To Feature Most Needed Requisite For Refinement

By HELEN E. ARRANT

CHARLESTON, N. C., March 23—Presidents of some of the leading colleges are taking advantage of Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown's pioneer experience and successful efforts in building up the most unique school in our group which emphasizes a cultural approach to life. Palmer Memorial Institute adopted the program of the New England finishing schools and for 25 years or more has been singled out because of the cultural atmosphere it has created and the mark of refinement exhibited by its gradautes in other schools and in the communities where they go.

The school has remained small so that the personal contact with the president might insure results from practice as well as theory. As proof of this, many schools like Wellesley and Radcliffe, where the students have entered and taken high rank offer scholarships to Palmer ranking graduates for further work.

DROPS JUNIOR COLLEGE DEPARTMENT

So anxious is Dr. Brown to get this program of culture and common sense, which lauds the work of the hand and the cultivation of the heart, she is petitioning the trustees to drop the Junior College Department that she may devote all of her time to the school which will do Junior and High School work as an "A" grade college preparatory school, and she hopes to reach out into the college life of the members of our race through the "Charm School" idea which, at the invitation of these college presidents, she will conduct from time to time.

Dr. Brown feels that the Negro shuts himself out of many contacts because he has not acquired the grace and ease of movement in society and is ignorant of the "Correct Thing," the title of the book soon to be published.

No woman in the race is more fitted to be selected on the authority of social usage, and parents will hail with much delight the peer and equal of Emily Post in the Negro group.

NEGRO GRADUATE COURSES OKEHED

Assembly Sought 'Least Expensive' Compliance With Court Ruling

BY JOHN PEELE

RALEIGH, April 7.—(AP)—The 1929 general assembly took steps to authorize professional and graduate courses at two North Carolina negro colleges, in compliance with the Missouri decision of the United States supreme court.

The legislature did not go beyond the legal requirements of the situation, however. It killed an appropriation of $98,500 for the biennium to implement the act, and required that, if the two colleges did not have funds available, they must petition the governor and council of state to make an allotment from the emergency and contingency fund.

Clyde A. Erwin, state superintendent of public instruction, said provision would probably be made first for awarding a master's degree in education at the North Carolina college for negroes in Durham.

An examination of the demand for other graduate work will be made before course will be offered in other fields, said Erwin. He added that by far the largest demand is in the teacher training group.

The bill, sponsored by Representative Murphy of Rowan, provides for graduate and professional courses at A. and T. college for negroes at Greensboro, and at the Durham college.

Courses in law, pharmacy and library science are the only preparation in professional training mentioned in the new act. A. and T. college could offer the graduate work in technical courses, and the Durham college the advanced courses in liberal arts. The law specifically forbids any duplication of graduate work by the two negro colleges.

Erwin said he thought professors at Duke university and the University of North Carolina might aid in giving graduate instruction.

The law also provides that negro students going out of North Carolina to get graduate training they are unable to obtain in this state are to have their tuition and certain other expenses paid by the state.

Murphy offered a companion appropriation bill to his measure, but the house balked at providing the $98,500 in extra funds asked to inaugurate graduate work.

However, future assemblies will be called on for specific appropriations.

The legislature also changed the names of the Fayetteville and Elizabeth City normal schools for negroes to the Fayetteville State Teachers college and the Elizabeth City State Teachers college.

The two new schools have expanded their curricula this year to provide a full four-year college course to train "A" certificate negro school teachers.

Assembly Complied With Supreme Court Decision

Advanced Courses Provided for Negroes; Changed Names Two Schools

Raleigh, Apr. 7.—(AP)—The 1939 General Assembly took steps to authorize professional and graduate courses at two North Carolina Negro colleges, in compliance with the Missouri decision of the United States Supreme Court.

The Legislature did not go beyond the legal requirements of the situation, however. Bennett Plans Various Events

New Library Dedication Will Feature Activities

Next week-end will feature many important events on the campus of Bennett college, with the dedication of the new $100,000 Thomas F. Holgate library, the gift of the general education board of New York city, holding the spotlight. In naming the building Bennett college pays tribute to the many years of faithful service rendered by Dr. Thomas F. Holgate, treasurer of the board of trustees and dean emeritus of Northwestern university.

Dr. Jackson Davis, associate director of the general education board, will deliver the dedicatory address. At a thanksgiving service at the St. Matthews Methodist Episcopal church at 11 o'clock, Bishop Wallace E. Brown, Chattanooga, Tenn., chairman of the board of trustees of Bennett college, will be the principal speaker. Mrs. W. H. C. Goode, Sidney, O., president of the Woman's Home Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church and also a member of the board of trustees of Bennett college, will lead the dedicatory ceremony. On this occasion greetings will be brought by Mrs. Jane H. Freeman, Delaware, O.; Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Washington; Dr. Merrill J. Holmes, Chicago; President M. S. Davage, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Florence R. Curtis, Hampton, Va., and a representative of the state department of public instruction, Raleigh.

Conference Scheduled.

On the day prior to the dedication, a conference of the negro librarians of North Carolina, sponsored by the college, will informally open the library. This conference will honor Florence Curtis, director of the Hampton Institute Library school, Hampton, Va., whose services over a period of years in interpreting and guiding library service in the negro colleges throughout the south have been invaluable. Discussions at this one-day conference will include a consideration of the work of the library technician and that of the librarian as a coordinator of all the educational forces on the campus, the planning of small libraries, and recreational reading interests of students. A high light will be a discussion of contemporary American fiction by Zora Neale Hurston, well known student of folklore and prominent author of works on negro life.

The exhibition rooms of the library will carry 30 paintings selected from the national collection of fine arts, the American Federation of Arts, the National museum and Howard university.

Some of the works of Malvin Gray Johnson, a native of Greensboro, and of Charles Alston, of North Carolina, both negroes, will be shown by courtesy of the Harmon foundation of New York.

Also there will be an exhibit of books dealing with the history of Guilford county, North Carolina, in which will be included manuscripts and early editions of O. Henry, Tourgee and others of literary note in the local community. In this collection will be a first edition of "Figs and Thistles", an historic novel by Tourgee, written on the Bennett college campus. The exhibition will include finally a collection of works on the history of the negro. Among these will be early editions of the works of Whyllis Wheatley and Frederick Douglas and an autographed copy of "Tropic Winter" and "The Ordering of Moses", both first editions of the compositions of Dr. R. Nathaniel Dett.

Follows Georgian Style.

The Thomas F. Holgate library, built of red brick with limestone and wrought iron trimmings, follows the Georgian style of architecture of the other structures recently completed on the college campus, and is imposing in its setting surrounded by massive oaks. It is modern and complete in every detail and has a book capacity of more than 60,000. The building will be ready for immediate use following the dedication.

On Friday morning, April 14, at 11 o'clock, the annual Easter roll call of the North Carolina annual conference will be held at Bennett college. Saturday afternoon, late, following the librarians' conference, the cornerstone will be laid in the new library, and on Monday, April 17, a conference of the presidents of Methodist colleges will be held at Bennett college.

N. C. GRADUATE SCHOOL FOR NEGROES IS URGED

Need for Professional Training Stressed By President

RALEIGH, N. C.— The North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, its physical plant greatly enlarged in recent years through Federal aid and with State support for operation, has been dreaming of a graduate school and last week Governor Clyde R. Hoey recommended to the Legislature that funds be provided for this purpose.

This marks the progress of an institution of which the president, James E. Shepard, said a decade ago: "It has comparatively nothing except a beautiful campus."

In the last two years the Public Works Administration and the Works Progress Administration have spent or authorized about $400,000 for the campus. When matched by funds, the total is impressive.

The college traces its history back to 1910. Dr. Shepard's hope is that the institution can soon have a graduate school. In 1910, Dr. Shepard, then pastor of the White Rock Baptist Church of Durham, founded the National Religious Training School and Chautauqua after observing the poor equipment of Negro preachers.

Before long the theological aspects were dropped. There were financial difficulties and reorganization, and then in 1921 the State assumed support of the institution, calling it the Durham State Normal School. In 1936 it was renamed the North Carolina College for Negroes. During the 1925-26 term the college had forty-seven students. The enrollment for the current term is 463.

Last year the PWA built an auditorium, library, dormitory, and six faculty cottages. Contemplated under the same agency are a science building, another dormitory, a laundry and a combination home economics building and senior cottage. The WPA has built an athletic field, a gymnasium and a garage, besides doing much grading and draining.

Three degrees are offered: Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Science in Commerce.

The National Resources Committee, in its recent study of population trends, stated that an increasing number of persons is being employed in professional and distributive endeavors, and commented:

"If the trend established in the past decade continues in the future most of the new jobs must be sought where there is opportunity for taking part in complex industrial and commercial processes or in servicing community needs."

The proportion of North Carolina's population engaged in what the census calls "professional service" is small. Of the 2,251,629 white persons in the State recorded in the 1930 census, 41,503 or 1.843 per cent was engaged in professional service. Of the 918,647 Negroes counted, 9,789 or 1.066 per cent was engaged in professional service.

Dr. Shepard asserts that the Negro is being crowded out of such "traditional" jobs as barbering, elevator operating and street cleaning. The condition has been aggravated by the depression. He expresses the belief that Negroes trained in the professions can practice among members of their own race and find sufficient outlet for their talents. He envisions a graduate school that would be guided at the beginning by nearby Duke University and the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Shepard has a simple argument for Negro education.

"A trained anything is better than an untrained one," he says.

ONE NEGRO IS SEEKING ADMITTANCE TO U. N. C.

Official Check-Up Follows News Story That Several Have Applied.

CHAPEL HILL, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Only one negro is pressing a claim for admission to any school or division of the University of North Carolina here, President Frank P. Graham said today after conducting a survey of every department.

The official check-up was made after the student newspaper had printed a news story saying "a rumor persisted that approximately a dozen negro citizens of North Carolina have applied for admittance to the university since the New York woman's attempt at entrance."

Dean W. W. Pierson, Jr., said the graduate school "during the past several years had received applications for admission from three negroes" but added that "only the recent one from the New York woman could be considered an active application at present.

"One of the applications," he explained, "was from a person definitely ineligible on academic grounds, and the third was from a woman who has not pressed her claim. We have received inquiries from two other negroes regarding the policy of the state, but they did not apply for admission."

President Graham said that, so far as could be determined from the records, these were the only applications the university had ever received from negroes.

The results of a poll of graduate students, conducted today by the Daily Tar Heel, student newspaper, in an effort to determine sentiment for and against the admission of negroes to the graduate school here, were not taken seriously by the campus, in view of the fact the ballot box was not supervised and no signatures were required.

The Tar Heel reported that 82 votes favored admission to the graduate school and that 32 opposed it. Assuming all these votes were authentic, which is regarded on the campus as doubtful, they would represent only one-fourth of the present enrollment of 405 in the graduate school, it was stated.

The Tar Heel had reported previously that a survey by its reporters showed campus opinion to be overwhelmingly opposed to admission of negroes.

A GRADUATE COURSE IS TO BE PROVIDED

Raleigh, Jan. 10.—(U.P.)—A bill to authorize the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham to provide graduate courses was introduced in the house today by Representative Walter Murphy, of Rowan county.

This measure followed a recommendation for such action by Gov. Clyde R. Hoey in his message to the legislature last week.

The measure provides that when 10 or more negro students should qualify for graduate work in the fields of liberal arts and sciences that advanced courses should be offered. It provided also that other graduate studies should be offered if the need arose for them.

Murphy pointed out that it was "the duty of the state" to provide such facilities. His bill specified that if the current appropriation of Durham college was not sufficient, that the trustees might ask the budget committee for additional funds.

The house was in session 17 minutes and a number of local bills were introduced. The senate, meeting for a 10 minute session, received three bills and heard an announcement that the judiciary number one committee would meet at 10 a. m. tomorrow to begin consideration of a measure to abolish the state lethal gas chamber.

The senate and house appropriations and finance committee will meet at 2:30 p. m. in a joint session.

The senate meets at noon tomorrow and the house at 11:30 a. m.

At 12:15 p. m., Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, will address a joint session of the house and senate.

NEGRESS APPLIES TO ENTER CAROLINA

President Graham Out Of Town, And Governor Refuses To Comment On Case

Chapel Hill, Jan. 5.—(Special)—President Frank P. Graham had on his desk today an application from a Negro woman, now living in New York city, for admission to the graduate school of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Graham was out of town, but his secretary, Miss Katherine Lackey, said the application likely would be handled in the same way as several other applications that have been received from Negroes from time to time.

Miss Lackey said she was not at liberty to give the name of the applicant.

Graduate Dean W. W. Pierson, Jr., who received the letter of application, referred the matter to Administrative Dean R. B. House, who in turn referred it to President Graham.

Such an application was not unexpected in view of the recent decision of the United States supreme court granting Lloyd Gaines, Missouri Negro, the right to attend the University of Missouri law school if equal facilities were not provided for in other Negro law schools of that state.

Possible Solution

The New York Negress' application is regarded by some observers here, as the first of a number of such cases that may be expected in southern educational institutions as the result of the supreme court ruling.

One solution of the problem in this state, it was pointed out, would be to provide graduate and professional courses for Negroes at North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham and at the A. and T. college., as was advocated by Governor Clyde R. Hoey in his message to the legislature today.

The North Carolina state constitution decrees separate educational institutions for the two races.

"One or two Negroes who have sought admission to the University's Law and Pharmacy Schools in the past have, after proving qualified for such courses, been sent to institutions in other states, their tution being paid by this state," one University offical said.

Faculty opinion today was that, should the New York Negress resort to legal action, the university administration would submit the case to the board of trustees, who in turn might submit it to the legislature.

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
January 15, 1939

THE GOVERNOR FRANKLY MEETS THE ISSUE.

The recent application of the New York Negress to the graduate school of the University of North Carolina was no surprise to anyone who had been reading of the Missouri Negro who applied for admission to the law school of the university of that State and, refused, took his case to the United States Supreme Court which rendered a decision favorable to him. The Association for the Advancement of Colored People was behind that appeal and undoubtedly is behind the application of the New York woman to our university. Obviously, this is the beginning of a campaign which the Association is preparing to carry on in all the Southern States.

Now that this issue has been raised, the sooner a Southern State definitely outlines its policy in the matter, the less trouble there is likely to be. Hence Governor Hoey, in his message to the Legislature, very wisely took note of the Supreme Court's recent decision and recommended that, as we have now no provision for the education of Negroes in special courses in law, pharmacy or medicine, "such courses as are deemed necessary and essential" be established at the N. C. College for Negroes in Durham, and if additional courses are required in agriculture or technology, these be provided at the Negro A. and T. College in Greensboro.

The Governor was properly emphatic in saying that North Carolina "does not believe in social equality between the races and will not tolerate mixed schools for the races." This policy of strict racial segregation which we have always followed in this State has the soundest biological basis, and there is no chance whatever that it will be modified—or so I believe and hope. The fact that it is financially the more expensive policy ought not to be of any weight.

I confess that I was astounded and disturbed to read that in a poll of members of the graduate school at Chapel Hill conducted by the University's student newspaper in which approximately a fourth of the graduate students voted, the sentiment in favor of admission of Negroes to this school was more than twice that opposed. This indication of our new "liberalism" is not too reassuring to me, for one. However, the feeling of the students in the University as a whole is said to be overwhelmingly opposed, and the University authorities are quoted as favoring separate institutions.

In justice, we cannot deny the Negro equal opportunities for professional or graduate education when he demands them, but the probability is that for a number of years only a handful of Negroes will attend local professional and graduate schools if the State provides them. It would be more practical if for some years still we might follow the policy already adopted toward the few Negroes who have sought education of this sort within the State, that is, of having the State pay their expenses in institutions elsewhere. But the Association for the Advancement of Colored People would be likely to make trouble if continuation of such a compromise were attempted. Consequently, the Governor's swift and frank recognition of the problem and his recommendations for its solution were undoubtedly the most effective way of dealing with it.

North Carolina is in a better position than some of the other Southern States which have been more backward in Negro education, for we already have two Negro colleges at which additional courses can be established. Those in graduate studies, pharmacy and law should present no very serious difficulties of expense. Those in medicine, however, are another matter, and I shall be especially interested to see how the Legislature deals with that phase.

"We understand each other in the South," the Governor declared, "and we can work out our destiny in a spirit of consideration and understanding." He is right, and it is to be devoutly hoped that we may be allowed to do so without interference or pressure from any outside group which would only muddy the waters and stir up bad feeling. We are thoroughly capable of dealing with this problem without any assistance from outside the State.

RAHAM DISCUSSES NEGRO APPLICATION

Only Authoritative Answer To Question Can Be Given By State, Says U. N. C. Head

Chapel Hill, Jan. 7.—(Special)—Asked today for a statement regarding the possible provision by North Carolina for Negro students in this state who desire to take graduate and professional work, President Frank P. Graham said "the only authoritative answer to the question, as a basic matter of law and public policy, can be given by the state."

President Graham pointed out that long before the Missouri decision of the United States supreme court, he held the position that equal provision in graduate and professional work should be made by the state at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham and in the field of agriculture and technology, at the state A. and T. college for Negroes in Greensboro. He still holds this position as "a wise answer to the question gradually to be worked out," he said.

He several times has expressed the view that it would be a fine thing for the University of North Carolina and Duke university to cooperate with the North Carolina College for Negroes in making appropriate provision for professional and graduate work at the Negro institution. Some conferences were held looking to this end before the Missouri decision.

President Graham observed that Governor Hoey's state commission appointed to study the question "is taking a wise long range view of the whole matter as a basis for action by the legislature in the determination of the public policy of the state for its state institutions."

Asked about the resolutions passed at the recent Birmingham conference on human welfare, he said none was passed regarding social equality of the races or regarding segregation in schools, trains, or buses.

He said resolutions were passed in favor of such matters as "equal justice and opportunity for Negroes; for suffrage qualification to be based on education rather than the poll tax; for readjustment of freight rates on a basis of fairness to the industrial, agricultural, and business interests of the south; for federal aid to the states for public education as a matter of justice to rural America in general and the south in particular, with its disproportionately heavy educational load; for state as well as national social legislation in behalf of farmers and all workers as the most basic groups in American society."

President Graham also said that in line with the established policy of no segregation in seating arrangements for specified interracial conferences long observed in North Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and several other distinctly southern states but contrary, as it developed, to the policy in Birmingham, a resolution was passed in favor of holding such conferences only in those southern cities which permitted what he called "the North Carolina-Georgia policy of no seating segregation for specified interracial conferences."

President Graham said that he along with hundreds of other white North Carolinians, had attended such conferences leading churches in this st

The university's nt said "the Negroes of N Carolina with their fine se lities and justly deep racial ect, are not trying to bre gh any purely social and personal barriers. The Negroes are not basically demanding social equality but social justice and equality of opportunity. They do not desire interracial marriage but interracial understanding, respect, goodwill and cooperation in building a fairer and more productive south in a more prosperous and nobler America."

President Graham said that interracial relations in North Carolina were "comparatively on a progressively improving basis, as witnessed by the almost entire elimination of lynching and a fairer distribution of the public school fund."

He expressed the hope that "we will not allow the present issues concerning higher education for Negroes to cause us to lose our sense of perspective and to impair the surely developing social conscience making for social justice and interracial goodwill."

Negro Wants In University

Legal Questions Involved; Consultation With The Attorney General

RESULT COURT DECISION

As a result of the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, that under the "civil rights amendment" to the Constitution a state must provide equal educational opportunities for white and negroes, a negro woman in New York has sent to W. W. Pierson, dean of the University of North Carolina graduate school, a letter requesting that she be admitted as a student there.

No reply has been made yet. President Graham, Dean House, and Dean Pierson are to discuss the matter with the state authorities. There are legal questions invovled, and the state attorney general will be consulted. In view of the North Carolina statute requiring that the two races be educated separately, the present request could not be granted without being considered by the University trustees.

If as appears to be the case, the applicant is not a citizen of North North Carolina, the Supreme Court decision will not apply to her.

The decision did not say that whites and negroes must be educated together, only that they must be treated equally in the quality of the education provided. A state may, if it chooses, comply with the decision by establishing new negro institutions or improving those already in existence. After the publication of the decision President Graham said he thought that the proper solution of the problem was the provision of adequate facilities at negro institutions.

Greensboro, N. C., News
January 10, 1939

A SITUATION THAT WILL HAVE TO BE MET.

President Graham, of the University of North Carolina, says that the negroes of North Carolina, "with their sensibilities and justly deep racial self-respect' are but demanding social justice and equality of opportunity; desiring inter-racial understanding, respect, good-will and co-operation "in building a fairer and more productive south in a more prosperous and nobler America."

As the United States Supreme court has required Missouri to provide graduate and professional education facilities for negroes, North Carolina will be required to meet any similar demand, from a negro citizen of this state. It is inevitable that some such demand will be presented.

Dr. Graham speaks of the question as one "gradually to be worked out," commending the wisdom of a long-range view. It will be a happy circumstance if an approach can be gradually made, if there is no such compulsion of immediacy here as is implied in the Missouri situation. A most practical question is that of the essential economy of the provision of graduate and professional facilities at the negro colleges; whether a relatively large expenditure to meet a limited demand will not be prejudicial to the facilities for meeting the demands that already exist.

In the working out of this problem on lines of a prudential regard for all that it involves, this newspaper is confident that from the negro citizenship, the negro leadership, there will be forthcoming just the sort of cooperation that is implied in Dr. Graham's statement. No one better realizes than they its explosive possibilities. There will be every disposition to meet the white majority at least half way in a course of common sense.

Smith University Marks Its 72nd Anniversity

CHARLOTTE, N. C. — The seventy-second anniversary of the founding of Johnson C. Smith University here was appropriately celebrated last week with a special program which began with a formal procession consisting of students and faculty members.

The exercises were held in the beautiful university church edifice where hundreds of graduates and friends of the institution gathered to hear the Founders Day address by Dr. Guy E. Snavely, executive director of the Association of American Colleges, New York City.

Dr. Snavely, who reminded the gathering that the institution was "founded" for the purpose of training leadership for the emancipation of the group economically and otherwise lauded President H. L. McCrorey for the efficient manner in which he is handling the affairs of the university. He also praised the work of the late Rev. Samuel Alexander, founder, in whose footsteps Dr. McCrorey has followed in his effort to maintain the high ideals for which the institution is known.

Following the invocation by Dr. L. B. West, director of the program of Evangelism in the Churches of the four Negro Synods of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., musical selections were rendreded by the university choir and male chorus. Dr. Thomas A. Long, organist and E. D. Carroll, pianist, contributed to the musical portion of the program.

Greetings on behalf of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce were extended by Dr. Luther Little, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Among others who made remarks were: Dr. Charles E. Bomar of Orange, N. J., graduate, class of '16, Norman A. Cocke, trustee of the Duke Endowment Trust Fund, and Dr. John M. Gaston, member of the board of trustees and secretary-treasurer of Johnson C. Smith.

Budget Commission To Take Up Allotments For Graduate And Professional Classes

Raleigh, April 25.—(AP)—The advisory budget commission will meet here next month to consider allotments for graduate and professiona courses at state-supported colleges for Negroes in Durham and Greensboro, Governor Hoey said today.

The legislature authorized the courses but provided no money to finance them. Consequently, the allotments will be made from the emergency and contingency fund.

The boar dof trustees of the North Carolina College at Durham already has submitted a formal application asking for funds to establish courses in law, pharmacy and medicine, and an application is expected to be submitted soon by the Agricultural and Technical college at Greensboro.

The governor said the graduate courses probably would be offered at both colleges at the opening of the next scholastic term.

The advisory budget commission will meet about May 12, he added, and may request officials of the colleges to appear before it. Any allotments made by the commission will be subject to approval by the council of state.

HOEY NAMES TRUSTEE FOR NEGRO COLLEGE

Representative Walter Murphy of Rowan, Active Friend, Fills Vacancy

Representative Walter (Pete) Murphy of Rowan was named by Governor Hoey yesterday as a trustee of the N. C. College for Negroes at Durham, succeeding Dr. Samuel Levy of Charlotte, deceased. The term will expire May 1, 1941.

Murphy, dean of the House of Representatives, was active last session in securing additional appropriations for the Negro colleges to make available professional courses and advanced training in technical courses. Many bills relating to Negro education bore his name as introducer.

Commission To Consider Graduate Work

N. C. State and A. & T. Courses Are Now Planned

RALEIGH, N. C.—Because of a situation created by the legislature authorizing graduating courses but made no provision for funds by which these demands are to be met, the advisory budget commission will meet here this month to consider allotments for graduate and professional courses at state-supported colleges for Negroes in Durham and Greensboro, according to a statement made by Governor Clyde Hoey.

Formal application for funds to establish law, pharmacy, and medicine courses has already been made by the board of trustees. It is expected that A. and T. College at Greensboro itself will file a like application in the very near future.

The governor further stated that there is a probability that courses would be offered at both the Durham school and A. and T. College.

Governor Hoey said that officials of the college may be requested to appear before the advisory council. The council of state has the authority to approve or disapprove any allotments made by the advisory budget commission which will meet about May 12.

NORTH CAROLINA IS PREPARING TO BUILD UP GRADUATE SCHOOLS

RALEIGH, N. C., May 4—(Special)—Allotments of necessary funds for establishing and maintaining graduate and professional courses of instruction at State-supported colleges for Negroes will be considered at a special meeting to be held here next month by the State Advisory Budget Commission, it was announced Wednesday. Allotments are to be made from contingent and emergency funds, this action being necessary by reason of the fact that the Legislature, though authorizing the establishing and conducting of the special courses, made no appropriation to carry the authorization into effect.

Application for funds to establish courses in medicine, law and pharmacy, has already been made by the Board of Trustees of North Carolina College, located at Durham. Trustees of the Agricultural and Technical college, Greensboro, are expected to make application within the next week or ten days. It is predicted that the opening of the next scholastic year, this Fall, will see the courses available to students at both colleges.

College officials will probably be requested to appear before the Advisory Budget Commission at its special meeting which is tentatively set for May 12. It is understood the actual making of allotments will not be deferred but will, in all likelihood, be made before the meeting adjourns.

Negro College Trustees Urge Graduate Schools

Budget Commission to Study Request for Law, Pharmacy, Medical Work at Durham

Schools of law, pharmacy and medicine are needed at the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, the college's board of trustees has reported, Governor Hoey said yesterday. The graduate work is to be available for the school year beginning next fall.

The trustees of the Durham college and those of the Negro Agricultural and Technical College in Greensboro now are studying which graduate work should be offered Negroes of this State. The recent legislature passed an act authorizing establishment of the necessary schools for graduate work at the two institutions. The act carried no appropriation but provided that the Governor and Council of State should make available the necessary money from the contingency and emergency fund.

Governor Hoey said he would call the Advisory Budget Commission to meet here about the middle of May to consider the report of the N. C. C. N. trustees. The commission may, if it desires, call representatives of the college to discuss the matter. The governor said he had received no report as yet from officials of the Greensboro college.

Heads of the two institutions are approaching the problem on the basis of the need existing for the various graduate schools. The number of applications which have been received in past years for the various forms of work is being considered.

While it is not known how much the graduate work will cost, one source has estimated the cost will be $75,000 a year for the next biennium.

Negro Graduate School Is Organized At Durham

Durham, July 3.—Announcement of the faculty for a graduate school at North Carolina Collgee for Negroes in Durham marks not only a new era in higher education for the Negro race in the State, but also represents the friendly spirit of goodwill and cooperation that exists between the races here. Outstanding educators from Duke University in Durham and the University of North Carolina in nearby Chapel Hill, for stated period, have been secured as teachers.

Incidentally, the graduate school is also the State Assembly's unanimous answer to the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, which ruled that Negroes are entitled to graduate work in the State. Its establishment, however, comes as the direct result of a well-planned movement started some years ago by progressive leaders of both races to cope with a problem that had been fast coming to the front. Young Negroes who graduate from colleges in the State were forcel to go elsewhere to secure advanced training. Impressed with the need for more educational opportunities for these young men and women a group of representative leaders of both races united in an effort to remedy this deficiency, and their dreams were brought to a happy fruition in the last session of the General Assembly when a legislative appropriation was secured for this purpose. North Carolina College for Negroes was selected as the most highly qualified liberal arts institution through which to offer these advanced educational facilities to the Negro youth of the State.

Dr. James E. Shephard, president and founder of the college, has voiced high praise for the spirit of mutual friendship between the races that has made this program possible. Governor Clyde R. Hoey, state legislators, educational leaders throughout the state, and interested citizens of both races have been staunch friends and advocates in this forward movement.

President Shepard also points out that educational opportunities of the first magnitude are now open for the first time within this state to Negroes seeking advanced training. For next year, starting in September, the graduate school will include, for stated periods, outstanding members of the faculties of Duke University and the University of North Carolina, as well as additions to the regular faculty.

From Carolina, Dr. Edgar W. Knight, Dr. A. M. Jordan, and Dr. H. R. Douglass, of the departmen of education, have been secured for the fall, winter, and spring terms respectively. From the same institution, Dr. Hugh T. Lefler, Dr. A. R. Newsome, and Dr. F. M. Green will teach history in the fall, winter, and spring terms respectively. Dr. W. W. Pierson, of the department of political science at Carolina, will deliver the fall series of lectures in that course, while Dr. Howard W. Odom and Dr. R. B. Vance, both of Carolina, and Dr. Edgar Thompson of Duke, will give the fall, winter, and spring courese in sociology, respectively. Dr. A. S. Pearse of the Duke department of zoology, will have charge of the course at N. C. College, while Dr. D. C. Allen, assistant professor of English at Duke, will conduct the class in English literature. The chairman of the advisory committee for the combined faculties will be Dr. Calvin B. Hoover, dean of the graduate school of arts and sciences at Duke university, and a world authority in his field.

In addition to the graduate school of education, schools of law, pharmacy, and medicine are in prospect.

During recent years, N. C. College has made unprecedented expansion. Many new buildings have already been erected to provide for its increasing sphere of service, and five more are now in process of construction. Under the new program, the institution bids fair to become one of the foremost state-supported Negro colleges in the country.

The present faculty includes many eminent Negro educators, and more will be added as time progresses.

Latest addition is Dr. W. Edward Farrison of Bennett College, who will head the English department. On its present faculty are Dean A. Elder, lately granted a degree of Doctor of Education by Columbia; Dr. J. S. Lee, who received his Ph. D. from Michigan in June in the field of biology; Miss Zora Neale Hurston of Florida, great authority on Negro folklore; Dr. L. H. Knox, who won his doctorate from Harvard; and Gow W. Bush, who will receive his degree from Iowa University.

EDUCATION- 1939

NORTH CAROLINA

ADDRESS BY PRES. W. J. TRENT OVER STATION WSTP

Delivered Sunday, January 22 At Salisbury, N. C.

On February 10, Founder's Day will be celebrated at Livingstone College, Salisbury, N.C., in honor of the first president, Dr. Joseph Charles Price. This event has occupied a prominent place in the program of the college for a number of years but this year it will take on an international aspect, for not only will all of the Bishops, General officers and other leaders of the AME Zion Church come to the college from various sections of America, but reports will come in from Africa, where Bishop J. W. Brown is located, and from South America.

Founder's Day this year will close the second period of a four-year campaign to help the college in its efforts to pay off its debts, complete the new building program, and to further help maintain the educational and financial requirements of a growing liberal arts college and school of religion for the training of young ministers for the highest type of Christian leadership.

Livingstone College represents, perhaps to a greater degree than any other institution in the South, the idea of Negro self-help in education. During the 57 years the college has been in existence it has made but one public appeal for financial aid. Its growth and development have been made possible through the sacrifices and prayers of a people intensely interested in the Christian training of their children

We seek to maintain the highest standards of scholarship and decorum in a progressive program of education, and from year to year we can see signs of progress and growth. At present the college holds an approved rating by the following agencies: The State Dept. of Education of North Carolina; The Southern Association of Secondary Schools & College, The Council of Medical Education and Hospitals of America, and The Dept. of the Interior of the United States. The last named rating makes Livingstone eligible to admit foreign students. We hold membership in the Church Related Colleges of America and Canada, and have just recently been elected to membership in the Assn. of American Colleges.

In view of the high character of the work being done at Livingstone under the leadership and direction of a well-trained faculty, and of the great need at this time for the increasing development of the Church related college such as ours; and in view of the fine attitude maintained by our white friends through the years, and of their spirit and desire to help, we look forward to this Founder's Day with greater hope that the financial report will be increased beyond our fondest dreams. We further hope that we can begin at once to complete the Price Memorial Building, which stands as an eye-sore in its present condition, as well as the Central Heating Plant, and Gymnasium, so that we can measure up to the high ideals of our great founder, Dr. Joseph Charles Price. I thank you.

Ask For Negro Graduate School

Raleigh.—A measure to establish graduate and professional courses for Negroes at North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham and at the Agricultural and Technical College at Greensboro hit legislative hoppers Tuesday. The matter of graduate, professional and specialized courses for Negroes took on added significance last week when a Negro woman applied for entrance to the University of North Carolina, apparently basing her petition on the recent Missouri case in which the United States Supreme Court held that the state must provide such courses for Negroes.

Fountain Inn Negro Adult College Opens 3rd Session

Principal Anderson Strives Constantly to Improve Standard of Living

Fountain Inn, Jan. 26.— The Fountain Inn negro Adult college has launched its third annual session. This unique institution, the idea of G. A. Anderson, colored principal of the Fountain Inn school for negro children, was the pioneer of Adult college in the South—as far as organization and financing were concerned.

Three years ago, Anderson, always seeking the betterment of his people, read of an Adult college in New York state financed by the county community development council. Anderson immediately went to Greenville and interviewed Prof. Ralph Lyons, recently appointed head of Greenville county council for community development. The result was, that some of the funds appropriated for community development were secured for instituting such a college for colored people at Fountain Inn.

"Education for Better Living" was the motto chosen for the college, which opened in January and continued its evening classes for six consecutive weeks. The enrollment reached 75, and so much interest was manifested, that another college was instituted the following January. The college now in its third year is expected to show a gain over the two previous years.

Classes Well Attended

The faculty members of the negro schools give their service as teachers in the college, and classes are supervised by Dr. and Mrs. Lyons, who come from Greenville to act as advisers of the institution. Classes in the domestic arts are well attended, and a noticeable improvement is seen in the home life of those attending this college.

"It is my desire to teach our people how to live," said Principal Anderson. "Negroes live in homes that they could improve themselves, without calling on the landlord for everything that needs to be done. Usually the landlord would give his tenant nails, lumber and paint, if the negro showed any desire to fix up his home."

Classes are conducted in farm mechanics with practical lessons in shop work. Progressive farming is another subject in which a number of students find much help. Each class is based on the needs of the rural community, the aim being practical knowledge that will tend to make the negro better fitted for life. Training in better English and in public speaking is also given.

G. A. Anderson who has been principal of the schools for six years, is constantly searching for ways to raise the standard of rural life for the negroes, and his methods meet with the approval of the white citizens of the community.

The negro school property of Fountain Inn is said to rank with the best of the state. It consists of adequate school buildings and a "teacherage," occupied by Anderson, and his family with several of the teachers. An example of the spirit of harmony between the two races in this community is seen in the building of the negro "teacherage." Funds for this much needed building were not available. Then the white folk came to the rescue with gifts of trees for timber, nails and other hardware, while the negroes contributed the labor. They cut, hauled, and nailed the lumber in place, laid brick, and did everything connected with building with their own hands.

One of the "Faith Cabin" libraries instituted by Willie Buffington was erected here, the negroes building the log cabin, and Mr. Buffington securing books.

The Fountain Inn negro school property, the unique negro college and its progress has been featured in the Progressive Farmer, as an example of how tenants can improve their living conditions, and as the result of co-operation between landlord and tenant.

Law School For Negroes Urged By House Group

Judiciary Committee Votes For Unit After Decision in Missouri Case

A measure to provide a law school at South Carolina's college for negroes bore the unanimous approval today of a legislative judiciary committee.

Speaker Sol Blatt, chairman of a sub-committee of the University of South Carolina trustees, said an effort was expected within a few days to force the university to admit a negro to the law school.

A year ago a negro, a Columbia resident, applied for entrance to the university. His application was referred to the sub-committee.

Blatt referred to a recent U. S. supreme court decision directing Missouri to furnish equal educational opportunities for negroes and whites. "We know of no other way to meet this than to establish a chair of law at the state colored college," he said.

"I say this with all due deference to you gentlemen that negroes do pay taxes" and therefore are entitled to consideration, he asserted.

The Association for the Advancement of Colored People is sponsoring the law school applicant, the speaker said.

Thirty-five per cent. of SC high school graduates in '38 continue education in college

Of the 9,680 pupils who were graduated in 1937-38 from white accredited high schools in South Carolina, 3,345, or 35 per cent. attended college in the fall of that year.

Of the 685 pupils who were graduated from Negro high schools that year 242 or 35 per cent., attended college in the fall of that year.

In a word, the percentage of white and Negro high school graduates who attended college, was the same.

The figures for private accredited high schools were considerably higher in so far as percentages go.

Private accredited high schools graduated 186 pupils and of these 93 or 50 per cent., attended college the year following.

The figures on college attendance were given out yesterday by W. D. Nixon, high school supervisor.

Girls outnumbered boys in high graduates attending colleges in both white and Negro public schools, but boys outnumbered girls in the private accredited high schools.

For 1937-1938, white girl high school graduates, attending colleges in the year of their graduation numbered 1,786; boys, 1,559; Negro girls, 155 and Negro boys, 87.

In the graduates of private accredited high schools, girls attending colleges the year of their high school graduation numbered 25 and boys, 68.

Statistics covering a number of years, as assembled by Supervisor Dixon, were as follows. High school graduates entering college from white accredited high schools:

Funds Are Asked For Graduate Courses In State For Negroes

President of Durham Institution Appears Before Joint Assembly Appropriations Body—Other Increases Sought.

RALEIGH, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The joint appropriations committee received today a request for a $34,945 increased appropriation for the next two years to provide graduate courses at the North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham.

James E. Shepard, president of the institution, presented the request, explaining that another $31,000 would be needed during the biennium in professional schools of pharmacy and law are added.

He said only small increases for maintenance would be needed at the school if no graduate instruction is added, but suggested the erection of a $150,000 dormitory for graduate students if advanced courses are provided.

In his legislative message, Governor Hoey recommended that steps be taken to provide advanced courses at the Durham school and at the Negro A. and T. college at Greensboro.

Ruling Recalled.

A recent United States Supreme court ruling held that states must admit negroes to state universities if advanced work is not provided for them in their own schools.

Shepard and the heads of three other negro colleges told the committee that high tuition would keep many deserving students out of school.

Though no tuition boosts were recommended at the Durham school, Shepard said the $75 charged yearly at his institution was "too high" and should be reduced.

However, President F. L. Atkins, of Winston-Salem Negro Teachers college, admitted that he thought tuition at his school was "too low."

"It should be raised from the $15 charged at present to the $36 recommended by the advisory budget commission," he said. But he predicted that increase would result in a 15 to 20 per cent drop in enrolment.

President F. D. Bluford, of the A and T. college, at Greensboro, and President J. H. Bias, of the State Normal school at Elizabeth City both opposed tuition increases for their institutions as likely to cut their enrolments.

President J. W. Seabrook, of Fayetteville Negro Normal school, presented a brief, but told the committee to disregard that part of it protesting proposed tuition boosts.

All the schools requested increased appropriations.

Meanwhile, subcommittees were named by the joint finance committee to consider the machinery act and proposals for taxation of chain stores.

Senator Gray, of Forsyth, proposed an amendment to the revenue bill to exempt from inheritance and gift taxes all sums, willed or donated by North Carolinians to out-of-state religious, educational and charitable institutions.

Senators Curtis, of Buncombe, and Smith, of Stanly, and Representatives Kimsey, of Transylvania, Cherry, of Gaston, and Wallace, of Lenoir, were appointed to study the machinery act.

Chain store taxes will be considered by Senator Larkins, of Jones, and Gold, of Guilford, and Representatives Hatch, of Wake, Vogler, of Mecklenburg and Bryant, of Durham.

Appearing before the joint appropriations committee in behalf of increased appropriations for their institutions were:

Bluford, A. and T. Negro college—increase of $80,000 for maintenance during the next two years and $192,000 for a boys' dormitory and a dairy building.

Atkins, Winston-Salem Teachers college for negroes—$91,446 more for the coming biennium to provide higher teacher salaries and 3,000 additional books.

G. R. Little, chairman of trustees of State Normal school—an added $10,800 appropriation a year rather than increased tuition.

Seabrook, Fayetteville Normal school—$14,840 additional asked for the biennium to raise salaries and provide supplies.

B. W. Parham, of the executive committee for the negro orphanage at Oxford—$7,000 increase for the next two years to get out of debt.

INSTITUTE AT BENNETT OPENS

Play, "Breakfast at Eight,' Opens Week-Long Home-Making Institute at College.

The thirteenth annual Home-Making Institute got underway at Bennett College this morning at 10 o'clock with a play, "Breakfast at Eight," designed to carry out the general theme of the Institute, "Child Development and Parent Education." Dr. Margaret Wylie, professor of family life at Cornell University, will lead several discussions later in the week, the Institute closing on Sunday next with an address by Miss Jane Hunter, director of the Phillis Wheatley association of Cleveland, Ohio. The Bennett Home-Coming week-end will parallel the closing days of the Institute, its major events to coincide with those of the Institute.

Realizing the fact that the family is the basic unit of society and that any constructive good has first of all to be realized through the family, the college sets aside each year a specific time for its intensive study. This year the recently established Nursery School-Parent Education Center will be used as a focal point for the campus and community participants. Partially sponsored through annual grants of the Phelps-Stokes fund of New York City, the Institute is directed by Dr. Flemmie P. Kittrell, head of the department of home economics at the college.

Tuesday morning there will be a discussion, "The Nursery School Movement, Its Implications" by members of the nursery school staff and students of child development. Wednesday morning there will be a demonstration of children's furniture, clothing and books, followed in the afternoon by an inspection of the nursery school. Thursday morning Mrs. Lucy F. James, itinerate teacher-trainer in home economics for North Carolina will deliver an address on "Teaching Family Relations in Secondary Schools." Friday morning Dr. Wylie wil deliver her first address and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon she will conduct a rural family institute at the East White Oak school.

Saturday a conference of principals and home economics teachers in North Carolina will hold two sessions, one at 10 and the other at 2 o'clock, with Dr. Wylie as discussion leader. A fashion review directed by Mrs. M. G. Wyatt, will be held at 8 o'clock Saturday night. All of the programs at the college will be held in Carrie Barge Chapel, the morning sessions of the Institute beginning at 10 o'clock. Special music for these occasions wil be furnished by the local school organizations. The Bennett College choir, directed by Dr. R. Nathaniel Dett, will augment the final program on Sunday at 4:00 o'clock.

North Carolina To Open First Graduate School

Move to Meet Decision Of Supreme Court

DURHAM, N. C.—(SNS)— Announcement of the faculty for a graduate school at North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham marks not only a new era in higher education for the Negro race in the state but also represents the friendly spirit of goodwill and cooperation that exists between the races here. Outstanding educators from Duke University in Durham and the University of North Carolina in nearby Chapel Hill, for stated periods, have been secured as teachers.

Incidentally, the graduate school is also the state assembly's unanimous answer to the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, which rule that Negroes are entitled to graduate work in the State. Its establishment, however, comes as the direct result of a well-planned movement started some years ago by progressive leaders of both races to cope with a problem that had been fast coming to the front.

TO BE AT DURHAM

Young Negroes who graduated from colleges in the state were forced to go elsewhere to secure advanced training. Impressed with the need for more educational opportunities for these young men and women, a group or representative leaders of both races united in an effort to remedy this deficiency, and their dreams were brought to a happy fruition in the last session of the general assembly when a legislative appropriation was secured for this purpose.

North Carolina College for Negroes was selected as the most highly qualified liberal arts institution through which to offer these advanced educational facilities to the Negro youth of the state.

Dr. James E. Shepard, president and founder of the college, has voiced high praise for the spirit of mutual friendship between the races that has made this program possible. Governor Clyde R. Hoey, state legislators, educational leaders throughout the state, and interested citizens of both races have been staunch friends and advocates in this forward movement.

President Shepard also points out that educational opportunities of the first magitude are now open for the first time within this state to Negroes seeking advanced training. For next year starting in September, the graduate school will include, for stated periods, outstanding members of the faculties of Duke University and the University of North Carolina, as well as additions to the regular faculty.

EXPERTS TO LECTURE

From Carolina, Dr. Edgar W Knight, Dr. A. M. Jordan, and Dr. H. R. Douglass, of the department of education, have been secured for the fall, winter, and spring terms respectively From the same institution, Dr. Hugh T. Lefler, Dr. A. R. Newsome, and Dr. F M Green will teach history in the fall, winter, and spring terms respectively.

Dr. W. W. Pierson, of the department of political science at Carolina, will deliver the fall series of lectures in that course, while Dr. Howard W. Odom and Dr. R B. Vance, both of Carolina, and Dr. Edgar Thompson, of Duke, will give the fall, winter, and spring courses in sociology, respectively. Dr. A. S. Pearse of the Duke department of zoology, will have charge of that course at N. C. College, while Dr. D. C. Allen, assistant professor of English at Duke, will conduct the classes in English literature.

The chairman of the advisory committee for the combined faculties will be Dr. Calvin B. Hoover, dean of the graduate school of arts and sciences at Duke University, and a world authority in his field

In addition to the graduate school of education, schools of law, pharmacy, and medicine are in prospect.

BUILD NEW STRUCTURES

During recent years, N. C. College has made unprecedented expansion. Many new buildings have already been erected to provide for its increasing sphere of service, and five more are now in process of construction. Under the new program, the institution bids fair to become one of the foremost state-supported Negro colleges in the country.

The present faculty includes many eminent Negro educators and more will be added as time progresses. Last addition is Dr. W Edward Farrison of Bennett College, who will head the English department. On its present faculty are Dean A. Elder, lately granted a degree of Doctor of Education by Columbia; Dr. J. S. Lee, who received his Ph.D. from Michigan in June in the field of biology Miss Nora Neal Hurston of Florida, great authority on Negro folklore; Dr. L. H. Knox, who won his doctorate from Harvard; and Gow W Bush, who will receive his degree from Iowa University.

North Carolina College Launches Its Program Of Graduate Courses

DURHAM, N. C.—Duke University and the University of North Carolina will furnish many of the teachers who augment the faculty of North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham as it makes ready for its graduate courses in the fall of 1939.

Authorized by the legislature of 1939 to give these courses, the Durham institution is preparing its regimen for the graduates in the liberal arts division. The general assembly which created this post graduate work voted unanimously in favor of it and received from all parts of the country commendation for its generous mood toward the race. North Carolina takes the lead in advance education for Negroes and in furnishing the school some of the best teachers in the nation, North Carolina gets far in the lead.

From Chapel Hill, the University of North Carolina, will come to the department of education three distinguished members of the school of education; Dr. Edgar Wallace Knight, Dr. A. M. Jordan and Dr. H. R. Douglass. Dr. Knight will teach fall, Dr. Jordan, winter, and Dr. Douglass, spring courses. In history, Dr. Hugh T. Lefler will give fall, Dr. A .R. Newsome, winter, and Dr. F. M. Green, spring lectures. These members of the University of North Carolina historical faculty made wide reputation before they went there.

Dr. W. W. Pierson of the department of political science, will give the fall series, and in sociology Dr. Howard W. Odum will have the fall, Dr. R. B. Vance the winter, and Dr. Edgar T. Thompson of Duke University will have the spring classes. Dr. A. S. Pearse of Duke will have work in zoology, and Dr. D. C. Allen, assistant professor of English at Duke, will take classes in English literature.

Dr. Calvin B. Hoover, who spends the summer in Russia pursuing his studies, will serve as chairman of the advisory committee of Duke and Carolina faculty members and will give his cooperation to the plans now announced. Dr. Hoover as dean of the Duke graduate school of arts and sciences, is a world authority in his field. He is so well known in Russia that he may not be welcomed to the Soviet Union. But whether he gets through easily or with difficulty, he will be available for the help to North Carolina College in working out its courses.

Educators on Faculty

These twelve eminent educators coming from the nearby two great institutions are to swell the instructional force which makes North Carolina College scholastically fit from the start. Dr. W. Edward Farrison, head of the department of English in Bennett College, Greensboro, has resigned to head the English literature division of North Carolina College. Miss Zora Neale Hurston of Florida, national authority on Negro folklore, becomes a member of the faculty which now has such members as Dr. V. V. Oak, Ph. D. in commerce from Clark University; Professor W. H. Robinson, Ph. D. in physics; and mathematics; Dean A. Elder, recently made Doctor of Education by Columbia; Professor J. S. Lee, Ph. D. in biology, and Professor A. Heningburg, Ph. D. in French and College Administration. Professor L. H. Knox, Ph. D. from Harvard, and Dr. Gow W. Bush, Ph. D. in biology from the Unversity of Iowa will get their degrees during the year. Other members of the faculty will be added.

Something recently has been said of salary differentials in the public schools, Negro teachers with the highest certification which the State of North Carolina can give, nevertheless, graduated from institutions which have not the ranking of Yale, Harvard, Columbia and Chicago. A look at the faculty set to give these graduate courses in North Carolina College will emphasize the difficulty of low rating these graduates. It has been said that the campus of N. C. C. N. will be paved with Ph. D.'s. Few institutions of the county will be better implemented with teaching.

Medical College Planned

The opening in September will find this faculty to conduct the North Carolina College and other institutional graduates through these new courses. The department of law is being organized but the personnel of that school has not been announced. The school of home economics expects to graduate students in 1940 and the school of library science leading to the graduate level in 1940 is now in operation. North Carolina College will stick scrupulously to its charter as a liberal arts college. In time it hopes to have medicine and pharmacy, indeed, to become a great Negro university.

Middle-aged men will recall its origin. It began in 1910, to be exact, July 5, 1910. That was the morning after the Jack Johnson victory over Jim Jeffries in the Reno prize ring. Not since time began was there psychologically a worse year in which to project a Negro school. For 15 years President James E. Shepard ran the institution as an aid to Negro teachers and preachers on whom fell so much of race leadership. The state thought well enough by 1925 to take it into the system of the state and in 1939 well enough to commit to it the task of equipping the Negro race for the best work of which it is capable.

Lexington, N. C. Dispatch
July 6, 1939

A FINE EXAMPLE

"DR. James E. Shepard has voiced high praise for the spirit of mutual friendship between the races that has made this program possible," says a press release from Durham announcing that the first graduate school for a negro college in North Carolina's history is to be opened this fall at North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham. Dr. Shepard is the president of the college. The graduate work is to be done in the field of public education. Later it is hoped to extend this to law, pharmacy, medicine and perhaps other fields.

The supreme court of the United States decided in a case from Missouri that negroes are entitled to graduate work in the states in which they reside. The North Carolina General Assembly unanimously voted to set up such work in the college for negroes at Durham.

But this is not the only cooperative spirit that Dr. Shepard is talking about. Quite a number of the outstanding educators of Duke University and the University of North Carolina have agreed to divide time as instructors in graduate courses in education for negro students at the Durham college. It is a voluntary contribution by these high men of education, for certainly the state could not command what a Duke professor shall or shall not do.

From Carolina will go such leaders as Knight, Jordan, Douglass, Newsome, Odom, Vance, Pierson, Green and Lefler; from Duke will go Thompson, Pearse, Allen and Hoover, the latter as chairman of the advisory committee for the combined faculties, which will include the Carolina and Duke men and some old and new professors of the negro college.

As time goes on and the education course is strengthened by the college from within, it is surmised the leaders from Duke and Carolina will recede. When the other professional schools are added from year to year it is anticipated the same helpful, constructive service will be tendered in turn. It is indeed a fine example of both racial and intellectual cooperation that no doubt will attract national and even world-wide attention.

EDITORIAL

NEGRO LAW SCHOOL AGAIN

South Carolina Legislature pigeoned-hold the bill proposing the establishment of a law school (law department) in the State A and M. College at Orangeburg in its six months session which closed about 30 days ago. We did not noticed any strong opposition against having such a department established at Orangeburg, and we believe that if Negro leaders had gone in groups to the Legislature the bill would have passed.

We must offer professional training for our youths white and colored out of the tax fund provided by the citizens of the state. That is the doctrine Missourians are preaching and they seem to be getting together on a happy solution of their law school problem. Any way here is a part of a recent decision given out last week relative to the Gaines case:

"Jefferson City, Mo.—The Supreme Court of Missouri handed down last week an opinion reversing the decision of the Boone County (Mo.) Circuit Court rendered originally in the Lloyd Gaines Case in which Gaines was seeking admission to the University of Missouri law school.

This latest action in the famous University of Missouri case is in conformity with the opinion of the U. S. Supreme Court delivered last December 12.

The state's highest court by its opinion does not order the University to admit Gaines to its law school but does not shut the university to him. It takes notice of the fact that the State of Missouri since the U. S. Supreme Court opinion, has directed the establishment of a law school for Negroes at Lincoln university, and has appropriated a sum of $200,000 for this purpose.

The court holds in its opinion that it cannot decide at this date whether the law school to be established at Lincoln university is the equal of the law school at the Missouri. It held that this question must be decided before the trial and be decided upon its merit after the school is established."

The Missouri cases is of unusual interest to South Carolinians—especially the Negro population of our state.

The court, so far, has not closed the door of legal opportunity to Negro law students in Missouri but you can see readily, after reading between the lines that the judges are ploughing through legal records to find an analogy that will support good legal reasons for keeping Lloyd Gaines out of the University of Missouri Law school.

A law school of equal opportunity for Negroes can not be developed over night, but there must be a beginning by our states fostering dual systems of education to establish professional schools for the ambitious students of the Negro race whether in Missouri or in South Carolina.

A. AND T. REQUESTS GRADUATE SCHOOL

Greensboro Negro Institution Asks North Carolina To Appropriate $63,031

Raleigh, Aug. 30.—(AP)—North Carolina was asked today to provide $63,031 this biennium for a graduate school at the state agricultural and technical college for Negroes in Greensboro.

Dr. F. D. Bluford, president of the school, in a report to Dr. Clyde A. Erwin, superintendent of public instruction, said this amount would provide advanced work, leading to the master's degree, in vocational agriculture, industrial education, animal husbandry, agronomy and farm crops, and agricultural economics and rural sociology.

With the addition of professors and library and laboratory facilities through the fund, Dr. Bluford said "we will be in position to proceed with the organization and development of graduate courses . . . that will not only fill an important gap in our state program of education, but that would soon merit recognition of rating agencies and other educational authorities."

The 1939 general assembly provided that the graduate school be established and be financed from the emergency and contingency fund. Dr. Erwin said he understood that R. G. Deyton, assistant budget director, would transmit the request to the council of state tomorrow afternoon.

The amount was arrived at by a special committee named to study the subject.

The $63,031 would be divided as follows:

Salaries for graduate school professors, including pay of a librarian, $27,600; library books for the first year, $6,020; additional library books for the second year, $5,000; library equipment, $1,500; equipment for the chemistry laboratory, $3,252; equipment for the farm crops laboratory, $1,636; equipment for animal husbandry, $3,563; equipment for farm soils laboratory, $1,660; additional laboratory equipment for the second year, $5,000; and out-of-state students, $7,800.

Dr. Bluford suggested that one teacher of agronomy and one of vocational agriculture be obtained at a salary of $3,000 a year each, and that six summer school teachers be provided for pay of $900 each. He also proposed addition of a professor for agricultural economics and rural sociology at $3,000 a year, and of two assistants, to be paid $2,400 each, for animal husbandry and industrial education in 1940-41.

If the need arises, he suggested employment of a teacher of rural engineering in 1940-41 at a salary of $3,000.

The special committee's report also included recommendation of a "permanent policy" providing that the "primary purpose" of the college always be to provide instruction in agriculture and the technical arts and sciences; that the college's department of liberal arts be maintained until it becomes "practical and feasible" to discontinue it; and that "immediate steps" be taken to provide a system of student guidance, particularly for freshmen.

The committee said it found that "it is evident that insufficient student guidance in the selection of courses of study has been employed," that many courses listed in the school's catalogue were not studied by any student; that some courses were given to small groups ranging from one to six; and that some of the courses in the technical schools could not be taught efficiently with the present faculty personnel.

North Carolina To Open New Law School

DURHAM, N. C.—(ANP)— Announcing the opening of the school of law at North Carolina college for Negroes on Sept. 25, President James E. Shepherd this week voiced appreciation of the advice and active aid given the school by white educators of the state, declaring, "It means much for the cooperation of the races in the state and in the South along all helpful lines."

It was also officially announced that Dean M. T. Van Hecke, famed faculty member of the University of North Carolina (white) has agreed to be the acting dean of the Negro law school for one year. Serving with Dean Van Hecke in the effort to develop one of the most outstanding departments of law for Negroes in the South will be several other white professors who take first rank among the nation's teachers of jurisprudence.

They are professors John F. Dazell, Donald W. Markham and Fred B. McCall, all of the state university, and Professor Douglas Maggs of Duke university, all of whom will teach in the first semester. Instructors for the second semester will be Professors Millard S. Breckenridge, University of North Carolina, and Douglas Poteat of the Duke university law school.

Concerning the new school, Dean Van Hecke said this week, "Every effort will be made to extend through this school to members of the Negro race the same opportunities for a legal education as are afforded now at Duke university and the University of North Carolina.

"The law library will be purchased, installed and organized by Miss Lucile Elliott, law librarian of the University of North Carolina. And I will take charge of the administration of the school for the year or until a qualified Negro law school administrator can be secured.

"The entrance requirements and the standards of work which will have to be met by students in the law school of the North Carolina college for Negroes will be the same as those in effect at the University of North Carolina. Thus those seeking admission to the law school must have completed with an average grade of C the first three years of college work leading to an academic degree from the North Carolina College for Negroes or some Negro college approved as a Class "A" standard four year college by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. If the student comes from a college rated as Class "B" by this association, he must have graduated with a bachelor's degree and with an average grade of C on all of his undergraduate work.

"We earnestly hope that every one interested in legal education in North Carolina will join with us in helping this new venture to get started in basketball are invited to ing conditions and constructive auspices."

The course in agency will be taught by Professor Millard S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina and the course in civil procedure I by Professor Douglas Poteat of the Duke university law school. During the year 1939-1940 only a first year program of study will be offered. The second year curriculum will be added in 1940-41, and a third year in 1941-1942.

The law library will be purchased, installed and organized by Miss Lucille Elliot, law librarian of the University of North Carolina. Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the University of North Carolina, will take charge of the administration of the school for the year or until a qualified Negro law school administrator can be secured.

The entrance requirements and the standards of work which will have to be met by students in the law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes will be the same as those in effect at the University of North Carolina. Thus those seeking admission to the law school must have completed with an average grade of C the first three years of college work leading to an academic degree from the North Carolina College for Negroes or some other Negro college approved as class "A" standard four-year college by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. If the student comes from a college rated as class "B" by this association he must have graduated with a bachelor's degree and with an average grade of C on all of his undergraduate work.

Regarding the opening of the law school, Dean Van Hecke has issued the following statement:

The arrangements whereby the instructional, library and administrative work of the law school of the North Carolina College for Negroes will be carried on this year by members of the faculties of the law school of Duke university and of the University of North Carolina should be regarded as temporary and provisional in character, to be continued only until qualified Negroes can be recruited for the service. Meanwhile, these representatives of the neighboring law schools are proud of the opportunity to cooperate with the authorities of the North Carolina College for Negroes during the new law school's formative period. Every effort will be made to extend through this school to members of the Negro race the same opportunities for a legal education as are afforded now at Duke university and at the University of North Carolina.

Instructors for the second semester will be Professors Millard S. Breckenridge, University of North Carolina, and Douglas Poteat of the Duke university law school.

NEGRO LAW SCHOOL SUSPENDS OPERATION

Shepard. The school was opened on Monday, September 25 and closed on Saturday, September 30. Decision to postpone operation of the law school was reached after a number of conferences among members of the faculty, the president, the board of trustees of the college and Governor Hoey.

SEE POLITICS IN WHOLESALE FACULTY PURGE

Ousted Members Noted Educators

WILBERFORCE, O., June 1 —Rumblings of discord hear from Wilberforce university ove a period of several months culmi nated this week in the startlin information that six of the uni versity's best known and best pre pared faculty members had beer discharged or given indefinit leaves of absence.

The wholesale faculty purge according to reliable reports was planned by President D. Ormonde Walker and Bishop Reverdy C. Ransom, chairman of the board of trustees. The board basing charges on alleged statements from the report of the examining committee of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, at the insistence of President D. Ormonde Walker, discharged Dean F. A. McGinnis of the college of liberal arts.

Dismissals Indefinite

Others given indefinite leaves of absence were Prof. George F. David, head of the department of sociology; Prof. Lendell C. Ridley, head of the department of philosophy and psychology, and Prof. M. L. Kiser, head of the department of Latin. Dean McGinnis, Professors David and Ridley are products of Wilberforce university.

Also losing their positions were Mrs. Mary Pyrtle and Prof. Harry B. Baker of the music department. The first step in the faculty shakeup was seen when Prof. W. G. Pearson, one of the few laymen on the board, was removed from the chairmanship of the committee on teachers, a position he had held for several years.. Professor Pearson, a well known educator, was believed to be favorably inclined toward Dean McGinnis.

The removal of Dean McGinnis, Professor David and Professor Ridley is regarded by some as an attempt on President Walker's part to remove the last remaining trace of alumni influence from the faculty of the church board of the institution.

It was pointed out that with the removal of these teachers, only two or three of the 20 odd members of the liberal arts college faculty will be alumni of the university.

See Politics Behind Ousters

On the other hand, observers see in the wholesale discharge of faculty members strong political implications. All of those discharged are staunch Republicans. They have, it was reported, refused to desert to the Democratic ranks and have been adamant in espousing the Republican cause.

They are also the best trained professors at the institution. Dean McGinnis was trained at Wilberforce, the University of Chicago, the Ohio State university and the University of Cincinnati. He has studied extensively in the field of higher education.

Professor David is also a product of Wilberforce, the University of Chicago and the Ohio State university. Professor Ridley, who publishes the Negro Journal of Religion, as well as teaching philosophy, is a graduate of Payne Theological Seminary at Wilberforce and the Ohio State university.

Lincoln University Graduate

Professor Kizer is from Lincoln university in Pennsylvania, the University of Iowa and the University of Wisconsin. Mrs. Pyrtle is a product of the New England conservatory of music; Professor Baker has just finished his first year at Wilberforce. He is a graduate of Oberlin college and Syracuse university conservatory of music.

Since no charges were brought against the ousted teachers, it is said that they can hold the university to payment of next year's salary.

QUICK ACTION OF BISHOP SIMS SAVES SCHOOL

Colleagues Praise Dr. Walker

By G. JAMES FLEMING

PHILADELPHIA, June 29. (A. N. P.)—How Wilberforce university came near being seriously crippled or wiped out was revealed for the first time last week, as Bishop D. H. Sims was commended by his A. M. E. colleagues for having saved the Ohio university by quick thinking and action.

What the threat was and how it was stalled was told on Tuesday when the executive committee of the bishops' council received newspapermen in interview. The bishops present were S. L. Greene, Little Rock, and W. A. Fountain, Atlanta, in addition to Bishop Sims.

It was just a few weeks ago, Wilberforce had submitted its needs. In the legislature everything seemed to say that the over half a million dollars needed for the next two years would be appropriated and approved by the governor.

State Assemblyman Chester K. Gillespie had attacked Wilberforce's president, Dr. D. Ormonde Walker, but nothing had come of his efforts. Many friends had risen up in the university's defense, and the North Central association had admitted the institution to Grade "A" rating.

Appropriation Slash Threat

Out of the clear, rumblings began to be heard to the effect that Governor Bricker was going to slash the proposed appropriation. It was not just a rumor; the governor had decided to cut the Wilberforce money to the bones — so much so that Wilberforce could not have functioned, it is said.

Whatever would have been the official reason given, the real motive lies deep in the past political activities of the governor and the university president. They are on different sides of the fence politically, and Dr. Walker has been outspoken against the things that the governor holds dear and vice versa, it is stated.

Word came to Bishop Sims of the slash. So serious was the whole business and such was the need for speed that the bishop had to get audience immediately with the governor. His words and plea alone were not enough, so he had to turn to Pennsylvania's Governor Arthur H. James as an intercesser.

Governor James induced the Ohio executive to give audience to the A. M. E. bishop, who was accompanied by Bishop Greene, "but all the credit is due to Bishop Sims," Bishop Greene declared.

Arguments Heard

What Bishop Sims said and what arguments he gave, only those present know, but Governor Bricker was won over and the $550,000 for Wilberforce left in the appropriation bill and the bill signed.

If Wilberforce had not received this money, its entire educational program would have been deeply shattered, to the extent that it would have undoubtedly lost its "A" rating. Thus, Bishop Sims was also being praised for saving the rating of the school.

When questioned as to the fitness of Dr. Walker, who formerly pastored St. James Episcopal church, Cleveland, and about the recent dismissal of six professors at Wilberforce, the bishops were united in warmly defending the Wilberforce head.

Cite Prexy's Capabilities

They said: (1) Dr. Walker is a most capable administrator and his efficiency has been noted by the North Central association which rated Wilberforce. No evidence that Wilberforce suffers for having a clergyman as president.

(2) Dr. Walker is putting all his talents into Wilberforce and is not using the presidency as a stepping stone to the bishopric. Indeed, Dr. Walker has declared in public that he is not a candidate, and does not intend being a candidate for the episcopacy.

(3) Of the faculty dropped, only one man — Dean F. H. McGinnis — was dismissed. The other five were given leaves with pay as high as $1,000 to study in the fields in which they were teaching.

GILLESPIE OUT 'TO GET' 'FORCE PREXY; ASKS OHIO TO CUT FUNDS

By CLARENCE L. SIMMONS

CLEVELAND, Jan. 19 — (ANP) — Claiming that he would endeavor to "get" Dr. Ormonde Walker, president of Wilberforce university, shortly after the November election, Representative Chester K. Gillespie introduced the feud which began in early November to the House of Representatives Finance committee at Columbus, recently.

Gillespie demanded that the general assembly force the retirement of Dr. Walker by slashing the appropriation for the school. He suggested that the $30,000 set up in the partial appropriation bill be cut to $10,000 and that the $7,000 student fee estimate be raised to $10,000 — a move that will virtually force the closing of the school.

Gillespie, who during the heat of the November campaign averred that he "would drive Dr. Walker out of Wilberforce" after the two had almost come to blows on the street, charged before the finance committee that enrollment at the university is dropping because of Dr. Walker's political activities.

Denies Enrollment Decrease

Dr. Walker, in a statement several weeks ago, denied that the enrollment had decreased at the university since his appointment as president by former Gov. Martin L. Davey. The 'Force president gave enrollment figures since his appointment as:

1934 - 920; '35 - 986; '37 - 1047; '38 - 1102, and for the first quarter of 1938-39 season, 1022. He cited the 1938 decrease as a trend that had affected all schools during the year, but contended that the reduction at Wilberforce had been smaller than at most other schools.

The state representative's crusade against Dr. Walker began after the president is reported to have urged the election of the entire Democratic slate in a speech made before a Negro audience at a Democratic mass meeting in Cleveland. Gillespie charged Dr. Walker with telling his audience to disregard the candidacy of two Negroes on the Republican ticket.

Believed Feud Verbal One

Until the latest move by Gillespie, citizens of the state had regarded the feud as a verbal battle between two individuals, not without its comic aspects. No sharp lines had been drawn by Negro citizens in support of or against the Walker administration, except that in Cleveland the Wilberforce Alumni association went on record as admonishing Dr. Walker's political activities without asking for his removal.

An interesting sidelight on the situation is the fact that a mother-in-law of the representatve is a matron at the university that faces closure or at least a suspension of vital activities if the finance committee acceeds to Gillespie's demand for the drastic reduction.

It was pointed out that had Gillespie's efforts been successful it would have seriously crippled the work of the university to the extent that it would probably have had to close its doors.

Gillespie stated this week that he regards the whole matter as closed.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 19—Efforts on the part of Chester K. Gillespie, member of the Ohio House of Representatives, to have the bill of appropriations slashed for Wilberforce University in this session of the assembly met with overwhelming defeat.

The bill passed the House in a twinkle and was immediately signed by Governor John W. Bricker.

Gillespie, last week, appeared before the finance committee of the Legislature and urged a reduction of some $20,000 from the amount recommended for the school.

Wilberforce Accredited By Association

Meets Highest Educational Standards In Ohio

(Special to Journal and Guide)

WILBERFORCE, Ohio— "One of my main objectives will be the accrediting of the university whatever the cost may be. Wilberforce must justify its existence on Ohio soil in meeting the highest educational standards set for the training and development of the citizens of the great state of Ohio."

Dr. D. O. Walker, former Cleveland, Ohio, minister, who made this pledge following his election June 9, 1936, as president of Wilberforce, reached that goal Thursday afternoon.

Wilberforce was admitted to membership in the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for the first time in its history.

The vote admitting Wilberforce to the select group of 253 other colleges and universities in 28 states was taken by the full membership at a meeting in Chicago, following a special examination of the university by two North Central examiners last week. It was specified that Wilberforce be subject to supervision of a guidance committee until 1942.

Upon receiving the announcement by telephone from A. J. Brumbaugh, secretary of the accrediting agency, President Walker immediately declared Friday a holiday on the Wilberforce campus.

Friends of Dr. Walker considered the accrediting of Wilberforce a vindication of his three-year administration, which has been under fire in the state legislature from Rep. Chester K. Gillespie (R) of Cleveland, a Negro, who is seeking to force the president's retirement.

Wilberforce U. Gets 'A' Rating, Praises Head

Last 3 Years Described As Most Phenomenal In School History

WILBERFORCE, O., April (ANP)— Wilberforce University, the pride of African Methodism and reputedly the oldest institution of learning in the world, owned and operated by Americans of African descent, has been fully accredited and given an "A" class rating by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The Association's rating committee, in session at the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, received the report of the examining committee, which described "The most phenomenal three years they had known since Wilberforce University was under the administration of President D. O. Walker." Points of objection, it was said, had been reduced from 27 to 2, and they were on educational policy.

WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY ACCREDITED, GETS "A" RATING

Wilberforce, Ohio April 11 (ANP) —Wilberforce University, reputedly the oldest Negro institution of learning in the world, owned and operated by Americans of African descent, has been fully accredited and given an "A" class rating by the North Central Association of College and Secondary Schools, it was learned this week.

Eight years younger than the Christian Recorder, official organ of the AME church, Wilberforce is now in its 83rd year of service. Founder and first president was Bishop Daniel Alexander Payne (1811-1893) and the present head of the board of trustees is Bishop Reverdy C. Ransom; a Wilberforce alumnus. Assisting him and President Walker in the struggle for accreditation were Bishops John A. Gregg, R. R. Wright, Jr. and David H. Sims.

Council Receives Newsmen for Conference as Crippling of Institution is Averted

PHILADELPHIA.—(ANP)—How Wilberforce university came near being seriously crippled or wiped out was revealed for the first time last week, as Bishop D. H. Sims was commended by his A. M. E. colleagues for having saved the Ohio university by quick thinking and action.

What the threat was and how i was stalled was told on Tuesda when the executive committee o the bishops 'council received news papermen in interview. The bish ops present were S. L. Greene Little Rock, and W. A. Fountain Atlanta, in addition to Bisho Sims.

It was just a few weeks ago Wilberforce had submitted its needs. In the legislature everything seemed to say that the over half a million dollars needed for the next two years would be appropriated and approved by the governor.

State Assemblyman Chester K. Gillespie had attacked Wilberforce's president, Dr. D. Ormonde Walker, but nothing had come of his efforts. Many friends had risen up in the university's defense, and the North Central Association had admitted the institution to Grade "A" rating.

Whatever would have been the official reason given, the real motive lies deep in the past political activities of the governor and the university president. Word came to Bishop Sims of the slash. So serious was the whole business and such was the need for speed that the bishop had to get audience immediately with the governor. His words and plea alone were not enough, so he had to turn to Pennsylvania's Governor Arthur H. James as ar intercessor.

Governor James induced the Ohio executive to give audience to the A. M. E. bishop, who was accompanied by Bishop Greene, "but all the credit is due to Bishop Sims," Bishop Greene declared.

(3) Of the faculty dropped, only one man—Dean F. H. McGinnis—was dismissed. The other five were given leaves with pay as high as $1,000 to study in the fields in which they were teaching. These are eligible for reemployment when they have brought up to date.

(4) For the men given leaves there was, and is, no idea of penalizing them. Rather, they are the men who were pointed out in the North Central report as teaching subjects for which they were not prepared, instead of the subjects in which they had majored. The bishops agreed that this was not the men's fault, but the fault of past administrations, with, for instance, a man who specialized in sociology teaching nothing but philosophy.

Despite a strike at Wilberforce during the past year, this threat to its appropriation and the dismissal of six teachers, the bishops' council did not take any official action on this school, since only the board of directors has authority over the institution.

Wilberforce is the premier educational center of the African Methodist Episcopal church, but its major support comes from the state of Ohio, which the school serves through certain departments. For years this division of sponsorship and support has been evident at the school where "the state side" has come to mean the campus, departments and teachers which are in the best connection, are the most well equipped, and are the best paid.

Whether the men dropped from Wilberforce will bring suit or take any other legal action is not yet known, but there was general feeling here that the bishops—and especially Bishop Sims—will be able to steer the ship of state out of all troubled waters. The ex-Wilberforce teachers involved, in addition to Dean McGinnis, are George F. David, head, department of sociology; M. L. Kiser, head, department of Latin; Lindell C. Ridley, head, department of philosophy; Harry B. Baker and Mary Pyrtle, both of the music

"Turmoil At Wilberforce!

PRES. WALKER FIRES 3 MORE; REST JITTERY

Former President Among Those Dropped From The Faculty of the University."

Wilberforce, O. — The purge at Wilberforce continued last week, when President Dougal Ormond Beaconsfield Walker's dismissal list increased to nine. After a bitter fight in the State (C. N. and I.) DEPARTMENT board meeting, last week Thursday, Dr. Walker, a Democrat, ordered the resignation of Dean Gilbert H. Jones, of the College of Education and a former president of the institution; Prof. James Few, head of the department of commerce, and Prof. James Byrd, assistant professor of industrial education, all Republicans. Two weeks ago six teachers all Republicans, were summarily fired and it is believed that others will be dismissed. It sure is higt time to get rid of Walker who is backed by Rt. Rev. Reverdy C. Ransom, the political bishop (Dem.) of the A. M. E. Church. The discharge of Dr. Jones following that of Dean F. A. McGinnis, who was listed in the Biographical Directory of Leaders of Education, removes from the institution its two most widely known educators. Clash of personalities was given by the president as a cause for the removal.

The Committee Speaks!

The report of the North Central Committee calls attention to the fact that at the present time President Dougal Ormond Beaconsfield Walker is arbitrarily performing functions which belong to the Dean (F. A. McGinnis) of the College of Liberal Arts and the Dean (Dr. Gilbert H. Jones) of the College of Education. Dean Jones has his doctor's degree in education and Dean McGinnis is soon to get his. The latter has had long experience in his position like Dean Jones whose experience is perhaps more varied.

Faculty Jittery

It is rumored that the whole teaching staff is jittery as no one knows where the axe will strike next. The Committee from the North Central Association recognized this fact and says:

"Faculty tenure at Wilberforce is very difficult to describe. It must be admitted that there is now a feeling of unrest in the institution. This unrest can hardly be considered surprising in view of the effects of partisanship. It would not be fair to consider the present situation normal. For the time being, however, the unrest is a real factor in the institution's education activity. Several of the faculty members expressed the suspicion that leaves are granted by the institution in preparation for the discharge of a faculty member.

"The impression is partially due to the fact that for administrative reasons, faculty members are said to be on leave when in reality they themselves do not expect to return, or when some administrative officers have given the hint that the person on leave will not return. As a result the request to leave seems dreaded and there is no thought apparently of a faculty member's requesting a leave for the purpose of seeking an educational opportunity."—Cleveland Gazette.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept 29 — More than 10 per cent of this city's Race population joined the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, when 300 new members were registered at the close of a seven-day campaign, September 18, according to Mrs. Daisy Lampkin, national field secretary or the association, who conducted the drive.

Division leaders in the drive were Mrs. M. R. Jefferson and E. E. Bonner. 'Albany is showing the way for cities of this size throughout the country," Mrs. Lampkin said. Mrs Lampkin is now in Baltimore, Md. conducting the city's annual campaign.

Oklahoma Governor Denies Whites Will Head Negro Institutions

OKLAHOMA CITY.—(ANP)—Governor Leon C. Phillips told supporters here last week that rumors that white men would be named to head Langston university and other state institutions which serve the Negro citizens, were false. The governor indicated that the board of regents had not decided who would be the new president of Langston.

Will The Alumni Remain Silent?

With the Alumni of Langston University holding annual Home Coming November 10th there is one issue standing out like a sore thumb that should be adjudicated with positiveness and firmness. The issue is shall politics rule at Langston University while the alumni remains silent.

Think of it; the college from which hundreds graduated ,and who gather November 10th on the campus of their alma mater, is going through the valley of dispondency and shame. Why meet on the campus, electing officers without hitting directly in the bull's eye evil running rampant in the institution? Does academic atmosphere breed nothing but cowards?

We do not believe this is true. We believe there are men who graduated from Langston University willing to stand up and proclaim the truth, and who have the courage of their convictions. We liked the forthright statement of John Buford last week, who called a spade a spade and struck directly at evil as he saw it.

The trouble with the Langston alumni association rests in the fact that those who have been in control have had personal ambitions which would not allow expression regarding the vital problems of the institution. Now there is nothing wrong with personal ambitions, and a desire to head the institution, but those who occupy this place should recognize that the moment they become candidates for office they lose their power to fight, as can others who retain their independent status.

Take the issue that stands out at Langston regarding the presence on the board of regents of a man who is a resident of Logan County. There is enough which have been exposed during the past three weeks to warrant any alumnus in speaking out against this evil. In fact last Saturday, in an informal discussion on the campus names were called in the open and two Logan County men, now unduly meddling with the University affairs, were excroicated with much vigor. Everybody in that informal meeting of the alumni knew where the fault lies and hit the nail on the head.

But can a man who seeks office from the present board of regents lead a fight that relates to a fundamental change in the board of regents from whom he asks favors? You know the answer to that question. The answer stands out like a lighthouse.

The legislature several years ago wrote a law which [illegible] citizen of Cleveland County can be a member of the board of regents of the University of Oklahoma. The experience of the white people of this state is that local influence should always be removed from control of state institutions. Until this law was passed there was happening at Norman what is today demoralizing Langston University. Local influence was running riot and seeking to convert the University of Oklahoma into a prize ship in which only the Norman merchants and the venal citizens of that community could ride.

When the present Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges was created it was expressly seen too that no white man living in a county where a white state school is located was placed on that board. In the case of Langston University a Logan County Senator sponsored the bill, and when it was passed there strangely appears on the Regent Board a relative of this State Senator, and from the same county. In addition a member of the faculty from Logan County was strangely elevated to a position of responsibility that casterates the rights and privileges of any president who may accept that place.

We wonder whether the alumni is going to meet November 10 and overlook this challenge to their interest in their alma mater? We wonder whether when they meet and some one attacks this question efforts will be made by those who lead to tone down a statement so that the devil himself cannot decide what the alumni is talking about?

Every day The Black Dispatch has to decide a question that will be raised November 10th. Some one is going to come in, when this discussion arises and argue that if this matter is touched some individual will be hurt. A long time ago this publication decided this question once and for all. One cannot touch any controversal question without disturbing the interest of some individual. It is a way of life. There is always some person or persons tied to every vital issue. One must know this before the battle begins.

But the question we decided a long time ago is that the interest of the masses cannot be submerged for the interest of an individual. To take any other view is to stimy the wheels of progress, and impede human advancement.

There will be all types of suggestions made November 10th, which on the surface may seem to serve the issues drawn here, but if the alumni is courageous at Home Coming; if they rise to the issues of the moment, they will issue a pronouncement which in no uncertain terms says to those who have the power to do: "Dismiss from the regency at Langston any regent residing in Logan County and return to the presidency of that institution the power and authority intended by the founding fathers.

Has any one ever stopped to think why the alumni has been unable to get together on anything other than a protest statement in the past few months? Think of all of the turmoil and difficulty through which the University has passed since last May, and then remember that the only statement coming from the alumni was a protest against the selection of Dr. Turner.

Why was the alumni not able to speak for something instead of against something. Is this not the direct reac-

[illegible] crisis. Disinterested, courageous and visionful leadership is what the Langston alumni needs in this hour. Leadership is what the Langston alumni needs in this crisis. Disinterested, courageous and visionful leadership. Does it mean anything to the institution for the alumni to drift off into such disgusting senility and deceptive quietude?

Dr. G. L. Harrison Is Langston Prexy

Leroy G. Moore, Chemistry Head Rumored Resigned

G. L. Harrison, 39, dean of education and director of teacher training at Prairie View college, Prairie View, Texas, was chosen Friday Dec. 8, by the Board of Regents to head the Agricultural and Normal university at Langston, Okla. The new president will assume duties in about thirty days, according to a statement given to the white press by Fred Holman, chairman of the board, Guthrie. Dr. Harrison was not present at the Friday meeting but had appeared several weeks ago for an interview.

A former Oklahoman, Dr. Harrison was born at Lawton, Okla., and secured his elementary training in Comanche county. He later graduated from Lincoln high school Kansas City, Mo., in 1922. He received his A. B. degree from Howard university, Washington, D. C., and a master's from the University Cincinnati. On Dec. 18, 1936, Ohio State conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Dr. Harrison formerly served as professor and acting head of the department of education at Virginia Union university, 1927-28; associate professor of education and director of elementary teacher training at West Virginia State college 1928-31.

For five years the educator was a member of the governing board of Wilberforce university at Xenia, Ohio. He has held his present position at Prairie View since 1932. The new Langston president is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

With the appointment of Dr. Harrison as president came the rumor of several changes in the administrative heads at Langston university. It is reported that Leroy G. Moore, professor of chemistry at the university, resigned as acting dean of the college.

Although the news had been widespread that the college executive would be named Friday, Fred Holman denied that a president for Langston university would be chosen in a statement to a Black Dispatch reporter during the course of the meeting and gave no official announcement of the business of the session until contacted by white newspaper men.

What the Regents Should Investigate

We trust when the Board of Regents meets Friday to consider the deplorable conditions existing at Langston University, the board will take into account that there exists no longer mystery in connection with the sudden departure from the state of Dr. Albert L. Turner. The letter written to this writer last week by Dr. Turner, now sojourning in Ann Arbor, Michigan should end forever the false charge made by interested persons that outside, lay influence, was used to terrorize the Tuskegee instructor.

Incidentally Dr. Turner has completely demolished the argument of certain individuals who charged first that this writer assisted in his decision to leave, and the later more vicious charge that certain teachers on the faculty conspired to frighten him away.

Undoubtedly some one went to the Governor and attempted to besmirch certain teachers on the faculty, if the story published in a recent edition of the Oklahoma Eagle is to be given weight and credit. Who are these people who furnished this information to the Governor about Tinner, Jones and Seabrook? If the Governor will advise the board as to who it was that brought him this information, the board will be striking pay dirt, in digging for truth.

In the judgement of The Black Dispatch the Board of Regents must locate a lot of black-mailers and character assassins out Langston-way, before any progress can be made in rehabilitating the University. There's no need to bring another innocent victim into this cut throat atmosphere where he will be bumped off before he has a chance to say "Lord have mercy".

This publication can stand all of the charges made against it, because in the last analysis, the roots of the Black Dispatch are sunk deep in the confidence of the group with which we are connected, but we think the ugly political debacle into which Langston University has fallen juts out so every one can see it, when innocent instructors are taken out before a political firing squad, as is proposed in the case of Tinner, Jones and Seabrook. We predicted last week and we predict now that insidious influences that befog the Langston situation will demand these men's scalps. This is the pound of flesh they must pay because they happen to have been friends of J. W. Sanford. They must be sacrificed, even tho Dr. Turner says in his letter "Nobody at Langston University volunteered any information to me". Again, we insist that the regents will be facing in the right direction if they inquire Friday as to who it is that stands responsible for the charge that Tinner, Seabrook and Jones held secret conferences with Dr. Turner. If these faculty members are fired The Black Dispatch and the 200,000 Negroes of Oklahoma can know that politics is stalking unleshed on the campus at Langston University.

We think the board Friday should spend a lot of time trying to find out who it was that (to use Dr. Turner's language) "twisted and garbled" the truth. Locating the person who ran into print with charges and counter charges regarding why Dr. Turner departed will be equivalant to discovering the arch enemies of Langston University.

We think that it would be wise to call the governor's investigator before the board and find out whether or not there can be conciliation between what the investigator reported and what Dr. Turner says, and it would be a fine idea to find out what important business a Guthrie Senator has outside the door of room 408, State Capitol Building, every time the regent board meets.

It would not be remiss for the board to inquire what business this state senator had with Jimmy Taylor down at the Governor's office last week. There's a link between this State Senator and Jimmy that must be broken before any instructor in or out of Oklahoma can make good at Langston University.

And then it should be recalled that Dr. Turner said in his letter last week:

"Here is a man at the school whom I have known for several years. Unaware of this fact, the chairman of the board warned me against this man. Sometime after my arrival the man asked me to set a time to talk with him about his work. Having inferred from the chairman's remarks that he did not like this man I did not give him a conference for fear that somebody might try to involve him in the decision that I at that time felt I would be compelled to make."

The entire board Friday should be advised by Chairman Holman regarding what member of the faculty against whom he advised Dr. Turner. The chairman should be required by the board to state his reasons for telling the erstwhile president this man is an undesirable. We say this because we believe as does Dr. Turner that the majority of the board wants to do the square, fair thing by the institution but have been carried down a blind alley by subtle political influences. The board, since its existence, has been receiving bad information and we are attempting to prove this to those members who we believe have the real interest of the institution at heart.

Finally, in the last analysis, we want to speak out for Dr. Turner. The politicians controlling Langston have tried in the past three weeks to ruin his good name. They want it to appear he left too soon and hurriedly. These same men, when they thought he would be content to remain a hamstrung, hogtied executive, cast iconiums upon his head, but the moment Dr. Turner took the righteous stand we all know about, he was acclaimed a coward, too theoretical, and perhaps incompetent.

Let it be said to the credit of the thinking Negroes in Oklahoma, they consider Dr. Turner a great educational leader. He came to Oklahoma and cut a pattern for the administration at Langston University that will not soon be forgotten. He brought out in the open where they must fight for existence, the politicians, and the grafters who for the past 25 years have been retarding Negro progress.

White Management for Langston University

A white manager for Langston University? That was the recommendation of one member of the legislative committee Tuesday night following revelations regarding what has been going on at the university. Two years ago the Black Dispatch uncovered an attempt to do the same thing, but denials came quick and fast. The state senator who was responsible for this suggestion and who would benefit the most in patronage, if this were done, has been busy building his fences with a certain group of Negroes, who apparently cannot see that they have leagued themselves together with a man who seeks to do nothing but deal in patronage, in order to perpetuate himself in office.

Would it not be an ugly situation, and would it not make the senator from Logan County a pretty hefty sort of fellow, were he to have all the jobs out at Langston under his thumb. The Logan County senator could do some real trading with the senators from other counties, regarding the placement of Negroes from all over the state, and thus become a real power in the state senate.

It is peculiar that the legislature has just discovered that Langston is under this vicious trinity of authority. The school has been a whirligig between the state board of education, the board of regents and the state board of affairs. The only thing wrong with the suggestion of state Senator Virgil Stokes rests in the fact that he seeks to give the school four heads instead of three.

The testimony is that the school carries sixty free students because representatives from these three governing groups demand that their pets be placed there. In addition the record shows that an affairs board member required the institution to furnish water to an oil drilling company. Going back beyond this stated report the Black Dispatch could fill this entire page with venality of those who for years have had charge of the school in a more or less degree.

Now why should white people tie a black man's hands and then charge him with delinquencies? Why should we say a man cannot do a definite task by never letting him try? In spite of all of the handicaps noted above J. W. Sanford has proven himself to be an excellent administrator. In spite of all of the weights nominated here, and others as numerous as the stars, he has in the past four years converted a $40,000 deficit into a $20,000 surplus. He has done this in the midst of a depression, when money is scarce and while state government was giving other institutions both black and white deficiency appropriations.

Since the NEGRO MANAGER has done so well why not try this plan—and we suggest the same to legislature: Why not free President J. W. Sanford to run the institution as Presidetn Bizzell runs the university down at Norman. Why not put a flower in his cap and say: you have proven your worth under great handicaps, and now as a reward for your meritorius efforts we will unshackle you, and remove those individuals and influences from the institution, which have hampered progress and responsible for the shameful conditions brought to light in our investigations.

The Black Dispatch wants to repeat what it has said on many occasions. So long as the state maintains separate institutions for Negroes, Negroes should have the right to administer them. This viewpoint goes for the institutions at Boley, Taft and Langston. It is an indefensible argument that competent Negroes cannot be found to handle the few dollars the state spends at Langston. It is n indefensible outlook that would reach around all of the actual difficulty and cause of bad conditions there, to say that a white man should be placed in charge.

EXPOSE IRREGULARITIES AT LANGSTON UNIV.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 6—(ANP)—Gov. Leon C. Phillips announced last week that he would name a business manager for Langston University "if a good one can be found."

The Governor's statement was made after revelations that the school's gas bills ran to $1,500 monthly.

President Sanford, Supt. William Hazel of the Boys' Training School at Boley, and Major H. McCornick, superintendent of the Taft nstitutions, were also called be-ore a joint committee of the Legislature to answer charges of mismanagement and irregularities at heir State institutions.

THE LEGISLATURE AND LANGSTON UNIVERSITY

(AN EDITORIAL)

One thing members of the present legislature should keep in mind: That it is not possible to accredit Langston University and at the same time carve from the budget submitted by President J. W. Sanford the very items which if not approved will prevent acccredition. It would be better to be frank and honest about the matter, stating that the legislature will not attempt to secure official rating for the school at this time.

We understand and know that the governor and the legislature are practicing cruel economy during this session, and that it is the avowed purpose of all not to grant any new improvements to the state's standardized and accredited institutions. We feel, as do the governor and all of those who are battling to balance the budget, this is the proper attitude to assume.

But when we approach Langston University, its problems are sub-standard. In the case of the state's only Negro college, it is a problem of bringing the school up to the level of white tax-supported institutions. The first thing to decide is whether we will or will not do this. If the state is going to do this job now, as the governor and many members of the legislature say they will, immediately the task becomes obvious.

When we talk about accrediting Langston University people should not take on strange and mysterious looks. Three very definite factors enter such discussion. The faculty, the curriculum and the physical plant must be brought up to certain standards. The legislature must provide the funds with which to bring the teachers' salaries up to required levels and addition appropriations must be made for buildings, equipment and other auxiliary trappings which go to make the perfect whole.

First of all, in working towards accredition the college must set up certain trends, objectives, and courses calculated to propel students towards such trends and objectives must be approved. With this in mind it should be remembered that Langston sets up trends in agriculture, trades and home economics. The appropriations committee of the legislature completely gutted items in the present Sanford budget covering these objectives. $10,000 has been approved out of a total of $75,000 asked by President Sanford for these two departments.

To conform with the regulations of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, Langston University needs the following buildings: Administration, science, auditorium, library, fine arts, hospital. The legislative committee studying appropriations allowed Langston nothing for buildings, and only $19,000 for maintenance.

But the main point where the legislature refused to budge and where it will be necessary to act favorably if Langston University is to be accredited, rests in denial of additional instructors. The North Central Association says that the average teacher-student ratio for colleges in 1-13. At the present time the teacher-student ratio at Langston is 1-22.3. President Sanford asks for 18 more instructors which would pull the ratio to a 1-17 level, which barely allows accredition.

Now there is no use talking about rating Langston University unless these things are done. The legislature cut out of the budget $22,555.00 which was to be used in the employment of the additional 18 teachers, who, if they had been hired would have been placed on the barest minimum wage. We cannot accredit Langston University with one teacher for every 22.3 students. That is not the rule of any rating agency. No one need assume that a special dispensation will be provided for Langston University.

In a recent letter to President Sanford, from the secretary of the North Central Association, discussion was had regarding the low percentile rating of the present faculty. The following is a paragraph from that letter:

"You probably realize that your institution still ranks comparatively low on certain items. For example, it has a percentile rank of 6 on Doctor's degrees held by the faculty members, 14 on expenditures for library salaries, and 5 on student-faculty ratio. On the other hand, the data contained in your most recent application shows definite improvement as far as percentage of faculty members having the Master's degree, expenditures for library books, and educational expenditure are concerned."

You see we can't eat our cake and have it too. In other words if the Oklahoma legislature is not going to recognize these various standards set by the North Central Association, Langston University will not be accredited. What we are talking about ought be as plain as the noonday sun.

Take the percentile rating referred to in the paragraph taken from the North Central official. Basicly this inferior rating develops out of the low salary level maintained at the university at the present time. It is true that the last Marland legislature pushed the salary level up to the minimum requirements, but how under high heaven can the Oklahoma legislature expect an outstanding man with a doctorate to be attracted to Oklahoma. Percentile rank among faculty members includes the idea of a teacher with long years of experience, perhaps a member of sev-

Charting the Educational Sea

The Black Dispatch wants to endorse the general scope and outline of the bill introduced in the Oklahoma legislature by Representative Creekmore Wallace, having the intent and purpose of converting the Agricultural and Normal University at Langston into a full-fledged university. We understand that Representative Wallace's idea is an attempt to conform to the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, in the Lloyd Gaines case, recently won by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Just before we left Oklahoma we attempted to get in touch with Representative Wallace to discuss his bill and offer suggestions. The truth is that what he proposes is the most outstanding and significant type of legislation ever attempted for Negroes since statehood. It is a challenge not alone to the legislature, but to the best thought and vision of the Negro leadership of the state.

First of all, in an approach to this subject, it should be kept in mind that the essence of the Supreme Court ruling rests in the order that state government must give equal facilities for education to every school child within the state. The court held that equality did not obtain within the state when state government adopted a subterfuge in sending Negro students out of the state for graduate educational courses.

The problem now rests more largely with Negroes than with white folk. The question is: "Will our Negro president of land-grant colleges, have the courage and the vision to demand for the Negro school children of the South the facilities to which the Supreme Court says they are entitled?"

Dr. William J. Thompson, Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia, and curator of Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Missouri, in a statement issued to the country this week, offers this interrogation:

"Will the presidents and boards of Negro state institutions in states of segregation arise to the occasion of the necessity for a perfect setup in establishing a class "a" school in the various departments of the states? Or, will they be influenced by the complex of the old worn out statement, 'We cannot afford to ask too much," thereby permitting Negro education to continue in a realm of inferiority as compared to the educational program as exists in the white institutions. Our duty is to ask for the limit and get it. That there can be no doubt as to qualifications which must be equal to avert inferior complex expressions such as we so frequently hear—'Oh, this is the best Negro this and that.' Thus our institution heads should set out to establish the highest, most complete and methodical institution in building, equipment and teaching force. To accomplish this, there must be a fearlessness on the part of these educators without regard to the future of their positions. They must forget that ever present thought of expense that confronts all colored executives. Rather must they interpret the letter of the law and apply its interpretation to the letter, with no thought of where it will lead financially so long as they do not go beyond the interpretations."

Now this is a serious matter. If the administration at Langston University and the alumni are actually interested in taking full advantage of the Supreme Court decision; if they have the actual interest of the Negro school child at heart, there ought immediately be a conference called among Negroes to determine an approach to this subject.

President Sanford nor any of the members of the alumni are properly in position to enter into a discussion of this subject, as to the adequacy of the proposed plans, until something in the nature of what we propose is done. We have been kept too far away from this type of state educational set-up to know what should be done to make Langston what it should be, without immediate and careful study of ascertainable facts.

We believe that immediately the alumni association should appropriate funds out of its treasury to send a committee to visit various institutions over the country, having for its purpose the study of facilities for graduate courses. No determinative discussion should be had with any agency of government until something similar to what is suggested here is done.

In fact, when standards are set as to buildings, instructional equipment and faculty personnel, the yardstick should be used by the North Central Association of Colleges. Only in this way can we be definitely certain that educational equality within the state is going to obtain. Law and medicine seemed to be stressed in the bill proposed by Representative Wallace. A study of the courses offered at the University of Oklahoma will disclose that there a half dozen other graduate courses offered not suggested in the bill. Equality means that there will be absolutely no difference in the type, character and quality of training at Langston and that at Oklahoma University.

Care should be taken to see that the "quantitive" idea does not enter into this discussion. There are those in authority who will argue that this or that course should not be offered because there is no demand for it. There will be "Uncle Tom" Negroes to rush to the fore to echo this view. If the state is too poor to offer dual standards of equality, the time has come to scrap separate schools. Negroes should either get educational equality separately or within the walls of institutions now operated for whites. It is not a question of going to school with whites. It is a question of securing the same high standard of graduate work in any field Negroes may elect.

In discussing this subject and holding conferences regarding same Negroes should keep in mind that the ruling of the Supreme Court operates to bring equality not alone in higher educational brackets but in the field of primary and secondary effort. This means that the old disgraceful methods of financing white schools at the expense of Negro schools must end. Equality means that identical salaries must be paid. Equal school terms must be maintained and that in every way parity in service must be given. The decision should hearten every Negro who has given assistance to the case now being carired up from Muskogee by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The Supreme Court in this case is going to expound the law regarding approach to secondary education. A state conference of educators should work out some pattern of advance in this direction immediately. No chance should be lost to consolidate all of the gains obtaining within the precincts of this notable decision.

Present Bill For Langston University

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 20—ANP—One of the aftermaths of the recent decision of the supreme court of the United States in the Lloyd Gaines' case is a bill introduced last week in the Oklahoma legislature by Representative Creekmore Wallace of this city to change the name of Langston University to Colored University of Oklahoma and provide higher education for Negroes in Oklahoma in conformity with the Supreme Court decision. The bill also provides for the establishment of a school of medicine to be a part of the new school, and for law and engineering courses.

The bill reads in part "An act providing a plan for a complete separation of the races in the preparatory schools and institutions of higher learning of the state, changing name of Colored Agricultural and Normal University to Colored University of Oklahoma, permitting only Negroes to attend said university, prohibiting Negroes from attending other educational institutions of the state, providing for schools of law, medicine, dentistry, engineering and instruction in other courses at said institutions, prescribig power of Board of Regents, making appropriations for building and declaring an emergency."

Langston University Will Get New Title If Recent Bill Presented Is Made a Law

Attempt to Write New State Law to Counteract Supreme Court Decision in Gaines Case

Bars Negroes From All Oklahoma White Schools

The name "Langston University" will become a thing of the past, if a bill introduced in the legislature by Representative Creekmore Wallace, Oklahoma City, becomes law.

The bill, to be hereafter known as House Bill No 25, provides a new name for the institution to be known as --Colored University of Oklahoma" and is an effort on the part of Representative Creekmore Wallace to provide higher educational training for Negroes in this state, in conformity with the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Lloyd Gaines case.

If passed, the bill provides for the establishment of a school of medicine in Oklahoma City, to also be a part of the Colored University of Oklahoma and will also provide for law and engineering courses.

The full text of the bill with the concluding paragraphs, which provide the appropriation deleted is as follows:

300 Citizens Attend Open Hearing on Bill to Convert L. U. Into Graduate School

Sandford Lauded by House Committee and Endorsed by Negroes Coming from Every Section of Oklahoma

Steering Committee Named

More than 300 citizens coming from every section of Oklahoma jammed the halls of the legislature, on the fourth floor of the capitol building, during the open hearing held the House Committee on Education, to study House Bill No. 25, having to do with creating Langston University into a graduate school, Monday morning.

The hearing started at 9:30 in the rooms of the committee, but with the lobby crowd in the hallways blocking the corridors. It was finally decided to move into the assembly rooms of the corporation commission on the same floor. The committee, following a brief statement from Dale Brown, Coalgate, agreed to hear the delegation immediately following roll call at the afternoon session. Representative Brown is the chairman of the House Sub-committee, named by the House to study conditions at Langston university. Representative Creekmore Wallace, Oklahoma county, also appeared before the committee for a brief statement.

Bill Discussed

Use of the assembly room was immediately secured by Representative Dale Brown and the milling throng proceeded to organize and discuss the merits of the bill prior to the return of the committee.

The bill as amended was read to the group, composed of ministers lawyers, doctors, business men and laymen. The entire executive committee of the Medical Association was present and practically every prominent minister in Oklahoma arrived for the parley.

Sanford Presides

Following the reading of the Wallace bill as amended by the committee, headed by W. E. Anderson, Okmulgee, it was unanimously endorsed by a group of speakers named to present the amended bill to the committee. President J. W. Sanford of Langston university, presided, and he was cheered roundly by the group

OKLAHOMA

Jimmy Taylor, Business Manager

And now with the selection of a new president for Langston University we wonder whether or not the board of regents will insist upon the retention of the wonderful business manager it now possesses in the person of Prof. Jimmy Taylor.

Prof. Taylor, who was also an active candidate for the presidency, and who was supported for this important position by the editor of the Oklahoma Eagle, is said to have worked wonders with the finances at the Langston Institution. In the month of September according to the Oklahoma Eagle, Jimmy Taylor was able to save the people of the state $6,453.40.

In support of its contention that Jimmy is a financial wizard, Editor Goodwin made the following statement several weeks ago:

"In the operation of the main dining room for the first month Jimmy shows a bank balance of $6,453.40—with all bills paid and a large amount of groceries still on hand. On this basis, if it holds up for the school year, there should be $58,077.00 on hand at the end of the school year."

We think that The Black Dispatch should discuss the figures given above in order that the new president who takes charge in the next thirty days will be fully apprised as to whether or not his business manager, knows anything at all about the wizardry of figures.

In September of this year there was enrolled at Langston University 725 students. $11.00 out of the eighteen dollars monthly payments goes into the dining room fund. In other words Jimmy Taylor collected the sum of $7,975.00 dining room funds during the month of September. We state the exact and actual amount he collected. This,—no less and no more. Jimmy will have to agree that this is the amount he collected from 725 students paying $11.00 per capita.

We have in that last balance the amount of money that wizard Jimmy used to feed 725 students during the month of September, if we are not as guillible as Editor Goodwin desires us to be we shall now take this sum of money and reduce it to more understandable terms.

Never since we read the 6th chapter of St. Mark have we been able to discover any act of man comparable with the miracles of the Lowly Nazerene until we learned from the Editor of the Oklahoma Eagle about Jimmy Taylor and his "manna" out Langston way. Christ fed five thousand with "five loaves and two fishes." Christ had only twelve baskets of trash left when he finished his job, but Jimmy pulls the same stunt and ends with a bin full of real stuff, and $6,453.60 with which to replentish his supply five times over. It seems somewhat sacreligeous, but truly Christ is a piker when He gets in competition with Jimmy Taylor.

If 725 students must live on $1,521.60 each month, it means that their per capita food cost is slightly less than $2.10 each thirty days. In order that we do not run off into the magic of decimals we will say that the daily three-meal menu costs 7 cents, or 2 and one-third cents per meal.

Of course all of what we are saying is based upon the assertion and declaration of Editor Goodwin that Jimmy Taylor saved $6,453.40 in one month out of a total of amount collected of $7,975.00. And while we are on that point we want to call attention to the fact that Editor Goodwin would have us believe that Jimmy has in the dining room fund at this present moment slightly over $19,000 otherwise he would not say Jimmy would have $58,000 at the end of the year. A good question to ask right here, and which Editor Goodwin should be able to answer in his next edition. "Was October and November just as profitable to Jimmy Taylor's dining room account as September?" A great deal depends upon what Editor Goodwin says in behalf of "Ambitious Jimmy" and the way his money continues to stack up following the marvelous September report.

Now to cease being funny we want to point out right here that Jimmy Taylor will not report any such record for October and November. The truth is that when many parents came in and paid their children's bills for the entire semester Jimmy did not have the business sense to see that he could not credit these children's October, November and December payments to his general September balance. Some of these parents paid their children's account for the entire year. Jimmy either knew this or he did not know this. If the young man knew the facts as we have just stated it, he is guilty of having attempted to fool the board of regents and the people of this state. If Jimmy did not know this to be true, he has gone a long way towards proving Senator Ritzhaupt's assertion that no Negro in Oklahoma is qualified to manage Langston University's business office.

The truth is that we would rather look at the figures Jimmy submits at the end of the semester, to find out whether Langston's dining room department is in the red or in the black, rather than the figures he offered to Ed Goodwin in September, which when reduced to their stark nakedness attempt to show that he is feeding 725 students for two and one-third cents per meal. Of course these figures we have submitted do not offer the stark naked truth, for it should be recalled that those employed in the dining room and kitchen at the University must reduce this sum of $1,521.60 by some $400.00. These people work for salaries and we have sufficiently inquired into this matter to know that if Jimmy is paying $400.00 for dining room salaries he is then feeding 725 students for a sum of around and about $1,100.00 per month. To this must be added the cost of feeding the faculty members who also eat three healthy meals per day.

Jimmy does not look much like a business manager when you strip his economics naked and bare.

But suppose what Jimmy alleges is true. In other words he supports the theory that the kids can be fed for $2.10 per month. If this is the truth why is the State of Oklahoma demanding that Negro children pay $11.00 per month? Too many Negroes are on relief and mortgaging their property to send their children to Langston University for the state to enforce such an unfair program. Of course we do not believe the state can feed the children for any such meager sum. We simply follow the logical conclusion one would reach if Editor Goodwin and Jimmy Taylor know what they are talking about.

On the other hand there is another story. Jimmy says he has saved $6,453.60 from the dining room department during the month of September. If this amount was saved while the state was serving the students well balanced diets so well and so good. But was this amount saved at the expense of these 725 children? Have the children been getting the type and character of substance with which to develop healthy bodies and especially designed to aid their mental efforts?

We are advised that there is a plan on foot suggested by wizard Jimmy that money will be squezzed out of the dining room funds in order to erect a Community house, or commisary on the campus. In fact Jimmy unfolded the idea to this writer. The Black Dispatch wants to go on record here and now opposing any such idea. If the state collects $11.00 for board at Langston University the state should spend that much for food and other expenses connected with the boarding accounts.

If there is a commisary, a community house or what not ed, the Negroes of this state will in the next semester be paying only about $2.25 monthly into the boarding department at Langston University.

Jimmy Taylor, Business Manager

And now with the selection of a new president for Langston University we wonder whether or not the board of regents will insist upon the retention of the wonderful business manager it now possesses in the person of Prof. Jimmy Taylor.

Prof. Taylor, who was also an active candidate for the presidency, and who was supported for this important position by the editor of the Oklahoma Eagle, is said to have worked wonders with the finances at the Langston Institution. In the month of September according to the Oklahoma Eagle, Jimmy Taylor was able to save the people of the state $6,453.40.

In support of its contention that Jimmy is a financial wizard, Editor Goodwin made the following statement several weeks ago:

14 Students From Slave and Gold Coasts Of Africa Study at Lincoln U.

OXFORD, Pa.—(ANP)—From the slave coast and Gold coast of western Africa, from which many of their forbears were sold into slavery in America a few centuries ago, 14 native African boys are now numbered among the 340 students of Lincoln university in Chester county, near here. Twelve have entered this year and two came a year ago.

Eleven of the group came from Nigeria, on the slave coast, near the mouth of the Niger river, and three from the town of Accra, capital of the Gold coast. They are mostly members of one tribe and came here largely through the influence of an earlier Lincoln graduate who returned to work among the tribesmen.

ACTION DELAYED ON NEGRO SCHOOL

FIRST INROAD ON WHITE INSTITUTIONS.

Committee Favors Probe of Pardons; Delegations Want to Shorten the Bird Season.

Columbia, Feb. 1.—The senate judiciary committee deferred action yesterday on the house bill to establish a negro law school after being told this would probably be only the first inroads on white institutions of higher learning.

Dean J. Nelson Frierson of the University of South Carolina law school said "the next step" would likely be efforts to have negroes admitted to white institutions to study pharmacy or medicine or otherwise separate schools would have to be set up.

The house proposal would create a law school at the state negro college.

"I think we have got to take the first step first," Frierson said urging support for the bill, "and I believe in taking a firm step," asserting that the creation of the negro law school would be a move which would not have to be rescinded in future years.

Frierson expressed the opinion that, to avoid charges of discrimination, the present system of admitting persons to the bar would have to be changed. Graduates of the university law school are automatically admitted to the bar. Other candidates are examined by the state board.

Frierson said that apparently the only alternative would be to have all candidates examined.

When a bill proposing to admit University of Virginia graduates to the state bar was taken up by the house judiciary committee yesterday, several committee members said that apparently the negro law school proposition—resulting from the far-reaching Missouri case before the United States supreme court—had created the necessity of having all bar candidates examined by the board.

The senate judiciary committee drafted a favorable report on Senator Sims' bill to have the pardons board submit detailed information on pardons and paroles recommended to former Governor Olin Johnston.

The house social legislation group prepared a favorable report on a house bill to allow employers to simplify reports to the unemployment compensation commission, including quarterly rather than weekly reports.

It designated a sub-committee to consult with the governor, the ways and means committee and public welfare department to ascertain how to finance the department.

The ways and means committee continued hearing requests for appropriations. Winthrop college was among those represented.

The house fish, game and forestry committee gave an unfavorable report on a house bill to direct the chief game warden to set up six $10,000 quail hatcheries.

The committee refused to sponsor as a committee measure a proposal to substitute a general 50-cent annual fishing license for the present $1.10 artificial tackle license. Chief Game Warden A. A. Richardson advocated the bill recently.

A sub-committee was appointed to confer with the governor in cooperating with the federal government in seeking adequate financial assistance for state parks.

The house judiciary committee prepared a favorable report on a house measure to provide for the appointment of a commission of nine private citizens to "advise the general assembly what may be done" to improve the present system of taxation.

Legislative delegations of Zone 4 authorized a sub-committee to draft a bill to close bird hunting season February 15 this year and February 1 in succeeding years in the zone. The season would be continued to open on Thanksgiving. Some counties have been closing their season February 1, February 15 and March 1. Counties in the zone are Lancaster, Spartanburg, Chester, York, Fairfield, Union and Cherokee.

DEFER ACTION ON NEGRO LAW UNIT

U. S. C. Dean Backs Negro Law School

Support of a plan to establish a negro law school in South Carolina was expressed before the senate judiciary committee yesterday by Dean J. Nelson Frierson, of the University of South Carolina law school.

"I think we have to take the first step first," Fierson said, "and I believe in taking a firm step."

He asserted his belief that it would be only the beginning, and predicted the next step would probably be efforts for negroes to enter the medical college.

Frierson also told the committee that it would be necessary to alter the present system of admitting persons to the bar. Now graduates of the law school automatically are admitted, but he said that in the future the best plan probably would be to make all persons stand examinations.

The committee deferred action on the bill for a negro law school. It gave a favorable report, however to a resolution of Senator Henry R. Sims, Orangeburg, for an investigation of pardons and parole during the last two years.

N. C. House Passes Negro School Bill

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 14. (AP)—The house passed and sent to the senate today the administration bill to provide graduate and specialized courses for negroes at two state-supported negro colleges.

Rep. Furphy of Rowan, its author, said the bill was in answer to "the mandate of the United States supreme court." He referred to a ruling that the state of Missouri must provide graduate and specialized courses for negroes.

Negro School Of Law Studied By Senate Unit

A sub-committee of the senate judiciary committee is studying the "very momentous question" of a proposed school of law at the state negro college, Chairman John M Wise revealed today.

A bill sponsored by the house judiciary group providing for the establishment of the law school a the Orangeburg institution was before the committee but Wise said his colleagues were uncertain as to what action they would take.

He named Senators Henderson of Bamberg and Warren of Hampton to serve with him on the subcommittee authorized by the committee as a whole to make a further and careful study of the situation.

"We don't want to make a mistake at the very beginning of the thing," Wise said.

At a hearing earlier in the (last) week, the committee heard Speaker Sol Blatt of the house of representatives, who is a trustee at the University of South Carolina, advocate passage of the house bill in order to meet the situation caused by a recent decision of the U. S. supreme court.

It was held that the state of Missouri must admit a negro applicant to the law school of its state university or provide the same facilities at a separate school within its borders. A negro applied for admission to the South Carolina law school several months ago but a special trustee committee, of which Blatt is chairman, has so far deferred action.

Blatt was instrumental in getting the bill past the house and has declared himself as especially anxious to have it passed.

Members of the senate committee have expressed themselves to newsmen as dubious of the wisdom of the measure.

Negro Schools of County Close Classes for Year

22 Schools of County End Work of Current Year; Plan Summer Terms

Twenty-one negro schools of the county have suspended classes following completion of regular work for the 1938-'39 school year, it was learned here yesterday at the offices of J. F. Brooks, county superintendent of education.

Terms of all of the schools are of either six or seven months' duration, it was said.

Many To Resume

Some of the schools will resume classes during the early summer months to allow pupils to attend school for several weeks in order that studies can be suspended again during crop-gathering season.

However, a list of schools planning to follow this course is not yet available.

Negro schools which already have closed their 1938-'39 seasons, as reoprted to the county superintendent of education, include:

Reidville (Oakland), Little Africa, Cross Anchor, Foster's Chapel, Underwood, Pauline, Flint Hill, Pleasant Falls, Switzer, Shady Grove (Cunningham district).

Also: Holden Chapel, Willis Grove, New Pilgrim, Shiloh (Glenn Springs), Mount Pisgah, Harrison Grove, Gentry, Prospect, Shady Grove (Green Pond), and Shiloh (Ballenger district).

LAW SCHOOL AT NEGRO COLLEGE IS NOT PASSED

House And Senate Fail To Agree On Methods To Keep Them Out U. S. C.

COURT ACTION POSSIBLE

COLUMBIA, June 17—(AP)—A legislative move to forestall any possible court action over the admission of negroes to the University of South Carolina has been abandoned after the senate and house failed to agree on a method of meeting such a situation.

At the beginning of the session in January, the house judiciary committee introduced, at the instance of Speaker Sol Blatt, a member of the university's board of trustees, a bill to establish a law school at the state negro college at Orangeburg.

MISSOURI CASE CITED

Blatt told the committee of an application by a negro for admission to the university law school and said that since the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme court in a Missouri case he did not believe the application could be legally refused. The high court held that Missouri was bound to accept a negro into its university law school unless it maintained a comparable school for his race within the state.

The bill passed the house without ado but the senate judiciary committee, to which it was referred when it go to the other body, bucked. A sub-committee was named to draft a substitute and finally recommended a bill that would require the endorsement of two legislators before any applicant for admission to the university law school could be accepted.

REFUSED BY HOUSE

This was approved by the full committee and the bill passed the senate in this form and went back to the house, which refused to accept the amendments. A free conference committee, composed of Senators Wise of Chester, Warren of Hampton, and Henderson of Bamberg and Reps. Thomas of Beaufort, Brailsford of Orangeburg and Hughs of Oconee, was appointed to iron out the differences but met only once with no results.

The matter was allowed to drop at this point, one of the conferees telling newsmen it was thought nothing would come of the negro's application at the university because he understood a national negro leader whom he named had been advised to keep "hands off South Carolina."

Speaker Blatt expressed regret, however, that the bill as originally drafted did not pass and said that he hoped no legal action would ever be instituted against the university over a negro application for entrance.

Bill Calling For S.C. Law School Killed By Senate

By I. M. A. MYERS

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(ANP)—The South Carolina legislature killed and buried the proposition to establish a law school for Negroes. It will be dead for at least 12 months, but friends of the proposition hope to resurrect the bill in the next legislature and probably have it passed.

At the beginning of the session in January, the house judiciary committee introduced, at the instance of Speaker Sol Blatt, a member of the university's board of trustees, a bill to establish a law school at the state college at Orangeburg.

Blatt told the committee of an application by a Negro for admittance to the university law school and said that since the recent decision of the United States Supreme court in a Missouri case he did not believe the application could be legally refused. This was approved by the full committee and the bill passed the senate in this form and went back to the house, which refused to accept the amendments. A free conference committee, composed of Senator Wise of Chester, Warren of Hampton, and Henderson of Bamberg and Representatives Thomas of Beaufort, Brailsford of Orangeburg and Hughs of Oconee, was appointed to iron out the differences, but met only once with no results.

The matter was dropped at this point, a conferee telling newsmen he thought nothing would come of the Negro's application at the university because he understood a national Negro leader whom he named had been advised to keep "hands off South Carolina."

Speaker Blatt expressed regret that the bill did not pass and said he hoped legal action would never be instituted against the university over a Negro application for entrance.

Gets S. C. To Adopt Negro Books In Elementary School

Small Town Tutor Credited With Placements

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(By I. M. A. Myers for ANP)—South Carolina State Department of Education has adopted Negro books for the first five grades in elementary schools. The books are written by noted Negro authors. The list was approved after some study by a committee of selection of state adopted books upon suggestions of Miss Thomas, state supervisor of elementary education. She is a ranking member of the department of education of South Carolina.

The whole matter of placing Negro books in the public school list is due to the credit of a Negro school teacher in the Allendale school at Allendale, S. C. Little is known of this young woman, for she works in a small town. But she is one person who is interested in the development of her race. Her name is Hilda V. Grayson While attending school, she was convinced of the importance of the story of the Negro race reaching the ears of the boys and girls of her race. She said, "They will see the possibility of rising in spite of all handicaps."

ALLOWED TO PRESENT VIEWS

So intent was this young teacher in her beliefs that she was permitted to present her story to 5,000 members of the Palmetto State Teachers association. At its last session in March, she directed a history group which was a credit to her race. With her own means, she gathered and arranged a program which placed emphasis on Negro life. This included methods of presenting the materials, the use of Negro music and literature in schools. Included in this program was an exhibit long to be remembered by the 1,100 persons visiting the group. In the exhibit were over 100 Negro journals, more than 100 pictures of leaders, and 20 very good displays from various schools showing the progress made by Negroes in South Carolina and America. Among the autographs collected during this meeting were those of officials from the state department of education.

This young woman has made several trips to popularize her belief in Negro literature. NEGRO LAW UNIT WON'T BE PUSHED Legislative Move To Prevent Possible Court Action If Negro Should Attempt Admission To University Is Abandoned.

COLUMBIA, June 17—(AP)—A legislative move to forestall any possible court action over the admission of negroes to the University of South Carolina has been abandoned after the senate and house failed to agree on a method of meeting such a situation.

At the beginning of the session in January, the house judiciary committee introduced, at the instance of Speaker Sol Blatt, a member of the university's board of trustees, a bill to establish a law school at the State Negro college at Orangeburg.

Blatt told the committee of an application by a negro for admission to the university law school and said that since the recent decision of the U. S. supreme court in a Missouri case he did not believe the application could be legally refused. The high court held that Missouri was bound to accept a negro into its university law school unless it maintained a comparable school for his race within the state.

The bill passed the house without ado but the senate judiciary committee, to which it was referred when it got to the other body, bucked. A sub-committee was named to draft a substitute and finally recommended a bill that would require the endorsement of two legislators before any applicant for admission to the university law school could be accepted.

This was approved by the full committee and the bill passed the senate in this form and went back to the house, which refused to accept the amendments. A free conference committee, composed of Senators Wise of Chester, Warren of Hampton and Henderson of Bamberg and Reps. Thomas of Beaufort, Brailsford of Orangeburg and Hughs of Oconee, was appointed to iron out the differences but met only once with no results.

The matter was allowed to drop at this point, one of the conferees telling newsmen it was thought nothing would come of the negro's application at the university because he understood a national negro leader whom he named had been advised to keep "hands off South Carolina."

Speaker Blatt expressed regret, however, that the bill as originally drafted did not pass and said that he hoped no legal action would ever be instituted against the university over a negro application for entrance.

County's Teachers To Get Pay Earlier

Checks to Be Issued Two Weeks After Opening as Accommodation

All teachers in the Charleston county school system will be given their first month's pay two weeks after school opens, it was decided yesterday afternoon at the regular meeting of the county board of school commissioners, held at the Center.

This action was taken out of consideration for teachers who had contracted obligations prior to the time it was decided advisable to postpone the school opening two weeks because of poliomyelitis. After these initial pay checks are distributed, teachers will wait six weeks before receiving their second salary instalment so that the regular monthly salary schedule might be resumed.

The board approved the recommendation of the county health department that schools delay their openings. White schools will open September 25 and negro schools will start classes October 2.

An appropriation of $150 was made to help defray traveling expenses of the negro health worker in the county schools this year. The workers will be employed by the Charleston County Tuberculosis association. Mrs. Ashley Halsey, association executive secretary, yesterday explained to the board the duties of the worker.

To make up lost time in the delayed openings, the school term will be extended next spring, it was announced.

Dangerous Business

THE STUDENT strike at a well-known Methodist school in South Carolina, when given an unbiased analysis, will be found to be nothing more or less than a dangerous business—dangerous because it is lawless. One doesn't have to be so narrow as to become partisan in his sympathies in matters of this kind. Nor is it necessary to overlook provocations. But in this matter it is as clear as crystal that these striking students have merely gone off on a tangent of irresponsibility in setting themselves up as judge and jury in a matter that has no bearing upon the purpose for which they matriculated in that school. It matters nothing as to their indignation at the changes wrought in the administration of the institution for, since those changes have not operated to rob them of their right to gain an education, they do not warrant the action taken by the striking students.

It is dangerous business when any group of people, be they young or old, are permitted to assume functions of constituted authority. If everybody were permitted to have their own say about everything, there is a likelihood that nothing would be done in order. Young students assuming the role of correctors of abuses in educational institutions, are not only out of tune with constituted authority, but are sowing the evil seed of anarchy that will some day return to them in a harvest of bitter disillusionments. We cannot, therefore, sympathize with them in their lawless work, no matter how righteous their cause may appear to them, or how laudable their stand may seem to near-sighted and thoughtless sympathizers.

We educate our children in an effort to inculcate in them a love for higher civilization. In educating them, we make untold sacrifices. Should these sacrifices be made in vain by permitting them to lay aside their work of pursuing their studies in order to engage in revolution aganst administrative heads of the institutions where they have gone to seek an education? No—a thousand times no. The future of our country cannot be assured by the encouragement of anarchy—disrespect for constituted authority. It is for this reason that we cannot offer sympathy to students of any educational institution who attempt to take the law into their own hands, and to force their will in matters with which they have nothing to do. If conditions need remedying, the work must be left to the authorities solely.

Students At Allen Lauded

Greenville Member Of Colored College Board Defends Strike

Editor, The Piedmont:

In Thursday evening's issue of The Piedmont, under the caption, "Unwise Surrender," appeared an article concerning the strike of students at Allen University, Negro college in Columbia. The editorial expresses the opinion that the students had neither respect nor appreciation for "duly constituted authority." May I advise that the action of the students at Allen university was exactly the reverse; it was a fight in favor of proper procedure, and a protest against arbitrary management.

Not once did a student raise h voice against the ability or the character of "the former head"; the means used was not "for getting rid of him." Rather the 300 students protested the method by which he was made the acting president of the college, which method as they saw it was a blow to duly constituted authority.

Allen University is a co-educational institution under the auspices of the African Methodist Episcopal church, supported by its 80,000 members in South Carolina. The trustees, in equal numbers of ministers and laymen, are elected from the six annual conferences in this state . . . The charter of the school provides that the president and faculty of the university shall be elected by the board of trustees (of which I happen to be a member). In the interval of a trustee meeting, whenever occasion demands, the EXECUTIVE BOARD of the TRUSTEE BOARD may take action on matters o n which the trustee board has not previously taken final action . . . In the case at issue, neither THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES nor the EXECUTIVE BOARD had acted in the election of the Rev. E. F. G. Dent, "former head." Five days before the death of President E. H. McGill (who died March 13) a PRESIDING ELEDR'S COUNCIL, and not a duly constituted trustee board, elected the Rev. E. F. G. Dent as acting president of the college . . . It was against this action the students arose in indignant and timely protest.

The Alumni Association met in Columbia last Saturday to make a study of the situation. By order of that meeting, the writer was author of a petition to Bishop J. S. Flipper, of Atlanta, chairman of the board of trustees, asking that a meeting of the board be immediately called, and according to law a president be elected BY THAT BOARD. The executive board, representing the board of trustees, met Monday, March 27, at which time Dean O'Daniel was elected acting president for the remainder of the term, and the strife was settled. The strike students there have learned to in- at Allen university reveals that the terpret a situation and to think for themselves, thus fulfilling in a definite manner the purpose for which the school was created.

Respectfully,
J. W. WITHERSPOON.

Cole Blease Urges Law School At Allen University

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(ANP)—Cole L. Blease, ex-governor of South Carolina and former member of the United States senate, said in an interview with the editor of The Palmetto Leader last week that he would urge the state legislature to appropriate funds for the establishment of a law school for Negroes at Allen University.

Allen is the second in standing of the colleges supported by the AME church in the United States.

"I think that there should be no reason why the legislature should not appropriate annually money for a law unit for the Negro race, and I think this unit should be established at Allen university. Allen stands as number one in honest-to-God faithful service to her people and their Heavenly Father," he said.

The South Carolina law makers are now debating a bill which provides for the establishment of a separate law school for Negroes.

State College Has 2,000 Enrollment

ORANGEBURG, April 29 — A five-year expansion program at South Carolina State A. and M. college, the only state supparted institution of higher education for the negro in South Carolina, bespeaks the remarkable progress that has been made in negro education in the state since the legislature of 1896 enacted provisions of the constitution and a board of trustees, with the governor as ex-officio member was authorized to select a president and proper corps of teachers for the college.

The legislature then stipulated "That the sum of $5,000 be annually appropriated for five years for the purpose of erecting necessary buildings and prepare buildings therefor, if so much is necessary."

Pursuant to this organization, a faculty, 13 in number composed of South Carolinians, was chosen, with Dr. Thomas E. Miller as president and on September 21, 1896, the doors were opened to negro youth of the state. The plant consisted of 135 acres, eight small buildings, a small dairy herd and a few farm animals. Academic instruction because of meager facilities was mostly given on logs hewn from the campus wilderness. These were later made into lumber for the first dormitory and classroom buildings.

In 43 years, three presidents have served. In 1911, Robert Shaw Wilkinson, a native of Charleston, was elected to the presidency. During his administration of 21 years, the college made many physical and academic improvements. In 1932, following the death of Dr. Wilkinson, Miller F. Whittaker was elected to the presidency. Since 1911, the school's income has been supplemented by a federal government appropriation of $36,754, and a federal fund for extension workers among negroes.

In 1910, the enrollment was 500 and work was done from kindergarten through the normal course

The 1937-38 enrollment, including summer school figures, is 2,182, and no work is done below the college level.

Up to the present, 32,882 students have matriculated at the college, and 2,271 have received certificates, diplomas, and degrees from various departments. In 1914, at the request of the state department of education, the first summer session was held. In 1930 the college was approved by the Rosenwald foundation and the United States department of agriculture as one of the three negro colleges of the south to conduct a special summer session for home and farm demonstration agents.

The physical plant of the college now consists of 210 acres of land, 40 of which are in the campus, 40 buildings. The total value of land, buildings and equipment is $1,258,500.

NO LAW SCHOOL FOR NEGROES

The proposition to create a law school for Negro students died in the South Carolina legislature last week when it came up in the Senate and found its way to the free conference committee. It is dead for twelve months at least.

As we are able to analyze the solution, the greatest need is a graduate school for Negroes where Negro students may study for advance degrees in education, science and law. There is no better place to establish such a school than at the State A. and M. college in Orangeburg. It is our opinion that Negro students are not overanxious for admittance to the University of South Carolina. Apparently that is not feasable nor a practical solution to the problem.

At present the few Negro students who study for advance degrees must go 500 or 1,000 miles away where such training is offered. This is done at a cost of thousands of dollars of South Carolina that should be spent at home to build up our own institutions.

We further believe that if the presidents of our Negro colleges and others would form a committee to study this question it would be the beginning of a solution to the problem. We believe that such a committee would be given proper audience by the legislature.

This is a South Carolina problem, and it must be handled by South Carolinians white and black who hope for improved conditions in our educational system.

Northern ~~Negroes~~ nor Yankees cannot offer us a happy solution. Their efforts to "meddle" in our affairs will simply aggrevate the situation and defeat our aims.

NEGRO LAW SCHOOL

The judiciary committee of the House of Representatives acted wisely in voting unanimously to report favorably a bill providing for a school of law to be set up in the State Negro College in Orangeburg. There were no windy speeches for political effect so far as the public knows. The members of the committee heard a positive statement from Speaker Blatt, a trustee of the University of South Carolina, indicating an attempt in a few days by a Negro resident of Columbia to to force by a writ of mandamus his admission to the Law School of the University.

That the State would have to establish a school of law for Negroes has been recognized since the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Gaines case from Missouri. Incidentally the Negro Gaines who won his case did not come back to Missouri to enter the University's school of law but will remain in the Northern State where he now resides.

The young Negro resident of Columbia who may try to force his admission in the University is being badly advised.

It will take some months to get the law school going in the State College in Orangeburg but he would not lose much time in waiting. It would be much better if he and his advisers could see the wisdom of waiting. Deliberate moves to stir up racial feeling simply intensify racial differences.

Legislature Passes Bill To Set Up School At A. & M. College

1-26-39

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The house judiciary committee of the South Carolina legislature on January 18 voted 22 to 0 to sponsor a bill to set up a school of law at the state Negro college, South Carolina A. and M., at Orangeburg.

The committee acted unanimously and hastily after House Speaker Sol Blatt made a speech in which he declared that the University of South Carolina faces "a critical situation."

Speaker Blatt spurred action in the judiciary sub-committee by stating that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was planning a legal move to have a Negro student admitted to the University of South Carolina law school on February 3, the beginning of the second semester.

The bill, approved by the judiciary committee, stipulates that "the state board of trustees is hereby empowered to establish a school of law forthwith and to provide for proper instruction therein."

The South Carolina legislators feel that any application by a Negro now may be answered with the statement that the state has directed the setting up of a law school at the Negro college and that he will find facilities there.

Negro Law School Has Strong Backing Of Carolina Solons

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 19—(AP)—A measure to provide a law school at South Carolina's college for negroes bore the unanimous approval today of a legislative committee.

Speaker Sol Blatt, chairman of a sub-committee of the University of South Carolina trustees, said an effort was expected within a few days to force the University to admit a negro to the law school.

A year ago the same negro, a Columbia resident, applied for entrance to the University. His application was referred promptly to the sub-committee.

Blatt referred to a recent U. S Supreme Court decision directing Missouri to furnish equal educational opportunities for negroes and white persons "We know of no other way to meet this than to establish a chair of law at the state colored college," he said.

"I say this with all due deference to you gentlemen that negroes do pay taxes and therefore entitled to consideration, he asserted.

Ever Stop To THINK?

THAT—Required admission of a negro student in the law school of the University of South Carolina by a decision of the United States Supreme Court was sidestepped yesterday when the house judiciary committee sponsored a bill to set up a school of law at the State Negro College.

"A LAW SCHOOL FOR NEGROES."

"The unanimous vote by which the judiciary committee of the South Carolina house of representatives approved the proposal to establish a school of law at the State college for Negroes in Orangeburg suggests the general assembly as a whole will approve that plan. Under the recent decision of the United States supreme court in the Missouri case South Carolina must do that, or admit Negroes to the law school of the university. The school of law for their exclusive use is the wiser way to adjust policy to the court's decision."—The State.

We hope that the proposed law school for Negroes, if established will be something creditable to the state and also to the State college. We also hope that Negroes will show that they want this type of professional training by advising Negro students to enrol to show that the request is more than just a "racket."

It will take a little time and some intelligent thinking by the law makers to establish a law school that will appeal to the Negro htudents of trainina—students who really want to study law.

If we are to have just a "chair" and a "ten cent store" professor in charge then it is better to go along as we have in the past until the type of school we need can be established. If the legislature will provide the school, we are satisfied President Whittaker will select men of training in law as professors. He knows how, and he knows how to find students well versed in the law.

Propose Law School For Race Studes At S.C. State

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(SNS)—Provision for a law school at South Carolina's state college for colored students is made in a measure which had secured the unanimous approval Thursday to the subcommittee.

The quick action of approval of a separate law school for Negroes was due to attempts of a colored student to enter the white university. Speaker Sol Blatt, chairman of a sub-committee of the University of South Carolina trustees, said an effort was expected within a few days to force open the doors of the law university to a colored student.

According to information, the same colored student, a resident of Columbia, a year ago applied for entrance to the University. His application was referred to Washington, D. C.; the Rev. John Dauphine, S. V. D., of Port Arthur Tex., and the Rev. Leo Woods, S V. D., of Kokomo Ind.

Under the United States supreme court's recent decision requiring Missouri to furnish equal educational opportunities for Negroes and whites, Blatt said, "We know of no other way to meet this than to establish a chair of law at the state Negro college."

"I say this with all due deference to you gentlemen that Negroes do pay taxes" and therefore are entitled to consideration," he asserted.

Blatt, a Barnwell attorney, said the Association for the Advancement for Colored People, with offices at New York, was sponsoring the law school applicant.

Move to Bar Negro from University

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 26—(ANP)—In an apparent effort to forestall an attempt by a colored student of this city to enroll in the law school of the University of South Carolina, the House Judiciary committee last Tuesday voted 22 to 0 to sponsor a bill to set up a school of law at the State College for Negroes at Orangeburg.

House Speaker Sol Blatt, chairman of a sub-committee of university trustees, "viewed the situation with alarm" and urged immediate action by the judiciary committee. He explained that the trustees expected the colored student would attempt enrollment for the second semester, beginning February 13.

Stressing the necessity for action, Rep. Blatt, a Barnwell attorney said the NAACP was sponsoring the law school applicant to the U. of S. C.. He sounded off: "I want to tell you that they have some one at the head of that organization that is really smart.

"We have every reason to believe that they will mandamus us in the next few days in hopes of having this Negro admitted to the university at the beginning of the next semester." His warning brought quick action and the bill approved by the judiciary committee stipulates that: "The said board of trustees is hereby empowered and required to establish a school of law forthwith, and to provide for proper instruction therein."

House group sponsors bill for Negro law school in SC

Judiciary body votes, 22 to 0.

for measure

The house judiciary committee yesterday voted, 22 to 0, to sponsor a bill to set up a school of law at the state Negro college to meet what a trustee termed a critical situation at the University of South Carolina.

House Speaker Sol Blatt, chairman of a subcommittee of university trustees, urged immediate action by the judiciary committee in its special session, explaining that the trustees expected an effort within a few days to force the university to allow a Negro to be admitted to the law school at the beginning of the second semester February 13.

A Negro, a resident of Columbia, applied for entrance at the law school a year ago and the application was promptly referred to the subcommittee.

Under the United States supreme court's recent decision requiring Missouri to furnish equal educational opportunities for Negroes and whites, Blatt said, "We know of no other way to meet this than to establish a chair of law at the state Negro college."

"I say this with all due deference to you gentlemen that Negroes do pay taxes" and therefore are entitled to consideration, he asserted.

Blatt, a Barnwell attorney, said the Association for the Advancement for Colored People, with offices at New York, was sponsoring the law school applicant.

"I want to tell you they have some one at the head of that organization that is really smart," he said.

"We have every reason in the world to believe they will mandamus us in the next few days in hopes of having this Negro admitted to the university at the beginning of the next semester."

Once the legislature directed the creation of the Negro law school unit at the state college, located at Orangeburg, the university trustees could then reply that the Negro student could find ample facilities there, Blatt pointed out.

He said the trustee subcommittee had "given this matter a lot of attention, a lot of hard work," and apparently the only solution was the Negro law school.

The bill approved by the judiciary committee stipulates that "the said board of trustees is hereby empowered and required to establish a school of law forthwith, and to provide for proper instruction therein."

The committee gave a favorable report to a house bill to ratify the general election voters' approval of the proposed elimination of the three-mill school levy from the constitution.

A subcommittee was designated to study three house bills calling for a referendum on the question of amending the constitution to provide biennial rather than annual legislative sessions.

1940 Meeting To Be Held In Montgomery, Ala.

(Staff Correspondence)

DURHAM, N. C.—The election of Prof. L. F. Palmer, principal of the Huntington High School, Newport News, Va., to the presidency, enlightening reports on surveys of Negro education; and the selection of State Teachers College, Montgomery, Ala., for the 1940 meeting, featured the sixth annual session of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools held here last Thursday and Friday at the North Carolina College for Negroes.

Representatives from the 40 colleges and 90 high schools accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, attended.

Other officers elected were: Dr. Rufus B. Atwood, president, Kentucky State College, and H. R. Merry, principal, William Grant High School, Covington, Ky., vice presidents; and Dean L. S. Cozart, Barber-Scotia Junior College, Concord, N. C., secretary-treasurer.

SECONDARY EDUCATION SURVEY

A report on plans for a survey of secondary education for which funds have been asked, was made by Dr. Fred McCustion, field secretary of the General Education Board. Dr. Fred J. Kelly, chief of the division of higher education, U. S. Office of Education, described progress on a higher education survey for which Congress has allocated $40,000.

Among the prominent speakers were: Dr. J. Henry Highsmith of the North Carolina Department of Education, chairman of the rating commission; Dr. E. Franklin Frazier, Howard University, on a study being made by the American youth commission; Prof. D. A. Wilkerson, Howard University, on a Carnegie Corporation study of the Negro in America; and Walter White, NAACP executive secretary.

Eighty-two delegates from 42 schools in 13 states registered for the annual meeting on Thursday the opening day. Dr. James E. Shepard, president of North Carolina College for Negroes, extended the welcome to the visitors just before the beginning of the opening session.

HIGHLIGHT OF REPORT

The highlight of Dr. Frazier's report on "Problems of Negro Youth" as revealed through the study of the American Youth Commission, revealed that teachers as a rule favor light-skinned pupils, and as a result the darger-skinned pupils are developing a hatred toward things in general.

The speaker said further that most of the children interviewed thought of God as white, and the Devil as black. The study proved further, he said, that Northern children are more sophisticated than those of the South.

Following Dr. Frazier's report, Dr. Dwight O. W. Holmes, president of Morgan College, Baltimore, Md., suggested that the race stop singing songs like "Wash Me and I shall be Whiter than Snow," and stop creating the parallel that everything pure and good is white, and everything evil and sinister is black.

Mr. White's address on "Educators and the Education of the American Negro," was delivered at the dinner meeting on Tuesday night following the annual election and presentation of the new officers.

The report of the commission on secondary schools was made at the Friday morning session by W. A. Robinson of Atlanta University.

I would like to commend President Hale and his able assistant and also Mr. Clay for their part in bringing about better interracial relationships. All of them have the confidence of both the colored citizens and the white citizens and I have noticed with lots of pride, on several occasions, how Dr. Hale has been able to tactfully look out for your best interests," declared Gov. Cooper.

Other inspiring addresses were delivered by Commissioner of Education Dr. B. O. Duggan, Dr. Doak S. Campbell, Dr. Henry G. Hart of Vanderbilt university, Dr. James E. Clarke, Dr. Ellington, and several others.

Reports of the Interracial League's Health, Findings and Nomination committees were made by Mrs. Carrie M. Denney, Merl R. Eppse and Dr. R. T. Burt, respectively.

Lane College Deserves Support

Lane College, colored Methodist institution here, founded by the late Bishop Isaac Lane, is in the midst of a campaign to raise funds for its continued support and to enlarge its field of usefulness.

Committees are at work among the colored people of this section and it is hoped that a substantial contribution may be made locally as a preliminary to extensive campaigning in other sections where the school has friends.

If there were nothing else to commend this school, the fact that it was established by Bishop Lane, whose wise leadership of the colored race in the South was second to none, would be sufficient to warrant support.

For nearly three-quarters of a century Bishop Lane moved among the colored people, preaching the doctrine of righteousness, of humility, of Christian practices among his race and educating his people along very practical lines to the end that they might be more useful to themselves and to humanity.

A number of years ago the Literary Digest in a nation-wide survery found that Jackson, Tenn., was the model city in point of interracial relationships. This situation was due largely to the wise leadership of Bishop Lane.

We hope that the colored people of this section and such white friends as feel interested will rally to the support of Lane College in this campaign and thus honor the memory of one who led his people in very constructive fashion.

in line with its policy of furthering the education of practicing physicians and dentists as well as offering the best in professional education to its undergraduates. Meharry Medical College is conducting post-graduate courses, June 5-2.

The post-graduate school for physicians in its second year while this year marks the inauguration for the dental post-graduate school. The course for dentists is designed to give the practicing dentist an opportunity to become familiar with modern treatment and technique. The regular dental faculty will be augmented by prominent dental surgeons and specialists. Slated to appear are: Drs. J. J. Vaughn, prosthetician, Geo. F. Seeman, oral surgeon and W. T. McFall, pediodontist, all of Nashville. Dr. J. T. O'Rourke, dean of the dental school University of Louisville, will speak

Some of the sessions will be held jointly with the Medical post-graduate school. Dr. W. S. Leathers, dean of the Vanderbilt Medical School, Dr. W. T. McFall, pediodontist, and Dr. D. H. Turpin, will lecture to joint sessions of the two post-graduate schools. Dr. J. B. Singleton is chairman of the post-graduate committee for the dental school.

The post-graduate course in the medical school is entering its second successive year. Last year physicians came from all over the country. An attempt is being made to limit the registration this year to twenty in each school.

In keeping with the policy to present practical information that can be utilized in the general practice of medicine, the latest and best known methods necessary for coping with emergency problems and the chronically ill will form the basis of the course. A survey of the courses to be presented reveals the following: Medicine Obstetrics, Cardiology, Dermatology and Syphilology, Pediatrics, Therapeutic Dieting, Urology and Preventive Medicine.

The Meharry Staff has been fortunate in securing the assistance of several prominent guest speakers, among whom are the following: Dr W. S. Leathers, dean of the Vanderbilt Medical School, Dr. H. J. Morgan, professor of medicine at the Vanderbilt Medical School, Dr. W. R. Cate, and Dr. J. B. Youmans,, associate professors of medicine of Vanderbilt medical school and Dr. S. L. Lowenstein of the department of Pediatrics at Vanderbilt medical school.

It is hoped that the physicians and dentists who attend this year will once again be surcharged with enthusiasm to carry on and help to make this a more successful year than last year.

The Capping Exercises for the Freshman Nurses will be held Tuesday, May 30 at 8:00 p. m. in the Public Health Lecture Hall, Meharry Medical College. Miss Margaret Denham, Educational Director of the Public Health Nursing Service of Nashville, will deliver the address. The public is cordially invited.

In a recent issue of the Dental Students Magazine there appeared an article on "The Practice of Preventative Dentistry, written by Cleve W. Eneas. The article was interesting and showed the modern trend of prevention abolishing the necessity for so much unwarranted therapy.

Fisk Alumni Group Marks Anniversary

With many former students present from different parts of the country, alumni events continued to predominate on today's program of the Fisk University commencement.

Beginning this morning with a business meeting of the Alumni Association, the day's events will culminate with a program tonight in observance of the fifty-eighth anniversary of the General Alumni Association. The program will be given in the Fisk Memorial Chapel, starting at 8 o'clock.

Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, president of the university, will extend greetings and the principal address will be by Dr. Luther P. Jackson, of the class of 1914, now professor of history at the Virginia State College. The invocation will be offered by the Rev. A. Myron Cochran, vicar of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Nashville. T. M. Brumfield of the Fisk University faculty, president of the association, will preside.

Of special interest on tonight's program will be presentation of the alumni awards for distinguished service. Those winning these awards are: Mrs. Emma Terry Holman, Nashville; Mrs. Elizabeth Jones Lewis, Chicago, and Robert Lee Yancy, Cincinnati, all of the class of 1889. Following the program the Fisk Club will be host at a reception for the alumni, faculty, senior class, parents, and other guests.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock Dr. and Mrs. Jones will give a reception at their residence on the campus for the alumni, graduating class, parents, commencement guests, and faculty. At 5:30 o'clock the alumni dinner will be given in Jubilee Hall.

The commencement program will come to a close tomorrow morning with the graduating exercises in Fisk Memorial Chapel. Dr. Jones will preside and the address to the graduates will be delivered by Dr. Homer P. Jackson of Washington, D. C., chairman of the American Youth Commission and president-

Ellington of the First Baptist Church, East Nashville, will pronounce the benediction.

One of the traditions of the university that will be followed this year will be the singing of the Hallelujah Chorus from "The Messiah" by the Fisk University choir with all former members of the choir joining the group of singers. This feature will follow the conferring of the degrees. The Fisk University choir is said to be the oldest musical organization in Tennessee, having been formed in 1880.

Last night the annual recital of the music department was given under the direction of Harold C. Schmidt, head of the department. A beautiful program of classical numbers was rendered in the presence of an audience that filled the chapel to its capacity. Those taking part were the members of this year's graduating class with the exception of Lucille Mills of Washington, D. Teachers College Makes Great Gains

Exactly one hundred years ago on July 3, the first normal school was established in this country for the training of teachers at Lexington, Massachusetts. As public education's popularity increased from decade to decade other similar institutions were opened, but it was a full seventy-two years later, in 1911, that the State of Tennessee threw open the doors of four teachers' training institutions, three of them for white teachers and one for colored. One college was set up for each of the three grand divisions of the state, at Johnson City, Murfreesboro, and Memphis, with the institution for colored teachers located at Nashville.

In the twenty-eight years which have elapsed since the founding of these institutions with very meager beginnings, they have made a tremendous contribution not only to the cause of teacher training but also to the general cause of public education.

The East Tennessee institution opened with a student body which did not exceed one hundred. It was housed in buildings erected from funds donated by Johnson Citians on a 20-acre tract of land also given. From such a beginning the physical plant of the college has grown to a value of $1,500,000 and thirteen thousand individual students have been in attendance.

From the professional side, the advancement of the East Tennessee institution has been equally satisfactory. Opened as a state normal school, by legislative enactment in 1925 it became a standard four-year teachers' college which it is today. Its scholastic standards are approved by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and the American Association of Teachers' Colleges, of both which organizations it is a member.

From the layman's viewpoint the contribution of our own East Tennessee college and that of its sister institutions, has been two-fold. First, and most important, has been the contribution made to the cause of rural education in our area. This may be appraised by consideration of the fact that fifty per cent of the white teachers in elementary schools of the state have all or part of their education in one of the teachers' colleges, and that for one-sixth of the high school teachers the story is the same. During the present year sixty-two per cent of all the county teachers east of Knoxville have attended school at Johnson City. These statistics appear to tell the story.

A secondary but not unimportant additional contribution has been the process of making available to a large number of students who could not afford a college education in a more pretentious institution an excellent four-year college course.

It is perhaps superfluous to add that not of least importance in the development of the East Tennessee State Teachers' College has been the caliber of the presidents and faculties serving the institution since its beginning.

In applauding the past achievements of our East Tennessee institution, it is but natural to hope that, under the competent leadership of Dr. C. C. Sherrod, the Johnson City institution will make as much progress educationally in the next three decades as it has since its establishment.

Well Done, LeMoyne

Sane and intelligent leadership at LeMoyne College has brought for it the distinction of being awarded an unconditional "A" rating from the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges. The rating places LeMoyne on a par with Fisk University, and is the only school for negroes so accredited within a radius of 200 miles of Memphis.

We happen to know that nothing false or foolish is contained in the courses being offered at LeMoyne. On the contrary, what the college is attempting is to develop a type of leadership among young negroes that will be of benefit not only to the race but to the whole community and to this section. It places as much emphasis on good citizenship as it does on academic advancement, and that is as it should be.

LeMoyne has proved itself not only a credit to Dr. Sweeney, its president, and those who are responsible for the quality of its graduates, but to this city.

Chinese Fisk University Professor To Speak At Woman's Club Here

Famed Personality Authority Scheduled As Presentation Of Literary Department

Dr. Bingham Dai, professor of psychology at Fisk university and brilliant young Chinese sociologist and psychologist will be presented in a lecture on Personality by the literary department of the Woman's Club, next Monday afternoon, according to an announcement made today by Mrs. W. M. Mebane, chairman.

Dr. Dai received the Ph.D. degree in the field of sociology at the University of Chicago in 1935. He received psychcanalytic training at the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis and for the past few years has taught medical psychology at Peiping Junior Medical College, Peiping, China.

Recently added to the faculty at Fisk, Dr. Dai is teaching psychology to capacity enrollments, Mrs. Mebane added. He is recognized as one of the foremost authorities in the field of personality in the United States at the present time.

The distinguished educator and his attractive American-born Chinese wife seem delighted with American freedom from censorship. Although admitting that he is essentially a man of science to whom political events are secondary, Dr. Dai speaks with an air of authority about conditions in his native land.

Mrs. Dai and her ninteen months old daughter were both born in America. At the outset of the Japanese invasion of China, members of his wife's family became worried and requested that she return to New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Dai met during his years of post graduate study at the University of Chicago.

He said he was influenced in selection of Fisk University by Dr. Robert E. Parks, a former professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, as racial problems are a subject of great interest to him.

Meharry Medical College Holds World Record For Training Our Physicians

Has Latest And Most Modern Equipment For Teaching Professional Subjects; Dental School Increasing

By E. L. HERCULES

Of all the medical schools in the world, Meharry Medical college is known as the one that has done the most in the training of students for the field of medicine. This institution is so well known, that it would be useless to recall its history. Suffice to say that it was organized in 1876 as the Medical Department of the Central Tennessee college.

On October 13, 1915, it was granted a new charcter by the State of Tennessee, whereby it could operate as a separate and corporate institution. Throughout the years, Meharry has turned out highly trained physicians, surgeons, dentists and nurses who have rendered valuable service to humanity in all parts of the world.

PRESIDENT TURNER

Today, the school is under the leadership of President Edward L. Turner. He is ably assisted by a large and competent staff of doctors, dentists, and nurses, all of whom are interested in giving the students a medical education, the molds of which are adjusted to leave their imprint upon the character, social tendencies, physical bearing, emotional and intellectual habits of the students. This school embraces departments of medicine, dentistry, nurse training, and a school for dental hygiene.

The school of medicine is equipped with the most modern instruments and offers all the necessary courses. The associate dean of the school of medicine is Dr. M. J. Bent, who is also professor of bacteriology. He has done extensive research in this field, and has contributed various articles upon the subject to numerous medical publications. Thirty-five students graduated from this department at the end of the last school year.

DENTAL SCHOOL

In the dental school, there are thirty-six members. This number is an increase of eight upon that of last year. The high degree of success that this department has achieved is made possible to a great extent through the contributions of George Eastman of the Eastman kodak company. His last contribution was $200,000. The equipment in this department is some of the best to be found anywhere. There are 53 chairs, and the instruments and other accessories are the most modern and extensive. Five prominent white Nashville dentists of national reputation render free service in this department. Special attention is paid to the course in Oral Hygiene. The head of this department is Dean D. H. Turpin. This year, for the first time, a post-graduate course in dentistry was offered.

NURSING SCHOOL

The new administration has shown a vital interest in the School of Nursing; recognizes the potentialities and advantages of this field, and is endeavoring to develop a program of public health nursing for both undergraduate and graduate nurses. The present faculty organization of the School of Nursing includes a dean, a superintendent of surses, an assistant superintendent of nurses, an educational director, nine supervisors, four head nurses and twenty-four graduate bedside nurses. The teaching faculty of the School of Nursing is supplemented by the faculty of the Medical School of Meharry, Fisk university, Vanderbilt university, Riverside Sanitarium and the Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville. At present there are thirty-one students taking the three-year course in nurse training. The dean of this school is Hulda M. Lyttle.

GRADUATE COURSE

A special course for graduate physicians is offered during the summer. The first effort in this direction was made last year. The great success of that venture caused the authorities to decide to offer the course annually. This year, the course ran from June 5 through June 17. The staff members assisting in this post-graduate course are all well experienced, and highly trained in their respective specialties. This course has been designed to bring practical information in utilizable form to the graduate physician. It is hoped that the response to this course will stimulate repeated courses each year, and that it eventually may lead to longer post-graduate courses in the specialties as well as in general medicine.

"SECOND TO NONE"

President Turner aims to make Meharry ultimately gain its goal of "an institution second to none." With such a conscientious, farsighter, and energetic man like he at the helm, it is certain that this goal will soon be attained. President Turner, who holds degrees from both the University of Pennsylvnia and the University of Chicago, is well known in the medical world, having given thirteen years of sacrifical service in Beirut, Syria, before coming to Meharry in 1936. He holds membership in the leading associations and societies of the country, and has made numerous publications in the fields of physiology and internal medicine. This man who is so deeply interested in relieving human suffering through the aid of medical science, is most assuredly making Meharry second to none in the realm of medical schools.

Fisk To Mark Anniversary of Noted Singers

The sixty-eighth anniversary of the organization of the original Fisk Jubilee Singers and of the day on which they first left the campus to gain international renown for themselves and financial security for the struggling university will be celebrated with an all-day program of activities tomorrow at Fisk University.

On October 6, 1871, the original group of eleven singers left Nashville on the tour which led them first to New England and later to Europe, where they sang before all the crowned heads of the continent and England. On their first European tour, the singers sent back to the campus the money with which Jubilee Hall was built. In 1875, the year the university's first graduating class received diplomas, the singers returned to the campus to dedicate the building for which they had raised funds.

The annual observance tomorrow will climax a memorial program at 11 o'clock in Fisk Memorial Chapel when a letter from the last surviving member of the original group, Maggie Porter Cole of Detroit, will be read. President Buell G. Gallagher of Talladega College, Talladega, Ala., will be the principal speaker and a musical program will be presented by the present singers and the Fisk Choir. The public is invited to attend this program.

The day's activities will open with a student hike, starting at 6 o'clock from Jubilee Hall and ending there at 8 o'clock when breakfast wil be served. During the afternoon, new students on the campus will be taken on a tour of points of interest in and around Nashville, and the day will close with a dance for students, alumni, and faculty tomorrow night.

At the close of the tour, the students will lay magnolia wreaths, made from the leaves of the trees in front of Livingston Hall, on the graves of four of the original singers buried in Greenwood and the Old City Cemeteries.

The singers buried here were Mabel Louis Imes, Georgia Gordon Taylor, Minnie Tate, and Ella Shepard Moore. The latter worked with George White, organizer and first director of the singers, and Thomas Seward in transcribing spirituals which they helped make famous.

The original eleven singers were group has been renewed continuously, although there have been only three directors in the entire sixty-eight years—George White active as a group for approximately eight years. Since that time the director of the present group of six male singers.

"GRADE 'A' SCHOOL, NOT RACE, OBJECT," SAYS DR. TURNER

No such thing as a racial policy exists at Meharry Medical college, according to a letter received by The Courier this week from Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of the Nashville institution.

Dr. Turner's letter was prompted by an article which appeared in the July 22 issue of The Courier in which it was implied that Negro physicians were gradually being dropped from the faculty of Meharry.

"I wish to assure you, without any question of doubt, that our policy here is not one of race at all," Dr. Turner points out.. "We have no policy for gradually dropping Negro physicians.

"Our policy is to run a class 'A' medical school for Negro youth so that our own Negro professional students can obtain the type of education that can be obtained in the very best medical schools in the country. We do not want any double standards in professional education."

STUDENTS DESERVE BEST TRAINING

Dr. Turner continues:

"I feel most strongly that our educated Negro citizens feel their youth are entitled to and should have facilities not secondary, but as good as the best in the country. I furthermore feel that to offer the education and training I want young Negro physicians to have, that Meharry should take advantage of its rather unique opportunities.

"In Nashville, Tenn., there are a great many outstanding white physicians and surgeons who have gladly and freely cooperated with us during the past two or three years to strengthen our teaching faculty. These men are not replacing our Negro physicians but they are cooperating in one of the finest pieces of bi-racial activity I have ever seen.

"True enough we have had to replace one man this past year. In the replacement, we obtained one of the outstanding men in his field in this city to come here for a period of four or five years so that he could train up some Negro specialist who can later take over. This was done with the full approval of the faculty as we all felt we could then be certain of developing young Negro teachers who could worthily carry on the work. This may have to be done in one other department and again it will be with the idea of having an outstanding man help train up some young Negro specialist who will be trained in such a way and with such ideals that they will make the type of teachers we want our Negro youth to have.

"We have appointed several additional white physicians and surgeons to our staff, but they have been additions not replacements and they have been given appointments, practically in all instances, without pay. We felt that we should recognize the magnificent assistance they have given by giving them honorary faculty appointments. It seemed the least we could do to repay them for their splendid aid and for their interest in helping to do the thing here for Negro youth that we are trying to do.

PROUD OF STAFF

"I am mighty proud of what our Negro staff here at Meharry is accomplishing. Dr. Michael J. Bent, Dr. Harold D. West, Dr. William S. Quinland, Dr. D. T. Rolfe, Dr. J. H. Hale, Dr. J. A. McMillan and a host of others are doing the kind of work that I frankly 'take off my hat to.' They have cooperated with me in trying to develop this institution in a way that has made my task so much easier than it might have been. I have worked many years with many racial groups while I was in the Orient, but I have never enjoyed three years and experienced greater cooperation than I have had from my colleagues here.

"I hope you know that my own position is a very sincere one. It is my ambition that this institution shall offer to Negro youth every possible facility for the best type of medical, dental and nursing education we can give them. It is also my ambition that this shall become somewhat of a 'mecca' for graduate physicians so that they may come and obtain additional work and keep 'on their toes.' Our faculty is being built so as to offer this type of opportunity for Negro students and Negro physicians.

"Any white physicians we are adding are being brought in because they have something to offer to strengthen this program. The entire idea and ambition in my administrative program is to graduate good doctors, nurses and dentists; individuals who can compete because of their training with the best medical skill in the country. Instead of getting into the papers as running a school on a racial issue, I would appreciate it greatly if something could be published in The Courier to correct the idea that many, many people must have reached when they read the article in last Saturdays paper.

BORN OPTIMIST

"I am a born optimist and am tremendously interested in the potentialities of this institution. I am sure my faculty will second me in the idea that we can 'go places' if we can have cooperation from the Negro press on the outside, as well as continue our program from the inside."

COLLEGE COURSES

Dr. Presnell Urges Selection of Good State School.

Establishment of educational facilities at some Negro college or university equal to those in the University of Tennessee law and graduate schools is the proper step to take in solving the problem which arose when a group of Negro students sought to enter these U-T schools, Dr. J. H. Presnell believes.

He has written a letter to President James D. Hoskins to that effect, pointing out that the $2500 appropriation that comes out of the A. & I. State College fund has been found to be inadequate to take care of those Negro students whose schools do not offer the desired professional or graduate training.

Knoxville College, Fiske University at Nashville or A. & I. State College are three institutions suggested for establishment of courses.

FISK ALUMN LAUNCH ANNL FINANCE DRIVE

An enthusiastic group of Fisk alumni and their friends gathered at Morris Saturday night and launched their annual finance drive at a "get-together" dinner. Approximately 100 enjoyed a delicious repast as they listened to the plans of the Chicago alumn for the coming year and the program they are undertaking to raise funds for the school.

James B. Cashin, well known Chicago lawyer and a trustee of Fisk university, was introduced by Howard Bennett, former field secretary. Attorney Cashin stated that Fisk is one of the four Class A colleges in the South and the only colored university which can boast of having 50 per cent of its students as recipients of Rosenwald fellowships.

He in turn introduced the principal speaker of the evening, William H. Forte, graduate of Fisk and Harvard, who is special assistant to the alumni secretary. Mr. Forte was graduated from Fisk at the age of 16.

In outlining the work of the school and its plans for the future, Mr. Forte stressed the increasingly important role it is playing in the field of higher education for Negroes and stated that privately-endowed institutions have forged ahead until now they occupy first place in scholarship ratings.

Fisk can get a grant from the Carnegie foundation if thinking Negroes will back its program and support it in its finance campaign, Mr. Forte stated. He also revealed that for every dollar Fisk raises in this campaign, two will be added. He explained that the General Education Board and Paul Cravath have promised to match dollar for dollar, doubling the total amount raised in this finance drive. Mr. Cravath is the son of Fisk university's first president.

"This is a challenge which every Fiskite must meet," Mr. Forte declared. Other speakers were Randall Tyus, of Rumford Baking Powder company and James Stamps, Social Security director, who complimented the alumni on the work they are doing in the community as leaders in various fields of endeavor.

"No other school," Mr. Stamps declared, "has made the contribution to the program of racial advancement as has Fisk. Now is the time to rally and do something for our alma mater," he added.

Miss Fansadye Nelson was chairman of the dinner committee. Other members were Mrs Irene McCoy Gaines, Howard Bennett, Albert Lovette, Mrs Gonzales Motts, Wade McCree, James Cashin and Randall Tyus. Willie Walker is president of the Chicago alumni club.

MEHARRY REPORTS YEAR OF PROGRESS

Important Strides Made Under Presidency of Dr. Turner

Under its new president, Dr. E. L. Turner, who came to Meharry Medical College in 1936 from the American University of Beirut, Syria, Meharry has made important strides during the past year. Dr. Turner, who in Syria was professor of internal medicine and head of the department, for two years was head of Meharry's Department of Medicine and chairman of the hospital committee. He was elected to the presidency last year and took office July 1, 1938. Some of the important advances since that time are reviewed below:

Three years ago Meharry had been placed on probation by the Council on Medical Education because of certain deficiencies. On November 10, 1938, Dr. W. D. Cutter, secretary of the council assisted by Dr. H. H. Anderson made a visit of inspection to reevaluate the college. They found the conditions so improved that they recommended immediate removal of the probation.

During the visit of inspection by Dr. Cutter and Dr. Anderson, they also investigated the residencies at Meharry. Upon their recommendations the residence in Surgery, Obstetrics-Gynecology, Pediatrics and Medicine were approved.

TRAINING REGISTERED

The Board of Regents registered the nurse training school of Meharry. This action enabled Meharry graduates to take examinations for practicing in New York State.

Dr. Minor J. Terry of the New York Board of Dental Examiners inspected the department of dental hygiene last November and recommended that the Board register the department in New York State.

A closer cooperation between Fisk and Meharry now exists. One evidence of this is the new course of study now being offered jointly to students in nursing by Fisk and Meharry. Two years of pre-nursing training is to be given in Fisk following which the student will take three years of work in Meharry leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing which will be conferred by Fisk University in affiliation with Meharry Medical College.

Duplication of effort by the two schools is to be avoided by the use of certain laboratory facilities jointly. Thus, courses in biochemistry, physiology, anatomy and bacteriology will be given at Meharry for Fisk students.

TRUSTEE ARRANGEMENT

This program of cooperation will be greatly facilitated by the presence of each president on the trustee boards of both institutions. Thus, Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, president of Fisk, is a member of the board of trustees of Meharry, and Dr. Edward L. Turner, president of Meharry, is on the Fisk board of trustees.

A deficiency in the training of nurses has been the absence of contagious disease nursing from the course of study. Last spring an affiliation was made with Isolation Hospital, St. Louis, which permits Meharry nurses to spend two months in residence to get this specialized training. The first group is now at St. Louis.

GRADUATE COURSES

Last summer a short course for graduate physicians was given for the first time. The course was repeated this summer and a graduate course for dentists instituted. The interest shown by physicians and dentists in all parts of the country insures the successful continuation of these courses.

For many years the Meharry collection was housed in the Fisk Library Building. Last February, quarters for the library were completed in the dental wing. The presence of the library in the school building proper makes it more available to students and faculty. The wisdom of transferring the collection was borne out by the increased use the library has seen since February.

The institution is indebted to many people both professional and lay who have become interested in Meharry as an agent for social betterment and have expressed this interest by visiting the insitution to work or speak. Prominent among these were: Dr. John L. Hill, Dr. J. Earl Moreland, Miss Frances Helen Ziegler, Dr. Hugh Morgan, Dr. Waller S. Leathers, Dr. A. E. Keller, Dr. John Youmans, Dr. Walter McFall, Dr. W. A. Bryan, Dr. William Dixon, Dr. Duncan Eve, Dr. H. H. Shoulders, Dr. Holland M. Tigert, Dr. Burnett W. Wright, Dr. Geo. F. Seeman. An unprecedented occurrence was the action of the Nashville Academy of Dentistry in holding its regular monthly meeting in Meharry last June.

GRADUATE STUDY

During the year several staff members were granted leaves for further study. Dr. L. D. Scott is studying radiology in New York. Dr. W. L. Silcott is studying psychiarty in Denver, at the University of Colorado. Dr. J. A. Bone is studying pharmacology at the University of Illinois with Dr. McGuigan. Dr. Matthew Walker studied surgery under Dr. Edward Howes at Washington. Dr. W. H. Faulkner studied pediatrics at Harvard University Medical School. During the coming year, the dean of the Nursing School, Miss Hulda M. Lyttle, will do graduate work on public health at the University of Toronto.

Meharry has made its facilities available to local and state medical, dental and nursing societies. The local societies hold their regular meetings at Meharry. The Volunteer State Medical Association had the largest meeting in the 35 years of its history and will be the guest of Meharry for the next two years

The plumbing and heating contract was awarded to the Sanitary Plumbing Company of Tupelo. Construction of the building will begin just as soon as materials can be assembled.

Fisk Has 2,092 Graduates In 40 States 9 Countries

Negro Educational Institution Modifies Its Curriculum to Meet Changing Needs in Areas Where Alumni Work

In the 73 years since Fisk was chartered by the State of Tennessee as a University, in 1867, more than two thousand graduates have gone out from the school into 40 states and nine foreign countries.

Following the Civil War the school was established, opening its doors on January 9, 1866, in the Hospital Army Barracks on Twelfth Street. There was little financial backing but a great deal of faith in the wisdom of the venture. One thousand Negro men and women of all ages came that first year to learn to read and write and some stayed on to be graduated from the college course with the first class, that of 1875.

Of the 2,092 graduates 779 are teachers, 129 social workers and 123 physicians. The rest are scattered throughout the educational, professional and business fields, with four doing domestic service.

As the times have changed, the curriculum has been changed to fit Negro students to live satisfying lives through service in the communities where they work.

In 1933 Fisk was approved by the Association of American Universities.

GRADUATE WORK

Graduate work is offered in a number of departments, and during the past year 78 students completed the requirements for the Master of Arts degree. The total enrollment for both semesters was 529.

During the past nine years students enrolled in the summer session have been, for the most part, teachers from strategic positions throughout the South working toward a higher degree. The curriculum laboratory has taken up the problem of adapting the school more fully to the needs of the communities. It has been cooperatively planned with a similar course at Peabody for the white schools.

LIBRARY COURSE

The teacher-librarian course has completed its fourth summer. A special group of teachers who have responsibility for the school library in addition to their regular classes has been selected each summer for membership in this course. In it a practical approach to solving the library problems of each school has been the objective.

A third phase of the summer session has been the course for principals of small high schools. It was offered for the first time last summer. This summer 40 were enrolled in it from Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas, and Mississippi. In planning the course questionnaires were first sent to all the state agents, county superintendents, principals, Jeanes supervisors, and farm and home demonstration agents to secure information concerning the outstanding weaknesses and problems of the rural high schools. A special study was also made of actual conditions in typical schools in Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana. Through these three groups—the curriculum laboratory, the teacher-librarian course, and the principals course—all phases of the Southern Negro schools are being studied and pertinent changes may be looked for within the next decade.

LeMoyne College Looms As One Of Outstanding Institutions In The South

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Mar. 23—LeMoyne college, located here, is perhaps one of th least heralded of our stronger Negro educational institutions in the South. Nevertheles it has a strong faculty and has produced many efficient teachers and educators for th Mid-South. It was established in 1870. through the untiring efforts of Dr. T. Julius L Moyne of Washington, Pennsylvania, who successfully besought the American Missionary Association to grant funds augmenting those provided by himself and other philanthropic individuals. Hence, LeMoyne College, with the sponsoring of the American Missionary Association, rightfully belongs in the same category with Fisk, Atlanta University, Hampton and Talledega.

Originally LeMoyne was only a normal school and for more than half a century it remained in that category. In 1932, LeMoyne passed from a normal institute and junior college to a full-fledged, four-year academic institution and was recognized by the Southern Association of Colleges. Its faculty is bi-racial and represents graduates from leading colleges and universities throughout the country. The environment is liberal and deeply Christian. A near-championship football team, coached by W. P. (Jack) Atkins and an excellent debating team have done much toward bringing LeMoyne to the attention of sections beyond its own horizon, as it were.

Last year the LeMoyne debating team traveled to Australia and New Zealand and completed successfully with the leading colleges of those countries. LeMoyne College has the distinction of participating in more inter-racial debates than any other Negro college in America and in recent years its debating team in the world, save possibly the debating team of Oxford University. Messrs. James S. Byas and Charles W. Gilton comprised the team, with Professor B. G. Alexander along as manager. The Argus, leading daily of Melbourne, Australia, which writes only one editorial daily, honored the LeMoyne debaters signally when it devoted its editorial space to the colored debaters on several consecutive days. Climaxing its editorial recognition, the Argus said: "Our visiting Americans of LeMoyne College, Memphis, Tennessee, are living examples of the advantages of free discussion and of eternal hope that law of reason will eventually prevail over the forces of violence that now menace civilization."

The present officers of administration at LeMoyne are: Dr. Frank Sweeney, president; Dr. H. C. Hamilton, dean; Miss Alma C. Hanson, treasurer; Professor Rufus J. Hawkins, registrar; Rev. Charles Grant Hamilton, librarian; Professor W. P. Adkins, director of athletics.

Dr. Johnson To Speak At Fisk Tomorrow

Dr. Charles S. Johnson, director of the department of social sciences at Fisk University, will give the fourth lecture in the James Hardy Dillard series on education in the South at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Education Building on the campus, it was announced today.

Dr. Johnson's subject will be "Cultural Environment of the Negro Child and Its Educational Implications."

SOCIAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT AT STATE COLLEGE

The Social Science Dept. of A. and I. State College under the able leadership of Prof. Merl R. Eppse, author of "The Negro Too in American History" is swiftly forging to the front as an outstanding educational department in which the urgent practice of a practical method is proving its worth.

For twelve years Prof. Eppse has lectured that good economic, social or spiritual results come only through good living—in every sense of the word "good." He has not advanced this theory as a responsibility solely of the students, but he has shouldered the yoke himself in such a matter-of-fact and willing way until his proteges unconsciously find themselves following his simple but result getting example.

Each year as another school term ends, the Social Science Dept. of A. and I. sends forth into the rigors of present day life a group of young men and women who are equipped with what it takes to meet and defeat the problems which down the average man and send him on his destined way to RELIEF.

LE MOYNE COLLEGE APPROVED BY THE SOUTHERN ASSOCIATION

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 22—LeMoyne college climaxed an epic rise in the educational world this month when Dr. Frank Sweeney, president, was officially notified by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools that LeMoyne has now been approved by that body as a full accredited college, and accordingly, was given the association's top unconditional rating of "A". This standing makes LeMoyne the only fully and unconditionally accredited college for colored within a radius of two hundred miles, an area in which live approximately one million five hundred thousand Negroes. LeMoyne, along with Fisk university, is the only institution of higher learning for colored in the state of Tennessee holding an "A" rating by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools—the official accrediting branch for this section of the country of the National Association of Colleges.

Founded in October, 1870, by the American Missionary Association with a bequest of twenty thousand dollars from Dr. F. Julius LeMoyne of Washington, Pennsylvania, LeMoyne's rise in the field of education has been geared to the needs and conditions of the community. In its opening years the curriculum was arranged to provide primary and secondary education, manual instruction, and teacher training. This general type of curriculum was continued until 1914 when LeMoyne moved to her present site. The first building erected on the new site was named Steele Hall, in honor of Mr. Andrew J. Steele, principal of LeMoyne from 1873 to 1908.

After more than a half century of meritorius service as a Normal Institute, LeMoyne entered the Junior college field in 1924 under the presidency of Dr. E. J. Ortman. The school's entrance into this higher level of education was principally due to the following factors: First, the rapid progress of secondary education in the Tri-State Area; second, the growing need of city and county teachers for advanced study; and, third, the local necessity for an accredited college to accommodate city and county high school graduates who were financially unable to continue their education out of Memphis.

In 1929 during the first year of the administration of President Frank Sweeney, he made for the American Missionary association a study of the Negro educational needs and facilities in the Tri-States which disclosed the fact that this area was very much in need of adequate collegiate resources. It was with knowledge of these educational shortcomings in an area in which more Negroes live per square foot than anywhere else in the world that prompted the American Missionary association to change LeMoyne into a full-fledged four-year college; and its subsequent "A" accreditment this spring marks another evolutionary step in the life of one of America's fastest growing institutions of higher learning.

The following list of appointments were published last week by the Board of Trustees: Dr. Harold D. West, professor of biochemistry; Dr. William Masin, assistant professor of Clinical Medicine; Dr. Crawford Harwell, assistant professor of Clinical Surgery; Dr. Mathews Walker, assistant professor of surgery; Dr. Nathaniel S. Schofner, associate professor of clinical surgery; Dr. Elkin L. Rippy, assistant professor of clinical surgery; Dr. Raymond Crowe, assistant professor of clinical medicine; Dr. P. G. Murray, associate professor of clinical urology; Dr. Edward Lee, instructor in physiology; Dr. Frank Claytor, instructor in medicine. Dr. Theodore Hawkins, instructor in surgery; Dr. Riley Ransom, instructor in anatomy; Dr. William Quinn, instructor in ophthalmology. When it was rumored at the institution that many of the above were whites replacing Negroes, and this Courier reporter sought to find out who was who, he was told by an authority at the school, "to publish them as the list shows, without indicating white or colored."

This action on the part of the Board of Trustees is the results of a series of startling incidents at the college during the past year, which, according to reports, were blamed on Negro physicians. However, this report has always been denied by both white and colored physicians at the college. One Negro professor remarked after the appointments, "They are doing just what I thought."

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees, May 31, 1939, the following new members were elected for five year terms: Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, president Fisk university; Dr. Harvey J. Burkart, director Rochester Clinic, Rochester, N. Y., and Judge John J. Aust, Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. Anderson Spurs Meharry Alumni In Campaign For Library Endowment

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 28—Dr. J. W. Anderson, the oldest practicing physician, who has graduated from Meharry Medical college, and who was recently unanimously elected president of the alumni association, has initiated a drive to endow Meharry's library.

Despite his many professional and financial interests, Dr. Anderson, who has been practicing in Dallas, Texas for last fifty years, is devoting much of time to putting over the endowment program. He plans spending the month of August in California where he will institute the drive.

DR. J. W. ANDERSON

Gave $12,000 Building

Dr. Anderson's keen interest in his alma mater was demonstrated several years ago when he built the beautiful Anderson Anatomical hall on the old south campus at a cost of $12,000. Incidentally, this is the largest single gift of any almunus in the history of the school.

It was in 1885 that Dr. Anderson graduated from Meharry, but reentered the school and took a course in dentistry which he completed two years later. He also took a post-graduate course at the University of Michigan and at Chicago university.

His success both in his practice and business investments have met with tremendous success. He has considerable real estate holdings and is considered one of the richest men in the southwest.

Aids Wiley College

In recent years, Dr. Anderson has been devoting a great part of his wealth to philanthropy. The Dallas Young Men's Christian Association Texas Children's hospital, Dixon's orphanage, Wiley college and Meharry have been given generous donations.

According to a statement from the Meharry alumni secretary, the association is rallying to the support of its new president in his move to aid the school.

COLLEGE HEAD CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT

Friends Hire Counsel To Secure Release Of Professor

DALLAS, Texas, Dec. 22—Charged with a felony theft and recently held by Oklahoma City officers, Prof. C. A. Biggers, formerly head of the Biggers Business college of this city, was returned to Dallas this week in charge of members of Sheriff R. A. Schmidt's office and held in the county jail.

The charge against the college head was the disposal of writing machines on which a lien was held by a local typewriter company.

Biggers explained to Oklahoma City officers that a man by the name of Tyler was left in charge of the college during the absence of the college head. For several years Professor Biggers has operated a commercial school in this city from which a number of students have been graduated and are holding good positions. Mr. Biggers has also operated schools in various parts of the west and southwest.

At one time he was an investigator in the employ of the United States government. Shortly before leaving Dallas for Oklahoma City, Professor Biggers married one of his graduates, Miss Annie Lee Jordan, who it is reported was his sixth matrimonial venture. Professor Biggers was a member and energetic worker of the Retail Merchants association and publicity director of Good Street Baptist church.

Friends in the city have secured counsel to secure his release in order that the charges held against him might be straightened out.

Texas Pays High Price For Jim Crow Colleges

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 15—In order to maintain lily white state universities, this state is spending this year $11,341.54 to educate Race youths in schools elsewhere, according to a report made this week by Dean T. D. Bro[illegible], of Texas A. and M. college.

The procedure here, as in many other Southern states, is that if the state supported Race institutions do not offer courses desired by Race students, the state pays their tuition to universities where they are admitted.

All of the courses being pursued by state subsidized Race students elsewhere, are offered by white universities here.

Of the 180 Race students who made application for courses this year, only 53 were approved. They are as follows: medicine, 17; pharmacy 4; dentistry 4; optometry 1; law 1; graduate work beyond M.S 5; work for M.S. in academic fields 14; social service 4; music 1; library science 1; costume designing has one.

These institutions are represented in the attendance: Atlanta, Minnesota, Iowa, Michigan, Meharry, Howard, Universiy of Chicago, Southern California, Columbia, Illinois, Xavier, Indiana, Pratt institute, Cornell, Kansas, Kent college of law, and Illinois College of Optometry.

President Rhoads Called To Ministry

Bishop President Presented License

By EDWARD M. CARROLL

MARSHALL, Texas — (Special) President Joseph J. Rhoads of Bishop College has accepted the call to the ministry and Sunday, January 15, was presented his license at the Galilee Baptist Church here. He preached his first sermon at an early hour Christmas morning service.

Dr. Rhoads accepted the cause well prepared having spent some time studying in the Yale University Divinity School. His yielding climaxed several years of the dominating urge "to preach," for which he states he "attempted to substitute lecturing and Christian education instead."

The Rev. W. M. Bowden, pastor of the Galilee Baptist Church in which the Rev. Mr. Rhoads was converted thirty-three years ago, presented him with his ministerial license. During the service the Rev. Wm. R. Strassner, dean of the Bishop College School of Religion, delivered the sermon from the theme "The Great Commission."

The Bishop Coleridge Taylor choir, under the direction of Miss Augusta McSwain, sang for the occasion.

Home-Making Courses For Women Given Emphasis At Bishop College

Thousands of Dollars Invested in Equipment and Buildings Under Direction of President Rhoads—Every Woman Graduate Must Qualify for Course.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 14.—Ten years ago, when Dr. J. J. Rhoads assumed the presidency of Bishop college, one of his first steps to raise the standards in the academic program of the institution was the elimination of all sub-college courses. In record time, music and religion were placed on a strictly college basis, leading to state certification and standard degrees.

Sewing which had been previously eliminated was brought back into the curriculum in 1935 when Homemaking Education was introduced. In another two years, a four-year degree course was organized and a nursery school established to serve as a laboratory in child care.

During the session of 1938-39, the institution invested $10,000 in modern homemaking education equipment and is now erecting an $8,000 "home management home" (building and furnishings) which is to be a laboratory for the course that is fast proving one of the most popular on the campus, and places Bishop ahead as a pioneer in this field.

The General Education Board, New York City, contributed $3,500 on the cost of equipment and library for the department; special assistance is being rendered the college by the Texas State Department of Vocational Education, Hampton institute, the Texas State College for Women at Denton and the Teachers' college at Columbia, in the planning of the library and other special features of this unique and far-reaching program.

Bishop's regulations require that every woman student who qualifies for graduation must take the course in home management and live in the model home for five weeks during her senior or junior year. The course is conducted on a 12-month basis, and the home is at all times occupied. Each "family" consists of six members (including instructor).

Bishop is a community-centered college, and places its home-making facilities at the service of evening classes for maids, cooks and housewives and thus affords instruction to many educationally under-privileged adults.

State College Honors Presidents

Petersburg School In 55th Year; Portrait of Dr. Gandy By John Borican Feature of Exercises

(Staff Correspondence)

PETERSBURG, Va.—Virginia State College, one of the fastest growing educational institutions in the country, paused here last Friday to pay honor and tribute to those men who had brought about its birth in the halls of the state legislature fifty-five years ago and to those men who had sponsored its epochal development since that time.

The occasion was Founder's Day, an annual event that had been known as President's Day until its name was changed earlier this month by the executive council of the school. Begun a few years ago, this event has rapidly become one of the most revered traditions at this college and the exercises that marked this year's observance were enthusiastically participated in by both students and members of the staff.

HALF HOLIDAY

The college declared a half-holiday Friday and held, in the auditorium of the new administration building at 8 p. m., a program honoring the founders and the three presidents of the college. Principal speakers were Archie R. Richardson, assistant state director of Negro education, and an alumnus of the school; the Rev. J. B. Brown, pastor of Zion Baptist Church, Petersburg; and William H. Boone, president of the senior class of the college.

The legislative act which established the college in 1882 was sponsored by Representative A. W. Harris, a Negro. The first president was Dr. John Mercer Langston who served from the beginning of the school in 1886 to 1887. He was followed by Dr. James Hugo Johnston, Sr., who served as president from 1887 until 1914. The present head of the college, Dr. John M. Gandy, took over the administration of the college's affairs in 1914 and is still directing the college in its most recent development program.

These men were honored by the speakers. The College A Capella Chior furnished music for the occasion. The invocation was offered by the Rev. E. F. S. Davis.

PORTRAIT OF PRESIDENT

A feature of this year's program was the presentation to the college of an oil portrait of President Gandy which had been painted by John Borican, versatile 1938 graduate of the school. The gift was made by the students and members of the staff of the college, and the presentation was made by Prof. Walter N. Ridley ,chairman of the committee which sponsored the project.

The portrait was an almost exact likeness of the school head, and was done by the youthful artist from memory at his home in New York. Dr. Gandy never sat for the painting.

Along with the portrait Mr. Ridley presented a scroll to Dr. Gandy which included the names of the staff members who participated and the names of representatives of each of the student classes.

The inscription on the scroll read: "In recognition of our mutual regard for his distinction as our eader and fellow worker, the staff and students of Virginia State College present to the college a portrait of President John M. Gandy, executed by John Borican, a graduate of the college."

Dean James H. Johnston accepted the scroll and the painting in behalf of Dr. Gandy and the College. Dr. Gandy expressed his appreciation for the gift to the students, the members of the staff, and to John Borican, himself, who was present for the exercises. He announced that the painting would be hung in an appropriate place.

STUDENT SPEAKS

In the first address of the evening, Mr. Boone urged that the students emulate the lives of the men who were their benefactors in the establishment and development of the college rather than pay lip service to their achievements. He exhorted his fellow students to choose the right way in life and to give more than was required in the advancement of the race and of civilization.

Mr. Richardson, one of the first students of the four year college and a graduate in the class of 1927, in a scholarly manner, addressed the students on the subject: "The College and Its Relationship to Virginia's Culture."

The speaker pointed out the value of a school such as Virginia State College influencing the cultural contributions of members of the Negro race. He praised the efforts of those who were responsible for the growth of the college and pointed out that changes in the economic and social system had made it essential that an educational institution keep pace with the times.

SYSTEM FAULTY

Mr. Richardson called attention to faults in our economic system and urged that Virginia State College help the youth of Virginia to realize "that the moral, physical and cultural degeneracy of one-half of Virginia's population is a menace to the other half and that fundamental and heroic remedies must be applied, regardless of cost, if the culture of which Virginia so proudly boasts, does not perish. He urged that students become aware of social issues.

Dr. Brown, who has spent many years as a minister in Petersburg, praised the growth of the school. He called attention to the fact that while the physical development of the plant was desirable, costly equipment, fine buildings or extensive curriculums cannot contribute to graduates some of the finer cultural qualities necessary for full development.

POINTS OUT NEEDS

Dr. Brown declared that modern youths show a noticeable lack of culture, a lack of tolerance necessary in making adjustments in life and a need for training in the discernment and choice of true social values. He urged that the college seek to remedy this condition.

Members of the committee which sponsored the portrait project were: Mr. Ridley, chairman, Miss Lucille L. Frazier, ssecretary, Cleopatra W. Armstrong, Kennet Baker, Millard T. Carter, Frank T Green, Marian V. Jordan, Reube R. McDaniels, Amaza L. Meredith J. Harold Montague, Geneva Mysterm, Hugo A. Owens, and Marguerite Worthington. Miss Marjorie Addison and Hugo Owens president of the student council unveiled the portrait.

Ushers were: Bessie V. Beale Mary G. Hale, Mary E. Moore, Elbert H. Pogue, Willis T. Richie, George E. Roundtree, Vivian B. Scott, LeMoyne E. Williams, Montrose L. Wilson, and Samuel R. Wilson.

After the public program a reception was held in the faculty lounge. Members of the staff, graduate students, and members of the senior class were invited

Gandy Suggests Virginia Take Lead In Educational Equality

(Staff Correspondence)

PETERSBURG, Va.—"If North Carolina and Virginia led the way in admitting Negro students to the graduate schools of their state universities, it is quite possible that the states further South would eventually take a more liberal attitude toward the education of its Negro citizens," declared Dr. John M. Gandy, president of Virginia State College, in a special interview last week with the Journal and Guide on the problems raised by the Supreme Court decision requiring states to provide educational equality for all people.

"Virginia State College would accept any decision that the state board of education might make in its meeting later this month regarding settlement of the problem here in Virginia and we, here, would cooperate in working out this solution in any way indicated by the findings of the state board," declared the college head who was honored last Friday, along with other presidents and the founders of the college ,for his part in the development of the rapidly growing school.

HAS NO INFORMATION

Dr. Gandy discussed the broad implications of the Supreme Court decision in the Gaines case but asserted that he had not conferred with any members of the school board about the situation in Virginia and had no information that would indicate what disposition might be made by educational authorities in the Old Dominion.

When asked whether he favored the entrance of Negro graduate students in the University of Virginia or the establishment of professional courses at Virginia State College, Dr. Gandy declined to commit himself, pointing out that so much misunderstanding had grown out of statements by college heads and that he preferred not to make a definite statement of his personal opinion.

Dr. Gandy explained that the college was at present working with the state authorities toward the setting up of graduate schools in those subjects in which a major was offered in the undergraduate school. These included English, sociology, science, history, mathematics and other similar subjects. However, no provision had yet been made for the teaching of professional subjects like law and medicine.

CONFIDENCE IN BOARD

"While I feel that the State board will provide for these things in keeping with the Supreme Court decision," he stated, "they have not et it be known where the units of law, and medicine will be established." He pointed out that many people are hoping that the State will open the University of Virginia to Negro students.

As an alternative, Dr. Gandy suggested, professional schools for Negroes may be established. He did not know whether or not they might be set up at Virginia State College in Petersburg or in Richmond, the capital city.

TWO SYSTEMS EXPENSIVE

When asked which of these expedients he considered best, Dr. Gandy answered: "To set up biracial systems in the higher branches of education is very expensive. Whether or not white people will continue in this traditional course or open the doors of University of Virginia to race citizens, I do not know."

Some think that nothing will happen if a Negro enters the state university. However, when we think of the bitter prejudices of white people, I wonder how we can escape the development of tragic conditions if such a thing should be tried.

"Many white people believe in the unity of education and such unity would help to eradicate many of the problems of the South. There is a possibility that there is a growing liberalism among the younger white men and women that will usher in a new day."

Dr. Gandy pointed out that even if race students were admitted to white universities, no teachers would be placed on the staff of those schools.

He felt, he said, that the idea of educational equality for Negroes would eventually come to the states in the deep South if the border states, and liberal states like Virginia and North Carolina showed the way and proved that the change is workable.

Oil Painting of Dr. Gandy Given College

No, you're not seeing things. There are two faces on this picture that look just alike. One is Dr. John M. Gandy, president of Virginia State College, and the other is a remarkably close oil painting likeness of him presented to the college by the members of the staff and student body on Founder's Day. The painter is John Borican, who graduated from the college last year. He did this painting from memory in about three weeks in New York.

WPA Approves Petersburg, Ettrick Work

Approval of a $13,196 WPA project at Petersburg and another $20,908 job at Virginia State College for Negroes in Chesterfield County was announced yesterday by William A. Smith, State WPA administrator.

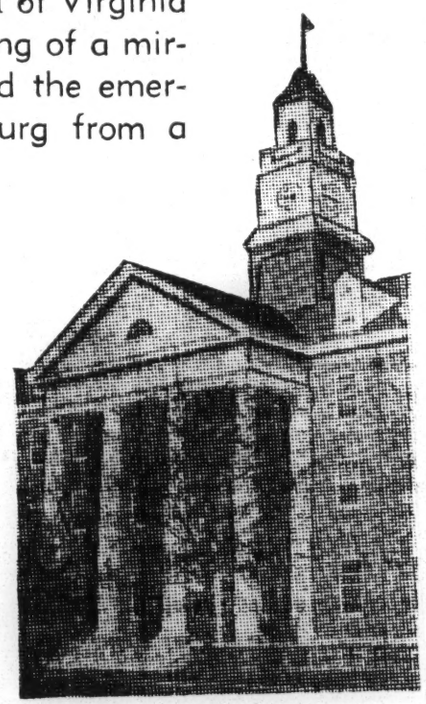
Sponsored by the city, the Petersburg project will improve grounds and facilities of the city garage and stable. It calls also for construction of a new dog pound, roadways and gutter, installation of drainage facilities and extension of railroad tracks. The city will contribute $3,226 toward the project.

Construction of an elementary school, infirmary, warehouse, greenhouse, cannery and a bridge over the railroad siding will be included in the project at the Virginia State College for Negroes at Ettrick. The college will contribute $9,641.

Public Education and Public Health

VIRGINIA'S STATE COLLEGE for Negroes is conceded by the best authorities to be highly efficient in administrative management. Its academic organization and output are conceded to be up to the best standards of Southern colleges.

Dr. John M. Gandy, the president of Virginia State College, is regarded as something of a miracle man by those who have followed the emergence of the institution at Petersburg from a sub-standard high and normal school to the status of a first-class college with steadily expanding curricula. This feeling is shared, we are told, by the State Department of Public Instruction, and the college's all-white Board of Visitors.



ENTRANCE VIRGINIA HALL
STATE COLLEGE

There has been not only a marvelous expansion of physical plant. There has been a corresponding enlargement of the cultural factors which must go hand-in-hand with an adequate physical plant.

Luther H. Foster, treasurer and business manager of the State College, who over the years of its marvelous growth, has often found it possible, as well as necessary, to "make bricks without straw," enjoys a rating in the estimation of the State Administration that is enviable, to say the least.

The point we wish to make is, that under entirely Negro executive and academic management, Virginia has a State college for Negroes that is a model for the country, and Virginia is proud of it. It has been demonstrated to the apparent satisfaction of the Virginia State government that Negroes can perform business and professional functions of a high order.

When we speak of business and professional services of a high order, we mean not only administration and instruction, but the vision to anticipate the needs of the college for educational and physical plant expansion, and the resourcefulness to find the money to meet the needs without a great deal of help from the State. That is the situation educationally.

ON THE HEALTH side we have a different picture. The State, which is apparently well satisfied with the job that Negroes are doing for Negroes in the field of public education, declines to utilize the services of Negroes for Negroes in the field of public health.

No Negroes are connected with the State Department of Health in any capacities comparable to their connections with the State Department of Education.

The State maintains a hospital for Negroes who are mentally ill, but there are no Negro doctors on the medical staff. No interneships are open to the young Negro doctors.

The State maintains a sanatorium for the Negro tubercular. There are no Negro doctors on the staff and no interneships are open to the young Negro doctors.

The State supports schools for Negro delinquent boys and girls. The physician to these institutions is white.

Many of the best Negro doctors now practicing in Virginia received their academic preparation for the study of medicine at Virginia State College. To what end is Virginia training Negroes at the State College for leadership and service, if this deadline is continued in relation to the extent of their services?

The integration of Negro doctors within the State's public health services is essential and would be found as beneficial in the conservation of the human resources of Virginia as the Negro school heads and school teachers have been as an integral part of the State's educational system.

The Old Dominion Medical Society has for years been knocking at the doors of the State Health Department for opportunity for its members to serve in capacities for which they are peculiarly fitted. Their claims have the merit of logic and necessity. They should no longer go unheeded.

Board Asks For Data On Graduate Plan

Dr. J. M. Gandy Authorized To Present Needs

RICHMOND, Va. — The State Board of Education in its quarterly meeting here, April 27, authorized Dr. John M. Gandy, president of Virginia State College to compile data on faculty, library and laboratory facilities necessary to provide additional graduate instruction at the college.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, state superintendent of public instruction said that the data will probably b considered at the board's next meeting. He said that the board adopted a policy two years ago which provided for the inclusion of graduate work at the college as speedily as conditions would permit.

In January, Dr. Gandy reported that the college is already giving graduate instruction in social and natural sciences. The data which Dr. Gandy will present to the board at its next meeting will include cost estimates for the additional expansion.

The action of the board in authorizing Dr. Gandy is in keeping with the recent decision of the Supreme Court holding that states must provide "equal facilities" for Negroes.

At present, there is no institution in the state offering courses in law or medicine to Negroes, but under a law enacted several years ago the state pays the difference between the cost of such instruction in Virginia and the cost at northern and western schools which admit Negro students.

After the session here, members of the board visited Virginia State to view the new buildings and those now under construction.

The visit was in accordance with the board's custom of holding one meeting annually at each of the educational institutions.

College Officers O U. S. in Balancing E

ATLANTA, Ga.—Uncle Sam is not the only perso trying to effectively balanc a budget, for the Conference of Financial Officers of Col leges for Negroes, constantly confronted with the Hercu lean task of making the edu cational dollar do as much work as possible, are doing a meritorious job.

The conference was or ganized under the auspices o the General Education Board Leading participants at the last conference here includ ed: Dr. Trevor Arnett, direc tor, former president of the General Education Board; L H. Foster, treasurer-business manager, Virginia State; N C. Plimpton, and J. H. Cain.

The organization has more thar thirty members representing twen ty-four leading schools. Thei periods of service in their presen posts range from two and one-half years, represented by H. K. Logan business manager of Wiley College Marshall, Texas, to the 31-year-olc incumbency of G. W. Claridge treasurer of Meharry Medical College, Nashville.

The conference meets annually and with the idea in mind that the college and a strictly commercial enterprise are different discuss the importance of good management accuracy, and proper accounting.

PLAN WITHIN MEANS

In their efforts to exercise every possible care in planning only such expenditures for the various institutions as are possible in the light of the budget income, the financial officers are also concerned with:

Utilizing the operating experiences of at least the previous completed year and the necessity of conservatively estimating the income with a reluc-atnce toward listing increases over previous years without reasonably definite assurance that additional or special income will be available.

The school budget, however, is not the only thing with which the officers are concerned. Questions of student labor, and dining hall operations and student loans also come within their scope of work.

STUDENT JOBS

In assigning part-time jobs to students, the officers consider these factors: financial need, ability to do the job assigned, and ability to maintain a satisfactory scholastic record pending the assignment.

The following methods are used in determining student needs: use of questionnaires, investigations of home conditions, etc., and conferences with the student.

For the most part, the National Youth Administration program is administered in the same manner as are the college's own financial aid plans, subject of course to any special regulations of the federal government.

Efforts to give the student the best possible meal service for the amount charged in the dining hall s achieved through frequent checking of costs, particularly that of raw food.

FAMILY STYLE PREFERRED

The cafeteria style for large groups offers opportunities for more economy in operations than the family style of service. Nevertheless. most colleges indicate that they use the family style for there are some cultural and other ad tagles which this method offers.

Student loans are encouraged by the officers. Short term loans are advocated in small amounts where the fund is small. Desirability to require the repayment of loans prior to the next succeeding school session, except in the cases of some seniors is emphasized.

The officers say that the interest rates should not be less than 4 per cent nor more than 6 per cent per annum.

PLACEMENT SERVICE

The officers approve of the placement service for jobs other than those available at the college. A $1 fee has been suggested as the maximum. This provision is thought desirable so that this service will be closely connected with or handled by the registrar's office.

The conference meets annually. The last sessions were held at Atlanta University, in October.

Ninth Annual Meeting Ends At Hampton Inst.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—The Virginia Conference of College Science Teachers closed its 9th annual meeting, held at Hampton Institute, on Saturday, April 1. The two-day meeting was attended by 32 teachers of the natural sciences and mathematics, representing St. Paul's Normal and Industrial School, Virginia Union University, Virginia State College, Hampton Institute, Bennett College, and Shaw University.

The principal address was delivered by Dr. Joseph R. Houchins, specialist in Negro statistics of the United States Bureau of the Census. Speaking at the public meeting, held in duPont Auditorium, on the subject, "Science, Increased Production and Some Current Problems," Dr. Houchins traced the influence of applied science on agriculture and industry, and pointed out many of the current problems resulting therefrom.

Dr. Houchins also explained the efforts of the Federal government in meeting these problems. The discourse was closed by a plea for Negro schools to prepare Negro scientists of high caliber to enter industry.

The conference opened with a dinner served in the Hampton Cafeteria. At this several guests were entertained including President Howe and Director Wm. Avery, as well as the wives of the local conference members.

During the dinner, Noble Payton of Hampton Institute, broadcast over station WGH on the subject, "Science Teaching and Its Influence on our National Life." Mr. Payton called on science teachers in all localities to rally together to practice what they preach, so as to make our democracy work better.

The following officers were elected for the 1940 session to be held at Virginia Union University: J. Wm. Drew, Virginia Union University, president; Mr. Taylor, St. Paul Normal and Industrial School, vice president; Amanda E. Peele, Hampton Institute, secretary-treasurer; Dr. Thomas W. Turner, J. McNeille Hunter, Mr. Taylor, Lucy J. Bullock, members of the executive committee.

The new executive committee was instructed to formulate plans to admit Shaw University and Bennett College to membership. These schools were represented at this year's sessions and expressed a desired to affiliate.

Resigns as School Head To Be Field Secretary at Bethune-Cookman College

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—With the announcement this week of the appointment of Mrs. Arena Mallory Belden as field secretary of the Bethune-Cookman college, it became known that Mrs. Belden had resigned her post as president of Saints Industrial and Literary school, located in Lexington, Miss. Mrs. Belden had held this position since 1926.

In an interview, Mrs. Belden stated that she felt there was a wider field for her efforts and greater opportunities for her special efforts in behalf of children throughout the country in worknig for Bethune Cookman college.

Her work now consists of making special contacts throughout the country, setting up local Bethune clubs, securing pledges from those interested in the college and getting people interested in the work being done by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune.

One of her first duties as secretary was to set up the initial Junior Bethune clubs in New York. She plans branch clubs throughout the United States. These clubs will be composed of young girls from 11 to 17, who will raise funds to aid needy Southern children who attend the college.

Graduating from high school in Jacksonville, Ill., she attende the Illinois Conservatory of Music, received a master's degree from Jackson college, Miss., and while in the state had occasion to visit Lexington.

In the heart of the delta region, on the edge of the county seat town of Lexington, Holmes county, in a seething cauldren of exploitation and peonage, where children were given only two of three months of school a year, Mrs. Belden discovered a small private school of four rooms and having some 25 pupils. There was one teacher and three coal oil lamps.

Appalled and astounded at conditions, she borrowed money with which to go to California where friends gave her $9000. With this money she returned to Lexington, bought desks and books and rejuvenated the school. Today that same school ,started from such an inauspicious beginning, is worth close to $200,000, has 350 acres of land, has 12 grades and 600 pupils. It is an accredited school in the Southern Association. Most of the pupils come from the terribly underprivileged homes a sharecroppers.

Money with which to do all this came from more than 36 transcontinental trips with five girls who sang their way into the hearts of the nation. They sang in both white and colored churches, never making a charge but taking up a collection after their performance. She estimates she has taken in close to a half million dollars in nearly 14 years.

Much of this money was used to carry on the activities of the school as none of the pupils paid any fees. Teachers' salaries, current expenses, buildings and acquistion of land used up the greater portion.

Instead of ramshackle buildings there are now modern, full equipped school rooms and dormitories. One of the buildings, a $10,000 one, was given by New York churches in less than two weeks campaigning.

In commenting on her work, Mrs. Belden stated that it took almost two years for her to allay the suspicion in the minds of both white and colored residents of the Delta region. They could not understand the "damyankee" who came meddling in their business. She further stated that a visitor from Africa once said that "conditions in the delta region were worse than existing among heathen tribes in darkest Africa." Much of this has been changed since the start of the school.

Kittrell College Prexy, Three of Faculty Fired

KITTRELL, N. C., June 22—Coming as a climax to a conflict which has been brewing between faculty members and the board of trustees for some time was the ouster of President W. J. Cochran, three faculty members and matron of Kittrell college here last week.

The ousted faculty members and matron were Dean D. W. Berry, D. L. Gunn and R. E. Barnett and Mrs. Lula Nelson. The dismissals, notices, reports say, were mailed May 15 following a meeting of the board. They came following an outgrowth of friction noticeable in early January, when Judge Height dismissed efforts of several instructors in a court hearing held in Henderson to retain their positions.

The trustees also accepted the resignations tendered by Miss W. S. Keen and Miss V. L. Wilson, instructors. The teachers' resignations accepted during last week's meeting were seen as a pledge of sympathy with factions opposed to polices of the board.

Trustees cited that contracts between the school and the discharged persons stipulated that the litigants were hired by the month with the understanding that they were to leave the institution at any time they became dissatisfied.

Named Acting Head of College

DEAN S. D. WILLIAMS of the Elizabeth City State Teachers College who has been named chairman of the faculty by the board of trustees to act as executive head of the institution. Dean Williams appointment followed the death of President J. H. Bias in a Baltimore hospital on Saturday, July 15.

Dean Williams Acting Head of Teachers Coll

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.—The appointment of Dean S. D. Williams as chairman of the faculty to act as executive head of the Elizabeth City State Teachers College following the death of President John Henry Bias on July 15 was announced here Saturday following a meeting of the board of trustees at the home of Chairman G. R. Little.

In a carefully drafted formal resolution, the board of trustees declared its intention not to make "undue haste" in filling the vacancy created by President Bias' death, but to proceed "as rapidly as is consistent with the careful consideration which must be given to the problems, persons and factors involved in the situation."

Chairman Little was instructed by the board to name a committee to work with Dr. N. C. Newbold of Raleigh, N. C., director of the Division of Negro Education, in recommending a president for the institution.

GRADUATE OF ATLANTA U.

Dean Williams, who is rounding out his tenth year at the college, was born in Macon, Georgia and comes from a family long identified with education in his native state. Receiving his A. B. degree from Atlanta University, Dean Williams studied at the University of Chicago and later earned his M. A. degree at Columbia University.

At the latter institution he received his degree and diploma in the administration and supervision of teachers colleges.

Before coming to the local institution Dean Williams served as director of athletics and science, instructor in Springfield, West Virginia, and as principal of the high school department of Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte, N. C.

Trigg New President at Elizabeth City College

Journal and Guide 10-21-39

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C —Although he was not one of the sixteen applicants for the post, Harold L. Trigg, State supervisor of colored high schools for the past eleven years, has been elected president of the Elizabeth City State Teachers' College, G. R. Little, chairman of the trustee board announced last week.

Norfolk, Va.

Mr. Trigg succeeds J. H. Bias, who died this year.

TERMED "BEST MAN"

Commenting on the appointment, Mr. Little said the selection was made after Clyde Erwin, State superintendent of public instruction, and N. C. Newbold, director of the division of Negro education, commended Mr. Trigg as the best fitted man for the position.

The chairman stated further that he and two other board members interviewed the prospect at Raleigh and were struck by his ability, poise, and tact.

The new president is not a stranger to the institution, having attended its summer school in 1919, and served as director of the summer school in 1921.

Mr. Trigg the tenth son of a Methodist minister, was born at Lynchburg, Va., on December 15 1893. He attended there and later Princess Anne Academy, in Maryland, where he was graduated from the high school.

IS WAR VETERAN

He received his A.B. degree from Morgan College, Baltimore, and his M.A. from Syracuse, N. Y., just before he joined the Army at the outbreak of the World War, in which he attained the rank of sergeant major.

In addition to two years graduate work at Columbia University Mr. Trigg has spent summers in seminar study at Yale University and at Sarah Lawrence College Bronxville, N. Y.

He began his teaching career in 1913, as principal of the elementary school at Bennett College Greensboro, where he later became acting dean. His father was president of Bennett.

Other institutions he has served include:

Berry O'Kelly County training school, principal; Shaw University director of summer school for two summers; New Orleans College principal of the elementary school and later as acting dean with one summer school in between spent teaching at Straight College; Columbian Heights School, principal and Slater Normal School, where he taught history and education.

Mr. Trigg is married and has three children.

Chosen Over 16

HAROLD L. TRIGG
President Trigg

FROM a wealth of material at hand the trustees of Elizabeth City (N. C.) Teachers College have called Mr. Harold L. Trigg to the presidency, to succeed the late President Bias. In any aggregation of educators, regardless of race or geographical area, Mr. Trigg is outstanding. He has the necessary backgrounds of family heritage (his father was a college president), professional training and experience with the special problems of teacher training, as well as demonstrated administrative ability. His selection was indeed a happy choice.

The new president received his training at Morgan College, Syracuse University and Columbia University. He started as a teacher and rose rapidly to head one of the state's best high schools. From that position he was called in 1928 to the position of supervisor of Negro high schools in the state department of education. At that time there were only 54 public high schools for Negroes in the state, and few of these were accredited, or worthy of the rank. Now there are 152 high schools attended by 35,000 youths. Only six counties in the state that have sufficient colored population to warrant a high school, have none. It required extraordinary ability to bring about such a vast improvement in secondary education even in North Carolina, where educational leadership is of a surpassing quality, liberal and plentiful, and the Negro division directed by so able an educational statesman as Dr. N. C. Newbold.

We wish for President Trigg a successful administration in his new and larger field, and look forward to brighter years for the historic educational institution to which he has been called.

"Situation Intolerable," Says Turner After His Resignation

Daily Journal 10-15-39 Atlanta, Ga.

LANGSTON, Okla.,— (ANP)— This usually staid and quiet college town this week was given a shock comparable to that of Britain's torpedoed Athenia, when Albert L. Turner, newly installed president of Langston university threw up his hands in disgust, resigned after being on the job only two days and left for parts unknown just as a welcoming committee had perfected arrangements for a gala banquet in his honor.

President Turner, nationally known as the former registrar of Tuskegee Institute, resigned Saturday, sent his resignation by mail to Fred Holman, white chairman of the Regents of Oklahoma college at the Holman residence in Guthrie. Some sources insisted that Turner left immediately, by auto, for the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where he is enrolled.

CONSULTS WITH CHAIRMAN HOLMAN

Arriving last Friday, with his wife and daughter, Dr. Turner was domiciled by Acting President Lee in the Home Economics building, presided over by Mrs. Sadie Washington. It was known that soon thereafter, he went into consultation with Board Chairman Holman, but the fact of his withdrawal, remained a secret until it was whispered about the campus that he and his family had left for Oklahoma City. There, in the office of Editor Roscoe Dunjee, he reportedly wrote out his resignation and mailed it to Holman. It read as follows:

"My dear Mr. Holman:

"Official inquiries and investigations made by me since my arrival reveal that during the last few days preceding my coming to the C. A. & N. university several important faculty appointments were made, and positions filled.

"Some of these appointments were to administrative positions which should have been the prerogative of the president to fill. I have also learned that salary adjustments have been made very recently for certain members of the faculty, and I personally encountered a strong suggestion concerning the appointment of the dean of the college.

Situation Is Reported To Federal Bureau

HAD NO POWER

"My interview with the Board of Regents led me to believe that the new president would not be faced by such conditions. Finding these conditions, therefore, compels me to believe that I will not form the beginning have the power to function successfully as a president whose chief interest is in raising the educational standards of the institution along all lines.

"In view of these facts I regretfully submit my resignation from the presidency of the Colored Agricultural and Normal University, to be effective immediately.

It was learned on the campus that a dinner and reception had been planned for Monday night in honor of the new president and his family, under auspices of Acting President Lee and members of the faculty.

APPOINTMENTS IRK TURNER

In Oklahoma City, asked by Editor Dunjee what transpired after his arrival at Langston Dr. Turner said he learned that there had been appointments made to key positions, since his election to the presidency, even up to the day of his arrival, and that there had been a rearrangement of salaries without his knowledge. He said:

"You see, I was led to believe by the board that everything was to remain in status quo, and that all appointments would be tentative. Imagine how I felt when I learned of these hurried placements and confirmation in key positions. To cap it all off, I was told by Acting President Lee that he (Lee) had been advised by Chairman Holman that all appointments made would be permanent."

Dr. Turner then proceeded to tell about the first shock received by him upon arrival.

"I did think the chairman of the board would accord me the privilege of talking to him in private about conditions around the school and that I might outline to him my theories regarding administration, etc., but instead of having this opportunity, the chairman brought in a teacher in the school named Taylor.

"He patted this young man on the back and said, "This is Jimmy. Jimmy was born in this county and knows everybody. Jimmy here is the dean of men, manager of the dining room, and general publicity man for the school."

Turner said he later learned from Acting President Lee that Taylor is in charge of student labor and a recently organized commissary.

When asked to state specific instances he had noted of hurried designation made on the faculty Dr. Turner said he had been advised that Mrs. Josie Craig Berry Oklahoma City, had been named dean of women three days before he arrived on the campus and that Dewey Batchelor had been named registrar, and all of his assistants selected during the current week. Jeanette V. Gear was also named instructor in English during the current week, so it was said. He declared:

"Why, I would not think of assuming responsibility for the finances of the institution unless I personally selected the individuals whom I entrusted with such work. Take, for example, the young man Taylor. I never met a nicer fellow. He was obliging and kind all of the time I was on the campus. But why should he not be? He had been given charge of the entire business of the school and I was to sit on the outside and assume the responsibility. Suppose he ran the dining department in the hole? Why the situation and conditions they were about to impose upon me at Langston were positively and definitely impossible.

REGRETS TURMOIL AT SCHOOL

"It's just a different situation than I was promised and since I do not have to take it, I will not. I regret exceedingly to throw the school back into a disorganized state, but I cannot see what I could otherwise do under the circumstances."

A. L. TURNER, LANGSTON HEAD UNDER FIRE

Pittsburgh Courier 10-15-39 Chicago Ill.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 12—Upon the heels of acceptance of Albert L. Turner, registrar at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., as president of the Colored Agricultural and Normal university at Langston, Okla., came the protests of the Langston alumni association against his appointment.

Turner was named to succeed J. W. Sanford, who was ousted from the presidency last summer by the board of regents. He is on a leave of absence from Tuskegee to study for a degree of doctor of philosophy on a scholarship at Michigan. B. F. Lee, dean of the college at Langston, has been acting president since Sanford's ouster.

Governor Gets Protest

The Langston alumni association at a recent meeting had its board of directors draft a resolution and sent it to Governor Leon C. Phillips protesting the appointment of an out-of-state man to the presidency of the school. Stating that the success of Langston means success for each of her graduates, the letter stated in part:

"The members of the board feel that a competent president could have been chosen from among the many experienced and qualified educators of the state, who have stood the test of time as executives and administrators."

NEW PRESIDENT OF LANGSTON FACES PROTEST

Thinks Resident Of State Should Have Been Selected

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 13 —Albert L. Turner, registrar at Tuskegee institute, Tuskegee, Ala., Friday night accepted the appointment as president of the Colored Agricultural and Normal university, Langston, Okla.

Governor Phillips disclosed Friday morning that the board of regents had agreed upon Turner, but there was some question as to whether he would accept. He is on a leave of absence from Tuskegee to study for a degree of doctor of philosophy on a scholarship at Michigan.

B. F. Lee, dean of the college at Langston, has been acting president since the board ousted J. W. Sanford from the presidency last summer.

10-14-39

The board of regents was notified by telegram late Friday that Turner would accept.

Alumni Protests

The Langston Alumni association, at recent meeting, had its board of directors draft a resolution and sent it to the governor protesting the appointment of an out-of-state man to the presidency of the school. The leter, addressed to Governor Leon C. Phillips, read as follows:

"Hon Governor Leon C. Phillips,
Oklahoma City, Okla.,

Dear Sir:

"The directors of the Alumni Association of Langston university regret very much that you found it necessary to go out of the state to choose a man to fill the vacancy made by the removal of President J. W. Sanford.

Wanted State Man

"The members of the board feel that a competent president could have been chosen from among the many experienced and qualified educators of the state, who have stood the test of time as executives and administrators. We have a keen interest in Langston university; we are for her progress, having tried for years to have our Alma Mater placed upon the accredited list of colleges.

"The success of Langston means success for each of her graduates. Even though we greatly disapprove of the fact that an out-of-state selection was made, we shall heartily support the new president in any efforts to make for Oklahoma and the Negroes of the state a greater, better and accredited Langston university."

Born in New Orleans

Mr. Turner has served at Tuskegee 11 years. He joined the Tuskegee faculty in 1928 as teacher of history; later he was made assistant dean of the college department, and in 1936, was appointed registrar of Tuskegee institute to succeed Capt. Alvin J. Neely who became dean of men.

Mr. Turner was born in New Orleans, La., in 1900. He was graduated from the high school department of the old New Orleans university. He received B.S. degree cum laude from Western Reserve university, Cleveland, Ohio, in 1923.

As an undergraduate at Reserve, he was a member of the debating team and recipient of the president's prize. He also won a number of oratorical contests. He was eligible to Delta Sigma Rho, National honorary debating society, but at the time of his graduation a clause in the constitution made membership of a member of the Race impossible. After many years of nation-wide controversy the objectionable clause was removed. Mr. Turner was at the time a member of the Tuskegee faculty. He was immediately notified of his membership to Delta Sigma Rho.

Awarded L.L.B.

In 1927, Mr. Turner was awarded the degree of LL.B. from Western Reserve Law school. He was elected to the Order of Coif, a National Honorary legal fraternity for high scholarship in the study of law.

In 1932, Mr. Turner received degree of M.A., in Political Science from the University of Michigan as a result of a year's study on a General Education Board Fellowship. In 1935, he was awarded a fellowship by Harvard university on the basis of his thesis "Judicial Interpretation and Legislation Affecting Negroes." Because of administrative duties at Tuskegee, he was unable to accept the Harvard honor.

Mr. Turner is married and has three children. His wife, Mrs. Odessa Turner, is a graduate from the School of Pharmacy, Western Reserve university. His daughter, Jean, an honor student, Tuskegee institute high school, is a freshman at the University of Michigan. As president of Alabama Junior Federation, she attended the National Federation of Colored Women in Boston, Mass. last summer.

"Worse Than A Lie"

Today, three weeks following the sudden departure of Dr. Albert L. Turner from Oklahoma, one can find scores of white people everywhere in this state, asking questions about his leaving and wondering about the cause of his hurried exit. Black Dispatch

In the banks, at the post office windows, on Main street and everywhere, this writer is accosted by white friends, and some whites we do not even know, asking "why did Dr. Turner leave the state". Oklahoma City,

Now all of this results from the fact that white dailies printed only half of the story. They have enlarged on the fact that this man came to the Langston campus for a day and "vanished". At the time of the publication of the stories all of these publications knew that Dr. Turner came from Tuskegee; that the president of Tuskegee could probably advise as to his whereabouts, and these publications further knew that Dr. Turner was an enrolled student at the University of Michigan at the time of his elevation to the presidency of the Langston school.

Most of the whites who interrogate us follow the suggestions made in the white dailies. "Was he scared out of the state?" "Did you really have anything to do with running him away?" Others not knowing the facts indicate that they think he is a coward.

Now thousands of white people in this state are kept in ignorance as to what actually happened at Langston despite the fact that on Wednesday night, two weeks ago, and immediately following the release of Dr. Turner's statement in The Black Dispatch, this writer sent copies of that interview (in the form of tear sheets) to the Tulsa World, Tulsa Tribune, and a copy of the complete edition was sent by a Western Union Telegraph boy to the Daily Oklahoman. We wrote letters to both the Tribune and the World advising that the story could be used in whole or in part.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Turner mentioned nothing about factional strife contacted by him while in Oklahoma, and has in a personal letter to this writer said that the idea of his being frightened out of Oklahoma is absurd, Harlow's Weekly, a journal of wide circulation in its last edition continues to circulate the rumor regarding terror and alarm in this language:

> "The threats did not extend to violence, but to continued strife and withheld cooperation of Oklahoma Negroes".

Harlow's Weekly continues:

> . . . . . the presistent efforts of Negro factions to control all Negro state institutions are responsible for the unrest that has prevailed at Langston and at Taft.

The Harlow article also quotes Fred Holman, chairman of the board of regents as replying to Dr. Turner's charge that major appointments had been made at the school immediately prior to his arrival in this language:

> "He (Holman) said that the changes by the board were of a minor nature and surely could not have been responsible for his resignation".

How much more illuminating the Harlow article would have been to the readers of that publication had the editor given the specific appointments that had been hurriedly made.

For instance one man, Jimmy Taylor, campaign manager for Senator Ritzhaupt, had been named Special Adjuster (whatever that is) Dean of Men, Purchasing Agent for the dining room, Employer of Student Labor and manager of the commisary.

In addition to this the dean of the college, the dean of women and the entire staff in the registrar's office had been suddenly named within three days of Dr. Turner's arrival. What Negro faction had anything to do with this? Such action on the part of the chairman of the board did violence to academic experience and reason. The state sought to do violence to Dr. Turner, but it came from the entrenched political setup and not from Negroes.

In the judgement of The Black Dispatch the interview released by Dr. Turner was by far the most important news that could have been offered in the past few weeks to citizens of the state regardless of color or race. It should be important to white people for the reason a condition was uncovered which is fairly representative of what is going on in every white college. The political debacle which Dr. Turner uncovered at Langston University is not something incident wholly to Negro institutions, and with the curtain withdrawn, it was the duty of all agencies of publicity to reveal to its constituency our educational skeletons, naked and bare.

Instead of doing this our major publications gave a deal of time to an attempt to repudiate the interview as published in The Black Dispatch. The constructive value of all that Dr. Turner offered is lost in a cloud of falsehood and hypocrisy while effort is made to scotch the truth and damn the publication having the guts to fight for the things that ought to be.

Some idea of the desire for the truth on this subject can be gleaned from the fact that the writer has been invited to deliver an address at the University of Oklahoma this week on the subject of Dr. Turner's departure. What would be the need of this writer going down to Norman to discuss Langston if space had been given in white dailies to the complete interview of this very courageous man, as published in The Black Dispatch.

In spite of the fact that few white people understand or know the real cause of Dr. Turner's withdrawal from the state, following three weeks of fog and propaganda, Negroes all over America from Mississippi to Main have read the truth about Oklahoma at their fire sides. This writer sent to the Associated Negro Press the same story we sent to the white dailies of Oklahoma. This week the main story carried with headlines in every Negro publication in America told the exact and definite reason why Dr. Turner left Oklahoma. Black Dispatch

Measured by this yard stick we wonder whether white dailies of Oklahoma are not forcing provincialism upon their masses? Does this type of censorship hurt white folk most or Negroes? In the Turner story of the guts of what is wrong with education in Oklahoma. We doubt seriously whether an Oklahoma educator, black or white would be willing to have rendered the service rendered by Dr. Turner, for after having uncovered the truth, an Oklahoman would have to remain to suffer political reprisals from the exposed. Again we ask the question: "Who lost most by the supression of this story— Negroes or whites?"

Some one has said that a half truth is worse than a lie. This is an occasion when we can make fitting application of this familiar, aphorism. With the publication of the

For instance one man, Jimmy Taylor, campaign manager for Senator Ritzhaupt, had been named Special Adjuster (whatever that is) Dean of Men, Purchasing Agent for the dining room, Employer of Student Labor and manager of the commisary.

In addition to this the dean of the college, the dean of women and the entire staff in the registrar's office had been suddenly named within three days of Dr. Turner's arrival. What Negro faction had anything to do with this? Such action on the part of the chairman of the board did violence to academic experience and reason. The state sought to do violence to Dr. Turner, but it came from the entrenched political setup and not from Negroes.

In the judgement of The Black Dispatch the interview released by Dr. Turner was by far the most important news that could have been offered in the past few weeks to citizens of the state regardless of color or race. It should be important to white people for the reason a condition was uncovered which is fairly representative of what is going on in every white college. The political debacle which Dr. Turner uncovered at Langston University is not something incident wholly to Negro institutions, and with the curtain withdrawn, it was the duty of all agencies of publicity to reveal to its constituency our educational skeletons, naked and bare.

Instead of doing this our major publications gave a deal of time to an attempt to repudiate the interview as published in The Black Dispatch. The constructive value of all that Dr. Turner offered is lost in a cloud of falsehood and hypocrisy while effort is made to scotch the truth and damn the publication having the guts to fight for the things that ought to be.

Some idea of the desire for the truth on this subject can be gleaned from the fact that the writer has been invited to deliver an address at the University of Oklahoma this week on the subject of Dr. Turner's departure. What would be the need of this writer going down to Norman to discuss Langston if space had been given in white dailies to the complete interview of this very courageous man, as published in The Black Dispatch.

In spite of the fact that few white people understand or know the real cause of Dr. Turner's withdrawal from the state, following three weeks of fog and propaganda, Negroes all over America from Mississippi to Main have read the truth about Oklahoma at their fire sides. This writer sent to the Associated Negro Press the same story we sent to the white dailies of Oklahoma. This week the main story carried with headlines in every Negro publication in America told the exact and definite reason why Dr. Turner left Oklahoma. Black Dispatch

Measured by this yard stick we wonder whether white dailies of Oklahoma are not forcing provincialism upon their masses? Does this type of censorship hurt white folk most or Negroes? In the Turner story of the guts of what is wrong with education in Oklahoma. We doubt seriously whether an Oklahoma educator, black or white would be willing to have rendered the service rendered by Dr. Turner, for after having uncovered the truth, an Oklahoman would have to remain to suffer political reprisals from the exposed. Again we ask the question: "Who lost most by the supression of this story—Negroes or whites?"

Some one has said that a half truth is worse than a lie. This is an occasion when we can make fitting application of this familiar, aphorism. With the publication of the

Albert Turner Finds Politics There, Resigns

Refuses to Stay Because 'Certain Political Factions Still in Control,' He Tells Call

LANGSTON, Okla.—(Special)—Twenty-four hours after Albert L. Turner had arrived here to assume the duties of the presidency of Langston university he wrote out his resignation and departed because he "found the situation still definitely in control of certain political factions."

Mr. Turner, registrar of Tuskegee institute, was doing study on a Rosenwald fellowship at the University of Michigan, at the time of his appointment to the presidency of the state-supported, land grant school at Langston. Governor Phillips announced his appointment on Friday, September 29.

Mr. Turner accepted the position on Saturday, September 30, and arrived in Oklahoma Friday, October 6. The next day he returned to Michigan.

Arriving last Friday, with his wife and daughter, Dr. Turner was domiciled by Acting President Lee in the Home Economics building, presided over by Mrs. Sadie Washington. It was known that soon thereafter, he went into consultation with Board Chairman Holman, but the fact of his withdrawal remained a secret until it was whispered about the campus that he and his family had left for Oklahoma City.

There, in the office of Editor Roscoe Dunjee, he reportedly wrote out his resignation and mailed it to Holman. It read as follows:

"My dear Mr. Holman:

"Official inquiries and investigations made by me since my arrival reveal that during the last few days preceding my coming to the C. A. and N. university several important faculty appointments were made, and positions filled.

"Some of these appointments were to administrative positions which should have been the prerogative of the president to fill. I have also learned that salary adjustments have been made very recently for certain members of the faculty, and I personally encountered a strong suggestion concerning the appointment of the dean of the college.

"My interview with the Board of Regents led me to believe that the new president would not be faced by such conditions. Finding these conditions, therefore, compels me to believe that I will not from the beginning have the power to function successfully as a president whose chief interest is in raising the educational standards of the institution along all lines.

"In view of these facts I regretfully submit my resignation from the presidency of the Colored Agricultural and Normal university, to be effective immediately."

In a statement to The Call concerning his resignation, Mr. Turner said that he had accepted the position on the promise that there would be no political interference. However, on his arrival, he said he found that administrative positions which should be filled on recommendation of the president were filled between the time of his election and arrival on the campus.

Former Head Ousted

Influence of politics created tension in Oklahoma educational circles this summer, with the ouster in August of J. W. Sanford from the presidency of Langston. Religious, educational and fraternal organizations all over the state had stated in resolutions and letters their confidence in President Sanford.

Mr. Sanford stated at the time he left the institution that he believed his dismissal was due to difficulty he had had with State Senator Louis Ritzhaupt, Guthrie who through a member of the board of regents was attempting to exert control over Langston affairs.

Mr. Sanford said he refused to permit the senator to name faculty members and ground employes at the university.

"My only hope is that my successor will not be harried and hampered by the outside influences I have had to fight, from the time I arrived on the Langston campus," Mr. Sanford had stated a month ago.

The newly-elected president, Mr. Turner, arrived on the campus to find university affairs still under the domination of Senator Ritzhaupt. Through a board member he had named all of the business and administrative officers.

"For political reasons," Mr. Turner stated to The Call, "the positions of dean of men, dining hall manager, and director of student labor, had been combined under one man."

J. E. Taylor, political campaign manager for Ritzhaupt, had been named special adjuster, dean of men, publicity agent, manager of the commissary, superintendent of the dining hall, and employer of student labor, according to Roscoe Dunjee, editor of the Black Dispatch in Oklahoma City, who held a two-hour conference with Turner before he left the state to return to his studies in Michigan.

"The dean of women was appointed three days before my arrival, and one faculty member on the day of my arrival," Mr. Turner told The Call. "The acting president said the chairman of the board of regents had promised these persons that their appointments would hold. The chairman of the board made a 'strong suggestion' that the acting president be made dean. The salaries of 'favorites' were increased a few days before my arrival," he said.

Below North Central Standard

B. F. Lee, teacher of mathematics at Langston for 18 years, had been serving as acting president since President Sanford's ouster.

"I also found on the Langston campus that an unsatisfactory pattern of control had been established by some of the faculty members and administrative officers who take all matters to the chairman of the board who lives nearby," stated the Langston-president-for-a-week.

(Fred Holman, Guthrie banker, heads the board of regents. W. C. Kite resigned from the chairmanship after the ouster of Sanford. Kite and Mrs. Jewel Robbins were the two board members who voted in favor of Sanford).

Dr. Turner told Mr. Dunjee about the first shock received by him upon arrival.

"I did think the chairman of the board would accord me the privilege of talking to him in private about conditions around the school and that I might outline to him my theories regarding administration, etc., but instead of having this opportunity, the chairman brought in a teacher in the school named Taylor.

"Jimmy Knows Everybody"

"He patted this young man on the back and said, 'This is Jimmy. Jimmy was born in his county and knows everybody. Jimmy here is the dean of men, manager of the dining room, and general publicity man for the school."

Turner said he later learned from Acting President Lee that Taylor is in charge of student labor and a recently organized commissary.

When asked to state specific instances he had noted of hurried designation made on the faculty, Dr. Turner said he had been advised that Mrs. Josie Craig Berry, Oklahoma City, had been named dean of women three days before he arrived on the campus and that Dewey Batchelor had named registrar, and all of his assistants selected during the current week. Jeanette V. Gear was also named instructor in English during the current week, so it was said. He declared:

"Why, I would not think of assuming responsibility for the finances of the institution unless I personally selected the individuals whom I entrusted with such work. Take, for example, the young man Taylor. I never met a nicer fellow. He was obliging and kind all of the time I was on the campus. But why should he not be? He had been given charge of the entire business of the school and I was to sit on the outside and assume the responsibility. Suppose he ran the dining room in the hole? Why the situation and conditions they were about to impose upon me at Langston were positively and definitely impossible.

Regrets Turmoil at School

"It's just a different situation than I was promised and since I do not have to take it, I will not. I regret exceedingly to throw the school back into a disorganized state, but I cannot see what I could otherwise do under the circumstances."

In further discussion of the situation at the university and the reasons for his resignation, Mr. Turner explained that he found the college to be far from the academic standards of the North Central association (accrediting agency). "Legislative appropriations were not in line with standards of the North Central," he continued, "for example, only $750 was appropriated for books this year in spite of the exceedingly poor condition of the library."

"It was apparent that I could not function freely and effectively to raise the level of the institution along educational lines, nor to greatly increase the efficiency of its administrative organization and operation," Mr. Turner concluded in his statement to The Call.

Turner From Tuskegee

After the appointment of Mr. Turner, the secretary of the Oklahoma board of regents, Ellis C Nantz, had announced "It is the dawn of a new day for Langston university. I personally know that the regents of Oklahoma colleges are giving about three times as much attention to the Langston situation as to any of the other schools, and I believe in Dr. Turner the board has made a wise selection."

The new president was to draw a salary of $4,200 a year with residence and utilities furnished.

Mr. Turner is now in Ann Arbor, Mich., at 834 Green street.

It was learned on the campus that a dinner and reception had been planned for Monday night in honor of the new president and his family, under auspices of Acting President Lee and members of the faculty.

Mr. Turner had been at Tuskegee for 11 years. He joined the Tuskegee faculty in 1928 as a teacher of history. Later he was made assistant dean of the college department and in 1936, was appointed registrar to succeed Captain Alvin J. Neely who became dean of men.

Albert L. Turner was born in New Orleans in 1900. He was graduated from the high school department of the old New Orleans university. He received B. S. degree Cum Laude from Western Reserve university, Cleveland, in 1923. As an undergraduate at Reserve he was a member of the debating team and recipient of the president's prize. He also won a number of oratorical contests.

An Impressive Record

He was eligible to Delta Sigma Rho, national honorary debating society, but at the time of his graduation a clause in the constitution made membership of a Negro impossible. After many years of nation-wide controversy the objectionable clause was removed. Mr. Turner was at the time a member of the Tuskegee faculty. He was immediately notified of his membership in Delta Sigma Rho.

In 1927, Mr. Turner was awarded the degree of LL. B. from Western Reserve law school. He was elected to the Order of Coif, a national honorary legal fraternity for high scholarship in the study of law.

In 1932, Mr. Turner received degree of M. A. in political science from the University of Michigan as a result of a year's study on a General Education board fellowship. In 1935, Mr. Turner was awarded a fellowship by Harvard university on the basis of his thesis, "Judicial Interpretation and Legislation Affecting Negroes." Because of administrative duties at Tuskegee, Mr. Turner was unable to accept the Harvard honor.

Again in 1939 this distinguished scholar was awarded a fellowship, this one by the Julius Rosenwald Fund for study at the University of Michigan. Mr. Turner had already gone to Michigan when he received the appointment to the presidency of Langston university.

Mr. Turner is married and has three children. His wife, Mrs. Odessa Turner, is a graduate from the school of pharmacy, Western Reserve university. His daughter, Jean, an honor student, Tuskegee institute high school, is a freshman at the University of Michigan. As president of the Alabama Junior Federation, she attended the National Federation of Colored Women in Boston, Mass., last summer.

Mr. Turner is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. Mrs. Turner is an active member of Alpha Kappa Alpha graduate chapter at Tuskegee.

ASK HOLMAN FOR RESIGNATION, GOV.

Black Dispatch 10-21-39 Oklahoma City, Okla.

—AN EDITORIAL—

Governor Leon C. Phillips has said that he wants to rid Langston University of political influences. Last week The Black Dispatch uncovered a condition existing at the only institution of higher learning Negroes have in Oklahoma, that should make the state bow its head in shame.

Politics of the cheapest and worst type exists at Langston University today and it was from this Frankenstein that Dr. Albert L. Turner fled, a condition brought about by white politicians, and not because of Negro factions as charged by certain state officials.

When the governor selected the present board of regents for seven Oklahoma colleges, he refused to select man residing in a county where a white college is located. Was this a mere accident or was it studied method and design? We want our readers to keep this viewpoint in front of them as they read these lines.

But Governor Phillips departed from this rule when Langston University came into the picture. Fred Holman lives in Logan County, and Langston University is in Logan County. Why did the governor of this state refuse to allow a white man to serve on the board of regents in a county where there is a white college, and change this rule when it comes to the administration of affairs in a Negro college?

It is noteworthy that in providing a board of regents for the University of Oklahoma, the experience of those who govern though that it is not wise to allow a man living in a county where a school is located to become a regent member of said school. That is the reason why it is provided in Action 7209 of the compiled statutes of this state that no citizen of Cleveland County shall be a member of the board of regents of the Universitv of Oklahoma.

Says Interview Was "True Report of Conditions I Found"

Dear Sir,

I have read the account in The Black Dispatch of my leaving Langston. I want to thank you for giving expression to my view. In the main, the article was a true report of the conditions I found.

I was aware that the interval between my leaving and the appearance of The Black Dispatch would give rise to wild rumors. But I ran the risk of even uncomplimentary rumors in order to have the story appear first in a Negro newspaper. For it is my sincere belief that if the situation is to be made right the Negroes of the state will have to take a more intelligent interest in it. It is certainly the duty of the Negro newspaper to strive honestly and fearlessly to create that interest.

The idea of my being frightened out of the state is absurd. Having once made up my mind that the situation was intolerable, I could not afford to lose any more time and still resume my work at the University of Michigan.

Sincerely yours,

The experience of those who have given study to political science and state politics is that men who reside in the county where a state school is located are more inclined than citizens who live in remote counties to traffic in the affairs of the school and unconsciously meddle with the internal functions of the institution than is proper and right.

Experience teaches that persons having official authority in counties where schools are located are inclined to want to make loans to teachers, coerce them into buying automobiles, furniture and other merchandise. The records show that attempts are made by local firms to sell the food supplies to the administrative authorities and dictate and name the ground employees and in many instances dominate the faculty appointments. This is why state government sees to it that the white institutions of Oklahoma are protected by law from provincial narrowness and local lust and greed.

Was Governor Phillips thinking of this rule when he refused to place a white man on the newly created Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges, who resided in any of the counties where white colleges are located? If he was thinking in this vein why did Governor Phillips change that rule when Langston university came into the picture?

Without charging the governor with anything other than honest motives, and still crediting him with wanting to do the right thing, we want to visualize for our readers what actual situation is at Langston university at the present moment.

At Langston university we have a member of the board of regents who lives in the county where the school is located. He has been named the chairman of the board of regents, and this chairman of the board is a relative through marriage of a state senator, whom everyone knows for many years has been seeking to dominate Langston university and its faculty. We find further that the campaign manager of this state senator has been made the virtual administrative control center of the school.

The Black Dispatch believes the Governor, if he sincerely and honestly desires to take Langston university as nearly as possible out of the political quagmire, where it has been cast by the Ritzhaupt-Holman set-up, will recall the Holman appointment. We believe there is enough in the Turner expose to warrant the governor in the belief that the same rule that applies to white schools should apply to Langston university.

In making his investigation the Governor should inquire as to whether or not the institution's finances have been transferred to the Holman bank since Holman was elevated to the regency. He should inquire as to whether the fear of a chairman of a board of regents has caused the transfer of the bank accounts of faculty members to the bank controlled by the president, and as to whether or not faculty members have made loans in the bank with which this board member is connected.

The Black Dispatch thinks that an investigation leading in this direction would be the method by which the governor could determine whether or not extraordinary power exercised by a regent living in a county where a school is located would have this character of effect.

Forgetting the present setup for the moment, we think it desirable to point out that the member of the board of regents preceding the present one was an automobile salesman. It would be interesting to tabulate the number of cars of the make sold by this member that showed up on the Langston campus immediately following his elevation to the regency, and continuing through his incumbency. Faculty members bought those cars and we wonder whether the college president could have fired any one of the teachers owning that particular make of car so long as they remained in debt to the man from whom they purchased it?

This is the usual method used in school by faculty members, by which they thumb their fingers at administrative authority. It was used successfully in Oklahoma City for several years by those who purchased furniture from an influential member of the school board.

In still another instance in Langston's history the records show that a Logan county member of the board of regents placed his wife in the supply room, and by the expedient of using a fictitious grocery firm, which never existed, except on paper, brokered all of the food supplies used by the institution, charging of course a handsome profit to his bogus grocery firm.

At the present time the immediate cause of Langston's turmoil is well known. It even accounts for the present designation on the board from Logan county. It is well known that State Senator Louis Ritzhaupt declared for several months before the ousting of the late President Sanford that he would have Sanford removed. It is well known that he went to the legislature with no other thought in mind. It is well known that Sanford charged the enmity which developed in the fight between Senator Ritzhaupt and the Langston prexy developed out of Sanford's refusal to allow the senator to dominate the appointment of faculty members and ground employees.

"Three Henchmen of J. W. Sanford" Chased Dr. Turner From Okla. Say Reports

Scare Story Continued By Governor In Interview Monday: Don't Believe Black Dispatch

Bob Fitzgerald Returns From Ann Arbor.

10-28-39

Governor Phillips is quoted in Monday afternoon's Times as saying he did not believe statements published in The Black Disaptch in which Dr. Albert L. Turner, in his resignation to the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges complained of bad faith on the part of the chairman of the board, in allowing key annointments to be made hurriedly immediately following his election to the presidency and up to the day of his arrival.

The statement of Governor Phillips came immediately following the return from Ann Arbor of Bob Fitzgerald, private investigator of Governor Phillips, who is said to have had an extended interview with Dr. Turner.

Times Article

Here's what the Times article said: Oklahoma City Okla.

An effort may be made to persuade Albert L. Turner, the one-day former president of Colored Agricultural and Normal university, Langston, to return to the post he left in a hurry two weeks ago. Governor Phillips revealed Monday.

He blamed a "clique of three henchmen" of J. W. Sanford, ousted president, for "talking" Turner into beating a hasty retreat to his scholarship studies at Michigan university, Ann Arbor.

Phillips sent Bob Fitzgerald, private investigator, to Ann Arbor to interview Turner in an attempt to clear up the mystery surrounding his resignation.

10-28-39

Old Clique

"An old clique got to him, I guess, and scared him out," conjectured Phillips. "Turner had a conference with those three men the afternoon he was at Langston and left right after that. He told Bob he left because he didn't know whether he would have a hand in operating that thing and he had a deadline on deciding whether he wanted to get his scholarship back.

"He had half a notion to return

Dunjee went on to say that he had it direct from Jimmy Taylor, during a recent conversation that Dr. Turner did not hold conferences with anyone other than Acting President Lee, Chairman Holman and himself (Jimmy).

"If the Governor will examine carefully into whatever it was that transpired while those three conferences were being held he'll be on a hot trail", said Dunjee, who added, "I've also just sent Ellis Nantz, the secretary of the Board of Regents a photostat of the letter Dr. Turner wrote me."

On the 15th of October Dr. Turner wrote Editor Dunjee the following letter:

Dunjee Talks

When shown the article Monday evening, Editor Dunjee said:—"That's all poppy-cock. I'll just go down and have some photostats of Dr. Turner's letter to me prepared and send the governor a copy of same. Dr. Turner wrote his letter to me in long hand and it might perhaps be interesting to this special investigator of the governor to compare his notes with Dr. Turner's letter."

In spite of the fact that Dr. Turner in his letter refuted the rumors afloat over the state alleging that he had been terrorized and caused to feel he was unsafe in Oklahoma, the Governor Monday, is said in the Times article to persist in the notion that some understandable and illegal methods were used by unknown parties causing Dr. Turner's sudden departure. Langston Presidency Too Hot For Regents: Delay Appointment Of Head

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 17—Although it was said that the board of regents of Oklahoma colleges would name a new president for Langston university at its meeting Friday, according to reports the board was unable to make a decision. Dejunder

Friday marked the second time this month that the board has met to appoint a president to succeed Albert L. Turner, the one-day executive, but in neither case could the issue be settled.

11-18-39

Leaders in political circles express the view that the presidency is "too hot" at present to be tampered with. It has been rumored that G. L. Harris, instructor at Prairie View college, Prairie View, Texas, is being considered for the post.

Although it is generally felt that a resident of the state should be given this top political plum, but inasmuch as six men in the state are seeking the job, it is said that the regents feel that no state man can be appointed without offending the other five.

Whether Harris will get the post is uncertain, but he is said to have appeared before the board on two occasions.

Jimmie Taylor, dean of men and special adjuster, appears to loom as the most prominent state candidate for the post. He called on Governor Phillips last Thursday. The conference is said to have lasted for more than an hour. He left the capitol smiling.

Taylor is being sponsored by Senator Ritzhaupt, who dominates the school. Since J. W. Sanford was ousted, Taylor has been constantly in the limelight.

B. F. Lee, acting president, is said to stand a fair chance of getting the post although he is not pushing his candidacy.

EDUCATION- 1939
COLLEGES- CHANGE OF HEADS

New Langston President Quits First Day On Job

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 20 —One day was all Albert L. Turner, newly appointed president of Langston university, could endure as head of the school. Faced with a protest from the Alumni association, internal dissension and a hot-bed of politics at the university in which his part was that of a figure-head, Turner sent his resignation to Fred Tolman, chairman of the board of regents last week.

However, mystery still surrounds Turner's one-day regime. He is said to have been considerably disturbed over an editorial which appeared in an Oklahoma weekly which predicted that he was headed for the guillotine. It is also reported that there was an organized effort in operation to scare him out of the state.

Following a day of observing and a conference with Chairman Holman, Acting President, Lee, and other persons, Turner found that hurried appointments to key positions had been made since his election to the presidency, even up to the day of his arrival, and there had been a rearrangment of salaries.

Hands Tied

"I would not prostitute my professional career by entering into the intolerable situation I found at Langston," Turner said.

The presidency at Langston university is considered one of the toughest jobs in the state because of the factions who are fighting to control the institution.

Dr. Turner felt that he would not be given a free hand to handle the situation as he felt it should be handled. In his conference with Chairman Holman he learned that he (Holman) would not endorse the very definite hold he (Turner) would demand upon the business and administrative affairs of the school. As chairman of the board and a resident of the county where the school is located he would exercise extraordinary influence over the institution.

Dr. Turner arrived Friday and left the next day, returning to Ann Arbor, Mich., where he is working on his doctorate at the University of Michigan.

Turner's Letter

Following is a complete text of the resignation of Dr. Albert Turner as taken from the "Black Dispatch" by permission of the editor.

Oklahoma City, Okla.
October 7, 1937

Mr. Fred A. Holman,
Board of Regents,
O. A. and N. university,
Guthrie, Okla.

My dear Mr. Holman:

Official inquiries and investigations made by me since my arrival reveal that during the last few days preceding my coming to the C. A. and N. university several important faculty appointments were made and positions filled.

Some of these appointments were to administrative positions which should have been the prerogative of the president to fill. I have also learned that salary adjustments have been made very recently for certain members of the faculty, and I personally encountered a strong suggestion concerning the appointment of the dean of the college.

My interview with the Board of Regents led me to believe that the new president would not be faced by such conditions. Finding these conditions, therefore, compels me to believe that I will not from the beginning have the power to function successfully as a president whose chief interest is in raising the educational standards along all lines.

In view of these facts I regretfully submit my resignation from the presidency of the Colored Agricultural and Normal university, to be effective immediately.

Yours very sincerely,
Albert L. Turner.

Cross Fires

Roscoe Dunjee, editor of The Black Dispatch, in explaining Dr. Turner's resignation, said the new president had discovered that Senator Louis Ritzhaupt was actually running the school and that he would be little more than a figure-head.

But the senator replied that Dunjee is just mad because he can't control the school. He said that Dr. J. W. Sanford, former president of the institution was subservient to Dunjee. "This, together with the fact that is was believed that no young woman was morally safe under Sanford's administration was responsible for his ouster."

Dr. Turner was registrar at Tuskegee, on leave, at the time of his appointment. Dr. F. D. Patterson accepted his resignation last week.

AT TUSKEGEE 11 YEARS

Mr. Turner has served at Tuskegee 11 years. He joined the Tuskegee faculty in 1928 as teacher of history, later he was made assistant Dean of the College Department and in 1936 appointed Registrar of Tuskegee Institute to succeed Capt. Alvin T. Neely who became Dean of Men.

In 1935 Mr. Turner was awarded a fellowship by Harvard University on the basis of his thesis "Judicial Interpretation and Legislation Affecting Negroes." Because of administrative duties at Tuskegee. Mr. Turner was unable to accept the Harvard honor.

Again, in 1939 this distinguished scholar has had to resign a fellowship—this time a fellowship awarded by the Julius Rosenwald Fund for study at the University of Michigan. Mr. Turner had already gone to Michigan when he received the appointment to the Presidency of Langston University.

SIX SCRAMBLE FOR LANGSTON PRESIDENCY

Gov. Phillips May Ask Turner To Return To Institution

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 3 — Many hats were thrown into the ring last week in the scramble for the Langston presidency, recently vacated by Albert L. Turner after a one-day reign.

Among those seeking to land the Langston political plum are W. E. Anderson of Okmulgee, former dean of the institution; T. P. Scott, superintendent of the Taft orphanage; Letcher A. Hill of Boley; James Taylor, dean of men at the school and right-hand man of Senator Ritzhaupt, who runs the college; Acting President B. F. Lee who seems to be the choice of the chairman of the board and W. E. Simms, protege of Senator Paul Stewart.

Despite the fact that Oklahomans are demanding the Langston post as political patronage for the part they played in electing Gov. Leon C. Phillips, the governor has sent a special investigator to Ann Arbor, Mich., to question Professor Turner, who has returned to the University of Michigan to continue his studies. It is rumored that the one-day president will be asked to return to the college.

In comparing the chances of the various candidates applying for the Langston post, Superintendent Scott seems to be closest to the governor, but Acting President Lee is a strong man in the race.

Mr. Hill is believed to be definitely out, because two other Boley-ites hold high positions in the state and a third would be unwise.

Some observers think the bel[illegible] appointment of a new p[illegible] the school may lead to a political revolt. All, however, seem to favor the school being taken out of politics.

Asks "Why Search For Nefarious Characters Who Gave Me Bad Advice?"

Clique Advised Him to leave Institution Immediately; Told Fitzgerald Word for Word Story Published In The Black Dispatch

Thinks Majority of Regents All Right

EDITOR'S NOTE: The letter below, pinned by Dr. Albert L. Turner, 2-day president of Langston University, was written last week immediately following his receipt of the Oklahoma City Times forwarded to him by the Black Dispatch, in which a purported interview with Dr. Turner with Governor Phillips' investigator, Ben Fitzgerald was published, and in which Governor Phillips was quoted as saying he did not believe the interview in the Black Dispatch was an accurate statement of Dr. Turner's views.

834 Green Street,
Ann Arbor, Michigan
October 25, 1939

My dear Mr. Dunjee:

I have just read the article in Oklahoma City Times of October 23. The ease with which the truth can be twisted and garbled by those interested in so doing is further confirmation to me of my good judgment in leaving.

THE THREE PERSONS IN THE CLIQUE WHO MADE ME DECIDE TO LEAVE WERE TURNER, TURNER, AND TURNER; MEANING ME, MYSELF, AND I. Mr. Fitzgerald, I am sure, made no such report as was given in the Oklahoma City Times. He and I had a very pleasant conversation about the state in general and about other institutions, both white and colored. He did not broach the subject of Langston. I brought that subject up myself because I knew that was what he had come to see me about. I told him almost word for word what I had told The Black Dispatch. Oklahoma City, Okla.

I expressed, as I still do, my admiration for Governor Phillips, and for the majority of the Board of Regents. For I sincerely believe that Governor Phillips and they mean to go as far as they are able in correcting the situation at Langston and other institutions. 11-4-39

Mr. Fitzgerald could not have mistaken my expressions of good will to mean that I had any different feeling from that which I had expressed all along. NO QUESTION OF MY RETURNING WAS MENTIONED. SUCH A QUESTION WOULD HAVE BEEN USELESS, I am not available. Black Dispatch

Why should there be this search of mysterious reason and for nefarious characters who gave me bad advice? I have made my own decisions since I was fifteen years old, when I began to earn my own living.

The reasons, however, are easily discoverable:

Can anybody in Oklahoma find out how many positions were made vacant upon the release of former President Sanford, or between the time of his release and my election?

Can anybody in Oklahoma find out who now fills those positions and when they were appointed?

Can anybody in Oklahoma find out what shifts from one position to another on the faculty were recently made, and what salaries were adjusted?

It seems to me that somebody in the state has the power and the means of finding out these things. It may also be possible to find out who the Representative is who had accused the Board of making political appointments and for whom the chairman told me he was preparing a statement to show that only eleven shifts and appointments had recently been made although none of them was political, he said. Black Dispatch

I am fully aware of the fact that the school had to go on, and that a complete staff was necessary, but ask anybody who knows anything about school administration if those major appointments made pending the election of a new president—to say nothing of those made between my election and arrival—should not have been temporary appointments. Then ask Acting President Lee if he did not tell me that the chairman of the Board had assured him that all of these appointments would stick.

The unpleasant thing about it all is that it may appear that I was dissatisfied with the persons selected. That is far from the truth. I have regretted in any case to have had to call the name, or to designate the position of a single person. As far as I know they are all fine people and no doubt competent. Perhaps I would have selected those same persons myself, but I should have been given a chance to select them, or to recommend that their temporary appointments be made permanent. It was the total disregard of this fundamental principle to which I objected. Oklahoma City, Okla. 11-4-39

NOBODY AT LANGSTON VOLUNTEERED ANY INFORMATION TO ME. As president. I asked for certain routine information that any man who expected to effectively administer a college would have to know. There is a man at the school whom I have known for several years, unaware of this fact, THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD WARNED ME AGAINST THIS MAN. Sometime after my arrival the man asked me to set a time to talk with him about his work, having inferred from the chairman's remarks that he did not like this man I did not give him a conference for fear that somebody might try to involve him in the decision that I at that time felt I would be compelled to make.

I want it distinctly understood, and if you print this letter I would like for this to be in bold type, that I AM NOT TRYING TO GIVE AID AND COMFORT TO ANY POLITICAL FACTION IN OKLAHOMA. I do not wish to say or write one word beyond that which will redound to the benefit of Langston and of Negro education in the state.

I didn't expect a Sunday School job, neither did I intend to dissipate my efforts among predatory politicians. I am sure that if the Negroes of Oklahoma will do what lies in their power that I will have served the cause better by my immediate resignation than by remaining and waging a factional fight from the beginning, or by supinely drawing my salary as a ham-strung and hog-tied president.

Yours very truly,
Albert L. Turner.

NEW LANGSTON UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT RESIGNS

Call 10-13-39 Kansas City Mo.

LANGSTON, Okla.—Albert L. Turner, newly elected president of Langston university, resigned the post within 24 hours after he arrived on the campus. His resignation came as a surprise. He came here Friday, October 6, from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, where he had enrolled to study on a fellowship. He planned to give up the fellowship and accept the Langston post but upon arriving here he changed his mind and returned to Michigan. Before leaving Oklahoma, a United Press dispatch said, he talked for two hours with Roscoe Dunjee, editor of the Oklahoma Black Dispatch, who refused to tell the daily press what transpired at the conference, saying that his paper would carry the full details.

Former Registrar At Tuskegee Leaves As Citizens Plan to Banquet Him.

LANGSTON, Okla., Oct. 19.—(ANP) — This usually staid and quiet college town last week was given a shock comparable to that of Britain's torpedoed Athenia, when Albert L. Turner, newly installed president of Langston university, threw up his hands in disgust, resigned after being on the job only two days and left for parts unknown just as a welcoming committee had perfected arrangements for a gala banquet in his honor.

Pittsburgh Courier

President Turner, nationally known as the former registrar of Tuskegee Institute, resigned last Saturday, sent his resignation by mail to Fred Holman, white chairman of the regents of Oklahoma colleges at the Holman residence in Guthrie. Some sources insisted that Turner left immediately, by auto, for the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he is enrolled.

Arriving last Friday, with his wife and daughter, Dr. Turner was domiciled by Acting President Lee in the home economics building, presided over by Mrs. Sadie Washington. It was known that soon thereafter, he went into consultation with Board Chairman Holman, but the fact of his withdrawal remained a secret until it was whispered about the campus that he and his family had left for Oklahoma City. There, in the office of Editor Roscoe Dunjee, he reportedly wrote out his resignation and mailed it to Holman.

Langston President Quits after 2 Days

LANGSTON, Okla. — Faced with what he termed an "intolerable situation," Albert L. Turner, newly-installed president of Langston University, resigned last week, after being at the institution for only two days.

The former registrar of Tuskegee Institute sent his resignation by mail to the home of Fred Holman, white, chairman of the regents of Oklahoma colleges, in Guthrie, on Saturday. A welcoming committee had completed arrangements for a banquet in his honor, scheduled for the following Monday.

Ignored in Appointments

His letter of resignation based his action on the fact that certain administrative and faculty appointments, as well as several salary adjustments, had been made within a few days before arrival, and that he had "encountered a strong suggestion concerning the appointment of the dean."

Some of these appointments, he felt, should have been left to the discretion of the president. He said the failure to grant him this courtesy was in violation of what the board of regents had led him to expect.

Discussing the situation in an Oklahoma City newspaper office, he said:

"I did think the chairman of the board would accord me the privilege of talking to him in private about conditions around the school and that I might outline to him my theories regarding administration, etc., but instead of having this opportunity, the chairman brought in a teacher in the school named Taylor.

"Jimmy Knows Everybody"

"He patted this young man on the back and said, 'This is Jimmy. Jimmy was born in this county and knows everybody. Jimmy here is the dean of men, manager of the dining room, and general publicity man for the school.'"

Mr. Turner said he later learned that Taylor is in charge of student labor and a recently-organized commissary.

Although Mr. Turner did not make his destination public, it has been reported that he left by auto, with his wife and daughter, for Ann Arbor to resume studies at the University of Michigan.

Turner, Turner and Turner

"The more one stirs a stench, the worse it smells." Fine application can be made of that aphorism this week, when one turns to the first page and reads the letter written by Dr. Turner, in which he blasts forever the efforts of certain interested parties in Oklahoma who charge that undue influence was exercised by persons causing Dr. Turner to suddenly depart from Oklahoma.

Dr. Turner it is reported in the Oklahoma City Times, last week to have been almost persuaded to return to Oklahoma. It appears that the Governor sent personal investigator, Bob Fitzgerald to Ann Arbor, and following his return, the Oklahoma City newspaper quoted the chief executive as follows:

"An old clique got to him, (Turner) I guess, and scared him out," conjectured Phillips. "Turner had a conference with those three men the afternoon he was at Langston and left right after that. He told Bob he left because he didn't know whether he would have a hand in operating that thing and he had a deadline on deciding whether he wanted to get his scholarship back.

"He had half a notion to return with Bob. I still think he is a good man for the job. We might take a notion to go bring him back here."

Phillips denied assertions by the Black Dispatch, Oklahoma City Negro newspaper, that Turner resigned because he discovered the board of regents would hamstring him in his administration of the school.

The Oklahoma Eagle, under date of October 28th, and following the alleged interview attributed to the Governor, as published in the Oklahoma City Times, tells its readers in direct quotations that Governor Phillips in a telephone conversation with the paper, said:

"I am sorry so many of the Negroes have been given false impressions by gossip-mongers. I sent an investigator over to Langston and he found that Professor Turner talked to only three men the one afternoon he was at the university. These men were K. L. Jones, former private secretary to former President J. W. Sanford; Professor J. C. Tinner and Professor J. J. Seabrook. If somebody put fear into Turner's heart they must have done it.

Now who is to be believed in this discussion of what caused Dr. Turner to leave the state? To date no one has had the temerity to allege that Dr. Turner could have ulterior motives in issuing a statement. The only argument offered in opposition to what has been published in The Black Dispatch is that perhaps Dr. Turner did not deliver himself, in his interview with the Black Dispatch, as his statement was offered to the public in these columns.

But if you turn to the front page of this issue you will note Dr. Turner not only confirms this interview, but states also that during his talk with Bob Fitzgerald,

"No question of my returning to Oklahoma was mentioned. Such a question would have been useless. I am not available."

In the light of this direct statement, how could the governor's investigator have reported that Dr. Turner was almost willing to return to Oklahoma.

Dr. Turner also adds,

"I told him (Fitzgerald) almost word for word what I had told The Black Dispatch."

But in answer to the allegations made in the Oklahoma Eagle, we believe this statement in the letter of Dr. Turner should settle for all time the argument about who talked to him.

Dr. Turner says,

"Nobody at Langston volunteered any information to me."

And then the learned doctor says that he refused to hold conference with any individuals on the campus following a warning coming from the chairman of the board.

Who is it then having made false representations to the Governor? It appears that the investigator who went to Ann Arbor brought back very incomplete information about what he learned there, and now it appears that some one on the campus or in connection with the University has named three men who they allege talked with Dr. Turner on the campus, who Dr. Turner says had no conversation with him what-so-ever.

We do not know definitely who it is, aside from the governor's private investigator, furnishing information to the chief executive, but we believe there is enough in Dr. Turner's letter to cause Governor Phillips to realize that some one who talks to him has departed from the truth.

We believe the Governor would be wise were he to study carefully as to who would benefit by misrepresenting the facts in the present situation at Langston University. Dr. Turner leaped away from the assignment as a four-week's old puppy would from a snake. He must have discovered something rotten there, or else he would not have written his sudden resignation and the two subsequent letters confirming the interview as published in The Black Dispatch.

In order that the readers of The Black Dispatch, and Governor Phillips will know what we think about the charge made in the Oklahoma Eagle, we want to charge here and now that by the time the next board of regents meet, the persons and influences from which Dr. Turner fled will be ready to recommend that K. L. Jones, J. C. Tinner and J. J. Seabrooks be dismissed from the University.

And when they are dismissed, these men, guilty of no other crime other than that they are identified as friends of J. W. Sanford, will be sacrificed upon the alter of politics. Here is the direct evidence, establishing the position The Black Dispatch has taken throughout the controversy raging at Langston University. Keep in mind; these men were named by the Oklahoma Eagle as the men Governor Phillips was advised talked to Dr. Turner. Dr. Turner says he did not talk to them. The question is, who told the governor that these three men talked with the new president?

We make this prediction now that efforts will continue until these three men are dimissed or made so uncomfortable that they will voluntarily withdraw from the institution. Here's the meat into cocoanut; some one has told Governor Phillips that Jones, Tinner and Seabrooks talked to Turner. Dr. Turner says he did not hold conference with a single person on the faculty as above named. Have we gotten to a place in this controversy that we are going to call Dr. Turner a liar?

Go back and get those Sunday editions of the Daily Oklahoma, Tulsa World and Tribune. In that presentation of Dr. Turner to the people of Oklahoma he was held up to us as an outstanding educator. The Black Dispatch still holds to that belief.

Let us see about that; Dr. Turner is a man who finished college with high honors; he had been elected to the Order of the Caif, the national honorary legal fraternity for high scholarship in the study of law; he had earned the Master of Science degree in Political Science with an all "A". To cap the climax Dr. Turner had had eleven years of teaching experience. Surely such a man would be able to see which way the wind was blowing at Langston University, before the house fell in on him. We hope the learned editor of the Oklahoma Eagle will keep this in mind.

As a matter of fact we suspect that it was well that a man with an "all A" in political science was sent up there to our state school so that he could intelligently tell us what is going on there.

Of course if we want to change our view down here in Oklahoma and doubt the integrity, common sense and good judgement of Dr. Turner, there will still be room for the Governor and others to hunt for the underhand clique that ran the two-day president out of Oklahoma. On the other hand, if we want to be sensible and face the truth, we are going to accept at face value the statement that "Turner, Turner and Turner" are the guilty parties who gave the erstwhile Langston president advice.

ALBERT L. TURNER, REGISTRAR AT TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, NEW HEAD OF LANGSTON UNIVERSITY

Succeeds J. W. Sanford as President of Oklahoma School; Gives Up Fellowship to Take New Position

LANGSTON, Okla. —Albert L. Turner, registrar at Tuskegee institute, has been appointed president of Langston university by Governor Leon C. Phillips.

When notified of the appointment, Mr. Turner had gone to the University of Michigan for study on a Rosenwald fellowship. He accepted the Langston position and was to arrive at Langston last Friday.

Mr. Turner had been at Tuskegee for 11 years. He joined the Tuskegee faculty in 1928 as a teacher of history. Later he was made assistant dean of the college department and in 1936 was appointed registrar to succeed Captain Alvin J. Neely who became dean of men.

Mr. Turner will succeed J. W. Sanford, who was ousted from Langston early in 1939. B. F. Lee, who has been serving as acting president, will be returned to his former position as dean of the college. Any other changes in the faculty, the board of regents announced, will await action by the new president.

The new president will draw a salary of $4,200 a year with residence and utilities furnished.

Albert L. Turner was born in New Orleans in 1900. He was graduated from the high school department of the old New Orleans university. He received B. S. degree Cum Laude from Western Reserve university, Cleveland, in 1923. As an undergraduate at Reserve he was a member of the debating team and recipient of the president's prize. He also won a number of oratorical contests.

He was eligible to Delta Sigma Rho, national honorary debating society, but at the time of his graduation a clause in the constitution made membership of a Negro impossible. After many years of nation-wide controversy the objectionable clause was removed. Mr. Turner was at the time a member of the Tuskegee faculty. He was immediately notified of his membership in Delta Sigma Rho.

In 1927, Mr. Turner was awarded the degree of LL. B. from Western Reserve law school. He was elected to the Order of Coif, a national honorary legal fraternity for high scholarship in the study of law.

In 1932, Mr. Turner received degree of M. A. in political science from the University of Michigan as a result of a year's study on a General Education board fellowship. In 1935, Mr. Turner was awarded a fellowship by Harvard university on the basis of his thesis, "Judicial Interpretation and Legislation Affecting Negroes." Because of administrative duties at Tuskegee, Mr. Turner was unable to accept the Harvard honor.

Again in 1939 this distinguished scholar has had to resign a fellowship — this time a fellowship awarded by the Julius Rosenwald Fund for study at the University of Michigan. Mr. Turner had already gone to Michigan when he received the appointment to the presidency of Langston university.

Mr. Turner is married and has three children. His wife, Mrs. Odessa Turner, is a graduate from the school of pharmacy, Western Reserve university. His daughter, Jean, an honor student, Tuskegee Institute high school, is a freshman at the University of Michigan. As president of the Alabama Junior Federation, she attended the National Federation of Colored Women in Boston, Mass., last summer.

Mr. Turner is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. Mrs.

Turner is an active member of Alpha Kappa Alpha graduate chapter at Tuskegee.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner and two children left Tuskegee Wednesday morning, October 4, for Langston where Mr. Turner will take up the duties of president at once.

Mrs. Turner will return to Tuskegee to supervise the transfer of household effects to the new home in Oklahoma.

Langston university is one of the oldest land grant colleges for Negroes.

Resigns From Tuskegee To Become Langston U. Prexy

10-14-39

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —President F. D. Patterson announced his acceptance of the resignation of Albert L. Turner, registrar of Tuskegee Institute. Mr. Turner has been appointed by Governor Leon C. Phillips to be President of Langston University, Langston, Oklahoma.

President Patterson in speaking of Mr. Turner's leaving stated that as Oklahoma gains a useful citizen and Langston a distinguished president, Tuskegee loses one of her most beloved and valuable workers.

Mr. Turner has served at Tuskegee 11 years. He joined the Tusegee faculty in 1928 as teacher of history; later he was made assistant dean of the College Department, and in 1936, was appointed registrar of Tuskegee Institute to succeed Capt. Alvin J. Neely who became dean of men.

FORMER CLEVELANDER IS NAMED PRESIDENT OF LANGSTON UNIV.

Word received from Oklahoma City, Okla., tells of the appointment of Albert L. Turner, registrar of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., as president of Langston University, Oklahoma City.

The new president of Langston University graduated Western University in 1932 with the award of cum laude, and has won many prizes in the debating societies where he attended school.

Dr. Turner completed the law course at Western Reserve in 1927, and was elected to the Order of Coif, honorary legal fraternity. At the time of his selection to head Langston University, he was attending the University of Michigan on a fellowship granted by the General Education Board. He also holds a fellowship grant from the Rosenwald Foundation.

The new Langston prexy went to Tuskegee Institute in 1928, holding the chair of history and political science, and for five years he was assistant to the dean of that institution.

In 1936 he was elevated to the position of registrar and added to the policy forming unit of the institution. At the time he was drafted to the Langston presidency was member of the executive council. He is 39 years old.

President Turner married the former Odessa Clements of Cleveland, sister of Mrs. Effie Manuel of E. 126th St., and aunt of Mrs. Phillip Jackson also of Mt. Pleasant. The new president is also a brother of Mr. B. H. Turner of the Gentles Flower Shop.

J. W. Sanford Ousted as Langston U. President

SAY SENATOR RESPONSIBLE FOR CHANGE

F. D. Moon Mentioned as Most Probable Successor

LANGSTON, Okla. — J. W. Sanford was ousted as president of Langston university at a special Sunday meeting of the board of regents. The vote of the seven-member board was 5 to 2.

Sanford had the support and confidence of the Negroes of the state but he was vigorously fought by Senator Louis Ritzhaupt of Guthrie, who announced in a daily paper last week that he was going to use every effort possible to have Sanford removed from office.

Sanford had been president of Langston for four years and during his administration he transformed a $40,000 deficit into a $20,000 surplus.

Wanted Partiality

His difficulties with Ritzhaupt Sanford said, began when President Sanford refused to permit the senator to name faculty members and ground employes at the university. Ritzhaupt denied that he had ever asked Sanford to employ any persons at the university.

The man slated to succeed Sanford is F. D. Moon, school principal in Wewoka, Okla. Senator Ritzhaupt and Moon are said to be good friends. It was reported that the position was offered to E. W. Woods of Tulsa, but that he refused it.

In a statement to the press before leaving the campus, Sanford said: "I have nothing but praise for my hundreds of friends who have stood by me in these trying moments and especially my many white friends who went out of their way to give my administration support. I have endeavored to the best of my ability to give the people of this state a greater Langston and I believe my record there proves this. My only hope is that my successor will not be harried and hampered by the outside influences I have had to fight, from the time I arrived on the Langston campus."

Chairman Resigns

Following Sanford's ouster, W. C. Kite, chairman of the board of regents, resigned from the board. Kite was quoted in the daily press as saying, "Firing two college presidents and electing three in one day was too much for me." He was also quoted as saying that when "politics stalked in I got out."

Kite and Mrs. Jewel Robbins were the two regents who voted for President Sanford's retention.

For several months, the board of regents had at hand written statements endorsing Mr. Sanford from almost every organized effort among Negroes in the state, religious, educational and fraternal.

It was said that Ritzhaupt was successful in naming a member of the board who kept up a continual fight until Sanford's ouster was effected.

Dr. B. F. Lee, for 12 years dean of Langston U., has been named acting president of the university. Dr. Lee is one of most popular men on the campus. He has been instructor of mathematics for 18 years.

OKLAHOMANS MAY PROTEST BOARD'S CHOICE

Prairie View Dean To Assume Duties On January 1

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 15—Although the board of regents of Oklahoma colleges has had considerable trouble selecting a man to succeed Albert L. Turner, Langston's one-day president, G. L. Harrison, of Prairie View State college, Texas, was named to the post Saturday.

Because Harrison has lived outside the state for many years it is believed that the people of Oklahoma will make it difficult for him to succeed. It is even feared that he may even be intimidated.

The people of the state have looked upon the presidency of Langston as a political plumb and they resent the appointment of an outsider.

Harrison, who is 39 years old, was dean of education and director of teacher training at Prairie View at the time of his appointment.

Harrison, a native at Lawton, Okla., received his A.B. degree from Howard university, his master's degree and a bachelor of education degree from the University of Cincinnati, and his Ph.D. degree from Ohio State university.

For six years he served as a member of the governing board of Wilberforce university, Wilberforce, Ohio, and for two years was head of the department of education at Virginia Union university, Richmond, Va.

He will assume his new duties at Langston on January 1.

REGENTS SEEK NEW HEAD FOR STATE COLLEGE

Dr. Sanford Dismissed; Prof. Lee Appointed Acting Head

8-12-39

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., ug. 11—Although Prof. B. '. Lee has been appointed cting president of Langston niversity following the dis- issal of Dr. J. W. Sanford, there s much speculation as to who will e named to the post.

Dr. Sanford, who had been under ire for several months, was dropped from the institution July 30 by the board of regents. His dismissal became effective immediately.

Trouble is said to have started at the school following a legislative investigation which revealed conditions which displeased the lawmakers.

Former President Sanford, who did his undergraduate work at Prairie View State college, was named to the presidency of the college while he served as principal of the high school at Ardmore, Okla. Less than a year ago he was praised by state officials for the fine work he had done at Langston and was given a trip to Europe.

In seeking a man to succeed Dr. Sanford, it is reported that Governor Phillips wants a member of the board to scout the faculty at Tuskegee for a prospect. However, rumors have it that political pressure will force the appointment of an Oklahoman to the position.

Acting President Lee has been a member of the faculty, as teacher of mathematics, for the last 18 years during 12 of which he has been the dean of the college.

Demoting Negro Citizenship Status Injures Whites More Than Blacks, Says Dunjee

Norman Students Hear Black Dispatch Editor Tell About Oklahoma Administration of Educational Tax

Tells of Difficulties At Langston U.

Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City
11-4-39

NORMAN.—Students in the class of Journalism and Public Opinion listened to an address Thursday morning at 11:00 o'clock, delivered by Editor Roscoe Dunjee, of The Black Dispatch, Oklahoma City. 11-4-39

Editor Dunjee was presented to the class by H. H. Herbert, director of the school in journalism. Black Dispatch

"In a letter inviting me to come here this morning, you requested that I discuss the situation at Langston university, and particularly the sudden departure from the state of its recent two-day president," said Editor Dunjee in his opening remarks.

Distributes Papers

"I've brought along a large number of the last three editions of the Black Dispatch and photostatic copies of a recent letter Dr. Turner wrote since leaving the state, and from this material you can more thoroughly advise yourself regarding what actually happened in connection with this unfortunate incident, than I could tell you in the next two hours.

"Instead of discussing Dr. Turner I am assuming that I can do more good here today in the time alloted me discussing the general administration of tax revenues for Negro education in Oklahoma," said the speaker.

Race Relations Improving

"Before I delve into this subject this morning, I want you students to know that I feel race relations are improving in Oklahoma, and while I am going to deal rather frankly with some of the things that have happened and are happening in Oklahoma, I am one black man who feels that the two races are on the way out towards the realm of brotherhood, justice and fair play.

Evils of Demoted Citizenship

"One of the evils in our school set-up in Oklahoma develops from the fact that the Negro occupies a demoted citizenship status, preventing black men and women having the same opportunity to criticize and scrutinize acts of public officials and public records as members of your race. Especially in the separate school setup this offers temptations to white officials, which ofttimes end in law violations and discriminations.

11-4-39

"Take, for instance, right here in Cleveland county. I am sure you students will be surprised when I tell you that the county superintendent of this county in 1921 was tried in your district court for having falsified the records and stealing $1,567 of the taxpayers' money.

Stole a Schoolhouse

"This county superintendent got pay for building a Negro school that never existed. Norman is a town where Negroes have never been allowed to remain over night. It is generally understood here that Negroes are not wanted. Can't you see that the very atmosphere created here, preventing Negroes from coming here to study the county records and make investigation as to the distribution of tax funds was too much of a strain on the morals of this county superintendent?"

Premium On Crazy Negroes

The entire class laughed when Editor Dunjee faceteously exclaimed, "I never have been quite able to understand the white people here in Norman. For years you barred every sane Negro from the town, but when these same Negroes went crazy you welcomed them with open arms. At least, if you had allowed some of the sane ones to chase around here a while the Negro and white taxpayers of this county would not have lost fifteen hundred dollars," said Dunjee.

Objectives of Negroes

"I want you young journalists to catch a glimpse of what Negroes are thinking about whenever you pick up the paper and read an article saying that Negroes are fighting for better educational facilities. You will be the moulders of public opinion in a few years, and I am taking time out to let you see what we must do in Oklahoma before we have carried out the provisions of the constitution, which says that public schools shall be separate but equal.

Stole Negro Buses

"Take, for instance, a situation that recently developed over at Anadarko. In this case the white school board purchased new furniture for the Negro school and two new buses. This equipment was purchased out of the separate school funds, and belonged solely to the Negro school.

"What will you think when I tell you young men and women that soon after this equipment arrived the school authorities brought down from the white school two old, used buses and some used furniture, and took up to the white school the newly purchased property belonging to the Negroes?

Names Lawyers

"Someone might say that perhaps this did not occur. But I call your attention to this. The Negro citizens of Anadarko hired Attorney Jack Page, who used to be in the county attorney's office in this county and who is known to all the taxpayers in Cleveland county, along with State Senator Gerald Spencer of Chickasha, to take the Anadarko school board into court and that property was later returned to the separate school where it belonged."

Per Capita Tax Taken

The Dispatch editor then went into a detailed discussion of the per capita tax, and told the students that in spite of the fact that the Federal Government required the per capita tax to be distributed impartially, millions of dollars of this fund have been filched from Negroes since statehood. Black Dispatch

"They count the Negro school child when the census is taken but the authorities somehow forget to make the proper distribution after the money gets into the hands of the county superintendent," Dunjee said. Okla. City, Okla.

He then cited an instance in Oklahoma county, Luther district, where following the burning of the Negro consolidated school several years ago, the board, composed of Negroes and whites, discovered that the per capita tax had been withheld from this school since statehood. 11-4-39

Got Judgment of $17,000

"You can go up to Oklahoma county today and the records in the district court will show that these separate school officials went into court and secured a judgment in excess of $17,000, and the county commissioners have been paying this money back in the last few years in installments. The demoted citizenship status of Negroes prevents them from knowing what is going on. In still another county where one courageous Negro principal stuck his nose into the records and discovered that he was being cheated out of his transfer funds, he found himself at the end of the term without a job."

Two-Mill Levy Is Vise

The students seemed interested when the Dispatch editor went into a discussion of the two-mill levy provided for Negro schools and the flexible arrangement by which the white district schools can secure from five to fifteen mills. "We're in a vise," said the speaker. "It makes no difference what our needs, all we can get is the two mills. In counties like Muskogee, where the Negro population is large and the tax valuations are low, we do not get enough to operate a nine-months school. The injustice is obvious."

Getting back to Langston university, Editor Dunjee said that the root of the whole trouble there rested in the fact that the institution had been placed in the hands of local influences.

University of Oklahoma Safe

"The reason why the University of Oklahoma has protection from political influence and does not have the four-year disruptions as occur at Langston, arises from the fact that existing law allows no governor to appoint a majority of your board of regents. Public sentiment among white people is so definite and positive on this point that no legislature has had the nerve to change the law.

A Strange Gubernatorial Move

"The legislature placed Langston university and six other teacher's colleges under a new board of regents this year," said Editor Dunjee, "but when the governor got around to the naming of these regents, he forgot to do for Negroes what he did for whites. Down here at Norman it is impossible for a man living in Cleveland county to serve on the board of regents of the University of Oklahoma. While the governor saw to it that no white man is on this new board of regents who resides in a county where a white college is located, he now has chairman of this same board man who resides in Logan county, where Langston university is located.

Local Influences Bad

"Now the reason why citizens who live in a county where schools are located should be kept off governing boards of such institutions is to separate the school from local influence as much as possible. If you really want to know why Dr. Turner left Langstone university so hurriedly I can say in truth that it resulted from the grasp he discovered of local influence had upon the institution.

"Take Langston university: Several years ago one of the regents who resided in Logan county, placed his wife in the store rooms of the school. All of the food supplies were brokered into the institution through a fictitious grocery firm which existed only in the mind of that regent and his wife. Is that a healthy influence to have around a college?

Car Dealer Is Boss

"Another regent of recent vintage was a dealer in cars. It would be interesting for you to know the number of machines of the particular make sold by this regent, that showed up on the campus at Langston university during the regency period of this automobile salesman.

"At the present time the institutional account at Langston university is deposited in a bank owned by the chairman of the board of regents; members of the faculty have transferred their personal accounts there, and one can readily see that an influence will be exercised on the college by this member of the board, which experience teaches should not exist. All who have studied ideal school atmosphere realize that lay influence should never substitute professional control," Dunjee said.

Speaker Cheered

The students cheered as Editor Dunjee closed his remarks and a big rush was made to the desk and hurried investigation made of the information filed in Cleveland county in 1921 against a county superintendent, charged with stealing $1,567. "You have certainly brought us some information we did not know," said one of the students.

"We want this man to address our forum," declared another student, at the close of the meeting.

"More of the student body should hear him."

PROF. G. LAMAR HARRISON, PRAIRIE VIEW COLLEGE DEAN OF EDUCATION, OFFERED POST

Call 12-15-39 Kansas City Mo

To Take Office January 1, Filling Vacancy Caused by Ousting of J. W. Sanford; Holds Ph. D. from Ohio State U.

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas.—Information reaching here from the board of regents of Langston university,

DR. G. L. HARRISON

Langston, Okla., states that Dr. G. L. Harrison, 39, dean of education at Prairie View State college, has been named to fill the post of president of Langston university, left vacant by the removal of President J. W. Sanford, who was ousted several months ago.

Various efforts made to fill the vacancy in the interim have proved unavailing. Reports are current that three persons who have been offered the presidency of Langston university, refused the position in the past three months.

President-elect Harrison is a native Oklahoman. He did his undergraduate work at Howard university, Washington, D. C., where he received the Bachelor of Arts degree. He also holds the Master's degree from the University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Doctorate degree from Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Prof. B. F. Lee, dean of Langston university, has been acting president at Langston since the resignation of Dr. A. L. Turner, who remained at Langston only one day, stating he disapproved the hiring and firing of faculty members without consulting him. Negro citizens of Oklahoma are asking that Langston university, highest institution of learning within Oklahoma for Negroes, "be taken out of politics." Governor Phillips and school authorities have promised that this will be done.

The announcement of Dr. Harrison's election to the presidency of Langston also says he is to take office January 1, 1940. The terms and salary were not made public Monday when the information of his election was given out.

Dr. Harrison is a native of Oklahoma. He received his elementary school training in a one-teacher rural school in Comanche, Okla. As there was no high school for Negroes in the county at the time he completed his elementary school work, Mr. Harrison remained in the elementary school two additional years to secure whatever high school work the teacher was able and willing to offer. After working several years, he went to Kansas City, Mo., where he completed his high school work at Lincoln high school, graduating in 1922.

Degree In Administration

Mr. Harrison then went to Howard university, Washington, from where he received the degree of bachelor of arts in 1926. Upon his graduation, he was awarded a teaching fellowship by the University of Cincinnati, from which institution he received the degree of B. E. and M. E. in education in 1927 and 1929, respectively.

In the summer of 1931, he entered the Ohio State university, where he specialized in college administration and public school administration and supervision. In this field, he received his Ph. D. from Ohio State in December, 1936.

In addition to serving as dean of the department of education at Prairie View, Dr. Harrison is director of teacher training there.

Before going to Prairie View in 1932, Dr. Harrison held the following positions: professor and acting head of the department of education at Virginia Union university 1927-28; associate professor of education and director of elementary teacher training at West Virginia State college, Institute, W. Va. 1928-31.

Dr. Harrison is married and has two sons, G. Lamar Jr., and Richard Logan.

Dr. Harrison is a member of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

The Fine Record of J. W. Sanford

The removal of President J. W. Sanford, of Langston University, by the board of regents in their Sunday meeting is indeed unfortunate. Unquestionably, the school has advanced under his management and control. In addition to this he has, during tenure of office performed a modern miracle among Negroes. He has developed harmony and unity within the group.

It is an unusual thing when a president of a Negro college leaves office with an armful of recommendations coming from every organization laying claim to influence in Oklahoma. But such is the situation. These recommendations, starting with the State Teachers' Association, the alumni and carrying on through the religious, business and other important groups, have all been cast at President Sanford's feet. It is a fitting testimonial to a really great man, for after all leadership is vested in the ability to organize the people and maintain a following.

Out on the campus at Langston University peace has reigned for the past four years. The teachers, ground employees and faculty are all of one accord. They unite in giving honor to a man who has been fair and just in all his dealings.

Aside from this, state government has something in obligation. When President Sanford went to the institution he found the school's finances in disrepute. No credit could be obtained, and $40,000 in outstanding debts stared the administration in the face. During the past four years he has been at the institution President Sanford has transformed this deficit into a $20,000 surplus. If one can find a better administrator in any of the state institutions, regardless of race, the Black Dispatch would like to compare his record with the one related above.

Of course there has been a deal of talk about excessive gas bills obtaining at the school. It is true for many years the unusual consumption of gas in the mains at Langston has been the subject of much inquiry. When President Sanford went to the institution he early made a report to the state board of affairs, and Governor Marland, regarding this ugly situation, but nothing was done about it. The truth is President Sanford refused to pay these bills until forced to do so by court order.

Everyone knows that the state board of affairs is the purchasing agent for all our state schools. It would be foolish to say that President Sanford could have done more than he did in this matter. The record shows that Langston University uses more gas than any four state-owned institutions in Oklahoma. The folk, however, who make contracts, and permit them to remain in force, are the folk responsible for the outrageous, unreasonable gas bills at Langston University.

But the fact still remains that with this heavy burden on his shoulders, paying unjust debts and assuming obligations left by predecessors, President Sanford has been able to perform miracles such as narrated in "Arabian Nights". Over all of these difficulties he presents the new board of regents with a school out of debt and the institution's finances in excellent shape.

Someone has said, 'If you want to find out who a man is, give him power." As President Sanford steps down from his position of authority, there are thousands who will attest to the fact that elevation to high office did not change him from manners and ways he had when he walked among the crowd. Men in high position so often lose the common touch. J. W. Sanford comes out the same kindly, likable fellow he was when he went in. He numbers today, but reason of his conduct in high office, thousands of friends who realize that exalted position is the atmosphere in which his wonderful personality flowered.

Oust Politics From the Schools

This throwing of the race's young men and women to the political wolves is a most dastardly misuse of power. Between those whites who do it and those Negroes who ask it, the latter are the worse offenders and therefore must be the first to take the beam out of their eye.

In Missouri politics looted the state's Negro school until murder directed attention to the evils of it. Cannot the other states take heed? From the group standpoint it makes no difference wheth-

Tuskegee Sends Two Men To Oklahoma For Conference Regarding L. U. Presidency

E. W. Woods Turns Down Job After Telling Board Too Much Politics Honeycombs Setup

Moon Denies Appearing Before Regents

Six potential candidates for the presidency of Langston university passed in review before the Board of Regents of Oklahoma Colleges Wednesday night during a session of the board held in Room 408 Capitol Building. The regents were unable to arrive at a decision, although the session lasted past midnight.

Irving A. Derbigny, dean of administration at Tuskegee and Albert A. Turner, registrar, Tuskegee, were the out-state candidates whose credentials were studied by the board. The state instructors who appeared for conference were: F. D. Moon, principal of the Douglass high school, Wewoka, president of the Langston Alumni Association; E. W. Woods, principal of the Booker Washington high school, Tulsa; W. E. Sims, former professor at Langston university; Letchen A. Hill, superintendent of the city schools and mayor of Boley.

First news of the actual intention of the governor and the regents to select an out-state principal was disclosed in the Black Dispatch two weeks ago, when Albon L. Holsey, secretary of the National Negro Business League, told Governor Phillips just before he was leaving the platform at the Municipal Auditorium, when he welcomed the delegates on the opening night of the session, "One of your men was down looking for a president at Langston university."

"Who was he?" asked the governor.

"Some man named Crooks," said Holsey.

It was later learned that two of the board of regents went to Tuskegee on a scouting trip in connection with the presidency, and the arrival of Turner and Derbigny is the result of this trip.

It is known that the Tulsa principal, Woods, flat-footedly refused to consider the Langston post because of the political influences honeycombing the institution. He told the board of some of the ugly situations which faced President Sanford and stated that he would further not consider accept the presidency unless he was given the right to hire and fire members of his faculty without the interference which in the past has come from outside sources.

Woods spent an hour in the office of the Black Dispatch before going to the capitol. He said while in there, that he had received an invitation from Ellis C. Nantz, secretary of the board of regents, asking him to be present at 9 o'clock.

"I don't know what they want but I'll say now that I would not accept the presidency of Langston university unless the board dispensed with the idea of a business manager and allowed me to select my own faculty personnel."

F. D. Moon, principal of Douglass high school, Wewoka, when seen Wednesday night at 10 o'clock by a representative of the Black Dispatch, disclaimed having any knowledge of the meeting at the capitol. He said he had heard that the two Tuskegee men were here. Moon did appear before the board Monday night despite his assertions that he was not present.

W. E. Sims, former agricultural instructor at Langston university, was also heard regarding his qualifications. Sims has been an active candidate for several months, and is said to have the support of Senator Paul Stewart, Antlers.

Letchen A. Hill, the man who comes from the home county of Governor Jhillips, has been claiming to have the inside of the race for sometime. He was very active in Governor Phillips' campaign and is said to have much favor in the governor's eye. Hill's handicap seems to rest in the fact that if selected, the governor would have a Boley man in all of the key positions of the state.

Moon is a favorite of Senator Lewis Ritzhaupt, who, with the ousting of President Sanford, has taken full charge of affairs at Langston. It is said that his office in Guthrie is filled daily with those seeking positions in the institution, and that appointments are actually confirmed there. Moon, however, suffers in that he was not a supporter of Phillips.

Irving A. Derbigny, Ph. D., Columbia university, has also a batchelor's degree from Talladega college and an A. M. from Cornell. He is said to have high recommendations for the position.

Tuskegee Registrar Heads Oklahoma School

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 29.—(AP) —Gov. Phillips said today the Board of Regents for Oklahoma colleges had agreed on selection of Albert L. Turner, registrar of the Tuskegee, Ala., negro institute, as president of the Colored Agricultural and Normal University, Langston.

Naming New Prexy Brings On Strike

Allen University Students Dislike Way He Was Chosen

AND SHOW FIGHT

Columbia, S. C., March 30 (ANP)—Claiming that the presiding elders' council of the South Carolina AME church had no authority to elect a president, acting or otherwise, students of Allen University launched a strike Sunday that they declared would not end until Dr. E. F. G. Dent, successor to Dr. E. H McGill as president, was ousted or legally elected by the trustee board.

This student strike has thrown the AME church in this section into turmoil, with some trustees siding with the strikers and others with the presiding elders' council. Matters were made considerably worse Thursday when T. J. Miles, the chairman of the executive board, allegedly had six of the students arrested.

Dr. Dent, said to be an opponent of Dr. McGill, was named acting president March 8, just three days after Dr. McGill, ill for several days, was taken to Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore. The president underwent an operation March 9 and died March 13.

Beginning last Sunday morning, March 19, the majority of the student body refused to attend compulsory religious services in protest against Dr. Dent, and next day refused to go to classes. Members of the faculty and other persons were permitted to come and go at will, but students not in sympathy with the strike were not permitted to do so.

Dr. R. W. Mance of Columbia, a member of the trustee board, backed the demonstrators by quoting the original charter and amendments which has no clause permitting the board to vest the power of electing a president, acting or permanent, to any other group or individual.

Dr. Mance also said that Bishop J. S. Flipper of Atlanta, who presided over the presiding elders' council on March 8, was no longer eligible to act in affairs of the university except at a trustee meeting, since the charter stated that the chairman of any other board empowered to act for Allen must be a resident of South Carolina.

Another trustee, W. R. Bowman, said, however, that Bishop Flipper was unanimously appointed chancellor of Allen by the board of trustees, and this gives him the authority to appoint during any vacancy or vacancies any person on the faculty without the consent of any board connected with Allen."

"In the appointment of Dr. Dent as acting president, Bishop Flipper just exercised his authority," declared Mr. Bowman. "The presiding elders in their council meeting endorsed this appointment on motion of Dr. J. E. Thomas of Florence, and there is no doubt in my mind that when the trustess meet they will do the same."

John Middleton of Summerton, vice president of the student council and one of the strike leaders, said he was called before the faculty and questioned about the demonstration. He said that in answer to a direct queston from Dr. Dent, he replied that the students "are dissatisfied with the election of a man as president of an institution which represents the fine traditions which Allen represents, so soon after Dr. McGill's indisposition." He declared there was no objection to Mr. Dent's election before Dr. McGill died.

It was rumored here Friday as the strike entered its sixth day that C. G. Garrett, reputed "stormy petrel" of the AME church, was urging Dr. Dent to stick it out as president. The students stated they would remain away from classes "as a matter of principle" until Dr. Dent either resigned or was ousted by Bishop Flipper, or until the trustee board elected him legally as president.

Allen Students List Requirements For New School Head

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(By I. M. A. Myers for ANP)—The student council of Allen university has petitioned the alumni, bishop and trustees to elect a man of training and ... to head Allen, one of the ... colleges of the African Methodist ... church.

The ...ncy at Allen occurred in March on account of the death of Eugene Howard McGill. Dean T. B. O'Daniel is acting president. There are many candidates in the field, but the students ask for a monumental character as their "prexy."

The letter released from the student council sets forth the following requirements:

1. Our president should be a man who has a life expectancy of at least 25 years.

2. He should be a man ambitious only to advance humanity through the agency of education, in the school, and this by providing the best way of educational facilities for those who come under his supervision.

3. He should be a man who through training, character, personality and experience is able to hold his own whenever and wherever leading educators throughout the nation gather. He should always be endowed with the necessary social graces, that attract rather than repel.

4. He should be a man well schooled in the study of individual differences, recognizing that every young man and every young woman is a distinct personality with highly significant potentialities which it is the duty of the school to study and develop.

5. He should be a man of fluent speech, and of trenchant and facile pen; one whose literary life and contributions from time to time may react favorable toward the institution.

6. He should be a man of local, national and international outlook, thoroughly alive to the social and economic conditions at home and abroad; a man of civic leanings, believing in the equality of all citizens under the constitution of the United States.

7. He should, it goes without saying, be a member of the African Methodist Episcopal church.

Cole Blease Calls Allen Students Darkies, Baboons

Columbia, ... Cole Blease, former Governor and United States Senator visited Allen University on Wednesday and told the students, according to faculty members, "You darkies act like a pack of baboons."

C. G. Garrett and presiding Elder Myers are said to have called the insulting former Governor in to assist in straightening out matters anent the strike.

Fired At Allen; Dent Named Kittrell Prexy

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(ANP)—The Rev. E. F. G Dent, candidate for and for two weeks acting president of Allen university, was elected president of Kittrell college, Kittrell, N C., by the trustees of the North Carolina institution June 15, according to information given out here by Dr. C. G. Garrett Thursday.

Rev. Dent's appointment as acting president of Allen university before the death of the late President E. H. McGill is said to cause the student strike at Allen.

Allen trustees meet July 5 to elect a person to fill the office of president.

EDUCATION- 1939 TEXAS
COLLEGES -- CHANGE OF HEADS

Dr. Dogan, Wiley College Head, to Retire in 1941

MARSHALL, Texas, (ANP)— Dr. M. W. Dogan, president of Wiley college and for 43 years a leading figure in the field of education and racial uplift, will retire in 1941, it was learned here this week. On retirement, he plans writing a history of Negro education in the United States, it was stated. Dr. Dogan has developed Wiley from an humble beginning to its present position as one of the outstanding Negro colleges in America.

EDUCATION-1939
COMMON SCHOOLS, CONDITION OF

FAIRFIELD TO SEEK NEGRO SCHOOL SUM

Plans are under way for a request for an appropriation of $100,000 by the Works Progress Administration for the construction of a new building to replace the Fairfield Interurban Heights Negro High School in Fairfield which was destroyed by fire last August.

Dr. B. B. Baker, superintendent of Fairfield city schools in announcing the proposed building, said labor and funds for the work would be asked of the WPA while the city of Fairfield would take steps to furnish the materials. He said he had communicated with authorities in Washington and he hoped the proposed plans would be passed in the near future.

The building planned, he said would be entirely modern and constructed of brick. If and when the building is realized, he said, the serious lack of space for Negro school children in Fairfield would be alleviated.

TEACHERS OF NEGRO STUDENTS IN ALABAMA

Senator R M. (Renzo) Guy of Lowndes announced Thursday he would introduce a bill, probably next week, to make it unlawful for white persons to teach Negro schools in Alabama, and vice versa.

His measure, he said, would be sufficiently broad to apply to all schools, whether public, private or denominational. The bill, he explained, would provide that no white man or woman should be permitted to become a teacher in a Negro educational institution and to prohibit Negro teachers from being employed in white schools. — News item.

As there are no Negro teachers of white students in Alabama this proposed bill could apply only to the white teachers of Negro students.

The Advertiser hopes that Senator Guy will reconsider his intention to introduce his bill. If passed it could accomplish no good purpose, but the very agitation for its passage would be unwise and unfortunate and so would do harm rather than good.

For more than 100 years white educators have taught Negro students in Alabama and in every other State of the South, even as white ministers and lecturers have spoken to black audiences, as white political leaders have appealed to ALL the people, even as white editors have written editorials for the benefit of whites and blacks. White lawyers represent Negro clients, white physicians practice among them, white merchants, like Senator Guy, sell goods to Negroes.

The Senator from Lowndes has raised a highly prejudicial issue, and in The Advertiser's opinion for no sufficient reason. Don't do it, Senator!

Fairfield Looks Into Golden Future As Mills Sing Song Of Prosperity

Birmingham's Little Brother Wipes Off Depression Scars And Buckles Down To Life Of Work And Happiness

BY WILLIAM ENNIS
Birmingham News Staff Writer

FAIRFIELD, Ala.—Like all industrial towns, Fairfield, little brother of Birmingham in the industrial world, feels that the dirtier its face the better business conditions.

Smoke continues to pour over Fairfield's industrial horizon as it has been doing now for years, and as long as the smoke remains thick and black the situation is well taken care of.

Depression, that boogey man of industrial towns, has had its heyday in Fairfield—the lean days of 1929-33—and from all indications a big meal of crow is now being eaten by old man depression.

Always indicative of a city's business condition is the housing situation. For two or three years now there hasn't been a vacant house or apartment available and it appears there will have to be an extensive building program to take care of the serious deficit almost certain to develop with the employment of additional men at the steel mills.

Industrial production at the Fairfield mills of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company is at about 77 per cent of capacity, more than 20 per cent higher than the percentage realized from production three years ago.

In addition to getting back on its feet, Fairfield has been given an added boost with the building and completion of the $29,000,000 tin plate mill by the T. C. I., which went into operation in May, giving employment to approximately 2,500 men.

The future of tin plate operations is one of the brightest on the industrial horizon. And reports from Pittsburgh predict a 100 per cent capacity operation by Feb. 1.

The sheet mill, one of the main vertabraes of Fairfield's "backbone," has been operating on a capacity scale for several years and orders now on hand indicate the future will be just as bright as the past few years.

In the 1930 federal census Fairfield showed a total population of 11,059 persons, while in 1938 an unofficial tabulation in the health census showed the figure had jumped to approximately 13,000.

Scattered in and around Fairfield are 2,200 homes, all filled. In the business areas the outlook isn't quite so bright as only 65 per cent of the buildings are occupied.

Fairfield's school system, long considered one of the best in the state, has a total attendance of 1,200 white students and 1,600 Negro students. These figures, compared with two years ago, show a 5 per cent increase among the white students and a 10 per cent increase among the Negro students.

To alleviate the serious housing of Negro students—a problem caused last August when a fire destroyed the Interurban Heights Negro School—plans are being formulated to build a $100,000 building as soon as appropriations can be realized from the Works Progress Administration.

ALABAMA'S SYSTEM OF HIGHER EDUCATION

The time has come in Alabama to reopen the discussion of ways and means of unifying the State's system of higher education.

Many States already have faced the problem and have found a satisfactory method of unification and centralized direction. North Carolina is the most conspicuous example in the South. Georgia has what is called a University System, which embraces Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia. Emory and Agnes Scott in Atlanta have formulated a cooperative program, which has been blessed by the General Education Board with a grant of $2,500,000.

The Birmingham News thinks that a Birmingham university, built on the foundations of Howard and Birmingham-Southern, and perhaps also in cooperation with the Birmingham Conservatory of Music, the University of Alabama extension service in Birmingham, and the Birmingham School of Law, would benefit the whole State and attract the attention of foundations interested in education.

The General Education Board, supported by Rockefeller monies, is in the process of liquidation, and it is distributing its funds in cities where cooperative programs have been developed. The several institutions in Nashville, including Vanderbilt and Peabody, have combined their library facilities with the encouragement of a handsome gift from the General Education Board.

It is reported that the Board would like to see Birmingham organize a cooperative and coordinated system of higher education. "Atlanta," says The Birmingham News, "has been four years developing its plan for the university center. The work began with a survey designed to study the city's educational opportunities and needs. The plan has reached the point where there is already being put into effect arrangements for exchange of students and teachers in certain departments, for library exchanges, for cooperative buying, and coordination in summer school work."

It would seem that now is the opportune time for Birmingham to consider a reorganization. Howard's president has recently resigned, and the college is in need of new leadership. Birmingham-Southern has a new president who, from all accounts, has won the complete confidence and respect of all his associates. The President of the University of Alabama is interested in the development of higher education in the whole State.

The Anniston Star applauds the Birmingham idea—which apparently is just an idea—and urges again that there be fuller cooperation among all the State's colleges and universities. Duplications are costly: an engineering school, for example, is maintained at the University as well as at Auburn. The State supports too many teachers' colleges. There are denominational institutions competing with each other and struggling for existence. Then there are the Negro schools. Like other Southern States Alabama is too poor to afford waste, too much competition and over-lapping of educational programs.

It needs to concentrate on a few instead of wasting its money on the many. As Dr. Howard Odum has pointed out, the South "has no university or college of agriculture or engineering school of the first rank, and affords no advanced instruction of the highest order in many of the subjects now demanded in the newer developments in politics, business, agriculture, industry, land utilization."

Furthermore, in the South "the teaching load of faculty members is about a third heavier and salaries about a third less than for the best of the nation's colleges and universities. So, too, in terms of the highest degree less than fifty per cent of the faculties hold the doctor's degree compared with about 75 per cent of the corresponding schools elsewhere."

Those facts underscore the need for cooperation instead of conflict among Southern colleges and universities. The General Education Board has recognized the necessity for one or two first-rate Southern institutions, and therefore has appropriated millions of dollars for the benefit of Vanderbilt, the University of North Carolina and the institutions in New Orleans. It would look with favor upon cooperative efforts in Alabama, but probably would not be quick to give money to an isolated Alabama institution.

The whole trend of higher education is toward cooperation and coordination of facilities. In recent years Alabama has gone in the opposite direction. It is time for a change.

48,454 SCHOOL PUPILS IN CITY

Mid-Term Total Is Only Slightly Above That Of A Year Ago

Mid-term enrollment figures, released today by the Board of Education, reveal a current school population in Birmingham of 48,454 children.

This figure barely exceeds the total registration of 48,411 for the mid-year in 1938. White schools showed a 692 decline for February, 939, over 1938, while Negro schools registered an increase of 735 students.

Totals for 1939 show 30,641 white children, against 17,700 Negroes. White high school registration for 1939 stands at 9571, against 9265 for 1938. Negro high school registration shows 3035 for 1939 and 3316 for 1938.

White elementary schools have 20,378 enrollees for 1939, off 998 from the 1938 level. Negro grade school registration for 1939 stands at 14,870, an increase of 416 over the 1938 total.

Funds Remain Vital Problem For Education

More Than Century Of Growth, Development Reviewed

The tiny thread of State support for public schools established in 1819 through the proceeds of 16th section lands was broken in many counties through the loss of the proceeds of land sales in the bank crash of 1837. It was not materially strengthened until the turn of the century due to the War Between the States and reconstruction. In 1899, the State levied a one-mill ad valorem tax for public schools which amounted to about $250,000. This marked the first time in the State's history that a State tax was levied specifically for public education. It brought the total available school funds up to $916,059 in 1900. Since then, a feeling of State responsibility for education has steadily grown.

The constitution of 1901 required the levying of a three-mill ad valorem tax and a continuation of the poll tax and 16th section funds and authorized a one-mill county tax for schools. By 1908, the total funds available for elementary and high schools amounted to $2,367,662.

Financial provision for public education was achieved by the constitutional amendments of 1916 which authorized the levy, first of three mills of county taxes and then three mills of district taxes for schools. This brought public school current expenditures up to $9,276,826 in 1920-21, or an annual current expenditure of $23.97 per pupil in average daily attendance.

A forward step was taken in 1927 by the enactment of the unified educational program. The principle of equalization of educational opportunity, pleaded for by Legislator A. B. Meek, from Mobile, in 1854, and continuously advocated by others since that time, was given major emphasis by the creation of the State equalization fund. Rural elementary school terms were extended to seven months for the first time in the history of the State. By 1929-30, the State apportionment amounted to $7,666,544 for public schools and $3,372,362 for State colleges, or a total of $11,038,906. The annual current expenditures per pupil in average daily attendance for the longer school terms amounted to $37.10.

Depression's Losses

During the depression years, public education lost all the gains made by the fourth step. By 1933, State support tobogganed downward to $4,052,142 for public schools and $862,729 for colleges, a drop in total State support from $11,038,906 in 1930 to $4,914,871 in 1933. Teachers were placed first on starvation wages and then on relief salaries. White elementary school terms were less than three and a half months in 21 counties and averaged only 111 days for all white rural schools. Several State colleges were placed on probation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

However, the people of Alabama demanded that public education go forward and not backward. The 1935 Legislature recognized this fact and enacted the minimum program law. This law gave fuller recognition to the principle of equalization of educational opportunity than ever before and increased the State funds available to the public elementary and high schools from $6,000,000 in 1934-35 to $10,000,000 in 1936-37.

State payments to the institutions of higher learning increased from $1,000,000 in 1934-35 to $2,000,000 in 1936-37.

Local Revenues Drop

Although the elementary and high schools are now receiving more State funds than ever before in the history of the State, available local revenue has decreased approximately $3,000,000 annually since 1929-30, due largely to a reduction in property assessments. On the other hand, the average daily attendance of the elementary and high schools has continued to increase. Actually, the total current expenditure per pupil in average daily attendance now amounts to $32.18 as compared with $37.10 in 1929-30.

Despite all the previous advances made in the provision for educational opportunities in the State of Alabama, there still exists wide differences in the educational opportunities available to children in the several school units of Alabama. These differences cannot be eliminated without additional financial support.

Alabama should have a nine-month school term and the State has every right to expect Federal support to extend an eight-month minimum program to a nine-month enriched program. From 12 to 15 per cent of Alabama educated youths move to some other section of the country. The nation as a whole is a beneficiary of this surplus manpower and should bear its part of the educational expense. To do so would not be charity but an investment in the welfare of the nation, just as State expenditures are investments for the welfare of the State.

Secondary Education

The enrollment in the present graduating classes in the white public high schools of Alabama is more than 14,000. A hundred thousand boys and girls have been graduated from our high schools during the past 10 years.

A few years after the turn of the century, the movement for a system of high schools took definite form.

The State Legislature in 1907 enacted a law making provision for a county high school in each county with an annual appropriation of $2,000 for the operation of each school, contingent upon satisfactory site, buildings and facilities, to be provided by the community. What looks now like a small beginning at that time was an important advance toward the present system of high schools.

By 1910, there were 88 accredited high schools; by 1920, 149 schools; and by 1930, 328 public high schools were accredited by the State Department of Education. In 1920, the enrollment in the highest four grades was 33,842; in 1930, 61,054; in 1937 it was 73,237.

The public interest and demand for high schools was given expression in the State-wide educational survey of 1919. The reports showed the need, and called for a system of high schools for each county; it urged a reorganization of the school system on the "six-three-three" plan to replace the "seven-four" organization then in effect. Legislation making possible the changes in organization was enacted in 1919 when a Division of Secondary Education was created and a director placed in charge. Courses of study were remade and greatly liberalized; vocational courses were extended; teacher qualifications were gradually raised. During the early 1920's great strides were made in systems of rural high schools. The development of roads and school transportation made this possible.

More School Legislation

Further impetus was given to the high school movement by the school legislation of 1927 and of 1935. In every instance improvement and added facilities have been followed by unprecedented enrollments, resulting in over-crowding of buildings, inadequate equipment, and overtaxed transportation facilities. In 1936-37, the enrollment in the six high school grades in the public white schools of Alabama were 136,427 distributed as follows: seventh grade, 35,239; eighth grade 27,951; ninth grade, 24,577 (total 87,767); tenth grade, 20,589; eleventh grade, 16,034; twelfth grade, 12,037 (total senior high, 48,669).

As never before, the high schools are now faced with difficult problems from the standpoint of meeting the needs of their pupils and the needs of the State and communities which support them. The rapidity of social change in recent years and the persistence of ideas no longer applicable to reality have contributed to the difficulties. (Not that there is blame here more than in other institutions or phases of present day society. Business, government, medical service, and religion seem to be equally perplexed.) The problem is apparent in the figures of enrollment quoted above. In 1936-37, nearly twice as many pupils were enrolled in the junior high school grades (7, 8, 9) as in the senior high school. Almost exactly twice as may were in the sixth grade (40,022) as in the ninth grade, and twice as many in the ninth grade as in the twelfth grade. The gravity of the situation lies, not in the failure of pupils to finish a certain grade in school, but in the fact that the schools with their present limitations have not been able to meet the needs of these youths. Their needs are not comprehended in traditional concepts of education. They are the great mass who do not wish to specialize in classical education. They want and need training which deals directly with higher standards of living—which looks toward better homes, health, recreation, intelligence in public affairs, and adjustment to rapidly changing economic conditions.

Vocational Education

Congress in 1917 appropriated funds to be matched by the several States and territories and used for promoting a program of vocational education on a national basis. Several subsequent acts temporarily increasing the Federal allotments for vocational education have since been passed.

As a result of this legislation and State acts of acceptance, Alabama has made substantial progress in promoting programs of vocational education in agriculture, home economics, and trades and industries including public service training and distributive occupations.

The Trade and Industrial Vocational Education Service is reaching in an organized way more than 16,000 Alabama youths and adults. Boys and girls are being prepared to enter chosen occupations; adult men and women are being assisted in gaining promotion to better jobs, or in many cases where rapid technological advancements have occurred, to hold the jobs they already have; and public service employes are being trained for more efficient service.

Vocational agriculture education has naugurated and is carrying out a program designed to serve the needs of boys and adult farmers through high school, evening, and part-time instruction. Instruction is given in a decidedly practical way. It is carried out on the farms of the boys and adult farmers and is now reaching 12,974 of them. It consists in detailed farm planning with the view of making the best use of soils, crops and livestock. It is a type which instructs groups in protection of the soil from sheet, wind, and gully erosion, and forests from destruction by fire. It encourages an increase in the number of acres devoted to pasture; stresses proper balance of crops grown for sale, feed and food, providing for year round gardens and a variety of fruit for home consumption. It stresses the protection of farm implements, a better balance between livestock and crops, the landscaping of home surroundings, and the promotion of better farm management practices.

The Vocatioanl Home Economics Service of the vocational program, through its day schools and evening classes, is now reaching 18,216 people, who either are now or will shortly be engaged in the business of homemaking. Courses are given to organized groups in both rural and urban areas. As a result of homemaking instruction, many Alabama communities have better and more appropriately clothed families, better family health through improved sanitation and better and more adequate food supply the year round, better planned homes, more economic use of family income, beautified homes, better understanding of the farm and home as a unit, responsibilities of different members of the family for carrying out of family plan.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION, administered by the State Board of Education, is a program of training for adult crippled persons made possible under an act of Congress in 1920 which bears the name of Speaker William B. Bankhead. It is definitely both an economic and humanitarian program. It is intended for persons crippled in industry or otherwise many of whom but for the training and placement in employment would become burdens on public or private charity.

Since the passage of the national rehabilitation and State acceptance acts, 2,511 disabled persons have been completely rehabilitated and placed on jobs at a living wage. In addition, more than 5,000 crippled adults have received assistance which has enabled them to better themselves in an economic way.

The service of hospitalization and treatment followed by guidance and vocational training is rendered crippled children whose condition can be bettered physically. The features including guidance and training are carried on for that large number who can be only partially restored through hospitalization and treatment. It looks to their betterment in an economic way as they grow to manhood and womanhood.

Thirty district clinics are held by the service each year, and four permanent orthopedic centers manned by competent orthopedic surgeons are maintained. Treatment is given each year to between eleven and twelve hundred children. There are in excess of nine thousand crippled children in Alabama at the present time, with an estimated increase in excess of five hundred each year incident to birth, disease, and accident.

Curriculum

In the Fall of 1935, the State Department of Education launched a State-wide program for the improvement of instruction. Among the fundamental principles which guide the program are the following: (1) Education must improve the present day living of the pupils and of the community. (2) The only way to improve education is through the improvement of those who conduct the schools — superintendents, principals and teachers. This improvement has to do with the personalities, outlook, placed upon the fundamental skills, way to meet this requirement. This Not less, but much problem must be approached with ap- preciation of established values, but e made of books and sources. Greater emphasis is upon these skills and children and the obligation to society ans to better living are more sacred than outworn or out- moded ways of doing things.

The State curriculum program has passed through the earlier stages in many school systems.

The rapidity of social change in recent years and the persistence of ideas no longer applicable to reality have contributed to the difficulties. (Not that there is blame here more than in other institutions or phases of present day society. Business, government, medical service, and religion seem to be equally perplexed.) The problem is apparent in the figures of enrollment quoted above. In 1936-37, nearly twice as many pupils were enrolled in the junior high school grades (7, 8, 9) as in the senior high school grades. Almost exactly twice as may were in the sixth grade (40,022) as in the ninth grade, and twice as many in the ninth grade as in the twelfth grade. The gravity of the situation lies, not in the failure of pupils to finish a certain grade in school, but in the fact that the schools with their present limitations have not been able to meet the needs of these youths. Their needs are not comprehended in traditional concepts of education. They are the great mass who do not wish to specialize in classical education. They want and need training which deals directly with higher standards of living—which looks toward better homes, health, recreation, intelligence in public affairs, and adjustment to rapidly changing economic conditions.

Vocational Education

Congress in 1917 appropriated funds to be matched by the several States and territories and used for promoting a program of vocational education on a national basis. Several subsequent acts temporarily increasing the Federal allotments for vocational education have since been passed.

As a result of this legislation and State acts of acceptance, Alabama has made substantial progress in promoting programs of vocational education in agriculture, home economics, and trades and industries including public service training and distributive occupations.

The Trade and Industrial Vocational Education Service is reaching in an organized way more than 16,000 Alabama youths and adults. Boys and girls are being prepared to enter chosen occupations; adult men and women are being assisted in gaining promotion to better jobs, or in many cases where rapid technological advancements have occurred, to hold the jobs they already have; and public service employes are being trained for more efficient service.

Vocational agriculture education has inaugurated and is carrying out a program designed to serve the needs of boys and adult farmers through high school, evening, and part-time instruction. Instruction is given in a decidedly practical way. It is carried out on the farms of the boys and adult farmers and is now reaching 12,974 of them. It consists in detailed farm planning with the view of making the best use of soils, crops and livestock. It is a type which instructs groups in protection of the soil from sheet, wind, and gully erosion, and forests from destruction by fire. It encourages an increase in the number of acres devoted to pasture; stresses proper balance of crops grown for sale, feed and food, providing for year round gardens and a variety of fruit for home consumption. It stresses the protection of farm improvements, a better balance between livestock and crops, the landscaping of home surroundings, and the promotion of better farm management practices.

The Vocatioanl Home Economics Service of the vocational program, through its day schools and evening classes, is now reaching 18,216 people, who either are now or will shortly be engaged in the business of homemaking. Courses are given to organized groups in both rural and urban areas. As a result of homemaking instruction, many Alabama communities have better and more appropriately clothed families, better family health through improved sanitation and better and more adequate food supply the year round, better planned homes, more economic use of family income, beautified homes, better understanding of the farm and home as a unit, responsibilities of different members of the family for carrying out of family plan.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION, administered by the State Board of Education, is a program of training for adult crippled persons made possible under an act of Congress in 1920 which bears the name of Speaker William B. Bankhead. It is definitely both an economic and humanitarian program. It is intended for persons crippled in industry or otherwise many of whom but for the training and placement in employment would become burdens on public or private charity.

Since the passage of the national rehabilitation and State acceptance acts, 2,511 disabled persons have been completely rehabilitated and placed on jobs at a living wage. In addition, more than 5,000 crippled adults have received assistance which has enabled them to better themselves in an economic way.

The service of hospitalization and treatment followed by guidance and vocational training is rendered crippled children whose condition can be bettered physically. The features including guidance and training are carried on for that large number who can be only partially restored through hospitalization and treatment. It looks to their betterment in an economic way as they grow to manhood and womanhood.

Thirty district clinics are held by the service each year, and four permanent orthopedic centers manned by competent orthopedic surgeons are maintained. Treatment is given each year to between eleven and twelve hundred children. There are in excess of nine thousand crippled children in Alabama at the present time, with an estimated increase in excess of five hundred each year incident to birth, disease, and accident.

Curriculum

In the Fall of 1935, the State Department of Education launched a program for the improvement of instruction. Among the fundamental principles which guide the State-wide program are the following: (1) Education must improve the present day living of the pupils and of the community. (2) The only way to improve education is through the improvement of those who conduct the schools — superintendents, principals and teachers. This improvement has to do with the personalities, outlook, understandings, and attitudes of the professional workers. (3) The principle of democracy and of respect for personality calls for a human type of curriculum rather than one which is formal and bookish. Not less, but more emphasis is given to the fundamental skills, but much greater use is made of books and printed sources. Greater emphasis will be upon these skills as means to better living. Democracy demands that the program of instruction be adapted to the needs of the youth who it is designed to serve and whose contributions to society are sorely demanded. Traditional content will be made to serve as means to better living, are more sacred than outworn or out-moded ways of doing things.

The State curriculum program has passed through the earlier stages in many school systems.

Each administrative unit has entered formally into the program at such a time as it saw fit. Teachers in these programs have studied the best literature obtainable upon the improvement of teaching and curriculum; they have established improved professional libraries; group meetings have been held—large groups and small groups; committees have worked upon the production of study guides and bulletins at Summer schools; experiments have been made in hundreds of schools with improved practices; professional leadership has been developed; consultative services have been supplied by the institutions of higher education; regional conferences have been held and programs and practices of teacher-training in the colleges are being revised to meet the needs as they are seen in the light of present conditions.

During the school term of 1936-37, more than six thousand teachers in forty-five county and city systems were engaged in the program in organized capacity. The number of systems conducting programs has greatly increased during the present school year. The appeal of this State-wide cooperative effort to make education better has made a more nearly universal appeal to teachers than any professional movement in the State. It came at a time when many teachers and leaders were ready to move forward. It merely supplied plans and a degree of leadership for moving forward on a State-wide basis.

The curriculum development in Alabama has already received nation-wide recognition for the extent of the participation which it has enjoyed, for the results shown in improved instruction, and for the excellence of the printed materials which it has produced. Already it has justified itself, but curriculum development in Alabama is relatively in its beginning stage. It promises a better future for education in Alabama.

Negro Education

A third of the educational responsibility in Alabama is that of our Negro population. The Federal census of 1930 reported 944,834 Negroes who constituted 35.7 per cent of our population at that time. Our school census of 1936 enumerated 323,772 Negroes who constituted 36 per cent of the "school-age population" (ages 6-20) of the 890,627 educables reported at that time. Of the 683,603 pupils enrolled in our public schools in 1936-37, 230,982 or 33.6 per cent were Negro pupils. Appreciable progress can be reported in our service to this one-third of our population.

In 1900, only 47 per cent of the Negro school census was enrolled in school as compared to 71 per cent in 1937.

The Negro school enrollment is preponderantly in the elementary grades although the percentages of high school students has risen at a rapid rate. In 1917, less than one per cent of the 156,729 Negro pupils of the State were in the high school. In 1937, the high school enrollment had risen to 28,816 pupils representing 12.4 per cent of the total Negro school enrollment.

The increase of Negr enrollment has been f growth in the number of high schools and by the de ment of publicly-supported schools. In 1910, there were only two public and eleven private schools for Negro pupils offering the full high school course. By 1937, the number of such schools had increased to 89.

Rapid progress in provision of educational opportunity on the college level has been made in the past decadle. The first, and for many years the only opportunity for college training for Negroes in Alabama was at Talladega College. Only 45 students were enrolled in this institution as late as 1911. Today, more than 3,000 Negro students are pursuing college courses in two State supported and in seven privately supported institutions.

Professional Preparation

Marked progress has been made in the professional preparation of the Negro teachers. Twenty years ago, 70 per cent of the Negro teachers held the lowest type of examination cerificate. Today, less than 10 per cent hold this type of certificate while approximately one-third of them hold professional certificates representing at least one year of professional training beyond the high school level.

Notable progress has been made in the number of Negro teachers employed in the public schools. Twenty years ago, the 2,042 Negro teachers represented one teacher for every 76 Negro pupils enrolled. In 1937, we employed 5,103 Negro teachers, or one for every 45.2 pupils enrolled.

Particular progress has been made in lengthening of the school terms. In 1917, an average term of 104 days was reported. At the present time, every county may have the minimum term of seven months for the Negro schools but four counties do not yet levy all the district taxes necessary to qualify them for this seven months' minimum term.

Transportation for Negro pupils has gun to be provided within the present decade. In 1932, 1,064 Negro pupils were transported. This number had increased to more than 2,000 by 1937.

The expenditures of public funds for Negro public elementary and secondary schools increased from $1,344,000 in 1923 to $2,588,000 in 1937. The value of school buildings increased from $2,685,000 to $5,360,000.

Philanthropy's Help

Progress in Negro education in Alabama has been particularly stimulated by philanthropy. The Slate Fund has provided aid in the development of the county training schools. The Jeanes Fund has provided for the Jeanes teachers in the several counties. The General Education Board has provided the supervisory services through the State Department, has contributed generously to the expansion programs at the two higher institutions, has provided scholarships for the improvement of Negro college faculties, and has subsidized numerous special projects for the improvement of teachers and of instruction. The Rosenwald Fund has stimulated the construction of 407 Negro school buildings in Alabama for a pupil capacity at 40,410 at a total cost of $1,285,060, has contributed $60,000 to the building program at the two Negro state institutions, has made contributions in cash and books to Negro school libraries, has given fellowships to Negro teachers, has stimulated Negro health service and at the present time, is giving especial empahiss to the improvement of rural education.

With the progress, interest and increasing response given to Negro education during the past decade, Alabama faces the challenge to provide a more adequate educational service for this one-third of our school population particularly through replacement of the 1,652 privately-owned buildings with publicly-owned buildings, through more adequate professional preparation of the Negro teachers, through the employment of Negro teachers in sufficient numbers to provide a more reasonable pupil-teacher ratio, through the payment of more equitable salaries to Negro teachers, through an improved curriculum program, through the improvement in equipment and instructional facilities both for the elementary schools and for the high schools and through a more adequate financial support to the program of teacher-training, collegiate and technical training at the two Negro state institutions.

Standards and regulations for the training and certification of teachers in Alabama are prescribed by the State Board of Education and administered by the State Department of Education.

Teacher training and teacher certification are so closely related that they cannot be considered apart from each other. In Alabama, as in the other States, those services have developed slowly, dependently, and cooperatively. In the beginning their relationship was not fully recognized and, as a result, cooperation in their development was not close and effective. Only within a comparatively recent period has there been effective cooperation between training, cirtification and employment authorities and egencies.

Alabama was the first of the States of the South to enter upon a permanent policy of providing professional training for teachers at public expense when a normal school for whites was established at Florence in 1872. By 1907 normal schools had been established at Troy, Jacksonville, Livingston, and Daphne. Florence, Jacksonville, Livingston, and Troy became four-year colleges in 1928.

The University of Alabama, the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, and the Alabama College are approved by the State Board of Education for the training of both elementary and secondary teachers. All of the four-year denominational institutions are approved for the training of secondary teachers.

Provision is made also for the training of negro teachers, the Montgomery State Teachers College being the oldest and largest state-supported institution in the country devoted exclusively to the training of such teachers. It and the Tuskegee Institute are approved for the training of both elementary and high school teachers, while Talladega College and Miles Memorial College at Birmingham are approved for the latter.

Our first publicly-supported Summer school for the training of teachers was established at the State University in 1904 by legislative enactment. For many years all of the colleges, public, private, and denominational, both white and Negro, have conducted Summer sessions which are attended by thousands of teachers and prospective teachers. Most of the higher institutions also offer extension courses for the training of teachers.

Centralized System

Alabama was among the first of the States to adopt a centralized State system of teacher certification. Since the adoption of the State system in 1899, all State cerificates have been valid in all counties and cities.

From 1899 to 1915, all certificates were based upon State-wide examinations. From 1915 to 1937 inclusive, they were based upon both examinations and college credentials. Since 1937, they have been based only upon college credentials.

The issuance of elementary certificates on one year of college study was discontinued in 1936. All applicants who have not previously held certificates are required, for the lowest grade of elementary certificates issued, to have completed two years of study in a standard institution approved for the training of elementary teachers. No high school certificate is issued on less than graduation with a bachelor's degree from a standard institution approved for the training of secondary teachers.

Some boards of education now require of beginning elementary teachers that they shall hold certificates based as a minimum upon the completion of two years of college training, the lowest certificate now issued to those who have not taught five years or longer; some city boards require that beginning teachers, even in the elementary grades, shall hold certificates based upon the bachelor's degree. Not over twenty-five per cent of the teachers in an accredited high school may hold certificates based upon less than four years of college training, and none on less than three years of such training.

Teacher training, teacher certification, and teacher employing agencies are cooperating closely in an effort to improve the instruction offered in the schools of the State. This policy is in keeping with recommendations of students of education throughout the country. Alabama's educational advance has been due in large measure to this cooperative effort. After all, "As is the teacher, so is the school."

FSA Project Dedicates New School

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Feb. 10—Prairie Farms, a rural resettlement project of the Farm Security Administration for farmers of Macon County, dedicated its recently completed community center and school building today with addresses by members of the state board of education, farm security administration and members of the faculty of Tuskegee Institute.

Albert L. Turner, registrar, Tuskegee institute, made the principal address.

The Prairie Farms school building, modern in plan and equipment, was planned for the first six grades and an enrollment of 150. Because of the scarcity of good rural schools for the 8,000 children of school age in Macon county, the Prairie Farms school is already faced with the problem of teaching nine grades composed of 230 children.

Superintendent Riley said that inasmuch as only 5,000 of the 8,000 children are enrolled it is impossible to reduce the crowded conditions until more school buildings are provided.

Contracts For $240,000 School Building Program Given Approval By PWA

Final approval of contracts on Coffee County's school building projects was received by County Superintendent of Education A. C. Dunaway Sunday from the Public Works Administration, and work on the new buildings and additions will be started within the next week.

Bids on the eleven projects were received January 30th and after tabulations were completed it was found that Whaley Lumber Company of Troy was the low bidder. The contract price on the buildings is $240,000.00, and final approval was given by the Public Works Adminstration on February 24th. The contractor will have until September 7, 1939, to finish the buildings.

Included in this project, one of the largest ever launched in the county, will be the following:

A brick veneer Elementary-Junior High School at Mt. Pleasant, consisting of eleven class rooms and auditorium.

A brick veneer High School addition at Kinston, consisting of five class rooms and auditorium.

A brick veneer High School addition at New Brockton, consisting of five rooms and auditorium.

A brick Auditorium-Gymnasium at Enterprise.

A two-room brick veneer addition to the Goodman school.

A two-room brick veneer addition to the Zion Chapel School.

A four-room frame school at Bluff Springs.

A two-room and Auditorium frame addition to the Pine Level School.

A one-room and Auditorium frame addition to the Curtis School.

A two-room frame addition to the Damascus School.

A frame Auditorium Addition to the Elba Negro School.

Equipment for the buildings, a list of which was specified in the proposals, will also be furnished under the contract.

Formal approval of the contract and launching of the actual work will mean much to the county. Many carpenters and other laborers will be given employment during the next six months. It is estimated that more than one hundred thousand dollars will be spent for labor alone on the projects. Funds for the building program are made possible by a grant from the Public Works Administration, and other money received through a loan.

Whaley Lumber Company has been doing quite a bit of school building construction work in the county and at present has two projects—Fairview and Basin—nearing completion. Their work has been entirely satisfactory.

Thousands Attend Negro Field Day

T28

One of the largest groups to parade on the streets of Greenville in years was the Negro Field Day throng on last Friday morning. They came from schools all over the county, and several thousand were in the parade, which was led by Ed Cheatham, mounted on a horse.

One band was in the parade, but there were several drum majors, leading the various school units. The drum majors were costumed for the occasion, and they went through all the antics that band leaders usually stage.

A very noticeable fact about the parade was that the great majority of the girls were in home made uniforms of blue, trimmed in white. All the boys and girls were neatly dressed.

A Statement Of Basic Financial Need Of State's Public Schools

Editor's Note: The following is a statement by Dr. A. H. Collins, State superintendent of education, of the basic needs of public education in Alabama. Recommendations for the financing of an eight month minimum school term to carry out Gov. Dixon's pledge are expected to be made at the adjourned session of the Legislature, this Summer, by the joint recess committee on finance and taxation created by the two houses.

By A. H. COLLINS

The Minimum Program Law enacted in 1935 provides for the allocation of State funds to local school units in proportion to the difference between the educational need of a school system for a 7-months school term and the amount of local school funds available to that system from the levy of five mills of local taxes. This law authorizes the calculation of educational need or cost of a seven months' term as follows:

1. TEACHERS—The number of teachers allotted to a local school system is determined principally by the average daily attendance of that system. The salaries for those teachers are calculated by a uniform State schedule which provides for increases in teachers' salaries in portion to increases in training and experience.

2. TRANSPORTATION—The cost of transportation is calculated for all transported children who live more than two miles from school. Uniform unit costs are allowed in counties with similar conditions affecting transportation costs.

3. CURRENT EXPENSES—A uniform amount per teacher unit is allowed for other current expenses. The State Board of Education set that amount based on average expenditure during the depression years.

4. CAPITAL OUTLAY—Allotments for capital outlay are made for county school systems only on the basis of a uniform amount per teacher unit.

It is seen that the educational need of the State increased $1,588,141 during the first three years of operation of the Minimum Program Law, or $529,380 per year. An additional $500,000 will be needed for 1938-39. Alabama therefore lacks $2,000,000 annually of having sufficient funds to provide for the seven months' minimum school term as contemplated in the Minimum Program Act.

It will take an additional $2,000,000 annually to provide capital outlay for city school systems and to raise the minimum term from seven to eight months for the following reasons:

(a) It will require approximately $300,000 for capital outlay for city school systems.

(b) The monthly payroll for teachers' salaries, excluding vocational teachers according to the State salary schedule in 1937-38 was $1,515,000.

(c) The monthly cost of transportation in approximately $246,000.

(d) The sum of these three items is slightly more than $2,000,000.

Thus, it is seen that a total of $4,000,000 of additional funds are needed at once in order to supply the deficiencies in the seven months' program and to increase the State minimum term to eight months.

When the State appropriations are increased $4,000,000, the total State and local funds available for an eight months' program will amount to only $18,144,000. This amount of money will provide the following for an eight months' term:

	Full Allotment for '37-38	Reduced Allotment for '37-38	Reduction
(a) Teachers salaries	$10,606,596	$10,048,094	$ 558,502
(b) Transportation	1,722,957	1,481,550	241,407
(c) Vocational	183,967	183,967	0
(d) Other current expense	1,980,769	1,414,294	556,475
(e) Capital outlay	1,068,274	846,517	221,757
(f) Total	$15,562,563	$13,974,422	$1,588,141

(1) An average teacher's salary of $666.

(2) An average of $10 per child transported.

(3) $3.25 per child per year for other current expenses such as heat, light, water, insurance, maintenance of buildings, administration, etc.

(4) $2.18 per child per year for capital outlays for building and equipment and for debt service.

It is evident that the proposed expenditures for the eight months' program are a minimum. The only funds left available to all the school systems of the State in addition to those set out above are two mills of county taxes and the poll tax. These funds will be available for the extension of the high school term to nine months and to enrich the eight months' program as much as possible from the remainder, if any.

The State Board of Education also calculated this allotment on a depression basis and furthermore required this sum to cover debt service as well as capital outlay.

Thus, it is seen that the educational need or cost of a seven months' term in a school system increases as the average daily attendance of that system increases and as the teachers increase their training and experience. Therefore, if the educational need of a school system increases, the Minimum Program Law contemplates that the funds available to that school system be increased proportionately.

However, the State appropriation to the Minimum Program Fund in 1935 was fixed by law at the same amount for each year of the quadrennium beginning in 1935. Furthermore, the local taxes available for the support of schools have remained practically constant for each year of the quadrennium due to the fact that assessed valuations have not increased any appreciable amount.

On the other hand, the average daily attendance of the elementary schools has increased at the rate of 7,939 or 2.0 per cent per year and the average daily attendance of the high schools has been increasing 6,517 or 5.5 per cent per year. It costs practically twice as much per pupil to provide high schools as elementary schools and by far the greatest proportionate increase in attendance in Alabama have been in the high schools.

Teachers also have been increasing their training rapidly. During the past four years the percentage of white teachers with less than two years of college training has been decreased from 34 per cent to 17 per cent and the percentage of college graduates increased from 31 per cent to 43 per cent.

Below is a comparison of actual minimum program allotments for 1937-38, with amounts which should have been allotted:

Extension Of State Levy To Lower Pay Classes Is Proposed

LEGISLATIVE GROUP HEARS PROPOSALS

Alabama Teachers' Head Asserts $4,000,000 More Is Needed

BY A. F. MAHAN, JR.

TROY, Ala., April 13.—Belief the public would support an expansion of Alabama's income taxes to cover lower salary brackets was expressed by a group of downstate school superintendents who called upon the Legislature's committee on education and highways Thursday for more revenue.

Representative Charles Weston, of Barbour County, asked at least half a dozen superintendents if they favored or believed the public would approve a widening of income brackets as a means of producing more funds for schools.

Later he told news men he proposed to offer measures in the Summer session of the Legislature to accomplish this end.

Income taxes now are pledged to retirement of a $17,000,000 bond issue floated in 1933 to place the state on a cash operating basis while the maximum tax is fixed by the constitution, rates for the various salaried groups are fixed by legislation.

E. B. Norton, Covington County superintendent and president of the Alabama Education Association, said he believed an additional $4,000,000 in revenue is needed for an eight-month term under the minimum act.

Ed E. Reid, executive secretary of the State League of Municipalities, said that organization's legislative committee had determined after a survey, approximately $4,000,000 would be required.

Gov. Frank M. Dixon has termed the $4,000,000 estimate excessive, and has predicted another month could be added to terms through economical executive administration and through the appropriation of approximately $1,750,000.

Without exception, all educators appearing at the committee hearing asserted more state aid would be required next year, and most of them criticized what some termed "disgracefully low" teacher salaries.

An expansion of capital outlay for city systems was requested particularly by Reid and superintendents representing municipalities.

Thursday's committee hearing opened a stae-wide tour, which will carry the committee into all sections of the state within the next three weeks. Members will go to Monroeville Friday and to Mobile for the week end.

State Supt. A. H. Collins presented the educational spokesmen, and told the committee at one point the prospects for federal aid for public schools was "not as bright as it was a few months ago."

National Average Cited

Even if the state were to get the federal assistance advocated in pending legislation, and $4,000,000 from the state, Collins asserted "we still would be far short of the national average."

Most county and city educators said more teachers are needed, particularly in the Negro schools, which were described generally as ill-housed and understaffed.

Norton, among others, advocated that the state's fiscal year be changed, so as to begin July 1 instead of Oct. 1. Speakers said this would afford revenue before schools opened in September, whereas state income now was not received until around Nov. 1 or later.

Representative Weston skipped few speakers with his questions or whether they favored a lowering of income tax brackets or believed the public would support such action.

J. T. Allbritton, Geneva County superintendent, told the Barbour legislators he believed the public would support it and "personally I would."

"If your Houston County legislative delegation voted to reduce income brackets, could they be re-elected?" Weston asked Solomon Baxter.

Superintendents Okeh Plan

"I don't know," Baxter answered, "but I don't believe it would make much difference.

P. W. Lett, Dale superintendent, said he favored the income tax change, and H. J. Bodiford, Henry school executive, said he "certainly" advocated the plan and wanted "to pay it—cut it down to around $1,500 to $1,800."

H. N. Lee, Opp superintendent, expressed beliefe "it would be wise," adding "too many of us are living off the fat of the land without paying it."

Most speakers contended local communities were contributing as much as financially possible to education, and Reid expressed belief cities would eventually be forced, because of relief burdens and other expenses, to cease appropriations to "piece out terms."

Bodiford said Henry County, if it supplied needs through local taxes, would have to raise its rate from 7 to 52 mills.

Charge Is Made

A charge that there was a "cross between the governor's platform and legislative proposals to date" was made Thursday before the recess committee.

The charge was made by Senator Tim Faulk, of Geneva, who came here for a committee hearing at State Teachers College, first stop on a tour that will carry the recess group into all sections of Alabama during the next three weeks.

Faulk's appearance before the committee was brief, but Gov. Frank M. Dixon's legislative program received additional mention when Senator Renzo Guy, of Lowndes, asked Supt. A. C. Dunaway, of Coffee County:

"Do you know whether the people would rather have one more cent on the sales tax, or have the equalization boards raise their property taxes?"

Guy, who opposed an administration bill substituting appointive tax equalization boards for County Boards of Review, asked this question after Dunaway had expressed belief the "equalization" plan would aid the schools but added that Coffee County's property taxes amounted to only about $38,000 annually, "or approximately enough to pay the teachers for two months."

Divided Sentiment Likely

The superintendent answered that sentiment on the question likely would be divided. He made no specific recommendation for raising additional school money.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, presented the school officials appearing Thursday. Ed E. Reid, secretary of the Alabama League of Municipalities, was present.

M. K. Johnson, Bullock superintendent, told the committee 32 more Negro teachers and additional funds for Negro schools were sorely needed in his county.

Eighty-two percent of Bullock's population is Negro, and each teacher now has an average of 51 students, Johnson said.

E. S. Pugh, Union Springs superintendent, said a greater state apportionment for operating expenses was needed.

E. B. Norton, Covington superintendent and president of the Alabama Education Association, was among those appearing. Norton pointed out to newsmen the area already was on record as requesting $4,000,000 additional revenue annually for an eight, instead of seven, months minimum school term; a teacher retirement program, and legislation to provide state aid for capital outlay expenditures made by cities.

Later Thursday the subcommittee on highways, headed by Senator Guy, met with city and county officials of the area to discuss road needs.

Report On Colored Schools

(By Ruby Ballard, Supervisor)

The Negro schools have worked hard trying to accomplish the several objectives chosen for the year. One was to make each school more healthy, comfortable and attractive. To accomplish this aim four steel privies have been built; buildings have been repaired to insure a maximum amount of safety, light and comfortable; shrubbery was planted and painting projects were started at three schools.

To reduce retardation in the primary grades each school at the beginning of the term enrolled each child of school age, better average daily attendance was stimulated by better prepared and more interesting classroom work; teachers were helped in this effort through monthly group teachers meetings.

An attempt was made to bring the schools and communties closer together through the twenty active P. T. A.'s of the twenty-two schools of the system; through Caroling in the communities during the Christmas season and by "Community Nights" during the year.

Of the twenty-eight Negro teachers employed four are holders of B. S. degrees, eleven have completed two years or more of college work and of the others who have not completed at least two years of college work only several are not making plans to study this summer.

Among the special features for the year was the Play Day Program, the week's stay of the Booker T. Washington Movable School with its staff of a nurse, home demonstration agent and farm agent who helped the farm families greatly with their demonstrations, the county Songfeast of which Midland City School is the winner and the observation of National Negro Health Week in which the county Health Department assisted by giving vacinations and toxoids to approximately four hundred and fifty children.

The Negro schools are planning the completion of several school improvement projects during the summer, the largest being the building of a school at Midland City. The Jeanes Teacher of the County will be pleased to receive books that might be contributed to the library for county schools at any time.

New Colored School Under Construction

Construction was started last week on the new school building for Negroes, on East Jackson Street adjoining the present school building. This is a NYA project, sponsored by the City of Demopolis, and when completed next fall will relieve the Demopolis school system of the crowded conditions now experienced.

The National Youth Administration furnishes all labor and a small part of the materials used in the project, and the City of Demopolis furnishes the largest part of the materials. The total cost of the building is estimated to be in the neighborhood of $11,000, with more than 50 per cent of this charged to materials.

The building will be of brick veneer, with an asphalt roof. It is to be 150 by 70 feet, and will have six classrooms, an office and a rest room. It faces South on Jackson Street. Mr. Bob Lipscomb is foreman of the project and expects to have the building completed by October 1.

Alabama's Rural White Teachers

Foreword

In the fall of 1936, questionnaires were sent to some 1,950 rural white teachers in 15 counties chosen as representative of the different sections of the state. (Communities with less than 2,500 population were considered rural.)

The total number of replies which were usable (questionnaires of teachers who were not in the counties during the school year 1935-36 were discarded) was 526. Of these, 368 came from elementary schools; 53 came from junior high schools; and 105 came from senior high schools. These returns represent 37 per cent of the white teachers who were teaching in these counties in 1935-36.

The representative character of the returns was determined by a three-way comparison with all the teachers in the counties. These comparisons, which were based on the distribution as to salary, sex, and size of schools, indicate a high degree of reliability in the data included in this study.

Introduction

Approximately three-fourths of the school population of Alabama is rural—that is, in the open country or in communities of fewer than 2,500 population. This fact indicates the importance of rural teaching in the State's educational task.

The rural-to-urban shifting of population makes the quality of instructor in rural schools no less important to city dwellers than to those who remain in small towns or on farms. The status of rural teachers, then, should be of concern to all persons who are interested in improving the social, cultural, and economic life of the communities in which they live.

The efficiency of the public schools depends in large measure on the morale and efficiency of the teachers, whose aspirations for a better, richer, and happier life will be greatly influenced by the economic conditions under which they work and live. The profession of education may well give even more careful consideration than in the past to the economic conditions and problems of its members and to ways of getting citizens to do the same.

"Only as the public comes to understand more fully the economic status of rural teaching can the workers in this important field hope for significant improvement. Persons entering the field are not likely to regard it as a permanent profession worthy of their best efforts unless they can see in it a chance to earn a reasonable wage and maintain an adequate standard of living."

Rural teachers comprise 70 per cent of the total number of teachers in Alabama.

Seven out of every 10 of these rural teachers are in elementary schools. High Schools employ less than half as many teachers, since many children never reach the high schools.

Six out of every 10 of the rural teachers are in schools located in the open country where the school is the unifying agency of the community. Thus the major school problem in Alabama is that of rural education.

Six out of every 10 of the rural teachers are in schools of seven or more teachers. This indicates the progress which Alabama has already made in organization for equalizing educational opportunity through consolidation.

5 per cent had 1 year or less of college training.
43 per cent had 2 years of college training.
17 per cent had 3 years of college training.
30 per cent had 4 years of college training.
5 per cent had 5 years or more of college training.

Seven out of every 20 of the teachers held a degree representing four or more years of college training. One out of every 20 had done graduate work. More than half of all the teachers had finished three years of college work. Nineteen out of every 20 had finished two or more years of college work.

Better trained teachers are attracted to urban schools by more financial security. As a result, in rural schools where instructional materials are often scarce and handicaps of teaching are many, the average teacher has less preparation for the task than the teacher under more favorable urban conditions.

10 per cent had never taught before.
19 per cent had taught for two or three years.
19 per cent had taught for four or five years.
52 per cent had taught for six or more years.

30 per cent were in the present position for the first year.
33 per cent had been there for two or three years.
15 per cent had been there for four or five years.
22 per cent had been there for six or more years.

One out of every 10 teachers was inexperienced, and three out of every 10 were in the present position for the first year. Seventy-eight per cent of the teachers had changed positions within the last five years.

Higher efficiency in Alabama's rural schools demands the retention of good teachers through longer years of continuous service.

19.4 per cent of the teachers are men.

41.2 per cent are single.
58.8 per cent are married.

80.6 per cent of the teachers are women.
71.2 per cent are single.
28.8 per cent are married.

65.4 per cent of the teachers are single.
12.2 per cent are men.
87.8 per cent are women..

34.6 per cent of the teachers are married.
33.0 per cent are men.
67.0 per cent are women.

Men have not been attracted to teaching because of the low salaries offered. Thus the responsibility of educating the future citizens of the State has been left largely to women, most of whom are single and are dependent in part upon parents for support.

Three-fourths of the Elementary School teachers received less than $580 last year. One-half received less than $462 per year. One-fourth received less than $389 per year.

Three-fourths of the Junior High School teachers received less than $705 per year. One-half received less than $574 per year. One-fourth received less than $465 per year.

Three-fourths of the Senior High School teachers received less than $936 per year. One-half received less than $773 per year. One-fourth received less than $632 per year.

Three-fourths of all the teachers received less than $676 per year. One-half of all teacehrs received less than $500 per year. One-fourth of all teachers received less than $415 per year.

The salary offered is an influential factor in determining not only the quality of the persons who will be attracted to teaching, but also the length of time that a person remains in a given position, and in the profession.

Not Self-Sustaining

Of every 10 teachers, three received donations from parents or relatives, the average donation being $136, or one-fourth as much as the teaching salary of the average teacher.

Of every 100 teachers, 28 supplemented their income from business. One-third of these received money from investments, the average receipt being $85. Two-thirds actually engaged themselves in other occupations, the average earning being $93.

One-third of all the teachers made withdrawals from savings, the average withdrawal amounting to $123, or about one-fourth as much as the teaching salary of the average teacher.

Twenty-three per cent of all the teachers borrowed money during the year, the average loan being $110, or almost one-fourth as much as the teaching salary of the average teacher.

Teaching is a challenge worthy of the full time and effort of any person engaging in it. The public may expect higher efficiency in its teachers only when teaching is a full-time profession and offers economic security.—Bureau of Education Service, A. P. I., Auburn.

NEGRO SCHOOL IN TUSCUMBIA NOW FINISHED

PWA Inspector Expected To Give Final Okeh On Wednesday

Final detail in completion of Tuscumbia's new negro school, is expected to be consummated Wednesday, when an inspector of the Atlanta office of the Public Work's Administration, is due to be in the city for final check, R. E. Thompson, city superintendent, said today.

H. A. Griffith, Jr., architect on the building, made his inspection last week, it was said, and final acceptance of the building pends only th PWA inspector's approval.

The new school is of 12 rooms with a spacious auditorium, of brick construction, and the cost approximately $40,000.

It had been hoped that the school would be completed in time for commencement exercises to be held at the new auditorium, but since inspection has not been made, negro students held their year-end exercises at the old school Monday evening.

Over 1,000 Attend Waugh Graduation

More than 1,000 persons Friday attended the 51st annual commencement exercises of the Montgomery County Training School at Waugh and heard Prof. W. A. Clark, director of school education at Tuskegee Institute, urge the 445 graduates to use the knowledge and training acquired there as a basis for meeting life's problems calmly and sensibly.

Professor Clark said that persons with high school or higher education should aid those less fortunate by setting an example in proper living and that, in addition, they should be able to note their own weaknesses and adjust them, one by one.

Among the requisites for proper living, he said, were: formation of good basic habits, honesty, self-control, truthfulness, simplicity, and consultation with older persons, or those in authority, on the subjects of home-making, marriage and religion. He urged, especially, a reverence for God.

Dr. C. M. Dannelly, county superintendent of education, reported that excellent progress was being made for adequate education of negroes in this State and that, in this county alone 11 new school buildings had been erected.

The awarding of diplomas, or certificates, was under direction of E. J. O'Neal, principal, and Johnson S. Coprich, assistant principal. The exercises followed a series of graduation events. The commencement sermon was one of these, it having been delivered by Dr. Joseph W. Nicholson, director of the School of Religion, Talladega County. His topic was, "The Place of Common Sense in One's Everyday Life."

ROSEDALE NEGRO SCHOOL BURNS—The fourth school fire in the district in a six-year period and the second fire in this particular building occurred last night when a blaze of undetermined origin swept through the Negro School Building in Rosedale. The Homewood and Birmingham Fire Departments took part in fighting the early morning blaze, which, firemen said, appeared to have started on the second floor of the building and ate its way through the roof. The building, a large frame structure, suffered a fire about four years ago.

ducation Expense Low In Gadsden

Expenditures Per Child Here Below Those In Other Cities, Superintendent Says

It costs less to educate a child in the Gadsden public schools than in those of other Alabama cities and less than in the rural schools of the state, according to Superintendent C. A. Donehoo's report to the board of education. The unit of cost in Gadsden compared with the average of all cities of its class in the United States shows a considerable handicap, Mr. Donehoo says, for the average expenditure per pupil in cities of its class throughout the country are about three times that of Gadsden.

Mr. Donehoo's analysis of his financial report for the last year, a part of which was published in The Times last Sunday, follows:

"It will be observed that during the past two years the schools have expended more than was received. In 1937-38 our expenditures exceeded our receipts by about $8,600 and in 1938-39 the excess expenditures were about $12,000. During the two-year period our expenditures exceeded our receipts by about $20,000. The 1938-39 school year was closed with a small deficit of $3,337.71. Three years ago we had a favorable balance of $35,000, which had been accumulated over several years of careful and conservative operation of the schools. Such a balance was assurance that the schools would remain open nine months. The uncertainty regarding state funds made the protection of that reserve fund extremely important. The only part of the reserve fund we now have left is a paper reserve of $15,000, represented by a three weeks' advance payment on teachers' salaries. This reserve becomes less than $12,000 after subtracting the deficit. The schools have been piloted through several years of extreme financial distress. The demands on the schools in the past for improved services could not be met financially. There is not much prospect of meeting these demands in the future unless there is an extremely large increase in available finances.

"There is a table of comparative unit cost per pupil which tells more adequately than words the tremendous financial problem with which the Gadsden schools have been faced. The last year for which figures are available on a statewide basis shows that Gadsden was spending far less per white pupil than the average for Alabama cities. But more surprising is the fact that she actually was spending less per pupil than the rural schools. Gadsden was spending about the same amount for negroes as the average of other Alabama cities. It is not necessary, therefore, to give much attention to expenditures for negroes.

"In 1937-38 Gadsden spent $28.74 per pupil enrolled compared with $44.16 for other Alabama cities and $33.53 for Alabama counties. This is amazing when we consider that rural schools could not operate beyond seven months for elementary schools by expending $33.53 per pupil, whereas Gadsden kept her schools open nine months on $28.74 per pupil. The difference in cost per pupil is $4.79. If we apply this to the 6,482 white pupils enrolled we obtain $31,048. In other words, Gadsden would have had to increase her expenditures by $31,048 per year to equal the average cost of educating the same number of rural children. It must also be remembered that the rural child was receiving only a seven months' education while Gadsden was keeping its schools open nine months.

"When we compare the unit costs in Gadsden with other Alabama cities we find a still greater difference. The cost in the average Alabama city in 1937-38 was $44.16 per enrolled pupil. The cost in Gadsden was $28.74, a difference of $15.42. If we apply this to 6,482 white pupils we obtain $99,952. We would thus need to increase our annual expenditures by $99,952 to bring the per pupil expenditure to an average with other cities. Gadsden schools are apparently faced with an annual handicap of $100,000 as compared with other Alabama cities. These figures appear so large as to seem unreal but I think any competent investigator will find the same facts. If we compare the unit cost in Gadsden with the average for all cities of its class in the United States we find a still greater handicap. The average expenditure for cities in the United States in Gadsden's class is $77 per year. The average city in the United States will spend three times as much per pupil as Gadsden.

"Last year, 1938-39, it was necessary to provide for an increase in enrollment of 430 pupils with practically the same amount of revenue. This has been typical in Gadsden for the past several years. The city schools have been faced with a heavy increase in enrollment with available finances remaining the same from year to year."

A School Man Takes Us To Task

Elsewhere on this page there is printed a letter from H. E. Williams, superintendent of education for Lauderdale County. Although we regard some statements in the letter as rather unfair and as decidedly misinterpretive of this newspaper's position, we are glad to print the letter, although it violates our usual rules as to length, because of the statewide interest in its subject. We also welcome the opportunity to restate this paper's position on certain phases of the state educational program.

This newspaper is heartily in favor of the state school minimum program. We are in cordial sympathy with the general principle that the wealthier counties should assist in maintaining a minimum school program in the poorer counties. We have never advocated, and it is preposterous to charge that we have ever advocated, taking money from the poorer counties in order that Jefferson County and Birmingham might have good school systems.

The so-called richer counties have an unmistakable obligation to help the so-called poorer counties. A part of the former's wealth comes from the latter, and a part of it should go back there. The richer counties have a selfish interest, if nothing more, in seeing that all children of the state receive a minimum education.

This newspaper concurs heartily in the belief that wealth in the state wherever found should be taxed for the education of school children wherever found, and that taxes on wealth should be distributed on an equalization basis. Any inference that this newspaper is in favor of taking money from the school children of Blount, Winston, Lamar and other poor counties to help educate Jefferson's children is the rankest sort of misinterpretation of what we have said repeatedly.

However, while we believe in the equalization principle, we also believe that other principle set forth by the State Department of Education in its narrative report for 1935-36:

"NO SCHOOL SYSTEM IN THE STATE SHOULD BE TORN DOWN IN ORDER TO BUILD UP ANY OTHER SYSTEM. IN OTHER WORDS, THE STATE SHOULD LEVEL UPWARD, NEVER DOWNWARD."

That was a statement of principle adopted with the State Minimum Program Law in mind. That principle has our most enthusiastic support. And it is because we believe that principle has been violated that we criticise the Minimum Program Law. We believe that the law itself and as it is being administered has tended to level downward the school system of Birmingham and of other city systems in the state that have tried to improve their standard at great sacrifice.

We believe, specifically, that the Minimum Program Law is unfair in not giving city systems a capital outlay allowance for new buildings, new equipment and debt service. The Alabama Education Association has recognized that unfairness, as Prof. Williams points out. It stands to reason that where the operation of a law reveals one unfairness that a possibility exists of there being other ways in which the law is unfair. That concession we think only honest and just.

However, except for the one point of capital outlay allowance, this newspaper does not see any grave error in the law. And we certainly stand for the principle of the law.

In the administration of the law, however, this paper believes unfair methods have been unintentionally adopted. There are several illustrations of this fact, but we cite only one. For that illustration we quote from a report of a citizens committee appointed last year to consider Birmingham's school situation:

"The allowance for teachers' salaries under the law is determined by the State Department of Education based upon calculations regarded as typical for the state. The salary scale is substantially lower than salaries paid in Birmingham. The number of white teachers allowed per given number of students is less than those actually teaching in Birmingham. For 1937-38, the State Department allowed Birmingham 986 white teachers, as against 1,069 on the payroll. . . . The State Department also allows fewer teachers in the upper rank higher salary brackets than the Birmingham board actually has. For 1937-38 the actual rank of no fewer than 505 teachers was disregarded in the computation. This means that in applying the formula to determine what Birmingham is entitled to from the Minimum Program Fund, Birmingham is allowed much less for teachers' salaries than her actual payroll. The Birmingham board estimates that it lost $108,780 in revenue from the Minimum Program Fund in 1936-37, and . . . $114,555 from that source in 1937-38, due to this write-down in allowed ranks, numbers, and scale of compensation of teachers."

The argument might be put up in answer to this point that Birmingham pays its teachers too much, all things considered. That is an argument hard to prove. The research bulletin of the National Education Association indicates that Birmingham teachers are not overpaid. Figures for the 1936-37 session for the 19 Southern cities of more than 100,000 population give an average salary for white high school teachers of $1,736. The Birmingham pay that year was less than the average, $1,716. For white elementary school teachers in the same cities that year, the average was $1,386, with Birmingham slightly above the average at $1,483. Birmingham was well below the average for Negro teachers, both high school and elementary.

Some other facts should be considered in connection with that point that Birmingham schools are expensive and out of line. Among American cities having a population of 100,000 or more, current expenses per pupil in average daily attendance in Birmingham in 1935-36 were $46.90 per school year, or third to lowest in the list. Administrative cost of the Birmingham schools in that year was 3.1 per cent of the total, against a national average of 3.2.

HEARING HELD IN MONROE BY RECESS GROUP

Session In Southern Part Of State Brings Pleas For Taxes Hike

By A. F. MAHAN, JR.

MONROEVILLE, Ala., April 14—(AP)—The Alabama legislature's committee on education and highways came here today for conferences with school authorities from six southern counties, after having heard pleas at Troy for more funds and a suggestion that income tax brackets be expanded to cover lower salaries as a means of raising the revenue.

City and county school officials from Choctaw, Clarke, Monroe, Wilcox, Butler and Escambia counties were to appear today. The committeemen will go to Mobile for the week-end, Rep. L. E. Brown, chairman, announced.

Half a dozen educators told the committee, which opened a statewide tour at Troy, they believed the public would support widening of income tax brackets to produce more school cash. Some expressed a personal favor for it.

Rep. Charles Weston, of Barbour County, asked repeatedly if various speakers thought the public would support a lowering of income tax brackets and whether they favored this procedure.

Later he told newsmen he proposed to introduce legislation to accomplish this after the law-makers reconvene for a summer session, July 18.

Income taxes now are pledged to retirement of a $17,000,000 bond issue floated in 1933 to place the state on a cash operating basis, and legal authorities repeatedly have expressed the opinion a constitutional amendment would be necessary to divert any revenues to school purposes, although collections exceeded bond requirements by approximately $1,500,000 last year.

The maximum tax is fixed by the constitution, although rates are scaled for the various salary classifications by the legislature.

Under present laws single persons are exempt to $1,500 and married persons to $3,000, with $300 additional exemption for each dependent. Rates range from 1 1-2 per cent on the first $1,000 of taxable income to 5 per cent (the maximum) on all above $5,000.

E. B. Norton, Covington County superintendent and president of the Alabame Education Association, said he believed an additional $4,000,000 in revenue was needed for an eight-month term under the minimum program act.

Ed E. Reid, executive secretary of the State League of Municipalities, said that organization's legislative committee had determined approximately $4,000,000 would be required, and he requested cities be given $375,000 for capital outlay.

Governor Frank M. Dixon has termed the $4,000,000 estimate excessive, and has predicted another month could be added to terms by an economical executive administration and through the appropriation of approximately $1,750,000.

Without exception, all educators appearing at the Troy hearing declared more state aid would be required next year, and most of them criticized what they termed "Disgracefully low" salaries of teachers.

State Superintendent A. H. Collins presented the school spokesmen, and told the committee at one point the prospects for federal aid for public schools was "not as bright as it was a few months ago."

Even if the state were to get the federal assistance advocated in pending legislation and $4,000,000 from the state, Collins asserted "we still would be far short of the national average."

Most southeastern educators said more teachers were needed, particularly in the negro schools, which were described generally as ill housed and understaffed.

Norton, among others, advocated the state's fiscal year be changed so as to begin July 1 instead of Oct. 1 Speakers said this would afford revenue before schools opened in September.

Representative Weston questioned several speakers on whether they favored a lowering of income tax brackets or believed the public would support such action.

J. T. Albritton, Geneva County superintendent, told the Barbour legislator he believed the public would support it, "and personally I would."

37,563 PUPILS TO BE TURNED LOOSE

Outlook For Next Year Points To Shorter Session; More Funds Needed

For the fourth consecutive year Jefferson County school doors will close Thursday at the end of an eight-month term, releasing approximately 37,563 pupils for a four-month vacation.

Only three schools, financed by private subscription, will remain open a full nine-month term—Shades-Cahaba High School, Overton School and Mountain Brook School.

The present outlook presages an even earlier closure in 1939-40, according to figures compiled by Dr. J. E. Bryan, county superintendent. Dr. Bryan estimates county schools will have funds to run only about six and one-quarter months in 1939-40, with approximately $360,000 needed to finance a full term.

Two actions taken by the County Board of Education and an appropriation made possible by the Hildreth bill prolonged schools for only seven months. The board exchanged $52,000 in warrants due this year and borrowed $90,000 on anticipated revenue. Approximately $38,000 came to county schools as a pro rata share in the $781,358 payment made public schools from income tax surpluses under the Hildreth bill.

1,002 To Get Diplomas

About 1,002 seniors, both white and Negro, will be graduated from high schools in the county during the coming week. The proportion is 808 white and 194 Negro.

Graduating from the sixth grade, or elementary schools, will be a total of 3,133 — of which 2,047 are white and 1,086 Negro. From the ninth grade, or junior high schools, a total of 2,239 will be graduated—1,587 white and 652 Negro.

Graduation exercises, already set at the following schools, are: Edgewater Junior High School at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Edgewater Auditorium; Sloss Junior High School at 7:45 p.m. Monday; Mortimer Jordan High School at 8 p.m Thursday in the school auditorium

McAdory High School at 8 p.m Wednesday in the Pleasant Hill Methodist Church; Westfield High School at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the school auditorium; West Jefferson High School Friday at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium; Pipe Shop Junior High School Monday at 8 p.m. in the Antioch Baptist Church in Bessemer; Warrior High School at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium and Hooper City High School at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Bryan To Make Addresses

Dr. Bryan will either make the principal address or attend graduation programs at the following schools: Minor High School, Monday, 9:15 a.m.; Rutledge Junior High School; 11 a.m. Wednesday; Jefferson County High School, 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Jones Valley High School at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Asst. Supt. H. G. Morton will attend exercises at these schools: The class sermon at Corner High School 6 p.m. Sunday; ceremonies at Pipe Shop and Sloss Schools Monday and the Hooper City graduation Wednesday; Hewitt High School seniors at 9 a.m. Thursday for perfect attendance awards; 7:30 p.m. Thursday for graduation at Oak Grove High School, and Powderly Negro School at 8 p.m. Friday.

John C. Blackwell, also assistant superintendent, will address the eighth grade graduates of Wenonah School Monday at 5:30 p.m.

PROBE OF FIRE BEGUN BY CITY

School House Blaze Under Investigation

City authorities began an investigation today into the fire which badly damaged Emerson institute, negro school on Scott st., between Charleston and Canal.

Inspection of the building was made by City Electrical Engineer Andrew Coffin and Building Inspector Clifford Adams.

Cause of the fire, which started under the basement steps, was undetermined, Coffin reported.

He said the blaze traveled up the stairwell and spread. Walls were cracked and otherwise damaged.

Electrical equipment was found to be satisfactory, it was reported.

One fireman was injured. He was listed as Doug Melton, member of Co. 17.

The fire occurred about last midnight.

It was the second time in recent years the Emerson school was burned. Adams said the fire several years ago occurred about the same time at night.

It is the third negro school fire recently. The Mobile County Training school, Plateau, burned not long ago. It also was a night fire.

The line of march was from Talladega College down Battle Street to East Street, where the parade swung north for one block, turning went on North Street and proceeding on north back to the vicinity of the college.

In the line of march were several cleverly prepared floats that drew enthusiastic applause from the good-natured crowd.

The paraders who followed the long route on foot marched by schools and the following were among the Negro educational institutions represented:

Lincoln Junior High, Berney's, Jenifer, Carter, Stockdale, Kidd Street, Welcome Springs, Poplar Springs, Mt. Olive, Childersburg, Barclay, New Maryland, Mt. Sinia, Mt. Zion, McElderry, Harper Spring, King's Chapel, Fayetteville, Sweet Home, Mt. Cavalry, Mt. Grove, Lane Chapel, Cedar Creek, Kingston, Morning Star, Sycamore Junior High, Antioch, Talladega Springs, Ragland Chapel.

The first float was Little Boy Blue, asleep in a haystack perched on a truck.

Another elaborate float bore the letters, "T. C. T.," on its side and was followed by children of Mt. Olive School, each carrying flowers.

One float portrayed Cinderella being fitted with a glass slipper and another portrayed "Heidi," central character of a famous book for children.

Sycamore Junior High had a nice float and another portrayed the "Old Woman Who Lived In a Shoe."

The final float portrayed the seven dwarfs gathered about the couch of Snow White.

WIDER TAX ON INCOMES SCHOOL AIM

Extension Of State Levy To Lower Pay Classes Is Proposed

LEGISLATIVE GROUP HEARS PROPOSALS

Alabama Teachers' Head Asserts $4,000,000 More Is Needed

BY A. F. MAHAN, JR.

TROY, Ala., April 13—(AP)—Belief the public would support an expansion of Alabama's income taxes to cover lower salary brackets was expressed by a group of downstate school superintendents who called upon the Legislature's committee on education and highways Thursday for more revenue.

Representative Charles Weston, of Barbour County, asked at least half a dozen superintendents if they favored or believed the public would approve a widening of income brackets as a means of producing more funds for schools.

Later he told news men he proposed to offer measures in the Summer session of the Legislature to accomplish this end.

Income taxes now are pledged to retirement of a $17,000,000 bond issue floated in 1933 to place the state on a cash operating basis while the maximum tax is fixed by the constitution, rates for the various salaried groups are fixed by legislation.

E. B. Norton, Covington County superintendent and president of the Alabama Education Association, said he believed an additional $4,000,000 in revenue is needed for an eight-month term under the minimum act.

Ed E. Reid, executive secretary of the State League of Municipalities, said that organization's legislative committee had determined after a survey, approximately $4,000,000 would be required.

Gov. Frank M. Dixon has termed the $4,000,000 estimate excessive, and has predicted another month could be added to terms through economical executive administration and through the appropriation of approximately $1,750,000.

Without exception, all educators appearing at the committee hearing asserted more state aid would be required next year, and most of them criticized what some termed "disgracefully low" teacher salaries.

An expansion of capital outlay for city systems was requested particularly by Reid and superintendents representing municipalities.

Thursday's committee hearing opened a state-wide tour, which will carry the committee into all sections of the state within the next three weeks. Members will go to Monroeville Friday and to Mobile for the week end.

State Supt. A. H. Collins presented the educational spokesmen and told the committee at one point the prospects for federal aid for public schools was "not as bright as it was a few months ago."

National Average Cited

Even if the state were to get the federal assistance advocated in pending legislation, and $4,000,000 from the state, Collins asserted "we still would be far short of the national average."

Most county and city educators said more teachers are needed, particularly in the Negro schools, which were described generally as ill-housed and understaffed.

Norton, among others, advocated that the state's fiscal year be changed, so as to begin July 1 instead of Oct. 1. Speakers said this would afford revenue before schools opened in September, whereas state income now was not received until around Nov. 1 or later.

Representative Weston skipped few speakers with his questions on whether they favored a lowering of income tax brackets or believed the public would support such action.

J. T. Allbritton, Geneva County superintendent, told the Barbour legislators he believed the public would support it and "personally I would."

"If your Houston County legislative delegation voted to reduce income brackets, could they be re-elected?" Weston asked Solomon Baxter.

Superintendents Okeh Plan

"I don't know," Baxter answered, "but I don't believe it would make much difference.

P. W. Lett, Dale superintendent, said he favored the income tax change, and H. J. Bodiford, Henry school executive, said he "certainly" advocated the plan and wanted "to pay it—cut it down to around $1,500 to $1,800."

H. N. Lee, Opp superintendent, expressed belief "it would be wise," adding "too many of us are living off the fat of the land without paying it."

Most speakers contended local communities were contributing as much as financially possible to education, and Reid expressed belief cities would eventually be forced, because of relief burdens and other expenses, to cease appropriations to "piece out terms."

Bodiford said Henry County, if it supplied needs through local taxes, would have to raise its rate from 7 to 52 mills.

Charge Is Made

A charge that there was a "cross between the governor's platform and legislative proposals to date" was made Thursday before the recess committee.

The charge was made by Senator Tim Faulk, of Geneva, who came here for a committee hearing at State Teachers College, first stop on a tour that will carry the recess group into all sections of Alabama during the next three weeks.

Faulk's appearance before the committee was brief, but Gov. Frank M. Dixon's legislative program received additional mention when Senator Renzo Guy, of Lowndes, asked Supt. A. C. Dunaway, of Coffee County:

"Do you know whether the people would rather have one more cent on the sales tax, or have the equalization boards raise their property taxes?"

Guy, who opposed an administration bill substituting appointive tax equalization boards for County Boards of Review, asked this question after Dunaway had expressed belief the "equalization" plan would aid the schools but added that Coffee County's property taxes amounted to only about $38,000 annually, "or approximately enough to pay the teachers for two months."

Divided Sentiment Likely

The superintendent answered that sentiment on the question likely would be divided. He made no specific recommendation for raising additional school money.

Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, presented the school officials appearing Thursday. Ed E. Reid, secretary of the Alabama League of Municipalities, was present.

M. K. Johnson, Bullock superintendent, told the committee 32 more Negro teachers and additional funds for Negro schools were sorely needed in his county.

Eighty-two percent of Bullock's population is Negro, and each teacher now has an average of 51 students, Johnson said.

E. S. Pugh, Union Springs superintendent, said a greater state apportionment for operating expenses was needed.

E. B. Norton, Covington superintendent and president of the Alabama Education Association, was among those appearing. Norton pointed out to newsmen the area already was on record as requesting $4,000,000 additional revenue annually for an eight, instead of seven, months minimum school term; a teacher retirement program, and legislation to provide state aid for capital outlay expenditures made by cities.

Later Thursday the subcommittee on highways, headed by Senator Guy, met with city and county officials of the area to discuss road needs.

SCHOOL BUDGET SUBMITTED

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 30—(AP)—The State Department of Education announced Friday that R. B. Marde, of Opelika City Schools, was the first superintendent to submit a 1939-40 budget for approval. Marde's budget showed anticipated receipts of $57,906 and expenditures of a similar amount for a nine-month term for white schools and an eight-month term for Negro schools. The terms, longer than required under the minimum program act, will be made possibly through a city council appropriation of $18,000, Dr. P. L. Johns, director of finance and administration in the Department of Education, said.

EDUCATIONAL PROJECT FOR NEGROES THAT DESERVES NOTICE

E. P. Wallace, supervisor of adult education for Negroes calls the attention of The Advertiser to a remarkable performance in a field that hitherto has gone unnoticed. Prof. Wallace in a note to The Advertiser says: "I deem this to be one of the basic projects (of WPA). It has helped to reduce illiteracy in the state, given hundreds of people a new lease on life, revamped the destiny of men and women, thus making the city, county and state a safer place for democracy and people to live. If this means anything to a people, I think the leading citizens of the city and state should be informed of it."

Advertiser 10-30-39

We quite agree.

Accompanying Supervisor Wallace's letter is the following factual statement which we are glad to commend to all Alabamians and to adapt as an editorial by The Advertiser:

Montgomery

"The Montgomery Adult Schools, operating in the city and county, sponsored by the local and State Department of Education, financed by the Works Projects Administration have done much toward making it better for the underprivileged boy and girl, man and woman from an educational standpoint. These schools are a part of the gigantic unemployment program of the Federal Government. Thousands of teachers throughout the nation have been rehabilitated through this program, and thousands and thousands of individuals have been given a new lease on life, due to having attended the WPA classes for adults.

"In Montgomery, the classes are operating on an accredited basis. This is due to the fact that up until the school term of 1937-38, there was no public high school in this section for Negroes. The Negro youth had either to pay the quarterly fee at the State College, or be contented with a junior high education. When the depression came, hundreds of youths were deprived of any kind of chance of obtaining a high school education and it was from this standpoint, that Mr. Judson Snead, State Director, and Prof. M. H. Griffin, then State Supervisor for Negroes with the local supervisor, got permission to operate a special High School for Negroes at the State Teachers College. The teachers were paid by the Federal Government, thus the students were admitted to their first free high school. These schools were put in operation here in October, 1934.

"When Dr. C. M. Dannelly came to Montgomery as Superintendent of Schools, he soon learned of the program and being pleased with what he found in operation, he gave it his support and the graduates from the Junior High Department received their first certificates at his approval and from the signature of he and Mr. Snead.

"The enrollment for the WPA classes year by year: 1935, 1,361; 1936, 741; 1937, 640; 1937, 983, and 1939, 1,176. Total number enrolled for the first year period, 4,901. Number taught to read and write year by year: 1934-35, 379; 1935-36, 142; 1936-37, 203; 1937-38, 252, and 1938-39, 452. Total, 1,427. Classes in homemaking have been another feature of the educational project. Stress has been placed on care for the home in which the student lives. Enrollment of these classes over the five-year period, 161. Completed course and received certificates, 57. Others having left before completion and a large percentage still studying. Ninety-five per cent of those receiving certificates are actively engaged. Eighty per cent are employed locally in private homes, 8 per cent are doing cafe or cafeteria work, and 7 per cent are in other cities and states. The United States Reemployment Services placed 5 of our graduates in other states.

"The record in the supervisor's office shows that 501 persons have studied in the Special Senior High School over the period of operation. One hundred and thirty-six of these have received their high school diplomas; 30 have completed junior college; 7 are pursuing their B. S. degree and 96 are in the high school graduating classes of the city, State Teachers College, Alabama; A. and I. College, Jacksonville, Florida, and other points. These student received their start through the classes operated by the WPA, sponsored by the Department of Education.

"Classes in Vocational and Parent Education have been taught. Many useful garments have been made from old discarded articles around the home. The homes have been improved and living conditions are improved almost 90 per cent. These classes are extra features and serve a much needed purpose.

"Since the beginning of the program in 1934, forty-five teachers have been given employment on this program, 92 per cent of these teachers were without validated certificates. After a few months of work and study at the college, their certificates were revived and at least 78 per cent of them are teaching now in the public schools of the state.

"These schools are in operation this year at the following places: Loveless, Hale, Billingslea, Booker Washington, George Carver Taborian Home, Pilgrim Rest and Flatwood. Visitors are welcome at all times. E. P. Wallace, Supervisor."

These exercises, with Albert Turner, registrar of Tuskegee Institute as the commencement speaker, will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in Carver Hall, new annex to the school.

The program is as follows:

Processional

Selection "Rose Petals" (Lawson) —Chorus.

Scripture and Invocation.

Spiritual "Deep River" (Trinkans) —Chorus.

Introduction of Speaker—J. A. Kitchens, Farm Demonstrator, Lee County Negro Farm Agent.

Address—Albert Turner, Registrar Tuskegee Institute.

Selection "Mighty lak'a Rose" (Nevin)—Chorus.

Presentation of Diplomas and Certificates—Superintendent R. B. Mardre.

Awarding of Prizes—Principal W. E. Morton.

Benediction.

Rev. Murray delivered a splendid sermon at Sunday's exercises which were well attended despite inclement weather. Featuring the exercises were anthems and spirituals beautifully rendered by the Colored School Chorus.

Rev. Murray spoke on the theme: "The Importance of Giving God a Recognized Part in All Human Undertaking." Urging the graduates on to courage and inspiration he put his message before his listeners emphatically and interestingly by pointing out three principal reasons for failures in life.

These reasons, he said, were (1) Leaving God out of individual plans, (2), Failure of homes, schools and churches to place proper emphasis on the recognition of God, (3), Too many deaf ears turned when spiritual instruction is given.

EDUCATION IN ALABAMA

This eighth day of June finds the schools and colleges of Alabama finished with their work for the academic year 1938-39. Preparations are underway for the next school year, and so it is appropriate for Alabamians to give some thought to the intricate educational problems and demands—which confront them.

Too often many of us underestimate the part which education plays in our every day life, in our government and in our national economy. We take education and democracy for granted, seldom pausing to realize that the one is dependent upon the other, and that all our liberties are rooted in the foundation of universal education. In many ways we have failed in this state to appreciate the fact that education should be the first and foremost concern of our people.

Today our schools are overcrowded; our teachers are underpaid. Our universities and colleges, more than one of them, are on the starred or probation lists of the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities. The average Alabama child receives fewer educational advantages than almost any other child in America.

Half the children of Alabama never go beyond the sixth grade. The average Alabama pupil receives five weeks less school training every year than the average American pupil. The value of public school property is $65 per child in Alabama; in the nation it is $213. The Alabama white teacher receives an average salary of $65 per month on a twelve-month basis; the Negro teacher $32. We spend on the average $34 a year per child in the Alabama schools; the Southern average is $43; the non-Southern average $95. To reach the Southern average alone Alabama would have to increase its public school expenditures by more than $5,000,000 a year.

Yet we are hopeful in Alabama, and we talk about a new day, when there will be greater educational opportunity for everyone, when there will be more money earned and more money for the good things of life. It is true that we are a poor state, yet of our total income as a people we spend a greater percentage for educational purposes than at least fifteen other states. Even more will have to be spent.

In our institutions of higher learning we find conditions comparable to those in our elementary schools. In the entire South there is not a single college or university of the first rank; there is not a college of engineering of the first rank, nor a college of agriculture. Yet more than half the nation's farmers live in the Southeastern states.

Our elementary schools are dependent upon the universities to supply capable teachers. Young engineers, doctors, lawyers, architects, among the more fortunate go away from Alabama for their training. And too many of them never come back. In the last thirty years three and a half million of the most energetic, promising Southerners were lost to the South.

Dr. Howard Odum, the final authority on things Southern, says that the weaknesses of the South are threefold: we are deficient in technological skill, in money, and in institutional services.

The only known way to obtain more persons skilled as engineers, botanists, soil chemists, plant pathologists is by building greater universities to train them. The only way we know by which we can create more money is by training the human beings of the South to use their talents to better advantage. The only way to improve our institutional services, such as libraries, farm bureaus and health agencies is by educating trained leaders to direct them.

It is trite to say it, but education is and always has been the fundamental and by all odds the most important problem of democracy. Alabama must continue to devote more attention—and more money—to education if her democracy is to survive.

It could almost surely be shown that wherever one finds a farmer who has been educated in the science of agriculture he will also find a farmer with at least a self-sustaining income. But almost invariably where one finds a farmer who knows nothing about agriculture he will find a farmer living in desperate want. Too much emphasis should not be placed on the relation between education and financial success, but that is the best way to emphasize the importance of education in a state where poverty abounds.

It is no reflection on the faculties and presidents of the state colleges and universities to say that they are not able to perform the full duties that should be theirs in a democracy. They know that there are only six states with a higher white illiteracy than Alabama, but they are handicapped by lack of financial support. The teachers are overworked, and they have not the facilities of library and laboratory that they need.

If we want to preserve our democracy, increase and guarantee again our liberties, we must build on the solid foundation of more education. Thomas Jefferson knew when he wrote the Bill for the More General Diffusion of Knowledge and when he established the University of Virginia that he was building for democracy in a land which to this day is the hope of the world. In education Jefferson knew that he was helping to pass on to future generations the accumulated wisdom of the ages. He recognized that the youth of America are "exactly the persons who are to succeed to the government of our country, and to rule its future enmities, its friendships and fortunes."

Education Needs of State Are Listed by Dr. Collins

By DR. A. H. COLLINS
State Superintendent of Education

IT is not the purpose of this article to discuss the values of education to the State. It is taken for granted that education is necessary for stable and orderly government, that it contributes to the economic development of the State, reduces poverty and increases purchasing power, that it adds to the safety of life and property, develops leadership, contributes to public health and the general welfare. Also, it is assumed that the principle of state responsibility for public education is generally accepted as sound.

We wish here to place emphasis upon what is generally admitted to be our minimum needs for the public schools and to point out the gaps between the minimum needs and existing conditions.

First, a minimum term of eight months elementary school and nine months high school should be provided throughout the State at once. Ultimately, the minimum term should be nine months for both the elementary and high school.

Second, twelve years of schooling in the elementary and high schools should be available to all the children of the State at public expense.

Third, the public school curricula should be broad enough to provide for the needs of all levels of ability and all worthwhile aptitudes and interests.

Fourth, school buildings, adequately equipped, lighted, heated, and ventilated, should be provided for all our children.

Fifth, a properly qualified teaching staff, adequately remunerated, should be placed in all of our schools.

Sixth, consolidated schools and adequate transportation should be provided for rural children if they are to be given fair educational opportunities.

It is believed that the people of Alabama accept the above program as a reasonable and desirable program. How far short are we of having such a program?

The average length of school term for a majority of the school children of the State is less than 140 days—more than a month short of the proposed eight-month minimum, and 35 days short of the national average. Practically one-half of the school children of the State do not attend school beyond the elementary grades. In other words, one-half of our children are for one reason or another, receiving less than a total of 42 months schooling. With one-half of our young receiving this small amount of schooling, can we hope to have a future citizenry which will value and support the best in home and community, in law and government, and in standards of living? Can we hope to produce and inspire a generation that will develop the great potential wealth of our soil, our mines, and other natural resources?

The idea prevalent in many quarters that Alabama has over-indulged in building schoolhouses is erroneous. The plain truth is that thousands of boys and girls are required to attend school in overcrowded buildings—buildings that are poorly lighted, heated, and ventilated, to say nothing of meager equipment and furnishings. This statement holds for cities as well as rural schools. It holds for large cities as well as small cities. And it applies to white schools as well as Negro schools, only in a lesser degree.

Another opinion held by some people, that Alabama has overspent and is overspending for school transportation, has no foundation in fact. Those who are convinced of this should get out on the highways and make a careful unbiased observation of the school buses as they go to and from the schools. They would find that a majority of the buses are overcrowded; that a majority of the bus bodies are of wooden structure; that many of them are poorly constructed, uncomfortable, and unsafe—more suitable for hauling livestock than for transportation of school children. As roads have improved, local school authorities have eliminated the costly and inefficient one- and two-teacher schools at the rate of 150 annually. Alabama has been pronounced as having one of the most economical school systems in the nation by a member of the recent national committee studying local school units. The educational overhead cost in the State is among the lowest in the nation.

It is not necessary to dwell upon the desirability of good teachers. The instruction program is the most important thing in the school system. We must have good teaching but, to have it, teachers must be adequately remunerated. The records will show that great progress has been made in Alabama in teacher training. More than three-fourths of the white high school teachers of the State have four years of college training and the elementary school teachers of the State have improved their training more rapidly during the past four years than during any other time in the history of the State.

The records will show that Alabama teachers are not adequately remunerated. Although increased attendance has made it necessary to employ approximately 2,000 more teachers today than in 1930, the total amount paid in teachers' salaries today is less than the amount paid in 1930. The records will show that the average monthly salary for white teachers, calculated on a twelve months basis, is only $65. In thirty-two counties, the salary for white teachers is $55 or less. The monthly salary for Negro teachers for the entire State, calculated on the same basis, is $32. Alabama convict guards receive better salaries than Alabama teachers.

The request of an additional $4,000,000 for the public, elementary and high schools is a timid one.

The present appropriation for a seven months term was made in 1935 on a depression basis and has not been increased since then. The law contemplated the need for additional funds as attendance in the schools increased, as teachers improved their training and experience status, as transportion and capital outlay needs grew.

The educational needs of the State increased $500,000 annually during the first four years of operation of the Minimum Program Law. Alabama, therefore, lacks $2,000,000 annually of having sufficient funds to provide for the seven months' minimum school term on the basis authorized in the Minimum Program Act. It will take an additional $2,000,000 annually to provide capital outlay for city school systems and to raise the minimum term from seven to eight months. Thus it is seen that a total of $4,000,000 of additional funds is needed at once in order to supply the deficiencies in the seven months' program and to increase the State minimum term to eight months. This amount would leave us below the average for the Southern States.

The proposed additional amount does not provide for continued growth nor does it provide for badly needed additional amounts for vocational education, vocational rehabilitation and crippled children service. It does not provide for the optimum program nor the ultimate program we should develop. It merely provides for the minimum program which we must have if we are to keep pace with modern progress.

EDUCATION BILL SIGNED BY DIXON

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)—Gov. Frank M. Dixon signed into law today legislation indirectly diverting an estimated $1,000,000 annually from income tax surpluses to education and giving schools any state general fund balance in excess of $1,500,000 at the end of each fiscal year.

At the same time the executive made effective recently enacted educational bills:

1. Appropriating the first $400,000 in excess of a $750,000 general fund balance to establishment of a school teacher retirement fund.
2. Establishing a tenure system for teachers, which prohibits dismissals, except for cause, and giving teachers the right to demand a public hearing.
3. Authorizing consolidation of city and county school systems in counties of more than 55,000 population, where such is approved by both education boards, as well as by city and county governing bodies.
4. Establishing penalties for violations of the school budget act.
5. Abolishing Daphne State Normal School at the end of the 1939-40 term and giving its buildings to the Baldwin County Board of Education.
6. Creating a public corporation through which city and county school boards may borrow to meet teacher payrolls and obligations on time.

A Rare Story Of Race Pride And Courage, Backed Up By Dollars!

Courier 10-7-39 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Alabama School Children Get 12 Modern Buildings, but Their Parents Made It Possible by giving Pennies, Nickels and Dimes—Board of Education and White Friends Helped Gallant Fight.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 5—(Special)—Hundreds of children in the city and county of Montgomery will attend school this year in modern, weatherproof, comfortable and fully equipped school buildings, instead of the old, dilapidated, hazardous, one-room structures formerly in use, which they have replaced.

This transformation is due to the tireless, sustained, earnest efforts of residents of the city and the county's various rural communities, backed by the County Board of Education, the WPA, and white friends of ample means who donated both property and money toward the carrying out of the program.

Twelve new school buildings have been erected over the county and are now in use. They take the place of 19 old so-called "school houses," some of which were little better than make-shift shelters.

MATCHED STATE, COUNTY AND FEDERAL MONEY

The change that has taken place represents many months of work by colored citizens, who collected the needed funds, little by little, in sums ranging from a few cents to a dollar or two, so that state, county and Federal money, available only when matched, could be released to provide the educational opportunities for their children that was their heart's desire.

Even after residents of some school districts had given all they could, and every additional penny possible had been raised through church festivals and other entertainments held for that especial purpose, the sum realized was not enough.

In all such instances, however, school officials have proudly announced, white citizens, learning or being informed of the situation, made up the needed balance.

Some donated property for school sites, as well as money. In one instance, in addition to property and cash, one donor also presented the school with a separate library building of its own.

THEY BROUGHT THE MONEY IN OLD SACKS

Recalling the perseverance of residents of one community, and its final, successful culmination, a veteran school official said: "They never stopped or forgot, in school-time or vacation-time. I remember in one case where the amount needed to match county funds ran into hundreds of dollars for a building. The community was small and the possibility of raising the money appeared extremely doubtful, but they did it.

Months passed, then one day a delegation appeared at my office and turned over the entire amount required.

They brought it in sacks which they emptied out on my desk. It was in pennies, nickles, dimes, quarters, half dollars and dollar bills, but it was all there, every cent.

They got their building, and this year the children of members of that delegation and their neighbors are going to school there."

Besides having cracks in the walls and no means of heating them properly, the old schools were badly overcrowded. In some instances these buildings, all of them poorly lighted, were so small only one class could be taught in them at a time, and members of other classes had to do their studying standing or sitting outside. Some communities had no schools at all, churches and chapels being used for school purposes. All that is changed now, however, and every one of the new buildings are of two-teacher or more capacity.

The city of Montgomery's share in the program, is a modern, brick, 16-class-room buildings, which has been named the George W. Carver School in honor of the world-famous scientist.

We wish here to place emphasis upon what is generally admitted to be our minimum needs for the public schools and to point out the gaps between the minimum needs and existing conditions.

First, a minimum term of eight months elementary school and nine months high school should be provided throughout the State at once. Ultimately, the minimum term should be nine months for both the elementary and high school.

Second, twelve years of schooling in the elementary and high schools should be available to all the children of the State at public expense.

Third, the public school curricula should be broad enough to provide for the needs of all levels of ability and all worthwhile aptitudes and interests.

Fourth, school buildings, adequately equipped, lighted, heated, and ventilated, should be provided for all our children.

Fifth, a properly qualified teaching staff, adequately remunerated, should be placed in all of our schools.

Sixth, consolidated schools and adequate transportation should be provided for rural children if they are to be given fair educational opportunities.

It is believed that the people of Alabama accept the above program as a reasonable and desirable program. How far short are we of having such a program?

The average length of school term for a majority of the school children of the State is less than 140 days—more than a month short of the proposed eight-month minimum, and 35 days short of the national average. Practically one-half of the school children of the State do not attend school beyond the elementary grades. In other words, one-half of our children are for one reason or another, receiving less than a total of 42 months schooling. With one-half of our young receiving this small amount of schooling, can we hope to have a future citizenry which will value and support the best in home and community, in law and government, and in standards of living? Can we hope to produce and inspire a generation that will develop the great potential wealth of our soil, our mines, and other natural resources?

The idea prevalent in many quarters that Alabama has over-indulged in building schoolhouses is erroneous. The plain truth is that thousands of boys and girls are required to attend school in overcrowded buildings—buildings that are poorly lighted, heated, and ventilated, to say nothing of meager equipment and furnishings. This statement holds for cities as well as rural schools. It holds for large cities as well as small cities. And it applies to white schools as well as Negro schools, only in a lesser degree.

Another opinion held by some people, that Alabama has overspent and is overspending for school transportation, has no foundation in fact. Those who are convinced of this should get out on the highways and make a careful unbiased observation of the school buses as they go to and from the schools. They would find that a majority of the buses are overcrowded; that a majority of the bus bodies are of wooden structure; that many of them are poorly constructed, uncomfortable, and unsafe—more suitable for hauling livestock than for transportation of school children. As roads have improved, local school authorities have eliminated the costly and inefficient one- and two-teacher schools at the rate of 150 annually. Alabama has been pronounced as having one of the most economical school systems in the nation by a member of the recent national committee studying local school units. The educational overhead cost in the State is among the lowest in the nation.

It is not necessary to dwell upon the desirability of good teachers. The instruction program is the most important thing in the school system. We must have good teaching but, to have it, teachers must be adequately remunerated. The records will show that great progress has been made in Alabama in teacher training. More than three-fourths of the white high school teachers of the State have four years of college training and the elementary school teachers of the State have improved their training more rapidly during the past four years than during any other time in the history of the State.

The records will show that Alabama teachers are not adequately remunerated. Although increased attendance has made it necessary to employ approximately 2,000 more teachers today than in 1930, the total amount paid in teachers' salaries today is less than the amount paid in 1930. The records will show that the average monthly salary for white teachers, calculated on a twelve months basis, is only $65. In thirty-two counties, the salary for white teachers is $55 or less. The monthly salary for Negro teachers for the entire State, calculated on the same basis, is $32. Alabama convict guards receive better salaries than Alabama teachers.

The request of an additional $4,000,000 for the public, elementary and high schools is a timid one.

The present appropriation for a seven months term was made in 1935 on a depression basis and has not been increased since then. The law contemplated the need for additional funds as attendance in the schools increased, as teachers improved their training and experience status, as transportion and capital outlay needs grew.

The educational needs of the State increased $500,000 annually during the first four years of operation of the Minimum Program Law. Alabama, therefore, lacks $2,000,000 annually of having sufficient funds to provide for the seven months'

CITY SCHOOLS' ENROLLMENT IS GREATER AGAIN

Figures For First Day Show Big Jump In Number Of Negroes Attending

A total of 3,220 pupils were enrolled in Florence city schools, white and negro, this morning, on the first day of the 1939-40 term, J. W. Powell, superintendent, reported this afternoon, which compares with a total enrollment on the first day last year of 3,191.

Total white students last year on the ifrst day was 2,694 compared with 2,590 today. Enrollment in the negro schools first day of last year was 497 compared with 630 this year.

Enrollment by schools today follows:

	1939-40	1938-39
Brandon	594	608
Gilbert	402	402
Patton	277	283
S. T. C.	233	269
Coffee Hi	457	458
Coffee Jr. Hi	627	675
Burrell Hi	134	102
Slater	496	395

This reveals that there are 1,506 white children enrolled in the first six grades in the white schools and 1,084 enrolled in the upper six grades of the white schools. Subsequent enrollments is expected to send this year's total enrollment considerably above last year's total enrollment.

First day enrollment in the Lauderdale county rural high and junior high schools, also opened today could not be learned this afternoon but will probably be available within a few days, attaches of the office of Homer E. Williams, superintendent, said.

CITY'S SCHOOLS SHOW INCREASE

445 Registered At Huntsville High; Total Figure 1,700

Enrollment figures today on Huntsville's city schools, which opened yesterday, showed a small increase over the number starting to school at this time last year, according to W. G. Hamm, city superintendent.

Mr. Hamm said this morning the four white schools of the city, Huntsville, High, Junior High and East and West Clinton grammar, enrolled approximately 1,700 pupils yesterday, and that that list will be swelled during the week by late registrations.

The registration of the Huntsville High school was 445, which is an increase of almost 50 over that figure for last year.

An increase in registration also was noted at the East Clinton Grammar school, Mr. Hamm said, although the exact figure was not given.

The two colored schools, Winston Street and Councill High, registered about 850 students yesterday, which is about the same as last year.

Mr. Hamm announced that Miss Kate Noble Holliway, who taught at Tuscaloosa High school last year, has been placed at the High school to replace Miss Annie Dix in the English department. Miss Holliway, whose home is at Tallassee, Ala., is a graduate of the University of Alabama.

SENIOR SCHOOL ROLLS BOOSTED

Enrollment Increase Is Shown In Jefferson Higher Classes

Enrollment in Jefferson County Senior High Schools at the end of the first week totaled 4,749, an increase of 633 over last year's figure of 4,116, Dr. J. E. Bryan, county superintendent, said Thursday.

Enrollment in junior high schools showed a decrease of 79 compared with last year's figure of 8,076,, while elementary enrollment, totaling 22,413, showed a decrease of 281 compared with last year's figure of 22,694.

Total enrollment in all divisions this year was 35,238 and indicated an increase of more than 4,000 since the 1935-36 school year.

Dr. Bryan said the increased senior high enrollment resulted from legislation preventing employment of youths under 16. The elementary school decrease, he said, is accounted for by statisticians as due to a declining birth rate.

Figures for white enrollment for this year are: Senior high division, 3,679, an increase of 320 over last year. Junior high division, 5,640, a decrease of 180; elementary division, 14,434, a decrease of 132. Enrollment in Negro schools totaled 1,070 in senior high division, an increase of 313; in junior high division, 2,436, an increase of 101, and in elementary division, 7,979, a decrease of 159.

Schools For Rural Negroes Opening

The rural negro schools of Montgomery County will open a seven-month term Monday morning, Dr. Clarence M. Dannelly, superintendent of public schools, announced yesterday. He said approximately 6,000 pupils would be enrolled in these schools.

With the superintendent in charge, the negro teachers for both the city and county schools held their annual institute Saturday at the Booker Washington school. Practice and regular teachers in the elementary school at State Teachers College also participated in the session. The attendance was approximately 300.

Addresses in the morning were by T. L. Head, assistant superintendent; Prof. H. Councill Trenholm, president of State Teachers College, and Mary F. McDavid, State Jeanes agent. The afternoon program was divided into groups, the High School teachers hearing a message by Dr. W. L. Spencer, of the State Department of Education, while the elementary teachers were addressed by Mrs. Norma Smith Bristow, elementary supervisor for the white schools of the city and county, and Thelma Smiley Morris, Jeanes teacher for this county.

Plans for the fourth year of the curriculum revision study were made during the day, the faculty of State Teachers' College to direct the work. Regular meetings of the negro teachers are to be held on the first Saturday of each month during the 1939-40 term.

School Offers Varied Program

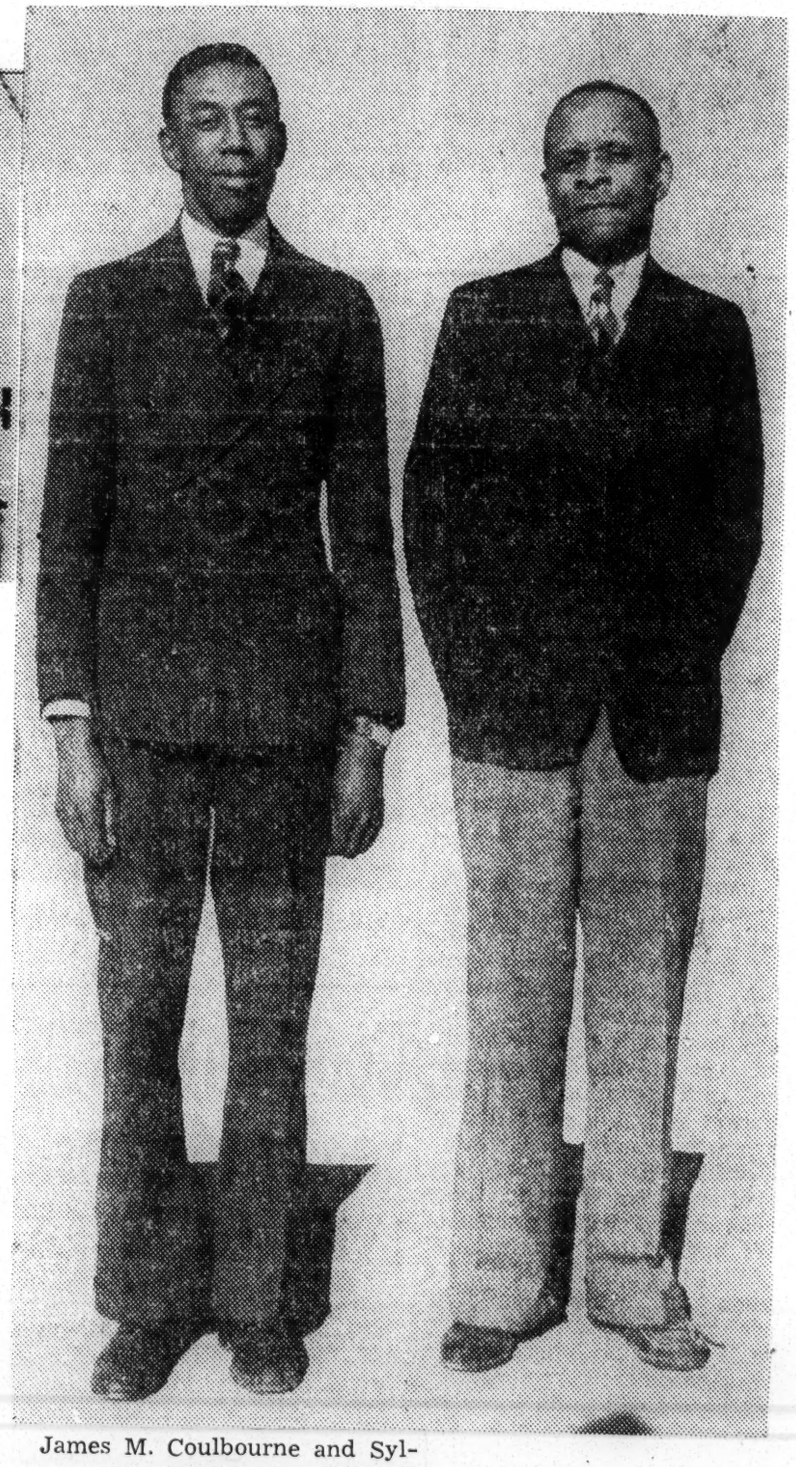
NEW CASTLE, Del. — The Buttonwood School, which was opened in 1918, with forty-five pupils in the first three grades, now has a varied program with music, gardening, library, outings and hot lunches.

The first six years were spent in a poorly heated dilapidated building located near a road and with a private dwelling on each side. On the coldest days children huddled around the stove until 11 or 11:30 a.m.

DuPont Gives Building

Later Pierre S. du Pont donated a new building. A new room will be added this spring, increasing the facilities for teaching classes in eight grades.

Thirty-four boys and girls have completed the eighth grade, all have attended Howard High School, twelve have graduated from there; two graduated from West Chester; thirteen dropped out and nine now are at Howard High School.



James M. Coulbourne and Sylvester H. Woolford are teachers, and Mrs. Helen Loatman, social worker. Mr. Woolford was of the first graduates of the school. Another graduate, Miss Annie Woolford, is teaching in Maryland.

"Deplorable" Word For Negro School System In Wilmington, Charges Negro Welfare Council

Board Of Education Held Responsible For "Shocking Conditions"; More Facilities Demanded

WILMINGTON, Del.—The Negro school system of Wilmington was described as being "deplorable" by the Negro Welfare Council, which held the Board of Ehucation responsible for the "shocking conditions" in a report, last Saturday.

Rev. Arthur R. James, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church, and chairman of a committee which earlier in the week presented to the Board of Education a report calling for a survey to be made of Negro schools by an "impartial, competent authority", made the statement on behalf of the council.

"The deplorable conditions of Negro schools in Wilmington is not recent," Rev. James said. "These conditions have existed over a period of years, and little has been done to rectify them."

He pointed, as an example, to the No. 29 school at 12th and Poplar streets. "There is no adequate playground for our children there, and they are forced to play on the sidewalks and in the streets.

"The worst feature, however, is the overcrowding, evident in all Negro schools, yet especially so at No. 29."

"The No. 5 school on Walnut street, between 12th and 13th streets," Rev. James charged, "is in practically the same condition as No. 29."

Declaring that the Bancroft school (a school for white children) is not "even half full", and that "children have been taken from other schools in order that the Bancroft school would have an appearance of being fairly well filled," Rev. James said the school should be abandoned by the white children and turned over for the use of colored children.

Rev. James said that he was head of another delegation which called on Dr. S. M. Stouffer, white, superintendent of the public schools in Wilmington, to ask that the conditions be remedied.

"Dr. Stouffer said," Rev. James pointed out, "that he knew the Negro school system needed a new elementary school, but nothing has been done."

Lincoln Civic Association Urges Return of Control of Schools to Negro Supervision

To the Tribune Editor:

The Lincoln Civic Association held a mass meeting on September 10 at which time the housing conditions in the West End were discussed. Since that date, there have constanly appeared in the daily press news items and pictures which we consider depicts the virtues and probabilities of the governmental agency whose responsibility, by law, it is to meet this situation, but who, on the other hand, have utterly failed and neglected.

Rome burned while Nero fiddled—our people are suffering, being rehoused, exploited and scattered, while this agency experiments, theorizes and designs colonization. This is no time for artistic excuses, but action.

We feel that neither the Congresses which enacted legislation patterned to clean our slums and cause our people to live under better conditions, nor our President, ever intended these people should be driven from shelter, not rehoused or for attempts to be made at colonizing our racial group.

We further feel that not only should the virtues be shown but the sins as well and that our President and the incoming Congress should have all phases before them before more of the tax-payers' money is appropriated for purposes to which it afterwards is not applied as intended.

To this end, we propose to intelligently, clearly and precisely put our views of the housing situation as affects our people in the West End, in a printed form and have a copy on each senator's and representative's desk, from States north of the Potomac River on January 2 and at the same time reach our relatives, friends and former Washingtonians now voters in States where their votes count. This is election year. By these means we feel the truth will be learned, unfair methods will be halted and justice will result to our citizens.

To accomplish our aim, we realize that funds are necessary and felt it would be unfair to draw upon the purses of the same willing few to help bear this burden, especially, when all of us would benent, directly or indirectly.

Therefore, we decided to sponsor a musical program by the Tempo Choral Society, a Community Center affiliate with 55 voices, December 1 at the Francis Junior High School, charging 25 cents admission—which is the usual charge in schools.

About November 1, the proper application was made for the use of the auditorium through the Community Center Department. Several days therafter, we were advised that granting of the permit was questionable in that the proceeds were to be used for a controversial purpose.

A purpose we considered vital. November 17 we made another application, with certain modifications and was then advised that school buildings could not be used where profits would accrue to the sponsoring organization. Promptly we directed attention to a card party held in a certain school on November 15; a band contest in another on the 17th and on the 18th a drama, each charging the usual 25 cents admission. Nevertheless, we were denied the permit.

November 24 the Federation of Civic Association took cognizance of this situation and directed a letter to the Board of Education demanding the return of control of our schools to Negro supervision.

We have since reached the pastors within our territory and requested an after collection that we may continue with our objective. The half million dollars worth of church property here must be protected as well as our homes. We are informed the Union Wesley A ME Zion Church is tendering its church its chorus and the receipts therefrom.

We propose to carry our fight on to the finish, win, lose or draw. The true facts must not be further suppressed. Furthermore, if our schools can be used for card parties where prizes are awarded, why not for a legitimate civic purpose? If for jitter-bugging, why not for the housing of citizens?

NEW EDUCATION BILL

Protects Negro School Children in "Jim Crow" States

Washington, D. C.—Protection of the rights of Negro school children is provided for in the bill introduced by Congressman William H. Larrabee of Indiana on January 31, to provide federal funds for education in the several states.

The bill, H. R. 3517, provides for an initial sum of $40,000,000 for the year ending June 30, 1940, with increased amounts for each subsequent year until a maximum of $140,000,000 annually is reached. The bill provides for the distribution of this money among the several states for the purpose of equalizing educational opportunities.

The Larrabee bill with its com panion bill to be introduced in the Senate by Senators Pat Harrison and Elmer Thomas, contain the safe guards necessary for the protection of Negroes which have been urged upon congress by the N. A. A. C. P since the introduction of the firs federal education bill in 1937. The bill first introduced, S. 419, did not pro vide safeguards for minority groups

New Education Bill To Provide For Equitable Distribution Of Funds For Negro. White Children

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Protection of the rights of Negro school children is provided for in the bill introduced by Congressman William H. Larrabee of Indiana on January 31, to provide federal funds for education in the several states.

The bill, H. R. 3517, provides for an initial sum of $40,000,000 for the year ending June 30, 1940, with increased amounts for each subsequent year until a maximum of $140,000,000 annual is reached. The bill provides for the distribution of this money among the several states for the purpose of equalizing educational opportunities.

The Larrabee bill with its companion bill to be introduced in the Senate by Senators Pat Harrison and Elmer Thomas, contain the safeguards necessary for the protection of Negroes which have been urged upon Congress by the N. A. A. C. P., since the introduction of the first federal education bill in 1917. The bill, first introduced, S. 419, did not provide safeguards for minority groups. Since that time the N. A. A. C. P., and the National Coordinating Committee for equitable Distribution of Federal Aid to Education has been maintaining a sustained campaign to amend the federal education bills to safeguard Negroes

Equitable Distribution

The new bill has been drafted so as to provide for an equitable distribution of funds to Negroes in states which have separate schools established by law. It provides that in order to qualify for receiving funds appropriated, a state must follow certain rules, one of which is that "states where separate schools are maintained for separate races (must) provide for a just and equitable apportionment of such funds for the benefit of schools, and teacher-preparation institutions maintained for separate races, without reduction of the proportion of state and local monies expended during the fiscal year ended in 1938 for schools or teacher-preparation institutions for minority races, excepting monies expended for construction or equipment of school buildings."

Similar provisions appear in the several sub-sections of the bill, each requiring an equitable distribution of funds where separate schools are required. In the section of the bill providing for general and miscellaneous provisions the following definition is set out: "A just and equitable apportionment or distribution of the several funds, provided under this Act, for the benefit of a minority racial group in a State which maintains by law separate educational facilities for such minority racial group, means any plan of apportionment or distribution which results in the expenditure, for the benefit of such minority racial group in such State bears to the total population of that State."

The School Dilemma

The statistician's office at Franklin School is again recording a decrease in the white enrollment and an increase in the colored. When this trend was first discovered a few years back, the officials cited the birth rate as the cause. Evidently vital statistics do not substantiate this view, because speculation on the subject is renewed each year.

The school statistician mentions as possible causes for this rise and fall the large attendance at white parochial schools and the removal of many white families to outlying Virginia and Maryland homes. These are important factors, but they seem rather to account for a decrease in white public school population than to account for the steady increase in the colored.

For years school appropriations and expenditures have remained at a fixed rate of one-third for colored and two-thirds for white based upon the ratio of the city's white and colored population.

The colored school enrollment, however, has passed the one-third mark and is more than one-half of the total enrollment. The results are overcrowded classrooms which in turn produce numerous problems for the entire school personnel. In recognition of this an occasional expenditure for colored schools has exceeded the fixed ratio. If equal facilities are to be provided for colored school children, appropriations will need to be re-apportioned.

This is a matter for Congressional action. Considering the way in which the school appropriation suffered at the hands of the Seventy-Sixth Congress, that outlook is not promising.

In the meantime the colored school enrollment will continue to increase as long as parents in the South are able to send their children here to reap the benefits of our public school system. These children can easily take up residence with a relative for the school term and obtain in the nation's capital the education denied them in their Southern homes.

D. C. School Officials Puzzled By Large Enrollment Of Race Students

By FLORENCE MURRAY

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 29—The increase in the number of Race students and the decrease in the number of whites enrolling in Washington's segregated public school system is becoming somewhat of a headache to school officials, citizens and members of congress.

The two races in the schools of the District is "not ideal" because stated by an act of Congress, passed in 1862, known as the Organic act. It provided, however, that the races be given equal facilities. The public school system here has often been referred to by Race educators in the District as "ont ideal" because of its segregated policies, but the best and fairest of its kind in the country.

Because the Race population of the city was near to one-third of the whites in the city, it was decided by the school board in a gentlemen's agreement in 1906 that the Race would receive one-third of all school expenditures and representation in all matters referring to the school system, its personnel and student-body.

32,000 Enroll

Because of this agreement, the school board consists of six white and three Race members and its school officials are divided accordingly for the most part.

During the past several years, however, the Race school enrollment has increased so rapidly over that of the white schools that Race students now registered in the schools, just opened last week, constitute more than one-half of the number of white pupils.

And, while these are increasing in number, the number of white students in the public schools is decreasing. The present enrollment figures show in round numbers, 55,000 whites and 32,000 Race pupils.

Not Explained

This growing disproportion is not backed up by birth-rate figures and has therefore become somewhat of an anomaly to sociologists, statisticians and others interested in the matter. Neither do population figures explain the situation, for the 1930 census gave the District's Race population as approximately 27 per cent, or a little more than one-fourth.

Although there is no breakdown of races included in the census department statistics, the total population for the District is at present estimated at 627,000, an increase of approximately 150,000, which is believed largely white.

This total population increase is believed to be greatly aided by the New Deal which has increased employment in government service here, and it is generally known that the influx of new government employees here has included a very small percentage of Race workers.

Also statistics on birth and death rates here show a much higher mortality among Race residents and a higher infant mortality.

So, the question is: Where do the Race students come from to such an extent that they now constitute a ratio of one-to-two of our public school population, and what must be done about it in the matter of appropriations and expenditures, which have not reached that ratio as regards money spent for Race education.

Interested observers give various causes for the situation. Some of them say that there are more private and parochial schools to which white students may go, which lessens the burden on the public schools.

Others declare that Race parents are more and more awakening to the value of education and are sending their children to school in larger numbers and keeping them in school for longer periods.

Still others contend, that although it is illegal for children from outside of the District to attend school here without paying tuition fees many from the south are slipping in, living with relatives in order to take advantage of the Washington school opportunities which are lacking in their home towns.

Difficult Problem

This problem is difficult for school authorities to handle, for it is hard to locate such pupils, many of whom come to the city with one or the other of their parents to remain throughout the school season and go home in the summer.

As long as the parent or guardian of the child lives in the city, he is considered a resident by law.

Teachers, themselves, being sympathetic with Race children from the south who are handicapped because of poor school opportunities there, are reluctant to report cases of such law violators, even when they are aware of them. This, the school board probably knows, but what to do is another thing.

FLA. SCHOOLMARMS ANGERED BY SLUR ON THEIR WRITING

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 27.—Public school teachers of Florida joined forces this week in denouncing a report issued by the state superintendent of public instruction, which stated that the Negro teachers of the public schools lacked the ability to write well enough to instruct pupils of the lower grades, and inferred that they were unqualified to teach in Florida schools.

In a report dealing with Negro schools of the State, the following report was published: "A sampling of teacher's writing was found to be of fifth grade quality and fourth grade speed. This finding shows the need for teaching teachers how to write. Teachers have not been tested to ascertain their attainment in other elementary subjects. However, it is predicted that an examination of their knowledge of reading, arithmetic, language, geography, history, science, music and art would show attainment similar to their ability to write."

Failure to state the method in compiling such an unfavorable report, the result of which branded Negro teachers as incompetent and unqualified, has brought loud and bitter protests from the teachers, who claim that the estimate is unjust and far from factual.

The teachers point out that the report to reveal how large a sampling was used in ascertaining the estimation on Negro teachers' writing, nor under what conditions it was obtained. There is no satisfactory explanation given as to how a conclusion was reached in regards to the teachers' knowledge of the fundamental studies they teach.

Methods of approach, source of information and number of samples used in the survey, the Negro teachers point out, must be revealed before an accurate and factual report can be made. The present report, they claim, is unjust and a reflection on the average Negro teacher of Florida.

While no estimation of white teachers has been given, the report shows that for the current year the percentage of white teachers holding graduate state certificates was 73.7 and that of the Negro teachers was 72.7.

Federal Education Funds Misused

NEW YORK—As part of its fight to legally insure more equal distribution of Federal funds for vocational education and land grant colleges, the NAACP has published charts showing how such funds were spent from 1927 to 1928.

Seventeen States with a colored population of 23.1 per cen or 9,453,349, are covered in th tables offered by the NAACP. I the school age groups (10 to 2 years) colored people formed 24. per cent of the total. The school year 1929-30 is not included in the tables for land grant colleges.

On the basis of population, Delaware, with a colored population of 13.7 per cent, gave only 5.7 per cent of $1,998,878 appropriated, thus clipping off $160,622 intended for land grant colleges.

Maryland, with 16.9 per cent of its population colored, passed out 4 per cent, thus denying citizens use of $366,496.

9 Per Cent for 45.6 Per Cent

South Carolina, with whites forming 54.4 per cent, passed only 9 per cent of its land grant funds to non-whites, and realized the sum of $1,625,758 by doing so.

Although colored people form 50.2 per cent of Mississippi's citizens, colored schools got $447,54(of $5,352,198, or just 8.4 per cent.

North Carolina whites clipped off $1,503,902 of the funds due 29 per cent of the population, while Virginia withheld $1,071,667 due its colored group of 26.8 per cent.

W.Va. Splits Difference

West Virginia came nearest to equal division, and there colored land grant schools got only 3.4 per cent of the appropriation. Colored people are 6.6 per cent of the population.

This story of inequality is repeated in the comparative analysis of appropriations for vocational work. Oklahoma was the only exception. From 1928 to 1935 it spent 8.1 per cent of its Federal vocational funds for its minority of 7.2 per cent.

The NAACP is pressing for clauses providing for distribution of funds on a basis of population in States where separate schools are maintained.

HIGHER EDUCATION FOR NEGROES CITED

Dr. Arthur Raper Lists the States Which Have Improved Facilities.

By The Associated Press.

Dr. Arthur Raper, research director, told the commission on inter-racial co-operation yesterday that North Carolina, Missouri, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky had taken steps to improve facilities for higher education for negroes.

He reported action followed a United States supreme court decision last December which held a negro student had a right to attend a state university if a state failed to provide equal opportunities for graduate and professional work in separate schools. The case was appealed from Missouri.

No Gradual Schools.

Raper also reported that no graduate school or scholarship aid for negroes were available in Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and the Carolinas, although "in North Carolina and Georgia recognized committees have studied the situation and have recommended scholarship aid."

He added that nearly half of the graduate negro students in the United States "are in southern graduate schools, largest of which are Howard, Atlanta and Fisk Universities, and Meharry Medical School at Nashville.

Officers Named.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: M. Ashby Jones, Atlanta, honorary president; Howard W. Odum, Chapel Hill, N. C., president; Mary McLeod Bethune, Daytona Beach, Fla., first vice president; Bertha M. Newell, Salisbury, N. C., second vice president; Rufus E. Clement, Atlanta, third vice president; Will W. Interracial Body For U. S. School Help

ATLANTA, May 25.—(AP)—The Southern Commission on Interracial Cooperation, in annual session at Atlanta University today, unanimously endorsed proposed Federal aid to public education in the several States "on a basis that will equalize educational opportunity for white and colored."

The commission also discussed at length the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Lloyd Gaines case, which affirmed the constitutional right of negroes to equality of opportunity for graduate education in States which maintain dual school systems.

In reference to this decision, unanimous agreement was reached on the following points: (1) That any solution to be acceptable must be within the limits of the Supreme Court decision; (2) That movements looking to the creation of dishonest or shabby substitutes for graduate training for negroes by strongly discouraged; (3) That the interpretation of the Gaines decision as to equality of educational opportunity be followed through all phases of negro education, from elementary to university training.

In the light of recent reports regarding alleged Fascist movements in this country, the commission adopted unanimously the following resolution: "Resolved, that the Commission of Interracial Cooperation deplores the attempts now being made in this country to arouse anti-Semitism and other prejudices, and that the officers and members of the commission be requested to combat these attempts in every way in their power and to cooperate with other agencies working to the same end."

The following officers were elected for the coming year: M. Ashby Jone Atlanta, honorary president; Howa W. Odum, Chapel Hill, N. C., pres dent; Mary McLeod Bethune, Dayton Beach, Fla., first vice-president; Bertha M. Newell, Salisbury, N. C., second vice-president; Rufus E. Clement, Atlanta, third vice-president; Will W. Alexander, Atlanta, executive director; C. H. Tobias, New York City, associate director; Emily H. Clay, Atlanta, secretary; and J. Sherrard Kennedy, Atlanta, treasurer. Howard W. Odum was elected chairman of the board of directors.

Sixty members of the commission were in attendance, representing 13 States and the District of Columbia.

Gains Noted But Still Far Below Accepted Standards

WASHINGTON, June 14.—A government survey disclosed today that Negro education made marked advances in the last 20 years, but still lagged behind accepted standards.

Estimating the number of 1935-1936 graduates from Negro public high schools in 18 Southern States at 18,500, Office of Education experts said that number was 50 per cent more than all the Negroes enrolled in high school in 1915-1916. Then only 58 per cent of the Negro children 6 to 14 years old were attending school. In 1930-1931 the percentage was 84 per cent.

Program Given To Check Spread of J. C. in Schools

12-25-39

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Some 20,000 additional teachers would have to be employed to reduce the pupil-teacher loads in colored schools to the level for white schools in the same community, declared Prof. Doxey A. Wilkerson of Howard University recently in an address over NBC's blue network.

Norfolk, Va.

Professor Wilkerson, now engaged in a study of "The Negro in America" under auspices of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, has recently completed a study for President Roosevelt's advisory committee on education.

SCHOOLS OUTMODED

In giving a word-picture of American education as it affects the race in the north and the south said in part:

"Some 2,500,000 colored youth enrolled in southern schools are required by law to attend segregated schools which for the most part are ramshackle, outmoded structures in need of replacement.

"Public elementary and secondary schools are kept open for terms which are from one to two months shorter than those for white schools in the same communities.

"Teachers in these schools are greatly overloaded and 20,000 colored teachers are needed to reduce the pupil-teacher loads to that of the whites in the same communities.

PAY DIFFERENTIALS

"The salaries of colored public school teachers average about $500 per year, just about one-half as much as the average salaries of white teachers," continued Professor Wilkerson.

The speaker emphasized that in many communities with sizeable colored population there are no public high school facilities for colored, and there are practically no public facilities for the graduate and professional education of colored in the entire South.

"On the elementary and secondary school level," the speaker proceeded, "the southern states spend approximately $50 per year for each white pupil in average daily attendance, as compared with $20 per year for the average colored pupil.

"Approximately 500,000 colored go to school in the north and for the most part they attend mixed schools. In some sections, however, parts of Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey, they are required to attend separate schools.

"There is a tendency in some sections of the north toward the spread of school segregation. Educational opportunities for colored in the north are by far more adequate than in the south," asserted Professor Wilkerson, "but even there one observes practices which are hardly in accord with what we like to think of as 'the American way of life.'"

CHECK REQUIRED

To check the spread of school segregation, with its implications of social-civic "inferiority," and to eliminate the subtle and unwholesome distinctions commonly made in the curricula programs of colored and white youth are among the requirements of a democratic ideal for the education of colored in the north.

Professor Wilkerson urged instruction which bears a definite social orientation towards interracial understanding and goodwill.

"Every success toward this end is an important blow at reaction which, even in America, severely threatens to undermine the civil liberties and the representative political institutions of us all," the speaker advised.

Colored Building Work Accepted By School Board

CONTRACT WORK VIEWED AT KENNESAW

FITZHUGH LEE SCHOOL BUILDING IS APPROVED

Official Party Tours Lemon Street Premises During Inspection

The City Board of Education accepted the contractor's work in the construction of a $47,000 colored school building and remodeling of four classrooms, a laboratory, library and two offices of the old building during an inspection Thursday of PWA engineers and school officials.

Board members were joined by Mayor L. M. Blair, architects, G. W. Humphreys and W. Montgomery Anderson, R. G. Daniell, residential engineer inspector of the WPA, W. S. Hazzard, traveling engineer with the WPA, and city schools superintendent, C. A. Keith.

Approving the new structure and construction work on eight rooms of the old building, inspector Dainell regarded the Lemon street school as modern as any the government has helped finance. He expressed approval of both building design and construction.

Building supplies and all equipment were accepted during the inspection and were ordered installed during the day. J oel W. Clayton, building contractor, said the building consists of four classrooms, a manual training room, domestic science quarters and an auditorium.

Renovation work on the old building brought the total cost of the colored project to $47,000, financed jointly by the PWA and the city board of education through a city-approved bond issue.

Shortly after the inspection of the Marietta project, WPA engineers inspected the building and equipment of the new unit at the Fitzhugh Lee school which board members approved.

Later in the afternoon, Mr. Daniell and Mr. Hazzard will go to Kennesaw to view the new $20,000 school structure, almost complete.

Board members Dr. W. H. Perkinson, Guy H. Northcutt, Ed Massey, H. Ewell Hope, Dr. Sam Rambo were in the party inspecting the building.

Inspectors said they expect to report in the new gymnasium-auditorium at the city recreation center about the middle of [illegible]

Teachers Promised $1,700,000

Governor Rivers announced Tuesday that a requisition for $1,700,000 to finance state schools which will be presented by Dr. M. D. Collins today, "will be paid".

Observers said either the Governor would impound accumulated highway funds or borrow money from the banks to finance the school setup.

Governor Rivers made the announcement after it was learned that Attorney General Ellis is in New York seeking a buyer for approximately $5,250,000 in highway certificates, the anticipated sale of which was voted in the June election.

According to Dr. Collins, the $1,700,000 represented $1,500,000 due school teachers and $200,000 needed to carry on the state's part of the vocational program. The money is expected to be ready for the checks to go out this week.

EDUCATION BOARD FORMALLY ACCEPTS NEW $45,000 NEGRO SCHOOL BUILDING

Officials Make Final Inspection Of Newly-Completed Structure

By EDMUND HUGHES

SIGNIFYING COMPETITION of the second project under the city's $200,000 improvements program, keys to the spacious new negro school building on Lemon street were presented to the Marietta board of education Thursday morning in an informal ceremony.

A final inspection of the newly-completed structure was made preceding the presentation by board members, Mayor L. M. Blair, architects, contractors, school officials and WPA representatives.

During a special meeting, the education board adopted a resolution formally accepting the new building, "according to plans and specifications." Dr. W. H. Perkinson, board chairman, received the keys in behalf of the board from J. W. Clayton, representative of the contractors' firm.

Complete Facilities

From a rambling building consisting of only four classrooms and an auditorium, the structure has been transformed into a modern brick edifice of architectural beauty and strength, giving Marietta negro school facilities not excelled by any in Georgia.

A PWA-City of Marietta project costing $45,000, the building will be put into use the next school term.

The old auditorium has been changed into a library, laboratory room and study hall. Four new classrooms have been added, and also a domestic science room for girls and manual training quarters for boys.

Latest Type Stage

The new auditorium-gymnasium is equipped with the latest-type stage and lighting arrangements, and will compare favorably with any in the county. Plans have been made to convert the auditorium into a basketball court, with little difficulty.

The school has complete, modern fixtures of every type, including a new steam heating system, electric and plumbing systems, and toilets and showers for both boys and girls.

Making the inspection, besides Mayor Blair and Dr. Perkinson, were: R. C. Daniel, PWA resident engineer inspector; W. M. Anderson, chief architect; J. W. Humphreys, architect; W. S. Hazzard, WPA traveling engineer; C. A. Keith, city school superintendent; Joel W. Clayton, contractor; and other members of the board, Guy Northcutt, J. E. Massey, Dr. Sam Rambo, and H. E. Hope. Judge J. H. Hawkins, another board member, was not present.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Think for Yourself and Let Others Enjoy the Privilege to Do So.—Voltaire.

NEGRO PUBLIC FORUM

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

The state-wide public forum which convened Dec. 5, at St. Paul AME Church, East Macon, created a city-wide interest despite the fact that the audience was not so large. But the attendance was after all reasonably representative. Prof. H. R. Harris, business manager of Georgia Baptist College (Central City College) was the principal speaker. He spoke from the general topic, Education. His specific theme was: "To What Is the Negro Entitled in State Education?"

Preliminary to his discussion of the facts, Professor Harris read the equalization clause adopted by the 1937 Georgia legislature, aiming at equalization of educational facilities and advantages for all children of school ages in the state. Section 1, of that law reads as follows: "It is hereby declared to be the public policy of the state of Georgia, that educational opportunities for all children of school age in this state shall be equalized throughout the state by the state board of education, as far as possible."

Since the new law has not had time to be put fully in operation, its reaction cannot at this time be appraised. However the speaker did present a mass of material compiled from the superintendent of education reports of 1934-1935 and 1935-1936 school years. The speaker used 12 items in classifying his statistical data to show just what state support the Negro was getting before the passage of the present law.

Number of schools—Of the 6149 schools of elementary character, 3,072 are of the one-room type. Of the one-room schools 2,438 are for colored, and 534 for whites.

Administration force—Of the 593 paid superintendents and other administration officials in the state, 508 are white, and only 85 Negroes.

Teachers employed—There are 15,916 teachers Of these 10,582 are white and 5,334 Negro.

Qualification of teachers—Of the 17,048 teachers who hold state certificates, 13,956 are white and 3,092 Negro. Observation on this item shows that there are 3,374 more white teachers with certificates than are employed. It also reveals the information that of the 5,334 Negro teachers employed, 2,242 are without certificates, and although they are holding jobs as teachers, they are unable to qualify under the standard requirement.

Salary—The average white teacher's salary is $605.19 per year: and the average Negro teacher's salary is $246.03 per year.

Enrollment—The total enrollment of school age is 741,170 pupils in elementary and high schools. Of this number 477,832 are white, and 263,338 are colored. Hence 35 per cent of school-age children are colored, and 65 per cent are white.

Expenditures—The state spends $13,273,169.24 for education. Of this amount white schools and administration during the years covered by this report (1934-1935 and 1935-1936) received $11,451,322.45, while the Negro schools and administration received $1,821,846.79. Upon a fair equalization basis, the Negro schools would have received $4,645,609.23.

Expenditure per pupil—The expenditure per pupil is $25.20 per white pupil, and $5.47 per Negro pupil per year.

Transportation costs—The state spends $2,179,244.76 for transportation of white children to consolidated schools. No transportatin expenditures for Negro children are listed. We thlrefore take it for granted that no Negro children are transported at public expense.

High school teachers—There are 3631 white high school teachers and 347 colored. The average white high school salary is $1008.34, and average colored high school salary is $605.95.

Professor Harris made it plain that although these are the latest statistics available, yet they do not represent the present educational policy as promulgated and adopted by the 1938 Georgia legislature. He also had some fine words for white friends who are working in behalf of the Negro, especially did he mention the labors of Mr. R. L. Cousins, for his untiring efforts in the Negroes' behalf.

A general discussion of the topic ensued after the speaker concluded. No criticism of the past policy of unequal distribution of school funds was entered into in lieu of the fact that legislation was passed in the last state assembly to take proper steps to remedy the evil.

During the discussion, someone asked for a show of hands of public school teachers present. When the tally was made, it was revealed that of 120 public school teachers only two were present. Of the 15 WPA teachers, nine were present. The next forum and the topic to be discussed will be announced in the near future.

Visitor to Dickerson Dedication Gives Impressions of Vidalia in Letter to Journal

The Atlanta Journal,
Letters from the People Department,
Atlanta, Georgia.

Gentlemen:

It was my pleasure and privilege to visit friends at Vidalia, Georgia, on March 31, 1939, and on that date attend the program of the dedication (buildings and equipment) of Dickerson Training School for Negro boys and girls. Oddly, on that same date one of our Georgia newspapers carried on its front page a picture of the Negro scientist and unpretending gentleman, George Washington Carver, of Tuskegee Institute, welcoming the President of these United States to Alabama.

I had heard that Vidalia, Georgia, was the fasting growing city in southeast Georgia. Surely in some ways it is entitled to this laudable claim and the Dickerson Training School for Negro boys and girls deserves classification with Vidalia's worth (to itself and the State of Georgia) and progress with its other schools, churches, hospital (now under construction), beautiful streets, fine homes, and the fine folk who dwell there.

As stated above Dickerson Training School was dedicated on March 31st with a befitting and interesting program with Principal James D. Dickerson (Negro) presiding with modesty, grace and humor—each of these blended in its right proportion. Dickerson's opening remarks were, as he looked at his "biscuit": "We are starting eight minutes late and that ought not to be." The (Negro) audience then sang the "Negro National Anthem" and after dedicatory prayer by Rev. W. C. Driggers, all (white and black) sang "America" and as I searched in my mind for the words of the third verse, "MY COUNTRY 'TIS OF THEE" in beauty caused me to sincerely ask this question as I looked across the aisle at my colored friends: IN REALITY WHOSE COUNTRY IS THIS? In my own mind I undertook to answer this question quickly lest I miss some of the beauty of the song. America (Georgia) belongs to any color or creed that will claim and make as their own the best there is; to those who built it (Georgia) beautifully upward and onward; to those who give is a good name and defend it by the same.

Odee A. Wilson gave the address of welcome; A. L. Durden delivered a message from Negro Parent-Teacher Associations; and A. J. P. Robeson reviewed the history of this school. All of these are Negroes who are deeply interested in Dickerson Training School. Their addresses were skillfully done and about as attractive as their beautiful white teeth. Mayor D. C. Harris represented the City of Vidalia and paid genuine tribute to and appreciation of James D. Dickerson and his wife, Gussie Pearl Harr Dickerson, inasmuch as this school i named for both. Mayor Harris di not fail to recognize in the audienc one Rube Tolbert (Negro) and too that occasion to appoint him Mayo of the colored citizens of Vidalia. I seems that Rube Tolbert is a five-jo man in Vidalia and has thereby mad a great contribution in his own way Dr. L. H. Darby, Sr., represented Vi dalia Board of Education; Supt C. F Lancaster of Vidalia City Schools rep recented them; and Dr. J. C. Brew ton spoke for Ministerial Organiza tions.

The splendid address of Mr. B. A. Lancaster, acting Supt. of LaGrange (Georgia) Public Schools, was apropos because he gave seven years of service to educational causes in Vidalia prior to coming to LaGrange.

A Negro who was born in Hancock county, Georgia, delivered the dedicatory address. I refer to Benj. F. Hubert, President of State College at Savannah. I never heard Booker T. Washington but it was my guess, as Hubert spoke, that here is a man of "same faith and order" as Booker T. Washington. Hubert's remarks were in the main directed to his own people but so much of it was good for the "inner man" that it was meant also for me. Among other things, he raised the question: of what value is education unless it is practical and has its fruition in worth while accomplishment? Georgia has right to be proud of Benj. F. Hubert.

I was told that Dickerson and his wife have given about thirty-five years of service in the field of training Negro youth in Vidalia. Not many years ago the citizens of Vidalia pinned a medal on Principal Dickerson for his valuable services. He said that he had the medal on on this occasion. I looked for it but it was hidden under a great coat of modesty

Mr. Donald G. Nichols, Asst. State Administrator of WPA at Savannah presented the keys to this institution to Mayor Harris who in turn presented them to Principal James D. Dickerson. It was HIS DAY.

The following were listed for parts on this program but were unable to attend: Col. T. Ross Sharpe of the County Board of Education; Supt. T. P. Spell of the Educational Forces of the County; Mr. R. E. Ledford of the Vidalia Advance; and Miss Gay B Shepperson, State Administrator, W P. A., Atlanta.

Somewhere near the end of the program the studentbody sang a spiritual, "Great Day"—and it was: FOR NEGRO EDUCATION, FOR VIDALIA, FOR GEORGIA, AND FOR ME.

Yours very truly,

Left to right, front row, in the above picture are Mayor Thurston and Mr. Butts; second row, Mr. Stockman, Mark A. Smith and Alton H. Harvey; third row J. H. Wilcox, resident engineer for PWA, A. P. Almond, chief of the architectural department of Robert and Co., and John Patterson of Robert and Co.; in rear is George Drake, superintendent of the school.

The new building was constructed with funds raised from a local bond issue and from a PWA grant, and is considered one of the nicest school buildings in the state for a negro school in a town the size of Thomaston.

The building is complete in every respect. It has all modern conveniences, hardwood floors, plastered walls, modern plumbing facilities, and an auditorium that can be converted into class rooms by means of special doors. It is a brick veneer building.

Mr. Stockman spoke highly of the construction of the building.

Ga. Teachers Visit Capitol In Protest

All Douglas Schools Closed; Dodge Group Stages Caravan

(Picture on Page 3)

Teachers of one Georgia county, aroused over payless pay days and announcement by state authorities no funds will be available before March Wednesday visited the Capitol to impress on legislators their dire financial plight, while schools were closed in another county.

In nearby Douglas County all schools, including the consolidated high school at Douglasville, were ordered closed by the Board of Education, according to Superintendent J. W. Shadix.

VISIT CAPITAL

A caravan of 15 teachers from Eastman and Dodge County, traveling in a school bus, came to the Capitol.

A bill calling on Governor Rivers to report on the amount and status of the stabilization fund in the hope that this can be used to "relieve the desperate plight of the schools" was offered Wednesday in the House by Representative Blease, of Brooks.

The fund comprises 10 per cent of funds of all state departments which is impounded to stabilize finances of the various departments.

"There ought to be about four million dollars in this fund, and the Legislature is entitled to know where this money goes," Blease told the House.

Meanwhile, Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, speaking at a Marietta teachers' meeting Tuesday, expressed confidence "the Legislature will work out a satisfactory solution to the schools' financial crisis."

The Douglas County shut-down, effective Wednesday, closed 14 white and seven negro schools, with 2,800 pupils and 85 teachers.

"EXTENSION IMPOSSIBLE"

Teachers in Douglas County have received pay checks from the state only for September and October, according to Mr. Shadix, with county authorities borrowing money to finance the other three months of 1938-39 operation.

Further credit extension by the county is impossible, Mr. Shadix said.

Dodge County Superintendent W. L. Bowen said no holiday has been declared by Eastman schools or in Dodge County.

Dodge County teachers said more free schoolbooks are available than necessary, but teachers are still unpaid.

The crisis in Dodge County was precipitated, Mr. Bowen said, when state authorities refused to guarantee funds for March, preventing further borrowing to pay teachers

It Costs Georgia A Million And A Half Million Dollars a Year to Teach Children Who Fail To Make Grade

The enormous expense to Georgia in teaching students who fail to make their grade gives much concern to those at the head of the State Educational System. This is one of the sore spots of education in Georgia and educators are still wondering what can be done about it. The casual observer doesn't realize the extent to which the necessity of having students repeat in a grade for one to ten years has gone.

It is estimated that three thousand extra teachers to the state system are required to teach those students who fail of promotion. The cost of teaching repeaters is easily a million and a half million dollars a year.

Let's take a look at the first grade of the white children in Georgia. There are 45,867 white children in Georgia six years of age. You would, of course, expect to have that many in the first grade. However there are 82,617 in the first grade of Georgia's white schools.

Of the 82,617 white children in first grade in Georgia, only 45,867 are six years of age. 19,427 are seven years of age; 8,151 are eight years of age; 4040 are nine years of age; 2,364 are ten years of age; 1149 are eleven years of age; 783 are twelve years of age; 374 are thirteen years of age; 172 are fourteen years of age; 60 are fifteen years of age; 24 are sixteen years of age.

Of the 45,867 who enter first grade at the age of six only 5,667 will graduate from high school in the eleventh grade at the age of 16. Some of the others, of course will drop out of school and others, too many, will drop back from class to class, and six will still be in the first grade at the age of 16.

Let's follow that first grade class down through their grammar school and high school work and see how many make their grades each year. Here is the record:

1st Grade, age six	45,867
2nd	22.298
3rd	18,672
4th	17,451
5th	15,440
6th	13,450
7th	13,082
8th	11,629
9th	9,435
10th	7,890
11th	6,960

You will note that only about thirty per cent of those who enter the first grade at six will complete grammar school with the class at 12, and about fifteen per cent will complete High Schol at the age of 16.

There are two problems about those who fail to make their grades (1) they are not getting from the school the training that is contemplated and (2) The enormous cost of teaching those who repeat grades for one or more years.

Is there a remedy for this condition? We are asking you. There is perhaps a partial remedy in better attendance. Many children fail to make their grades because of poor attendance. This remedy is largely with the patrons. Many would make their grades who do not if they were required to attend school regularly Co-operation with the patrons in this matter will aid in saving the child for greater usefulness and also saving Georgia a great sum of money.

Let's Consider the Negro Schools

With the negro schools of Georgia the table presents a much worse picture. There are in Georgia only 31,469 negro children six years of age, but there are 95,081 negro children in the first grade. Of those who enter the first grade at six more than half will fail of promotion for the next two years and be still in the first grade at the age of eight, and only 729 will complete the eleventh grade at the age of 16.

These are interesting questions to consider and when the problem of repeaters is solved a great saving will be made in Georgia's schools funds.

It Costs Georgia a Million and a Half Million Dollars a Year to Teach Children Who Fail to Make Grade

The enormous expense to Georgia in teaching students who fail to make their grade gives much concern to those at the head of the State Educational System. This is one of the sore spots of education in Georgia and educators are still wondering what can be done about it. The casual observer doesn't realize the extent to which the necessity of having students repeat in a grade for one to ten years has gone.

It is estimated that three thousand extra teachers to the state system are required to teach those students who fail of promotion. The cost of teaching repeaters is easily a million and a half million dollars a year.

Let's take a look at the first grade of the white children in Georgia. There are 45,867 white children in Georgia six years of age. You would of course, expect to have that many in the first grade. However there are 82,617 in the first grade of Georgia's white schools.

Of the 82,617 white children in first grade in Georgia, only 45,867 are six years of age. 19,427 are seven years of age; 8,151 are eight years of age; 4,040 are nine years of age; 2,364 are ten years of age; 1,149 are eleven years of age; 783 are twelve years of age; 374 are thirteen years of age; 172 are fourteen years of age; 60 are fifteen years of age; 24 are sixteen years of age.

Of the 45,867 who enter first grade at the age of six only 5,667 will graduate from high school in the eleventh grade at the age of 16. Some of the others, of course will drop out of school and others, too many, will drop back from class to class, and six will still be in the first grade at the age of 16.

Let's follow that first grade class down through their grammar school and high school work and see how many make their grades each year. Here is the record:

1st grade, age six	45,867
2nd	22,298
3rd	18,672
4th	17,451
5th	15,440
6th	13,450
7th	13,082
8th	11,629
9th	9,435
10th	7,890
11th	6,960

You will note that only about thirty per cent of those who enter the first grade at six will complete grammar school with the class at 12, and about fifteen per cent will complete high school at the age of 16.

There are two problems about those who fail to make their grades, (1) they are not getting from the school the training that is contemplated and (2) The enormous cost of teaching those who repeat grades for one or more years.

Is there a remedy for this condition? We are asking you. There is perhaps a partial remedy in better attendance. Many children fail to make their grades because of poor attendance. This remedy is largely with the patrons. Many would make their grades who do not if they were required to attend school regularly. Co-operation with the patrons in this matter will aid in saving the child for greater usefulness and also saving Georgia a great sum of money.

Let's Consider the Negro Schools

With the negro schools of Georgia the table presents a much worse picture. There are in Georgia only 31,469 negro children six years of age, but there are 95,081 negro children in the first grade. Of those who enter the first grade at six more than half will fail of promotion for the next two years and be still in the first grade at the age of eight, and only 729 will complete the eleventh grade at the age of 16.

These are interesting questions to consider and when the problem of repeaters is solved a great saving will be made in Georgia's school funds.—Lavonia Times.

All Putnam County Schools To Run Usual Term-Garris

Negro Schools Close Friday After Completion of Six Months Of Work

As hundreds of schools over the state closed their doors last week for the year, Putnam county institutions were given the green light to go ahead as usual for the regular nine-months' term.

P. C. Garris, county school superintendent, said that it is true that the state is behind three and one half months with salaries to the teachers, but that the local group had expressed faith in the state to meet its obligations and were willing to continue the usual term provided the county pays for its two months.

Hopes Bright

One of the two months has already been paid with funds granted the board of education by the county commissioners. This grant amounting to $2,160, was given from the W & A rental checw of $7,500 which was given the county for running the courts and schools.

At the time of the grant the commissioners and board of education agreed to work out some means to pay the teachers the remaining nine month. The teachers expressed a belief that this will be done.

There was much argument this week on the streets favoring the commissioners' giving more of the $7,500 to the schools since the state specified that it could be used only for schools and courts. Many stated that other means could be worked out to finance the courts and the larger portion of the $7,500 be given to the schools.

Supt. Garris stated that he is of a firm belief that the schools will continue since the board of education and the county commissioners are working hand in hand on the undertaking.

All Negro schools in the county were closed Friday afternoon after the completion of their six months of work. They usually run seven months.

J. Frank Walker, chairman of the school committee of the council said that the Negro teachers are behind now two months with their pay

NO. 1 SCHOOLBOY PATROLMAN

Ralph Montgomery, 17-year-old schoolboy patrolman from Thomson, is congratulated by Wiley L. Moore for his prize-winning letter on patrol safety work. Ralph wears the medal which accompanied his award. It was donated by Mr. Moore.—Journal Photo.

THOMSON BOY GETS PATROL AWARD

Seeing Kids in Danger Started Him, Ralph Montgomery Says

By ADOLPH ROSENBERG

"Seeing kids in danger started me off."

Thus was inspired the course which led a 16-year-old boy, Ralph Montgomery, to organize the remarkable schoolboy patrol at Thomson, Ga., which Wednesday night brought him the Wiley L. Moore Medal awarded to the outstanding Georgia schoolboy patroller in 1939.

Uppermost in his mind had been the traffic problem. When one of his younger playmates stepped in front of an automobile after school one day last September and was nearly run over, Ralph resolved to act.

Without civic groups to back him, and without the urging of schoolteachers, the boy organized the patrol, conducted daily meetings with the patrol members, supervised weekly chapel programs on safety, formed a student court for traffic violators and spread the program into the negro schools of McDuffie County.

One of the traffic violators, Captain Montgomery said at the banquet given by Wiley L. Moore, Atlanta businessman, in honor of 65 of the 8,000 Georgia schoolboy patrol members, was Superintendent Lon L. Fleming, who was accused of jay-walking. Found guilty, Mr. Fleming was sentenced to give a 10-minute talk on safety in chapel.

A Student Penalty

Persistent traffic violations brought a Thomson student penalty sentences adding up to 10 hours after school. The punishment turned the youth toward schoolboy patrol work, and he now, is one of Captain Montgomery's 33 mainstays.

The Thomson youth, now 17 years old, a junior in school and a former Atlanta Journal route carrier, was awarded the medal by Governor Rivers.

The banquet marked the climax of a four-day encampment for the patrol boys at Piedmont Park. Their presence is largely due to sponsorship of local American Legion posts who brought them to Atlanta.

Twenty of the sixty-five boys wrote prize letters to the Governor on the traffic situation and will be rewarded with a trip to the World Fair in New York, presented by Mr. Moore.

Patrolmen Chaperons

Accompanying the boys as chaperons will be four members of the Georgia Highway Patrol, selected for meritorious service to the state. The chaperons will be Sergeant G. H. Standard of Gainesville, Corporal P. A. Collier of Cartersville, Trooper W. E. Lee of Americus and Trooper P. B. Weeks of Madison.

Phil Brewster, commissioner of safety for the State of Georgia, contrasted the duties of schoolboy patrols in the cities and in rural areas in a talk stressing the reduction in traffic fatalities for Georgia during the last four years.

Others on the program included: Mayor Hartsfield, Lon Sullivan, deputy director of the State Highway Patrol; Judge Virlyn B. Moore and Marvin Thomas, of the Atlanta Police Traffic Bureau.

The boys winning trips to the fair, besides Ralph Montgomery, are: Jack Wheeler, of Maysville; Derward Garrett, of Hawkinsville; Emory Blasingame, of Musella; Allen Matthews, of Thomaston; Mercer Inkram, of Bainbridge; Jack Barnard, of Dacula; Spencer Jarnagin, of Thomasville; Rayford Brooks, of Trion; B. W. Baker Jr., of Lawrenceville; Ronald Widner, of Metter; William Bell, of Sylvania; Albert Bradley, of Buford; Terrel Quick? of LaGrange; Ancel Dyal, of Baxley; Robert Hightower, of Richland; Charles Ruff, of Elberton; John Emory Mullis, of Alma; Harold Higgins, of Bremen, and Millard Agerton, of Preston.

Enrollment in Atlanta Schools Drops Slightly

Total enrollment in the Atlanta Public School System stands at 48,833 this week as compared with 48,893 for the first week of school a year ago, the School Department announced.

The breakdown in figures shows 33,388 white pupils and 15,445 colored. Indications are the colored enrollment will be several hundred more this year than last.

Several hundred more will be added to the total next week with the opening of the night schools and the Smith Hughes School.

Totals for the first week are: White elementary 18,892; coloerd elementary, 10,696; junior high white, 8,001; colored junior high, 2,734; senior high school white, 5,900 and colored senior high 1,983; white specials, 595, and colored specials, 32.

The Teacher Shortage

ACCORDING TO INFORMATION from the Department of Negro Education in this state there is a decided shortage in teachers for the carrying on of the public schools. In spite of the unemployment situation in Georgia there are some good paying jobs in the field of teaching school going by the board.

Many people are led to wonder why this shortage of good white collar jobs, commanding the first prestige of the community and promise of pay day every twenty days.

The requirement of qualification for teachers in the public schools has been lifted. In the old field school as soon as some ambitious student in the community could pass the state examination for teachers and obtain as low as a third grade license, he or she was permitted to teach in the public school.

This system placed in authority all over the state in the rural schools and many town and city systems, teachers who had barely finished the grades to say nothing about high school training. Many of our eminent professional men came by these teachers, who have taught in the state ever since the civil war. The present state law has weeded this system out and only those who are already in the system and who take summer work, making towards the requirement for their credits are allowed to remain.

The state now requires that teachers have at least two years of college training in order to teach in the system. This law keeps those out who might apply for work, while many of those who could meet the requirement do not desire the field of teaching. In that there is a shortage.

The state now meets itself. Up until a few short yearse ago the state made little provision for its colored students to prepare for higher education. Even now there are many counties in the state making no provisions for high school education. Many of those who are now meeting the state's requirements for teaching are doing so at great expense to themselves and their parents in finishing their work outside the borders of the state.

Buses are being used in this state today for the transportation of white children to the county high school, while the colored children, after completing the public schools are forced to go off to do their high school work and pay board and tuition out of their own pokets.

Many of these students cannot bear the heavy expense.

With what they have they cannot go ahead and teach a few terms in order to get the money to complete their education as many of us used to do long time ago. So, they stop where they are, marry and raise families, while people from outside the state, where the requirements of the state are carried on by other schools, are coming into the state to do the teaching.

While we admire the raise in qualification for teaching, the state is culpable for the meager facilities it has offered its colored subjects. It is partly responsible for them not being able to make the grade and incidently, the attendant shortage in educational equipment it now faces in regards to the manning of its schools under the law for colored children.

While we have always fought for better preparation for teachers, and a half loaf beats none, we would suggest that the law be modified to the extent of allowing those with a high school diploma to teach in the public schools for a while longer. Let them begin in summer schools making credits toward the two years college work required. There are many fine young men and women in the satte who have done creditable high school work and can teach in the rural schools and city schools also for that matter, as well or better than many college graduates.

The rural schools carry the student through the seventh grade and surely the fine equipment now turned out by our high schools is ample to take care of our rural schools. We do not want to see the rural children left out doors, without schools or teachers as we have seen in this state.

The crops will soon be gathered and if these schools are not forthcoming in the accustomed old one-room shanty and church buildings, these parents are going to attempt the almost impossible sacrifice of sending some of the children to nearby schools to board and pay tuition for the measly education they are to get.

Since the state is culpable, le it meet the poor folks half way in this school teacher shortage.

Colored Atlantans Need Better Schools--Sutton

School Head Quizzed By Ministers

By REV. B. R. HOLMES

"The colored people of Atlanta need better schools and the double-session should be abolished," declared Dr. Willis Sutton superintendent of public schools in his address to the Atlanta Ministerial Council, Wednesday afternoon at Bethel AME church. The Rev. M. L. King presided.

"There is difference of opinion among the leading colored people as to married teachers being in the system," continued Dr. Sutton, "I believe the selection of teachers should be based upon efficiency."

At the close of the very informative address which was composed of statistical records of the colored population in several cities and states a very spirited discussion arose which gave food for thought to the ministers who had been dreaming of this opportunity to express themselves. The discussion was led by Rev. D. T. Babcock, pastor, Big Bethel AME church, and Rev. M. L. King, pastor of Ebenezer Baptist church.

INTERESTING DISCUSSION

Dr. Babcock said he is not opposed to married teachers being continued in the system, but he opposes married teachers holding positions whose husbands are financially able to support them, especially when other teachers' conditions were not as good.

Rev. King said, "The question of married teachers being continued in the system, should have careful consideration, and an investigation should be made as to their financial condition before any eliminations are made."

Rev. B. R. Holmes, president of the Holmes Institute, asked Mr. Sutton the minimum and maximum salaries of colored teachers as compared to the white. Dr. Sutton replied he could not give a definite answer to the question at that time.

The bond issue to raise funds to build schools was brought up for discussion by Rev. Wm. H. Borders, pastor of Wheat Street Baptist church.

Reverends W. H. Paschal, R. H. Porter, Henry Thornton, A. G Davis, J. R. Barnett, M. L. Murry, B. V. Thornton and others took part in the discussion.

J. C. McMorries, secretary of the Urban League, said, "Peace will never come among the colored people until equal distribution of public funds is given to all teachers."

May Appoint Chicagoan To Board of Education

CHICAGO —(ANP)—It was reliably reported at last weekend that Mayor Edward Kelly's citizens' advisory committee on schools had recommended one of their number—Dr. W. O. Bousfield—for appointment as a member of the board of education.

It was said the Mayor looks with favor on the appointment and should Dr. Bousfield be selected to fill the remaining vacancy on the board, he will be the first Negro to win the post.

Widely known in civic, medical and cultural circles, Dr. Bousfield is medica director of the Rosenwald fund, a vice president of Supreme Liberty Life Insurance company and an official of several social welfair organizations.

Chicago Kids Are Being Gyped . . . . . They Get 40 Per Cent Less Schooling Than White Children . . . They Attend Over-Crowded, Ill-Equipped Schools

By GEORGE F. McCRAY
(The Record Weekly)

Chicago's Negro children are being treated as step-children. They are being made the victims of a deliberate program which denies them proper schooling. In spite of their eagerness for education, they are systematically being discriminated against in the city's "free" public schools.

from a complete survey comparing the school facilities for Negro and white children in Chicago.

The overwhelming majority of Negro children spend less time in school than do other children. Generally other children spend five hours per day in school. Negro children get only three hours.

Negro school children constitute over one-twelfth of all school children in the city. When they reach maturity they are denied equal economic opportunity. They are the victims of relentless segregation, and only little less relentless discrimination. They come from poverty-stricken families—who through no fault of their own contribute more than their share to the criminal and delinquent population.

Negro children, who need the protection of an efficient school system most, are herded into schools which are on the verge of complete collapse as places where young children might learn something of the arts and sciences of life before they assume the responsibilities of adults.

The people who are responsible for the condition of the schools which Negro children attend, are robbing them of their chances in future life just as effectively as slavery took from the slaves their chances to become self-respecting and efficient citizens. The only difference between these men who rob Negro children of their chance for a successful life, and the hold-up man lurking in a dark alley, is the fact that the depredations of the hold-up man are less systematic, and far-reaching in their effects. Indeed, he is by no means as great a menace to society.

In the South side area, heavily populated by Negroes, there are 24 schools and branches. The area contains the largest elementary and high schools in the country. Ten years ago, 1929, these schools had a membership of 22,291; they now have a membership of 36,683.

This is all the more phenomenal because the total school population of Chicago actually decreased five per cent.

Of the 14 "double schools" in the city, 13 are in the Negro community. In a double school half of the children attend from 8 a.m. to 12, the rest from 12:15 to 4 or 4:30. One group of teachers teaches the group that comes in the morning, a second group those that come in the afternoon. This arrangement applies to all grades.

That this situation has reached alarming proportions is seen in the fact that of the 31,169 elementary school children attending the 24 schools in the near South side area 23,876 or 76 per cent of them spend 40 per cent less time in school than do other children.

Two other schools are "half day divisions schools" in which the two teachers occupy a single room during a normal school day, but each teacher teaches two sets of children. When the number of children in half-day division schools is added to the number in double schools the shocking fact is revealed that eight per cent of the children in 24 near South side schools are not being prepared to enter high school at a normal high school level.

The overcrowding increases depreciation of school structures and equipment, baffles and destroys the morale of both teachers and pupils.

The Board of Education which is supposed to administer equal educational opportunity to the children of Chicago, has stubbornly refused to permit Negro children in the near South side area to go to school in adjoining areas. This it has refused to do even though white children in the area were sent into adjoining areas, and even though enrollment in schools adjacent to the Negro area was consistently declining.

Whenever the board was considering redistricting to relieve pressure on South side schools and to save the tax payers money, the restrictive covenant groups, supported by The Chicago Real Estate Board and the University of Chicago, would block its efforts.

What the board has done is build. What it proposes to do is build even more additions to the massive structures it has already constructed. This building program is carried out on the assumption that Negro citizens will be for an indefinite period restricted from living in other areas: the board reports it is doing the best it can and that the situation is in reality a housing problem.

Three constructive steps carried to completion between 1933 and the present date are: (1) The elimination of 41 portables (one-room auxiliary school houses); (2) the reduction of the class loads of 45 pupils per teacher to 39.7 pupils per teacher. To relieve the teacher loads and thus improve instruction, this reduction from 45 pupils to 39.7 pupils per division has required the addition of nearly 70 more teachers for the 24 schools in this section of the city, in addition to the teachers assigned to take care of the increased enrollment; (3) the construction of eight new elementary and high school buildings and additions at a cost of $4,676,813

"CRIME AGAINST NEGRO SCHOOL CHILDREN"

By GEORGE F. McCRAY

More than 400 organized groups including churches, labor organizations, Parent-Teacher associations, clubs, forums, alliances professional and business associations are being aroused to concerted community action regarding the raw deal Negro children are receiving in Chicago's public schools. The Chicago Council Negro National Congress is actively organizing this city-wide protest. Active leaders in the movement are Mrs. Lillian Summers and George McCray, president and executive secretary, respectively, of the National Negro Congress, Dr. J. J. Peters, Mrs. Eva Wells, and Dean H. M. Smith.

Chicago has a population of nearly 4 million people divided among 25 distinct racial and national groups.

The Negro population, well over 300,000, includes thousands of men and women who came north in search of better educational opportunities for themselves and their children. It is an ironic commentary on the Chicago school situation as it affects Negroes that although the Chicago school system is one of the most expensive systems in the world, yet in it the treatment of Negro children is on a level with education of Negroes in Mississippi.

The crying shame of Chicago schools in the Negro areas is "the doubleshift school". In a doubleshift school half the children attend from 8 a. m. to 12, the rest from 12:15 to 4 or 4:30 p. m. One group of teachers teaches the children that come in the morning, a second group those that come in the afternoon. This arrangement applies to all grades.

So unsatisfactory to both child and community are these doubleshift schools that in all of Chicago there are only 14 . . . but all of these except one are to be found in the sections of the city where the Negro population is heaviest.

This overcrowding of and inadequate facilities for Negro children in Chicago's public schools is summed up graphically in the following figures . . . 76% of the Negro children spend 40% less time in school than do children outside of the colored communities in Chicago.

Remember these children are not playing hookey . . . they are losing 40% of their school time with the consent and approval of the city and school officials of our city.

Another sore spot is the stubborn refusal of Chicago's Board of Education to permit Negro children in the near south-side area to go to school in nearby areas bordering the colored neighborhoods. It has refused this permission to Negro children while at the same time white children living in the colored area are sent out of the district to schools in adjoining areas.

The overcrowding increases depreciation of school structures and equipment, baffles and destroys the morale of both teachers and pupils. Only teachers having the most missionary spirit remain. The great majority leaves as quickly as possible. Thus the salaries of teachers on the near south-side are substantially lower because they are comparatively new teachers as a group. However, as teachers they might be better than many who have been in the system for years.

The Board of Education which is supposed to administer equal educational opportunities to the children of Chicago, has not shown much courage in facing its problems. Whenever the Board was considering redistricting to relieve pressure on South Side schools and to save the taxpayers' money, the restrictive covenant groups, supported by the Chicago Real Estate Board and the University of Chicago, would block its efforts.

What answer does the thoughtful Chicago citizen have as he faces this criminal neglect and segregation of Negro children in over-crowded, part-time, public schools in the Negro neighborhoods of Chicago?

Georgia's Colored Schools

The activity in the education of negroes at the Georgia State College, adjacent to Savannah, and at other points in the southeastern section of the state, makes of interest the urge at a meeting of negroes at Atlantic City for a wider sphere of education of negroes.

The American Teachers Association, representing 40,000 negro school teachers, has been in session at the New Jersey resort recently and it heard some reports to indicate widespread and continued activity in the matter of negro education.

There was a strong plea for an extension of the service through which negroes are given education in the Southern states. What the negroes appear to desire more than anything else is the furnishing of buildings for school purposes upon the part of Southern communities. To this end the aid of the representative negroes was pledged.

The negro schools in and around Savannah are among the best in the state. The last action of the Board of Education in supplying new school buildings or additional school buildings was directed toward the negro pupils and their needs.

The situation as to negro schools seems to improve in Georgia and other Southern states through the co-operation of local or state boards with those of federal direction. The college for negroes adjacent to Savannah has received its full share of immediate attention in the matter of new buildings and added departments of learning.

If the Georgia schools can receive adequate financial treatment from the state both the white and colored institutions will go forward as they deserve to do.

INFLUX FROM SOUTH CROWDS CHI. SCHOOLS

CHICAGO, (ANP)—Rapid migration of Southern Negroes to Chicago since 1934 will force the board of education to spend $1,265,000 this year in building one new school and erecting additions to six others in an effort to relieve congestion. Already since 1933 seven schools and additions have been erected.

Negro students in the 12 schools studied total 20,588. Of this number 4,415 or 21.4 per cent have come to Chicago from the South since September, 1934. Since last September 10 per cent have come here. Most of them came from Mississippi, Alabama Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas. Meanwhile, since last September, Only 324 or 1 1-2 per cent of the pupils have come from northern states.

Discrimination against the Negro by Southern WPA executives is held mainly responsible for the migration. Larger W. P. A. wages are paid in Chicago than in Dixie. colored workers receive better treatment and find it easier to get such jobs than in the South. Many Negroes have a higher standard of living under the WPA in Chicago than in private employment in the South.

Letters to the Editor

THE VIRGINIAN-PILOT is glad to print what a correspondent thinks is "the positive" side—Of course, if the School Board had not renewed the contract of a white teacher in comparable circumstances, we should think the action equally a mistake.

Editor, Virginian-Pilot:

I have always felt that you as a newspaper were fair minded and analyzed situations before giving expression, but you and many others who appear in the "Letters to the Editor" seem to have gotten on a one-sided and unsound track all about the Norfolk City School Board's failure to renew Miss Black's contract for another year. If her feeling was such as was indicated by her bringing suit for a raise in her salary to equal other teachers' pay, is she desirable to be retained in the school system?

All white teachers do not get the same pay. All principals do not get the same pay. If any one of these should institute a suit to force equalization of salaries, would he or she be offered a contract for renewal? Not at all. Then it is not a matter of color. These people who eternally say, "The Negro has no opportunity, is discriminated against, etc.," should take a ride out on Broad Creek road, on Rugby street and other sections and they will find houses, many of them, over the average found in Brambleton, Atlantic City, Lamberts Point, Fairmount Park and Park Place. Then the Negro does have a chance.

Take such Negroes as Dr. Bolling, Dr. Byrd, Lawyer Diggs and many others in Norfolk. How did they reach such standing with "no opportunity" given them?

If we will take into consideration the Negro, as a race since slavery, is only 75 years old, and if we will give careful study to this, we will find he has made more progress proportionately than has the white man. How has he been able to make this progress with all the racial projudice your writers indicate exists? Consider Dr. Carver, world known scientist. Did he have a chance?

When the War Between the States was over, the South was a place of devastation, laid low by the Northern soldiers, stripped of everything; what could not be carried away was destroyed and burned, as was evidenced by Sherman's march through Georgia. Both white and black fared alike and we find as many poor whites as poor Negroes if we keep a balanced thinking.

I have no friendship on the School Board, not even a speaking acquaintance with any member, but I am a fair minded citizen and believe we can promote friendship between all races by showing what has been done rather than magnifying what is only seemingly not done. If you present the negative, it is only fair to also present the positive.

Board Outlaws Negro "Trustees"

Negro school trustees—some serving by self-appointment and others through election by negro groups, were outlawed yesterday by the board after it was shown that the negro "trustees" in Tarpon Springs were largely responsible for the trouble between the two negro teachers.

It was brought out that there are negro trustees in almost every school district maintaining negro schools and that work in the negro schools was left largely in the hands of the negroes by white trustees who are regularly elected.

The board will advise the white trustees that they should do their own work without recommendation from the negro trustees.

Not For Honor

THE NEGROES of this city do not desire representation in its government for the sake of the honor attached to such a representation. Honor, though often desired, is an empty quantity, when it is not accompanied by a recognition and a power commensurate with the functions of the office it points out. It is so, therefore, that we are desirous of having representation upon the board of education for the good that such a representation may bring to the group, wholly aside from the honor accruing to the person who holds membership on said board. We want a Negro member of this important board because we are deserving of such recognition as a large part of the citizenry of this city. A Negro member on the board will mean an assurance to the more than two hundred thousand Negro citizens that the interests of their children will be looked after by one who is near to them.

For the past twenty-four years Negroes of Chicago have been asking for a place upon this important board For just as long a time our requests have gone unheeded by those whose power it was to place a Negro in such a position. We think, now, however, that the time is at hand when a Negro should be chosen as a member of the Chicago board of education, not for honor, but for the service he may be able to render as a representative of a distinct group of citizens of this municipality. It is useless to assume that the Negro group can and will be fittingly represented in such matters by one, no matter how capable he may be, other than one of its own members. This is a condition for which the Negro is not responsible, but which, nevertheless, is very real. It must be faced squarely, if fairness is to be the reward of all

We have long wondered why Negroes are not given representation upon such important bodies. It certainly is not because of a lack of capable men and women to fill such positions acceptably. There are a number of well qualified men who would not only discharge their incumbent duties acceptably, but who would be a credit to the board as a whole, and to the city as well. It is to be hoped that our mayor will appoint some one of the many capable men to fill the vacancy now existing upon the board, for the sake of the real good such an appointment will mean to the city.

SOUTH SIDE STILL WAITS FOR NEW SCHOOL

Plans for Six in "Sketch" Stage

While four of the sixteen new school buildings or additions for the south side are scheduled for completion next month, before the opening of the new school term if possible, and construction work on five others is underway, six of the remaining seven in the area where the total enrollment is predominately co'ored are still in the embryonic or "sketch" stage it was disclosed this week.

This revelation was noted in a report to Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools by Don C. Rogers, director of building survey for the board of education. The total valuation of the projects, part of one of the most extensive public school building programs of recent years, Rogers said, is $7,792,000.

Get $2,115,000 for Buildings

Of this amount $2,115,000 will be expended in additions, new buildings and improvements to DuSable high school, 4935 South Wabash avenue; Fuller elementary, 547 E. 42nd street; McCosh elementary, 6543 Champlain avenue; Carter elementary, 5740 So. Michigan avenue; Colman elementary, 4655 So. Dearborn and Douglas elementary, 3200 Calumet avenue.

DuSable, coming in for the largest share in these appropriations, will receive an addition costing $750,000 which will provide more space for 1,500 extra boys and girls. The addition it was revealed is in the advanced plan stage. The necessary site has been acquired and the architects are now working on the preliminary sketches.

Fuller to Get New Building

At Fuller a new $350,000 building to contain 28 classrooms, a kindergarten, gymnasium and assembly hall is in the sketch stage. Negotiations for additional sites are underway. McCosh will get a six classroom, $90,000 addition, but construction has not yet been started.

Carter's $350,000 addition providing thirty new classrooms and service rooms is also in the embryonic stage while negotiations are being made to acquire the necessary site.

The same applies to Colman, where plans have been completed for a twenty classroom addition to cost about $300,000 and Douglas, which is to secure a $275,000 addition. When these necessary additions and improvements sorely needed to alleviate the overcrowded school situation in the immediate community will get under way was not disclosed in Rogers' report, however.

EX-ST. LOUISAN NAMED PRINCIPAL

Maudell Bousfield At Wendell Phillips

CHICAGO—(A N P)—Mrs. M. O. Bousfield, well known educator and wife of the Negro health director of the Rosenwald Fund, assumed her new duties Tuesday as principal of Wendell Phillips high school as the fall term began. Appointment of Mrs. Bousfield, first Negro to become principal of a high school in Chicago, was not revealed until last weekend.

A native of St. Louis, the new principal holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Illinois, where she majored in mathematics, and a master's degree from the University of Chicago. She taught for one year in East St. Louis, Ill., and six in Baltimore before being appointed in the local school system in 1922.

Mrs. Bousfield taught for five years at Wendell Phillips, then in 1927 was named principal of Keith elementary school, and in 1931 principal of Douglass elementary school. During the depression several schools were shut down and consolidated, so in 1933 she returned to Phillips as an instructor and also head teacher at Dunbar school. A year later Douglass was reopened and Mrs. Bousfield returned as principal, holding that position until her recent appointment. Mrs. Bousfield is the daughter of Mr. Charles Brown, principal of Wheatley School.

Parents May Take Fight To Retain Race School To Kentucky Courts

Defender 9-16-39 Chicago Def

CENTRAL CITY, Ky., Sept 15—Children of this city have been denied a secondary education through an arbitrary action of the local board of education and Tim Meinshein school superintendent, which closed the local high school for Race students. Students have been transferred to Drakesboro county high school, eight miles from here.

The announcement that the school was to be discontinued came as a shock to residents here. No indication of the action was given and much of the dissatisfaction arises from the fact that members of the Race were not consulted about the change.

The local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has already contacted Attys. Charles W. Anderson member of the state legislature and Prentiss Thomas to study what legal action can be taken to rescind the board's action.

The closing of the school is the highpoint in what has appeared to be a campaign to discourage members of the Race from attending schools here.

Salaries for Race teachers here are probably the lowest in the state. An indication of salary differentials here can be gleaned from the 1935-36 report of the local school board.

According to the report, the superintendent of schools' annual salary is $346 in excess of the combined salaries of all Race teachers here.

More startling perhaps is the fact that the janitor of the white high school receives a salary which is $280 in excess of that paid Race primary and elementary teachers; $244 in excess of Race high school teachers; $91 more than the salary of the principal of the Race high school and $755 more than the salary received by the janitor of the Race high school.

George Taylor, principal of the white high school draws $1,179 more in salary than the principal of the Race high school.

This disproportionate salary paid the superintendent would pay the following number of Race teachers under the existing wage scale: seven elementary, four high school teachers, three high school principals, with sufficient surplus to make needed repairs on some of the Race school buildings.

The white high school janitor's salary would pay the salaries of more than six Race janitors under the present salary scale.

The injustice of the situation existing here becomes more apparent when it is known that Race citizens pay taxes either on property owned by them or as rent which are far in excess of what they in turn receive from the city.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Vocational agriculture, home economics, and trade and industrial teachers began their summer terms in the various teacher training institutions last week or will begin in a few weeks. These teachers will find a liberal offering of courses at State College, State Teachers College, and Alcorn A. & M. College for Negroes.

There are 223 white vocational agriculture teachers in Mississippi and a large number of these teachers will be in summer school at Mississippi State College or some other teacher training institution. Courses for 117 Negro vocational teachers began at Alcorn College on June 5, and practically all of these teachers are in attendance at that place.

The vocational home economics teachers will receive their summer courses at State Teachers College. There are 339 teachers employed in this field in the 318 vocational home economics departments in the state. A four weeks course in professional improvement for Negro vocational home economics teachers will be held at Alcorn A. & M. College Alcorn, Mississippi.

There will be two conferences for teachers of trade and industrial education. Coordinators of diversified occupations programs began their summer conference on June 5. The conference for part-time commercial teachers will begin at State College on June 19 and will last for a two weeks period. The conference for Negro shop teachers began at Alcorn College on June 5.

The various courses for teachers in all three fields will serve to renew licenses, for professional improvement and graduate credit in some instances. Various teacher training institutions are to be congratulated on the very fine progress they have made toward developing teachers in the various fields.

Besides courses listed above, we have teachers of vocational education in the various services who will participate in summer schools at the University of Tennessee Colorado State College, University of Alabama, University of Missouri, University of Florida, Tuskegee Institute for Negroes, and several other institutions.

Superintendents, trustees, county superintendents, and any other interested parties are welcomed at any of the various teacher training institutions at any time during the summer courses.

NEW SCHOOL TO BE ERECTED FOR NEGRO CHILDREN

A drive to secure funds for the erection of a new and larger school for the colored children in this city has been initiated by Most Rev. Daniel F. Desmond, bishop of Alexnadria.

Heretofore, the school for the colored children has been conducted by the Sisters of Divine providence in a small two-story room, erected by the late Bishop Durier, some fifty years ago, for that purpose. This building is now entirely too small to accom[illegible]ate the number of children [illegible]ding and it is necessary to e[illegible] new building to meet the [illegible] of St. Anthony's growing [illegible]. The bishop has approved plans for a new one to be erected next to St. Anthony's church, corner Fifth and Pavie streets.

Work on the building will begin immediately in order to have the school in readiness for the opening of the school term in September.

Do Colored Children Eat Less Than White Children?

Louisiana Weekly 11-4-39

A NEWS article released from Baton Rouge, La., last week-end revealed that T. H. Harris, State Superintendent of Education, had announced the basis on which free lunch money for school children in the State would be distributed. Harris stated that each white child would get 61.327 cents, and each Negro pupil 19.741 cents, a total of $212,500 for white schools and $37,500 for Negro schools. Free lunch tickets would be given the children each day for hot meals. New Orleans La.

According to this distribution, the Colored child would get about one-third of what would be allotted to the white pupil. Does this mean that the State Education Board believes the Negro pupil not capable of eating as much as the white pupil? We do not think so. On the contrary, we think that the difference will be in the food served. Anything, so long as it is filling, will be satisfactory for the Negro pupil, while most likely, attention will be directed toward giving the white child the proper food for growing children. The difference between the food served the two groups may mean the difference between a strong healthy, young body and a weak, puny one.

We grown-ups have pride in our children. The Negro child has a hard road to travel. We want to see him grow up to be a strong, healthy man, to be in condition to fight the many things, that we who grew up after slavery, had to fight. Therefore, though we have grown up to know discrimination, it is a little discouraging to see our children bearing the brunt of discrimination, especially where it concerns their little bodies.

Louisiana Weekly

Since we have been informed of the basis on which this money for free lunches will be distributed, we can only hope that if the amount granted each Colored child is found to be insufficient, that the amount will be increased, because Colored children need just as much as white children.

Maryland Threatens To Fire Race Teachers

BALTIMORE, Md.—There is nothing in the laws of Maryland to prevent the state from throwing out all its colored teachers and replacing them with whites, if the Federal Court rules that the salaries of Negro and white teachers doing the same work, must be equalized.

This was the threat made by William C. Walsh, state's attorney general, when the case of Walter Mills, a Negro public school teacher, of Parole, Md., was heard here January 14, in the United States district court before Judge W. Calvin Chestnut, as reported in last week's Journal and Guide.

The attorney general stressed the fact that Maryland operated a segregated school system, and was therefore not obliged to pay white and colored teachers the same salaries even though both were doing the same work.

The total annual difference in white and Negro teachers' salaries in Maryland is now about $480,000

Mills, who is represented by Thurgood Marshall, assistant special counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Charles H. Houston and Leon A. Ransom, is seeking an injunction to restrain the state from distributing its educational funds for teachers' salaries in a manner which discriminates against Negro teachers.

After hearing both sides Judge Chestnut reserved decision on the state's motion to dismiss the injunction.

"Maryland Would Replace All Negro Teachers With Whites," Says State's Att'y General

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 26—There is nothing in the laws of Maryland to prevent the State from throwing out all its colored teachers and replacing them with whites, if the Federal Court rules that the salaries of Negro and white teachers doing the same work must be equalized.

This was the threat made by William C. Walsh, State's attorney general, when the case of Walter Mills, a Negro public school teacher of Parole, Md., was heard here January 14 in the United States District Court before Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

The attorney general stressed the fact that Maryland operated a segregated school system, and was therefore not obliged to pay white and colored teachers the same salaries, even though both were doing the same work.

The total annual difference in white and Negro teachers' salaries in Maryland is now about $480,000

Ransom, is seeking an injunction to restrain the State from distributing its educational funds for teachers' salaries in a manner which discriminates against Negro teachers.

After hearing both sides, Judge Chesnut reserved decision on the State's motion to dismiss the injunction.

Such Could Happen

NOW IT IS THAT Maryland's state's attorney general has directed the most brazen threat at the economic security of the Negro in years wherein he warn that Negro teachers may be replaced by whites of the Federal Court rules that the salaries of Negro and white teachers are equalized.

And, the colored brother need not sit supinelly by and exclaim, "It Can't Be Done." Yes, it can be done, and done in a manner that will make the Negro like it, even in the face of so unjust a plan.

Unless Negro teachers in schools throughout our land readily awake to the seriousness of their plight, toss out inefficiency, irregular conduct, and devote more effort to efficiently plying their profession, there is positively no telling what might happen, and whatever happens, the Negroes themselves will be responsible.

Petty bickerings, factionalism within their group and conduct bodering on frivolity are more in evidence among certain teachers of the Negro racial group than can be noticed among other races. It's not so much that the white people are growing tired of such, but the parents of youngsters who are placed in charged of this type of instructor are impatient and wholly dissatisfied with such, and they are demanding a change, even at the expense of the economic security of the race being threatened.

The entire matter of equal salaries and equal consideration rests in the hands of the teachers themselves. Wher they get right, the masses will fall in behind them to protect them fully.

Discrimination On PWA Grant Causes Penalty

Drastic Action Follows Dismissal Of Negroes On School Project

12-14-39

A penalty deduction of $3,313.35 from the PWA grant base on construction of a $408,000 school at Wyandotte, Michigan, has been ordered by Col. E. W. Clark, Acting Commissioner of the Public Works Administration. The deduction was made in grounds that racial discrimination was shown in the employment of workers on the project.

The order means that PWA will withdraw 45 per cent of the amount named—about $1,490—from the $183,000 PWA grant made to the Public School District of Wyandotte for the project.

Action was taken following a PWA investigation of complaints that Negroes were being denied employment on the construction because of race. The investigator's report substantiated charges by five Negroes that subcontractors had refused them employment or had dismissed them shortly after they were hired on the grounds that Negroes could not work on the project.

The penalty was imposed under a provision of "Terms and Conditions" (PWA Form 30, Part IV, paragraph 7), which is a part of the financial agreement under which the PWA grant is made. This paragraph requires that, except as otherwise provided, qualified workers referred for work on the project, "shall not be discriminated against on any grounds whatsoever." The investigator's report found that the construction was being done with union labor and that the five Negroes were furnished by the union to the subcontractors as is required on union jobs

COMMON SCHOOLS, CONDITION OF MISSISSIPPI

Educational Needs Of Race Recognized In Mississippi

No High Schools Found In 15 Counties Of State

By LEON LEWIS

ALCORN, Miss.—(A N P)—According to a report of State Superintendent of Education L. S. Rogers, Negro education has suffered from lack of proper facilities and absence of a realization that Negroes constitute half of the population of the state and any hold back of them seriously effects the general progress of the state.

An extensive program for Negro public education was motivated after a survey showed that in 15 counties there are no high school facilities for 48,697 Negro educable children; in 53 counties 84,651 Negro children have no high school facilities outside of towns and cities.

Although since this report some improvements have been made in the efforts to provide better educational facilities for Negroes, that is, high school education, it is found that out of more than 117,000 Negroes in the state of high school age, schols and facilities are available for only a little over 8,000.

AS WHOLE COMMUNITY

In referring to a schoel in the state that was his ideal for Negroes, State Agent P. H. Easom addressed Superintendent Rogers: "As a result of this type of school the tenant farmers of the community are growing more gardens, more chickens, more flowers and shrubbery. They are living better and they are more contented. They are moving around less in the community and less out of the community. They are healthier and they are more interested in the school. As a result of this enterprise the white people of this more interested in the colored people and the school. They are doing more for the school.

This is indicative of how better school facilities for Negroes affect the entire community, its general attitude towards Negroes and conditions.

A few years back this situation with the fact that few Negroes of the state or who wanted to come into the state qualified to teach, owing to the fact that the annual salary for Negro rural teachers was only $125 and for city teachers, $280, as compared with $246, and $542 respectively, for Georgia, the next southern state in rank of paying teachers' salaries, and $590.63 and $771.16 respectively, for Kentucky, the highest of the southern states.

SUPERINTENDENT GERLING

In a letter recently made public, Superintendent of Schools Henry J. Gerling makes a feeble effort to defend his conduct toward the colored parents, teachers and children of St. Louis by an attack on the editor of the St. Louis Argus because we have from time to time, called the attention of the public to the superintendent's mistreatment of Negro children, teachers and parents in the administration of school affairs. In his letter Mr. Gerling has this to say:

Argus 2-24-39
St. Louis Mo.

"I am not concerned about the diatribes that come from the individual who issues the sheet known as the Argus. My concern is for the orderly progress of the Negro schools of St. Louis.

Building operations now under way show that we are making this progress. We shall continue to do so irrespective of the attitudes and purposes of individuals.

I am much interested in the views and cooperation of Negro Citizens for whose motives and judgments I have genuine respect. Critical intimations by the Argus will not deter me and I am sure also will not deter citizens of the type with whom I have conferred. I shall continue to rely on them for expressions of the needs and interests of our Negro Children.

One wonders about the motives of the repeated assaults that have appeared in the Argus. This much is certain. Neither the desire for jobs nor the desire to favor any individual will influence the actions of the Department of Instruction.

HENRY J. GERLING
Superintendent."

It will be noticed that Mr. Gerling states that he is not concerned about what the Argus has to say about his administration. All that we have said about the administration is true. He has manipulated the affairs of the schools so as to rob not only the colored pupils of the things to which they are justly entitled from the standpoint of education, but also he has robbed the teachers and parents.

The teachers have been robbed of the salaries that rightfully belong to them by being forced to carry a larger teaching load than is required of white teachers. For instance, in the Vashon and Sumner High Schools the average daily load per teacher is, Sumner, 29 and Vashon, 28 while the average load per teacher at Cleveland is 24 and McKinley, 24. Thus we see that Vashon is ten teachers short and Sumner is eleven teachers short. The economic loss there to Negro teachers, based upon an average salary of $2,400 per year makes a total loss of $50,400 annually at the two high schools alone. If the above figures are true, and the attendance record is taken from the auditor's report, then we say let the figures speak for themselves, despite Mr. Gerling's statement that he is not concerned about the "diatribes that come from the individual who issues the sheet known as the Argus."

Then let us look a little further into Mr. Gerling's manipulations which cheat us, by turning our attention to the elementary schools. Comparing the figures of nine selected schools for Negro children we find that each colored teacher is required by Superintendent Gerling to carry an average of three more pupils per day than white teachers. Should the same average hold true among the 351 elementary school teachers in the system, we would find that we are 28 teachers short. In other words, if the Negro teacher load were reduced to that of the white teachers we would have 28 additional teachers in the elementary schools. Assuming that the average pay of an elementary teacher is about $1,500 per year, the loss in salary to the race in this teacher group is $42,000 annually. This $42,000 loss in the elementary schools plus the $50,400 loss in the high schools makes a grand total loss of $92,400 annually in salaries to the teachers, and their families, through Mr. Gerling's manipulations.

Of course, Mr. Gerling thinks this is a shrewd manipulation of school affairs and, no doubt believes that the colored people would not be able to notice what appears to him to be a little thing. In his operation he is not feeding us in large doses, but rather is giving us slow poison. We wonder who advises him in these matters.

We are refreshing the memory of the people so that they can see and think. In Mr. Gerling's letter he accuses us of seeking a position in the department of education. To this we plead guilty. We do want him to give us the fifty jobs for our teachers which he is arbitrarily witholding, and we are also interested in seeing him give the $92,400 annually to our race which he is now withholding from Negro teachers in St. Louis. Mr. Gerling has also accused us of "meddling" in school affairs. As to this we wish to refresh his memory regarding the time when Dr. Leslie Purdom was president of Stowe Teachers College and this same Mr. Gerling was glad to confer with the editor of the Argus about ways and means of getting Purdom out of Stowe College without becoming Superintendent of Schools. We were fighting Mr. Purdom because we believed that a colored person should be president of Stowe Teachers College. It was a matter of principle with us, but Mr. Gerling was afraid that the president of Stowe College was making his way to the superintendency and he welcomed all the help he could get to stop Purdom. Mr. Gerlings protestations of his personal friendship and interest in the welfare of Negroes is not borne out by his conduct and if there are any colored persons in the city of St. Louis who believe that Mr. Gerling has been fair to the Negro in administering school affairs, we would like to know just who they are. Let them speak, let them come forward and defend Mr. Gerling's record of his treatment of colored people.

We would discuss here the Vashon High School site case in which an attempt was made to place an elementary school in the back yard of the Vashon High School, but we all know that it was Henry J. Gerling who was at the root, or seat of the whole affair; this is a fact which is well known even by school children. And don't let anyone have you believe that the "Italian hand" of Henry J. Gerling is not seen in the abbreviated building plans for the new Waring School.

To look up and dig into the record of Mr. Gerling since he has been Superintendent of Schools would not bring to light a pleasant sight. His record is nauseating to the soul and like smoke to the eyes—the half has not been told.

Mound City Bar Ass'n Pledges Group Cooperation At Special Meeting

A special committee of the Mound City Bar met last Saturday and agreed to furthering plans for cooperation with the Ministers and other organizations in School affairs of St. Louis. One of the purposes is to foster and support qualified candidates for the Board of Education. The committee by seperate resolution endorsed the candidacy of Atty. Robert L. A poll of the membership of the Mound City Bar showed a unanimous vote would be cast for Witherspoon's endorsement at the regular Bar meeting Saturday.

Makes Plea For Cooperative Leadership

A plea for a pooling of leadership among the ministers, lawyers, business men and other groups, was made by George U. Cloud, who presented the outline of a board plan.

The committee went on record as recommending full cooperation with Ministers, and Associations of the City.

The following were present: John A. Davis, chairman, Harvey Tucker, president of the Bar Association, S. R. Redmond, David Grant, Jos. L. McLemore, H. D. Espy, Clark Frazier, Harry Bracy, N. B. Young, Robt. L. Witherspoon, all lawyers. Rev. R. C. Clopton, former president of Baptist Ministers Union, Rev. W. L. Rhodes, Chairman of the Civic Committee of the Baptist Union, George U. Cloud, active in school affairs, and C. B. Broussard and Z. D. Lenoir.

THE FINAL VICTORY IN THE SCHOOL SITE FIGHT

"Finis" was written last week to what may be regarded as the most far-reaching victory in a court fight ever won by the Negroes of this state when the attorneys for the School Board formally dismissed its appeal from the decision which was handed down in the Circuit Court sometime ago.

We make the statement "most far-reaching" advisedly, because had the School Board been allowed to go ahead arbitrarily and put this building in the backyard of the Vashon High School, the site it selected, there would have been no end to the possible injury which might have been done to children of the Negro race and also to their parents. It was brought out in the testimony at the trial of the case that to crowd this elementary school into such a small space would not only be detrimental to the growth and health of the elementary school children, whose ages range from 6 to 12 or 14, but also would be a hazard to the growth and health of pupils of the Vashon High School. By the very nature of things, there would have been no end to the injustices which would naturally follow in the wake of this act, because the children of the tender ages would have come into this environment each year filling the shoes of those who left to take their places in various fields of endeavor.

There may be other wrongs which public officials may do, but we think that a wrong of this sort imposed upon children in their innocence, whose dependence upon those who should guide them, is so trusting, is in a class by itself in the catalog of crime, and no condemnation is too severe for persons perpetrating such a wrong.

As will be remembered, when the matter of erecting an elementary school on the Vashon site was brought to the attention of the colored people they immediately instituted a protest citing the injustice which would be imposed upon the Negro group, but this protest was not heard by the Board of Education. As time rolled on and more people became interested in the matter, everybody, so far as we know, condemned the proposed site except certain members of the School Board, Mr. Gerling, the superintendent, and Rev. Dinkins, a Negro preacher who said he had been promised a job by Mr. Gerling if he would support the Board in its action. Despite the impending wrong which was clearly shown Mr. Gerling, the superintendent never changed his position until forced to do so by order of the Circuit Court. It was from this decision handed down by Judge Kirkwood that the Board of Education took an appeal to the State Supreme Court.

We wish here and now to congratulate the colored citizens who initiated the court proceedings, and also the liberal minded white people (and they were legion) who supported the Negroes in their fight, for their service to the community in the school site controversy. Special mention is also made of the attorneys, George L. Vaughn, Sidney R. Redmond and Robert L. Witherspoon, who gave of their time, their money and their talents in the prosecution of the case which resulted in a final victory.

Of course, there are other duties which the School Board, through its superintendent, owes to the colored people; there are other wrongs which are being imposed upon Negro teachers and citizens, by Mr. Gerling and which he has the power to correct. We hope it will not be necessary for us to resort to the courts again to make unfaithful officials do their duty.

Missouri Is Proud Of Its Jim Crow Education System Of 452 Schools

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 15—The State Department of Education of Missouri released this week the latest information concerning its public school system for the Race as follows:

Missouri ranks second in the nation in total number of school district units, e.g, 8.439 school districts inclusively. (Note:—Illinois ranks first). These districts are classified as follows: 861 high school districts and 7.578 rural school districts.

The high school districts support for Negro children 70 schools of secondary level and 198 elementary schools exclusive of the 26 elementary schools of St. Louis, 12 elementary schools of Kansas City, and the 3 elementary schools of St. Joseph for Negro children. In addition, the rural school districts support 146 rural schools for Negro children.

These 452 schools are manned by a personnel of 1,464 Negro teachers, supervisors, and administrators. These institutions and teachers serve an enumeration of 59,903 Negro pupils between the ages of 6 through 20 years of age with a total enrollment of 47,959 Negro pupils.

The total number of schools is divided as follows: 146 rural schools, 236 elementary schools and 70 high schools. The 1,464 teachers are divided into 155 rural school teachers of which 35 are men and 120 are women; 943 elementary school teachers of which 108 are men and 835 are women; 366 high school teachers of which 232 are men and 134 are women.

The total enumeration of 49,903 Negro children is composed of 5,643 rural school children of which 2,961 are boys and 2,682 are girls and 54,260 children, residing in high school districts of which enumeration 26,905 are boys and 27,355 are girls.

The total enrollment of 47,959 Negro children is composed of 4,653 rural school pupils of which 2,377 are boys and 2,276 are girls; 35,041 elementary school pupils of which 17,564 are boys and 17,477 are girls; and 8,265 high school pupils of which 3,59 9are boys and 4,666 are girls.

The number of women teachers exceeds the number of men teachers in both the rural and elementary schools, but the men represent 63.4 percent of the total number of teachers in the high schools. Nine and four-tenths percent of the total school enumeration reside in rural school districts. The percentages of total enrollment for rural, elementary and high schools are represented as follows: about 9 percent of the enrollment is in the rural schools, about 73 percent of the enrollment is in the elementary schools, and about 18 percent of the enrollment is in the high schools.

The enumeration of boys exceeds that of the girls in the rural school districts, 2,961 boys to 2,682 girls, but the enumeration of girls exceeds that of the boys in high school districts, 27,355 girls to 26,905 boys.

The enrollment of boys at both the rural and elementary school levels exceeds that of the girls, e.g., for rural schools 2,377 boys, 2.276 girls and for elementary schools 17,564 boys to 17,477 girls. However the enrollment of girls exceeds that enrollment for the boys at the secondary school level, e.g., 4,666 girls to 3.599 boys.

Survey Finds Poor Buildings And Overloaded Teachers In St. Louis Colored Schools

Low standard in buildings and overloading of teachers in the colored public schools were among the conditions criticized in the findings of the school survey conducted by a group headed by Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia University announced Monday.

The rulings on colored school buildings released by the committee classed twelve as inferior and three as poor and their removal was recommended. Three were classed as fair, one as good and one as superior. It was found that many colored teachers are burdened with classes of forty or more pupils.

The committee lauded the "splendid planning" of St. Louis in the location of two community centers around Vashon and Sumner High Schools and encouraged their extension. Among the important recommendations of the committee were:

Opening of schools to married women teachers and more men teachers in elementary schools.

Retirement and pensioning of 350 teachers, principals and supervisors more than sixty five years old on pensions.

Adoption of a similar salary schedule for grade and high school teachers.

Introduction of straight merit system for selection and promotion of all school employees.

Rearrangement of school system: instead of present kindergarten, eighth grade elementary and four year high school and two year junior college, a lower school of kindergarten and grades through six; "Middle school" of grades through six-ten; "upper school," through grades 12-14.

Encouragement of more study by teachers, forty seven percent of whom have only two years of college training.

It was found that over 24,000 boys and girls 15 to 19 years old are not in high schools and only five percent of the high school graduates go to college. St. Louis ranks eleventh among the 20 cities over 300.000 in population in per pupil expenditure, $179 a year.

Classing of school buildings was:

Superior—Vashon High
Good—Sumner High, Dunbar
Fair—Stowe Teachers College, Cole, Lincoln
Poor—Divoll, Marshall, Simmons
Inferior — Banneker, Wayman Crow, Jefferson, Waring, Cottage Avenue, Dumas, West Belle, Delaney, Wheatley, L'Ouverture, Dessalines, Carr Lane.

Although Cole was built at the same time as Gundlach, a white school ranking as superior, the lack of yard space and good surroundings were believed to have thrown Cole into the fair class.

DR. GERLING'S DUTY

A further study of Dr. George D. Strayer's report on the St. Louis school system indicates that it will require some time and study to meet the reforms as suggested by this report. But outstanding among the recommendations, which may be classed as the "must list" were certain things about the Negro schools. To bring about these changes, it does not necessarily require the adoption of the report by the Board. All that is necessary is for Mr. Henry J. Gerling, the superintendent, to exercise the power of his office by doing his plain duty. If he recommends a change in the colored teacher load so as to equalize it with that of white teachers we do not believe there will be one dissenting vote by members of the Board. Nor do we believe that should the superintendent recommend a president at Stowe Teachers' College just as there is at Harris Teachers' College, that there would be any opposition on the part of the Board members.

If there has been any doubt in Mr. Gerling's mind as to the wisdom of doing his duty along this line, he should doubt no longer.

COLORED CHILDREN TOLD THEY CANNOT BE REGISTERED

By IRVINE I. TURNER

PLEASANTVILLE, N. J.—(ANP)—Racial prejudice against colored people was disclosed here Thursday when several families who attempted to enroll their little ones at the Decatur avenue school, a block from their residence, were told that they would have to enroll them at the Park avenue school accessible only by marching five or six blocks down a railroad track before they could reach the school.

It was said the discriminatory act was fought against by the Young People's Progressive league in an attempt to put a sudden end to what its president, Roscoe Carol called, "A death sentence on the railroad tracks for the colored children."

The league launched a protest of the school's refusal to admit enrollment of colored pupils with the commissioner of educaiton, asking that he issued an order correcting the situation.

Assistant Commissioner C. J. Sarthan replied to the protest: "It is impossible for the commissioner to issue an order without knowing all the facts in the case. The laws do not require that a child should attend the nearest school for his own good but must attend the school within the district boundaries for the particular building."

Pleasantville citizens pointed out the evasion in Sarthan's interpretation of the laws. They said the district boundary for any school would naturally be the enarest residents of the school.

Another development of the school system was attacked by the local residents. That was the failure of the board of education to renew the contract of Miss Mary Cannon, who is a member of the famous Cannon family of Cranfor, was extremely liked by the students' parents.

It is believed that Miss Cannon's dismissal came as a result of her attitude which indicated she was opposed to the stiff handling of the colored people and their children by the white authorities. She did not approve of the segregated school system, and reports have informed many that she was on the spot, because she had formerly taken in a colored pupil in the school building which was exclusively for whites.

The league protested the manner in which she was fired to the board of education, but the league could not give any definite answer in response as to why she actually was dismissed. Miss Cannon, it is said, is teaching at a distant school.

BACKS OPPOSITION TO NEGRO TEACHERS

Head of Mount Vernon School Board Gives Views

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 21 —Frank J. Nardozzi, president of the Mount Vernon Board of Education, expressed agreement tonight with Dr. William H. Holmes, superintendent of Mount Vernon schools, that Negro teachers should not be employed in the local schools except for classes in which Negro children are in the majority. Dr. Holmes' statements were made yesterday at a legislative hearing in New York City on the condition of the urban Negro population.

"An inquiry would show that Negro children are accorded the best of treatment in our schools," Mr. Nardozzi said. "After all, are we to consider first the plight of two or three unemployed Negro teachers or that of the 700 Negro pupils in our system?"

He pointed out that Nathan Hale School, with a Negro population of about 40 per cent, was the newest school building in Mount Vernon and that it "is staffed by as competent a group of teachers as any school in the city."

He concurred in the opinion of Dr. Holmes, who testified at yesterday's hearing that many white persons would move from the neighborhood of any Mount Vernon school in which a Negro teacher had a position, and realty values would depreciate.

"There was a storm of protest from parents when once we assigned a Negro substitute teacher," Mr. Nardozzi remarked. Commenting on State Senator Jacob J. Schwartzwald's request yesterday to Dr. Frank P. Graves, State Commissioner of Education, for a State investigation of the Mount Vernon school system, the board president said:

"I am sure that a State investigating body would end up by complimenting us on our treatment of the Negro situation in Mount Vernon."

N. Y. SCHOOL HEAD EXPLAINS BAN ON COLORED TEACHERS

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Feb. 2 — (ANP) — Frank J. Mardozzi, president Mount Vernon Board of Education this week endorsed the view of Dr. William H. Holmes, superintendent of local schools, that Negro teachers should not be employed here except for classes where colored children are in majority.

Dr. Holmes aired his views last Saturday at a legislative hearing in New York City on the condition of the urban Negro population, during which he said that many white persons should hove from the neighborhood of any Mount Vernon school having a Negro teacher, and that realty values would depreciate.

Explaining his okay of Dr. Holmes, statements, Board President Mardozzi said: "An inquiry would show that Negro children are accorded the best of treatment in our school. After all, are we to consider first the plight of two or three unemployed Negro teachers or that of the 700 Negro pupils in our system.

Parents Protest

"There was a storm of protest from parents once when we assigned a Negro substitute teacher."

Then, commenting on the request of State Senator Jacob J. Schwartzwald to Dr. Frank P. Graves, State Commissioner of Education for a State investigation of Mount Vernon school system, Nardozzi said: "I am sure that a State investigating body would end up by complimenting us on our treatment of the Negro situation in Mount Vernon."

He pointed out that Nathan Hale school, with a colored population of about 40 per cent was the newest school in Mount Vernon, that it "is staffed by as competent a group of teachers as any school in the city."

Race Teachers Get High Posts

NEW YORK— For the second time within a year, the New York Board of Education has advanced Harlem teachers to administrative posts in the city high schools.

Such appointments in separate school systems would not be a matter of any special comment, but coming in the mixed school system of New York, it is significant in showing that supervisory and administrative positions in the New York System are not denied race teachers.

Following the lead of Frank Thurner, who was made head of the department of physical education in the Tilden High School last year, has come the assignment of Dr. Willis N. Huggins, as an assistant principal in the Harlem Evening High School, the first such assignment given to colored teachers in New York.

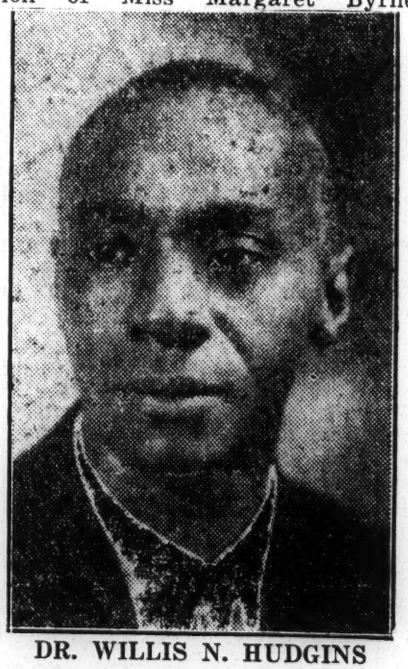
He has served for many years in the history departments of the Bushwick High School and the Harlem Evening High. He is an expert commentator on world affairs and a recognized authority on the history and civilization of Africa.

CHAIRMAN OF LANGUAGES

Along with the above assignment was also the appointment of Dr. Wilfred Rankin as head of the language department in the same school. Dr. Rankin is an erudite scholar in Latin and Greek. In the former subject he is preparing a textbook for school use. He has been, for many years a member of the language department of Boys High School and the New York Evening High School, and brings Harlem the ripeness of his experience.

Incidentally, Dr. Huggins and Dr. Rankin are the only two of the race teachers in the New York system who hold the degree of doctor of philosophy. The former was honored by Fordham University, New York, and the latter by the University of Edinburg, Scotland.

They will work under the direction of Miss Margaret Byrne



DR. WILLIS N. HUDGINS

(white) principal of the Wadleigh Day High School and supervising principal of the Harlem Evening High School.

Harlem teachers now hold the following administrative places in the New York system, principal and assistant in elementary schools department head in the day high schools, department head and assistant principal in evening high school.

George Case. An item on the document reads, 'May 9, Paid to Colored Teacher, $20'."

White Plains Teachers' Work Plea Denied On Bias Issue

Tribune 1-26-39

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—Colored teachers had their pleas for work denied them by the Mount Vernon Board of Education, last Saturday.

Seeking installation as members of the faculty of the public schools of that city, three colored teachers were informed by the president of the Board, Frank J. Nardozzi: "After all, are we to consider first the plight of two or three unemployed Negro teachers or that of the 700 Negro pupils in our system?"

The Board concurred with Dr. William H. Holmes, superintendent of Mt. Vernon Schools, that Negro teachers should not be employed in the local schools except for classes in which Negro children are in the majority.

Push Fight On Mount Vernon School Chief

MT. VERNON, N. Y., Feb. 10—The fight to oust Superintendent of Schools William H. Holmes for his discriminatory policy in appointing teachers gained momentum this week when the reactionary Republican Daily Argus was forced to print on its editorial page the full contents of an open letter by the militant pastor, the Rev. Polk Knox Fonvielle, leader in the campaign.

The Reverend Fonvielle, who is pastor of the Centennial A. M. E. Zion church, was cheered by an audience of 300 citizens who gathered in the auditorium to hear him serve notice on the city's white politicians that the battle to oust the superintendent and Frank J. Nardozzi, president of the board of education, "had been declared."

The meeting formulated plans to unite all local organizations under the leadership of the National Negro Congress in the fight.

Reverend Fonvielle, who was nosed out by some 200 votes in the elections last year for the board of education, has already forced Superintendent Holmes to admit two members of the Race to the school system.

Records Reveal There Was Negro Teacher In New Rochelle In 1844

By MARION FIELDS

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—The surprising information published in The New York Age, August 6, 1938, that Miss Ethel O. Harris, newly appointed Negro school teacher at Lincoln School, is not the first Negro mentor to have taught in New Rochelle, was seemingly upheld by an announcement to that effect in a white daily, February 24, this year, stilling the doubts of New Rochelle colored ministers and professional men.

The exclusive item had been revealed to this writer in an interview with Mrs. Rebecca Archer of 103 Woodside park, New Rochelle. The published statement was met with resentment by leading lights of this city and was publicly proclaimed a false statement in their endeavor to loyally hail the newly appointed Negro school teacher.

Now it appears, according to the white daily's announcement of its investigation upholding the exclusive Age report, Miss Harris is not the first Negro school teacher here. Said the daily newspaper: "Old historical records dug out of the recesses of City Hall by Louis Goodman indicate that there was a Negro teacher in the Town of New Rochelle's public school system as early as 1844.

"One of the documents dug up," the paper says, by Mr. Goodman is a report of Superintendent of Schools,

Miss Margaret A. Lindquist, New Principal Of Junior High School 136, Is Installed

By MARY E. FINGER

Harriet Beecher Stowe Junior High School at 135th street and Edgecombe avenue on last Friday morinng represented one of the happiest gatherings of student and faculty bodies seen in many a school semester, for the installation exercises held for the new principal, Miss Margaret A. Lindquist, former principa of P. S. 19 on East 14th street. Prior to exercises in the spacious auditorium, officials from various branches of the educational system were welcomed in the lavishly furnished office of the school's chief executive to extend felicitations and congratulation to both the outgoing and incoming principals, Misses Eugenia A. Chinnock, one of the new assistant superintendents, and Margaret A. Lindquist respectively.

Miss A. Loretta Callahan, assistan to the principal of P. S. 136, was mistress of ceremonies. She introduced as the first speaker, Dr. Frederic Ernst, superintendent of the junior and senior high schools of the city of New York, who delivered the installation address, formally presenting the new principal to her teachers and students. He highly recommended the school's new leader.

Miss Lindquist in her response to Dr. Ernst's talk, stated, "that we have before us in this country and in this city very heavy educational problems, which will be met by the youth of today. In order to meet these problems, you girls will have to take part in the shaping of your educational program with the teachers, and educators working together." In closing she emphasized that she is very anxious to become familiar with some of the problems affecting the school and parents of this community. Following the address, Miss Mabel Davis, mayor of the student body and a pupil of class 9BC2, presented Miss Lindquist on behalf of her sister classmates a bouquet of yellow roses.

Other speakers on the program were Mrs. Johanna M. Lindlof, member the Board of Education; Miss Ellen A. G. Phillips, assistant superintendent; Jacob Theobald, assistant superintendent; and Editor Fred R. Moore speaking for the parents.

The last address was made by the ex-principal, Miss Eugenia A. Chinnock, who received a great ovation when she said, "This morning I have come home." She further stated that she was happy to leave the reins of the school in the hands of Miss Lindquist and told the girls that character is like a tree, which must be cultivated in order to bear good fruits.

Other honored guests seen on the platform were Dr. Conroy, Miss Fannie R. Cohen, principal of P. S. 119 Miss Margaret C. Byrne, principal of Wadleigh High School; Aileen Rivet, G. O. President of Wadleigh and Margaret Marshall, senior president of Wadleigh High; Rev. Myers, James H. Hubert, executive secretary of New York Urban League; Jesse O. Thomas, Southern field director of the National Urban League; Anna A. Short, Margaret Cribbin, Josephine M. Gorsiello, Father Owen J. Scanlon, and Gustav Lindquist, the father of the new principal; Mrs. Eva Parks, Mrs. As[illegible]inall and Mrs. Frances Cline Robe.

Little Alice Snyder a former member of the Glee Club of P. S. 119 and a student of P. S. 136, rendered two selections, "Carrisimi" and "Deep River" which were well sung.

The new head of P. S. 136 has led a simple life; she is a tall robust woman possessing abundant energy and a charming personality. This round lady is a descendant of a Swedish stock, her parents being Gustav and the late Hilma Lindquist, natives of Sweden. Miss Lindquist was born in New York and received her education in the elementary schools and colleges of this metropolis. She first received a degree from Hunter College and another one from New York University. She felt that her education was by no means complete therefore she was constantly on the move for new ideas which she received when pursuing her post graduating courses at Columbia and the College of the City of New York.

Her primary education was attained at P. S. 10 in the Bronx where she had the honor, years later, of returning to fill a teaching position. Miss Lindquist then taught economics and commercial subjects at Morris High School. Next she was appointed principal of P. S. 19 on the lower east side. She continued studying and taking examinations until on Friday she was again honored with another laurel, as principal of one of the largest junior high schools in the City of New York.

Negro Schools At Mount Airy Have Problem

(Special to The Journal)

Mount Airy, Aug. 10.—Lack o room in the Negro schools of the Mount Airy city system is offering a perplexing problem for Superintendent L. B. Pendergraph.

The Mount Airy Negro schools have eleven teachers allotted for the approaching 1939-40 term, and there is only three rooms for their use.

The Mount Airy Negro schools have been short of room for several years, Superintendent Pendergraph said, but the problem was rendered more acute by the destruction of the Ararat Negro school, which burned last spring.

Plans for construction of a new eight-room brick structure on the same site have been held up by lack of funds, and the only facilities available for the coming year are in a three-room frame building on Virginia street.

The new Ararat Negro school, which was to have been constructed this summer, has been held up since state authorities ruled that Surry county cannot sell $20,000 of county notes, which were voted by the commissioners in June. That sum had been allotted to two projects, the new $12,000 high school at Franklin, one of the county's larger white school units, and $8,000 for the new Ararat Negro school.

Last year the Mount Airy school system used four Negro elementary teachers at Ararat and three elementary and three high school teachers at the Virginia street Negro school here in town. The Virginia street school was operated on a half-day basis, the three grammar grade teachers using the rooms in the morning and the three high school teachers using them in the afternoon.

Since the projected construction of the new Ararat Negro school has been postponed indefinitely, Superintendent Pendergraph announced that the half-day plan will continue at the Virginia street school, using only six of the eleven allotted teachers. The other five allotted teachers will have no place, and the Negro children in the Ararat section will have no school unless some action is taken immediately on the new structure

Study Is Made Of Pre-School Negro Children

GREENSBORO, N. C. — The opening this Fall of the Nursery School-Parent Education Center at Bennett College in Greensboro, one of two liberal arts colleges exclusively for the education of Negro women in the United States, marked the beginning of scientific training for the Negro pre-school child in North Carolina. The establishment of the center was made possible through a grant of the General Education Board of New York City. The ultimate aim of the project is the development of Negro family life in the local community.

"Home," said Dr. Flemmie P. Kettrell, director of the school, "is the place where life patterns are made and is the environment in which the development of the child is largely determined. Statistics show that the greatest amount of crime and delinquency are associated with homes that are poorly managed."

Environments Are Studied

J. T. Morton Jr., Professor of Psychology, recently made an exhaustive study of Negro families in Greensboro and Dr. W. Edward Farrison, head of the Department of English, used as the basis of his doctor's dissertation at Ohio State University a study of the speech practices of the Negroes in Guilford County.

With these specific data, with general information and with carefully selected physical equipment at their disposal, the director and her two trained assistants set up the Nursery-Parent Center with accommodations for twelve children. The behavior of parents and children from the community is observed, for the most part without the children's knowledge, with the hope of effecting satisfactory changes in the child's environment and adjustment in personality to meet these changes.

Proper Habits Encouraged

Daily records are kept of each child's home and school activities, and these in turn are periodically entered upon his chart. The children spend two hours each morning at play in the sunshine. At noon they have wholesome lunches, and are put to bed. After their noon nap they play again in the open for one hour. Each child is considered individually and receives the care that his case history requires. Proper habit formation is a major concern of the director.

Education, Labor, Roads Mentioned

Raleigh.—Governor Clyde Hoey, in his biennial message to the North Carolina General Assembly today, cited 14 specific phases of progress in which he expressed particular pride and satisfaction.

Governor Hoey told the legislators they could be especially proud of these things:

(1) The greatest building program ever undertaken in all the history of the state, now under way to extend through 1939.

(2) The sale of $4,620,000 state bonds for the building program at a record low interest rate of 2.07 per cent.

(3) The economical administration of state government, so that less than five cents of each tax dollar goes to pay the cost of government, and the school administration's efficiency which allows 82 cents of each school dollar to go into teacher pay.

Educational Gains

(4) The fine progress made in public education in the schools and colleges, for whites and Negroes.

(5) The progress of the Negro race and the amicable relations between the races, as "North Carolina does not believe in social equality between the races, and will not tolerate mixed schools for the races, but we do believe in equality of opportunity in their respective fields of service and the white race cannot afford to do less than simple justice to the Negro."

(6) The expansion and increased service of benevolent institutions.

(7) The "magnificent work" the parole office is doing and the "fine work" of the new probation commission.

(8) The progress in agricultural diversification.

(9) The splendid condition of the highway system in general, especially secondary roads.

Labor Legislation

(10) The position of the state in labor legislation, especially in the forefront in child labor acts, and the amicable relations between capital and labor.

(11) The reduction of traffic deaths in 1938.

(12) The results of the advertising program, aiding in securing 122 new industries and increasing tourist visits.

(13) The "indispensable blessing" of social security payments to unemployed, aged, needy blind and indigent children.

(14) The "loyalty, efficient service and fine consecration" of all state officials and their fine cooperation for the benefit of the state.

House Passes Yadkin Negro Education Act

(From The Journal's Capital News Bureau)

Raleigh, Feb. 9.—Passed by the house today was the bill introduced by Representative Frank Woodhouse, Democrat, of Yadkin county, to provide for high school for education of Yadkin Negroes.

The bill would empower the Yadkin board of education to pay the board and lodging of Negro high school students in some nearby county until Yadkin provides facilities.

Speaking for the bill, Representative Woodhouse explained that very few Negroes were concerned and that he felt the county would save money by paying their expenses elsewhere rather than setting up a Nego high school.

Also in the house today Representative Woodhouse introduced a bill to make Yadkin "bone dry" by forbidding the sale of wine or beer at any time. It was referred to the finance committee.

County Board Will Discuss Little River School Plans

Destruction Of Building By Fire Raises Problem Of Continuing Classes—Elementary Grade May Be Suspended, Barbour Savs

A meeting of the county board of education probably will be held this afternoon to discuss plans for continuing classes for pupils of the Little River school for Negroes which was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning.

Superintendent L. H. Barbour said last night that the elementary grades probably will be discontinued for the year but an effort will be made to carry on work in the high school grades.

Seven months and eight days of the school year had been completed and the school had less than three weeks to run.

Nearby residents discovered the blaze about 4 a. m. but by the time they arrived the roof was falling in and they were powerless to extinguish the blaze. The school building had been closed since the beginning of the Easter holidays Thursday afternoon and so far as is known no one had entered the building since that time, Barbour said.

The charred remains left no clue as to how or exactly where the blaze started. There was no way of determining whether prowlers had been trespassing on the property, the superintendent pointed out.

Although only part of the brick walls of the main building remained standing, the three-room home economics building and the agriculture building, both located on the same site, escaped the flames. These may be used to continue the high school classes.

The Little River school was built in 1934 at a cost to the county of $36,203, and was in its fifth year of service when it burned. Barbour said the county carries $27,000 insurance on the building. The building actually is insured for about 90 percent of its present worth, considering depreciation and the fact that two items included in the original cost will not have to be undertaken again—the grading, which cost $1,000, and the septic disposal system, which cost $2,000.

About 450 pupils attended the school.

Annual Field Day Program For Colored Rural Schools To Be Held Here Saturday

3,000 Colored School Children Expected On Saturday at the Coastal Plain Fair Grounds In Annual Events; Starts at 9 A M., Lasts All Day.

(Contributed)

The annual Field and May Day program of the Edgecombe county colored rural schools will get under way at 9 o'clock Saturday morning at the fair grounds with approximately three thousand pupils participating, announced Flossie J. Parker, county colored school supervisor today.

This program is a result of the physical education taught in the public schools as outlined in the state course of study. These exercises which are brought before the public each year as a demonstration represent the best work of each school in physical education.

The track events will begin at 9 o'clock instead of 10 because there are more events this year. These events are varied, interesting and thrilling from start to finish. Prizes are awarded each year to the winners of each event. The chairman of the "track events committee" is R. O. Kornegay, principal of the Battleboro Colored School; the other members of the committee are: S. A. Gilliam, principal of the Roberson School and N. Little, principal of the Living Hope School. There are a large number of pupils participating in the track events and this part of the program is very entertaining. Those assisting as judges, etc., are: W. C. Davenport, Negro farm agent of Hertford county; N. A. McLean, P. Bowen and L. McDougall of the National Youth Administration project located at the Brick School; E. C. Burnett and S. V. Brown of the Tarboro City Schools, and C. E. Edwards and N. E. Rice of the Brick-Tri County High School. These men are very efficient as well as our own Edgecombe county officials. We therefore anticipate much skill in the handling of these events.

Immediately following the "track events" the "May Day Fete" begins. This program is typical of the usual program which characterizes the "Child Health Program" which is conducted annually in many schools throughout the country on May 1st, and is known as "May Day". We do not plan our program for May 1st because we find it advantageous to let this program serve as one of our big closing programs.

This is the most colorful part of the program. The seventh grade girls of the county are the queen's attendants, they enter in two's and form a semi-circle around the queen's throne. These girls, numbering more than one hundred, wear long organdie dresses of the various pastel shades with large wide hats of the same material. This procession is as beautiful as can be. As soon as this procession is over the heralds enter announcing the queen's approach. Following the heralds the flower girls enter strewing flowers for the queen. The queen then enters on a chariot and takes her seat on the throne.

Immediately after the queen is seated, groups of pupils from the various schools come out and dance before the queen (on band stand). These groups consist of from six to fourteen pupils. Each school is allowed five minutes for its dance. The dances for the queen are all of the esthetic type and the groups appear in costume. Each year a first, second and third prize is awarded for the prettiest costume. These costumes are made from crepe paper or other inexpensive materials, yet they are beautiful because of design and color.

The climax of this part of the program is the winding of the May poles. We arrange six May poles in a circle with one huge May pole in the center of the circle and all poles are wound at the same time. Very small pupils are used for the winding of the May poles and they wear little cotton dresses which match the color of the ribbon on the pole. The effect is marvelous.

In order to save time, large groups of children will do group numbers consisting of calesthenic exercises, singing games and drills at the same time the small groups (special numbers) dance before the queen. Each school has a definite space designated behind the queen's throne for their group number. For the spectators, this arrangement is somewhat like the traditional circus—many things going on at one time. For the group numbers the girls wear gym suits made of unbleached cotton material trimmed with red bias tape. The teachers also wear dresses of the same material. The larger girls who are too timid to wear gym suits wear dresses made of the same material. This material is used because it is inexpensive and consequently within the economic reach of the parents of these pupils. This uniform makes a very pretty effect and it teaches the pupils that one can look well in an inexpensive garment if it is designed correctly and fitted well.

This day is a big day for the boys and girls of the colored rural schools. They look forward to this day with almost as much enthusiasm as they look forward to Santa Claus. The patrons enjoy the program that is manifested by the large attendance. There is no admission fee for anything. The whole program is absolutely free.

There will be three cold drink stands, the proceeds to be used for the expenses of the commencement speaker, prizes for track events, prettiest costumes, etc., and the 4-H clubs. These stands will be managed by Leslie Holley, Leggett and F. D. Wharton, Edgecombe county Negro farm agent, and Hazel S. Parker, Edgecombe county Negro home agent. The three stands will be under the supervision of Leslie Holley. These plans have been approved by Superintendent N. E. Gresham.

We are most grateful to the landlords in Edgecombe county for the cooperation they have given toward the transportation of the pupils. In many communities the landlords have consented to let the teachers use their farm trucks to transport the pupils to Tarboro. In one community the landlord, who is a lawyer, told the principal of the school that he would pay the transportation fee for the poor little pupils whose parents were not able to pay the small transportation fee for their children. What lovely landlords we have in Edgecombe county. We highly appreciate the cooperation of Mr. Earnhart for consenting to send all the street sprinklers up Saturday morning to sprinkle the track to prevent so much dust.

We thank the police department also for their cooperation in helping us to keep the crowd of spectators off the race track during the track events. We feel proud of the fact that we do not need the police department for disorderly conduct. They are needed only to assist principals in keeping the crowd of spectators off the race track. Even though we have several thousand people as spectators we have never had one incident of disorder. We congratulate our Edgecombe county colored people.

With such fine cooperation from the above named agencies, together with the 100 per cent cooperation of our most efficient group of teachers, it gives us much pleasure to plan such a program for our rural boys and girls.

State's Shortcomings In Education Spotted

Federal Survey Points Out 'Heavy Burden' Borne By North Carolina

Washington, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The fact North Carolina ranks high above the national average in the ratio of school-age children to adults was pointed to by the Interior Department's Office of Education today as one of a number of factors indicating a "heavy educational burden" in that State.

The Education Office, in a study of the operation of local school units in North Carolina, said there were 861 persons from five to 20 years of age for each 1,000 persons from 21 to 65 years of age in the State.

The ratio for the nation as a whole is only 574 to 1,000.

Another factor contributing to the State's education burden, the study showed, was that approximately 50 per cent of the total population live on farms and 25 per cent in small villages.

"The educational problems found in the State are, therefore, those usually associated with the provisions of adequate educational facilities in rural territory," the report said.

A Negro population of 29 per cent of the total also was emphasized.

"In most cases, if the same standards for buildings, personnel and services were maintained for both white and colored there would be a consequent increase in school costs," the report added.

The study, prepared by Henry F. Alves, senior specialist in State school administration; Archibald W. Anderson, assistant director, local school projects, and John Guy Fowlkes, consultant, said North Carolina lacked the financial resources necessary to carry its heavy educational burden.

"It ranks relatively low on such measures of economic ability as tax-paying ability per capita, wealth per capita, income per capita and retail sales per capita," the report said.

"Although the State devotes a large percentage of State funds to education, it still ranks low on measures of educational opportunity provided.

"The State has a relatively high percentage of illiteracy—10 per cent for the total population and 20.6 per cent for the Negro population.

"It is educating a lower percentage of pupils of school age than the country as a whole."

OHIO FATHER GOES TO JAIL RATHER THAN SEND CHILDREN TO TOO-FAR JIM-CROW SCHOOL

Paint Contractor Refused to Send Son and Daughter Two Miles Away When Another Public Building Was Closer Home

Kansas City Kan
Call-11-17-39

WILMINGTON, Ohio. — (ANP)—Because he refused to send his two children, ages nine and six years, nearly two miles through city traffic and across two railroad lines to a school set aside by the board of education for Negro children only, Theodore Lewis was arrested and placed in jail here last week, charged with contributing to the delinquency of his children.

Lewis had presented his children for admission to the school nearest his residence several times and had been refused by the principal of schools, H. W. Hodson.

Mother Backs Father

Judge Hugh J. Wright of the juvenile court committed Lewis to jail for three days when he refused to give bond and agree to send his children to the segregated school. Judge Wright, by a statement from the bench, attempted to give exclusive control of the children to the mother, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Lewis, with an order "to put these children in school."

When Mrs. Lewis was refused admission of her children at the school nearest their home, she reported to the court that she would stand with her husband and would not send them to the segregated school.

While Lewis was still in jail Atty. Theodore M. Berry, assistant prosecutor of Hamilton county, and Atty. William M. McClain, both of Cincinnati and partners in law practice, were called into the case. Release of Lewis was obtained and a mandamus suit was filed immediately by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis through Attys. Berry and McClain in the court of appeals to compel the board of education to admit their children in school regardless of their race.

Ask N.A.A.C.P. Aid

Public interest has been aroused by the suit. The court of appeals will hold a special session here on November 24 for trial of the merits of the case. The Ohio State Conference of N.A.A.C.P. branches has been requested to support the case as a friend of the court.

Wilmington was founded by Quakers and was once a principal station in the Under-ground railroad for fugitive slaves seeking freedom. Today Negro residents, the majority being natives of several generations, are discriminated against in every civil right and privilege.

Lewis is a paint contractor and lives at 522 Groves street with his family. Both he and his wife are natives of Wilmington.

Day Fezler

There is one unfortunate feature about our cleanup in the city schools, during the next few weeks regarding which few people seem to be paying much attention. Most assuredly we want to wreck the old demoralized system with its pay-offs, graft and corruption, but in the doing of this we wonder how many of the school patrons realize that one of the finest men who has ever been on the Oklahoma City school board, is being swept temporarily out of public life?

You know the old adage: " 'Tis an ill wind that blows nobody good..' In address ourselves to the determined effort to cleanse our educational skies the Black Dispatch arises to say, " 'Tis a good wind that blows nobody ill.' We have decided that we want no more of the present Oklahoma City school board, but many of us have never stopped to turn the full light of investigation upon Day Fezler.

Surely Day Fezler must go. He would be foolish to run. The same unintelligent public which for a dozen years has failed to see what was going on, has not improved its eyesight. Mr. Fezler's conduct on the board is the only bright gleam of virtue obtruding at the present moment, and yet the foolish public, stampeding towards a house cleaning will pitch him into the discard along with the rest.

Oh, of course we know that Mr. Fezler has stated he will not run, and he may perhaps resign before the April election, but Mr. Fezler would run, if he knew that ignorance was not on a rampage. He's the "fall guy", who happened to be standing in the wrong place at this particular moment.

Particularly do we of the Negro group know of the fine, unselfish interest Mr. Fezler has taken in the schools. He has fought for the rights of Superitnendent Reiff to handle the teaching force without molestation. He has been an uncompromising foe of every evil influence he discovered in the separate schools. In the athletic department of the separate schools his interest has been so keen, that he has actually spent sleepless nights trying to help the Douglass High School football squad defeat Tulsa. Teachers, with or without pull, could secure a willing ear down at Day Fezler's shoe shop. He played no favorites.

In the midst of all of this graft, corruption and uproar, and even though for several years he has been seated in meetings where his vote had to be officially recorded with colleagues who now must spend time in the penitentiary, not one bit of suspicion has been turned towards the man, who must walk out into private life in April, simply because voters are blind and prejudiced, and would not vote for him were he to run.

When a school board member went to jail recently, the majority faction became the minority group, and then Day Fezler had his grand opportunity to show the citizens of this community what he considered an ideal setup for the schools. For the first time in many years Superintendent Reiff can call his soul his own. He can call a teacher in and fire her, or he can notify worthy ones that outside influences which have hitherto disrupted the system have no voice in their tenure.

Hence it is that as the years roll on Day Fezler will be placed in some other field of responsibility in this community. Just now he is the only figure in our school life who should cause one to retain faith in humanity.

When the Attendance Officer Plays Truant

Last week we published a statement about the improper conduct of the chief attendance officer in our separate school system. We pointed out that a large portion of his time is spent playing games in pleasure resorts on East Second Street, a fact which will be witnessed by scores of people who have been observing his conduct for years.

Immediately following this statement we were called on by the attendance officer, Frank Wilson, complaining about inaccuracies in the article mentioned. Now, this publication made that statement not only because it is true but for the purpose of focusing the attention of the public upon an ugly situation in our school system. One can find scores of people on street corners loudly talking about what is going on in our school system, but when the time comes to take a stand in the open, where something effective can be accomplished to cure these evils, nobody sticks his neck out far enough to be seen.

So that no one will misunderstand us when we say that we have an ugly situation in our schools, we want to call the public's attention to an experience this writer had several months ago. We were down in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. In the library of the Atkins High School we were introduced to the lady in charge and, when the introduction had been made, she stopped and said: "Oh, you're from that town down there where they sell jobs to school teachers. I've heard all about Oklahoma City.

Later, when I got this lady aside, I requested her to state where she received her information. She immediately named a young woman teaching in the Oklahoma City schools, and she said that this young woman told her about conditions here, while with her in summer school.

Everybody up and down the streets daily discuss the pay-offs that are going on, and we recently were invited to go with a man, who said if I would stand with him at a certain place that day, I would see two of the employes in the separate schools going to a white man's house, to take pay-offs from Negro teachers.

But back to Mr. Wilson: We attacked his record because we believe the time has come to stop some of the conditions we actually see. Mr. Wilson says he does not play checkers, but that he plays cards. This writer does not play checkers, dominoes or cards, and we understand that in most of the recreation parlors and pool halls where these games are operated, small bets are made on the games played. We do not know whether the attendance officer plays for money or not when he plays, but we do say here and now that he sits during the day with his big gun on playing in the H. & S. Smoke Shop, 316 East Second Street, and in the Royal Barber Shop, 328 East Second Street, playing these games where anybooy who desires to find him may do so.

This publication hires a man to follow up sports and amusement activities, in the person of Lynard Matt. Mr. Matt declares that he personally has played from two or three hours of the day with Frank Wilson in the H. & S. Smoke Shop. Delinquent children, who will not go to school, throng the streets, while this sort of thing is going on. It looks as though Mr. Wilson is himself the one to be caught rather than the errant children.

We are shouting from the hilltops now because there is a school election just around the corner, without any individual Negro or organization among Negroes speaking out about the unspeakable conditions existing in the Negro schools. Where is the Douglass Parent-Teachers' Association, or the Ministerial Alliance? Can we go into this election with our white friends, who are fighting to free their system from the evil clutches of graft, bribery, corruption and immorality and take no stand ourselves?

We have been utterly surprised at the lack of interest shown by the city parent-teachers associations. What is their purpose? Does the silence which has obtained in the six months indicate that Negro patrons endorse and condone all that has gone on in the separate schools?

What about the club women of the city? Can we find no fault with dancing if properly supervised, but can hear a word from them? The ministers of the city recently denounced dancing. Perhaps they should. Personally we find no fault with the ministers of the city allow this school campaign to develop any further without taking some sort of stand against the evils that now exist in the city school system?

The truth is that there is a whole lot that has happened in the separate schools which should be brought to the attention of the present grand jury. We said sometime ago that every person who knows anything about the sale of jobs, or the purported sale of jobs, should go before the grand jury and make a statement. Nothing should deter any Negro citizens from attempting to clear up this ugly situation. Certainly this writer expects to tell all he

Nothing should deter any Negro citizens from attempting to clear up this ugly situation. Certainly this writer expects to tell all he knows. We think we have some pretty good leads for the Oklahoma County grand jury.

But should the Black Dispatch be the only voice crying in the wilderness? Sometime ago before the bribery convictions, we were called over the telephone by a certain member of the school board, and attempt made to intimidate this writer. Every effort possible was made to stifle our voice. Should we have any help in this matter. Remember, this publication was crying out again the evils existing in the Negro set-up seven years before the white people discovered what was happening to them. Many know that a vicious vendetta was organized—and still exists—which aided and abetted the clubbing and beating of this writer several months ago.

A long time ago this writer decided that there was something far more precious than life; something far more valuable than money, and that is the reason why we go out to battle every day for the things that ought to be. We could win some of these struggles without so much personal sacrifice if the Negro community would take a stand. Almost every election the statement is made in the white newspapers that certain white underworld characters will control the Eastside. There is a reason for this sort of statement. White people know that men like some of those convicted recently have controlled the Eastside. In the last election, in spite of the charges against him, Ed Spivey got the majority of the Negro votes to the everlasting shame of the 20,000 black voters of this municipality.

Regardless of the assistance we shall receive we shall press on. Regardless of threats and attempts at intimidation we shall struggle to rid evil out of our city life. In the language of a great abolitionist we shall be "as harsh as truth and as uncompromising as justice."

NEGROES FILE FOR PLACES ON SCHOOL BOARD

BRISTOW, Okla.—Whether or not it is legal for Negroes to maintain a position on the district school board was being hotly contested in Bristow this week after a Negro woman and man have filed for the same. The candidates are Mrs. Arlene McNeal, Democrat, from Ward 3, and Beahly H. Berry, Republican from Ward 3.

Under the separate school law of Oklahoma the right to membership on the school board is reserved to "the same race as the children who are entitled to attend the school of the district.

Also under the same law, the race that predominates a school district is authorized to form the school management, and the race with the minority population in the district must submit to school management under the county superintendent of schools.

According to another state law Berry's name on the ballot will be followed by the word Negro, as the state requires that candidates of other races than Caucasian must be designated on the ticket. But because of the law which reads that members of the school board must be of the same race as the majority of students in that district, Mrs. McNeal's name will probably not appear on the ballot.

The filing of the two Negroes have caused considerable study of sections of the separate school law which is as follows:

7035 Separate School Defined

"The county separate school in each school district is hereby declared to be that school in said school district of the race having the fewest number of children in said school district; provided that the county superintendent of public instruction of each county shall have authority to designate what school or schools in each school school and which class ofHSR district shall be the separate school and which class of children, either white or colored, shall have the privilege of attending such separate school or schools in said school district. Members of the district school board shall be of the same race as the children who are entitled to attend the school of the district, not the separate school.

901—Separate Boards, Election

"Wherever there shall be established and maintained a separate school, a separate board of school officers shall be elected and chosen for the management of such school as is provided for by law for the election of other school officers. In districts having separate school boards, the electors of each separate race shall meet as now provided by law at their respective schools for which said directors are to be elected and electors of one race shall not participate in any election pertaining to the schools of the other race."

It will be up to the county election board to determine the legality of the ruling, in the event the matter is brought to the attention of the board.

A White Bus Driver for Negro School Children

Last week the Black Dispatch was flooded with protest letters from Enid. It appears that the school board in this Garfield County city has seen fit to name a white man as bus driver for the Negro schools. Most of the letters seemingly sought to pitch a fight on the principal of the schools ,and other teachers in the system. Only one person out of perhaps a half dozen who wrote letters, had the moral courage to attach her name to the communication sent us.

We are giving attention to the letter written by this Enid lady, and would not have paid any attention to the other anynomous letters, but for receipt of the signed letter just referred too. Hereafter, we would like for citizens over the state, who desiring the Black Dispatch to give recognition to matters they have in mind, to kindly attach their names to documents sent. Unsigned articles find their way to the waste basket.

Here is the answer we gave to the questions asked by the Enid lady:

"There is no law in the state of Oklahoma which prohibits a white person from driving a bus for a Negro school. It would even be within the law for a white teacher to teach in a Negro school. In Creek county the white supervisor handles the affairs in all the Negro schools of that county.

"The trouble you have in Enid is in a large measure political rather than legal. If Negroes do not exercise an influence in elections, the governing agencies may do as they please regarding such mattrs about which you complain.

"If, on the other hand, the Negroes in the school district, where a white bus driver is hauling Negro children, would cease their petty bickering and vote solidly for some one who would agree to change this situation, your troubles would all disappear.

"I know what an ugly situation presents itself, in the picture drawn in your letter, but unless the method is adopted, as suggested here, there will be no relief possible.

"It is unlawful for white and Negro children to go to school together, but the law is silent when it comes to the question of white people drawing salaries to serve in Negro schools."

We said what we did in the letter to our Enid correspondent, not because of what she said in her letter regarding political issues, but because of what was said in the anynomous letters we received, dealing with the same subject.

In almost every one of these letters the school patrons assumed that the big job for them to tackle was to oust the Negro principal, because white people had placed a white bus driver in the separate setup. Not a single one of those who wrote us assumed that they should do their fighting in the right place, or apparently understood the method of procedure in launching such a battle.

This is no brief for A. Mitchell Moore, the principal of the Enid separate schools. We have slight acquaintance with the man, but we do know that policies such as complained of were fixed by a white school board, and not by the Negro principal.

We have an idea that when the Negro principal heard of the appointment of a white bus driver he was embarrassed, but if the Enid principal is in the shape of Negro principals in most school districts, he must sit silently and accept whatever he gets, because the colored citizenry is not organized properly to fight for its rights.

Attorney General Upholds Demand of Negroes For Bus Services In School Zones

Mae Q. Williams Issues Reply To Request Of Negroes Living In Rural Districts

Grade School Children To Benefit

The right of Negro citizens in school districts of Oklahoma to demand transportation in school buses for their children was upheld last week by Attorney General Mac Q. Williamston, in an opinion furnished Glenn C. Oakes, county attorney of Harmon County. The opinion was written by J. Tarry Johnson, assistant to the attorney general.

The opinion says that the students are entitled to transportation under provisions of Section 1, of Article 9, Chapter 34, Oklahoma Session laws, 1939. It is pointed out that provisions are made for "all children legally residing in the district, or legally transferred thereto and legally entitled to attend school therein."

The exact text of the opinion follows:

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated November 17, 1939, wherein you state that a certain independent school district maintaining a high school and having the necessary qualifications for furnishing transportation, and providing transportation for the white children attending its grade schools and high school, has within its corporate limits a separate school for colored children in which there is offered instruction in grades only to and including the 8th grade, there being no program of education in any high school grades offered, in said school district, for the separate school children.

"You refer to Sections 1 and 15 of Article 9, Chapter 34, Oklahoma Session Laws 1939 (House Bill No. 292 of the 17th Legislature), and request the Attorney General's opinion as to the authority to provide transportation for colored children who are attending the separate school in said independent school district.

"Section 1 of the 1939 Act referred to in your letter reads as follows:

"'Section 1. Subject to the provisions of this Act, any school district in Oklahoma, maintaining therein a program of public education in grades one to eight, inclusive, and not less than two accredited high school grades in addition thereto, is hereby authorized to provide transportation to and from school for all children legally residing in the district or legally transferred thereto and legally entitled to attend school therein, who live one (1) mile or more by commonly traveled road from a school within the district suitable to the respective grades of said children. Any consolidated school district organized pursuant to law, shall provide transportation under the provisions of this Section, regardless of whether it maintains a high school.'

"Section 15 of said Act provides that the provisions of the Act shall apply to the separate schools of the state.

"Attention is also called to Section 3 of Article 13, Oklahoma Constitution, which requires separate schools for white and colored children with like accommodations.

"Also, the policy of the Legislature in such matters is expressed in Section 12677, Oklahoma Statutes 1931, as amended by Article 13, Chapter 66, Page 330, Oklahoma Session Laws 1935, which provides for appropriations "in such amount as may be necessary to provide accommodation facilities, and school term in the separate schools, if any, in each district in the county equal to accommodation, facilities, and school term provided for other regular public schools in the same district." There is similar language in Article 2, Chapter 66, Page 409, Oklahoma Session Laws 1937.

"After considering the aforementioned provisions, we have reached the conclusion that transportation of the separate school children referred to in your letter is authorized. The term "all children legally residing in the district or legally transferred thereto and legally entitled to attend school therein," appearing in Section 1, supra, is apparently all-inclusive, and appears to include children entitled to attend the separate school in the district as well as children entitled to attend other schools in the district. Of course, the expenses of such transportation should be paid as other expenses incurred in maintaining separate schools in independent school districts. In this connection, attention is called to Section 7040, Oklahoma Statutes 1931, as amended by Article 13, Chapter 34, Page 176, Oklahoma Session Laws 1937.

"You are advised, therefore that the Attorney General is of the opinion that the Board of Education of an independent school district legally providing transportation for white children withstanding the fact that high school instruction is not given to separate school children in such separate school district."

Democratic Theory Faces Acid Ordeal

Colored Art Supervisor Might Lose Position; Teachers Biased

BOARD UNDER WHIP

Allan Freelon Offered B. Franklin High School Post

By EUSTACE GAY

Hardly here long enough to warm his chair, Dr. Alexander J. Stoddard, Superintendent of Public Schools, is faced with a problem which will give his theory of "Education for Democracy" the acid test.

Allan Freelon's position as supervisor of art in the public schools, which involves supervising the work of teachers of both races, is at stake, due to the bitter prejudice of some of the art teachers in the system.

Freelon was informed last Saturday morning that an examination for the post of assistant to the director of art would be held. His informants were Dr. William H. Welsh, assistant to Dr. Louis Nusbaum, who is Associate Superintendent in charge of Staff, Curriculum, Construction and Coordination; and Dr. Edwin W. Adams, Associate Superintendent in charge of Senior and Junior High Schools.

BOARD IN PECULIAR POSITION

This places the Board of Education in the position of holding examinations for a position already held by someone else and gives some indication of the pressure which has been brought on the Board to remove Freelon.

Freelon, it is reliably reported, plans to take this examination. However, if the technique employed by the Board in filling the vacancy in the principalship of the Vaux Junior High School is followed, Freelon will not pass sufficiently high to be retained in his post, or the position may be filled by "special appointment" even before the examination, scheduled for May 27, is held.

OFFERED "PROMOTION"

Previously to being informed about the examination to be given for the post he now holds, an attempt was made to get Freelon to accept a "promotion" to be art supervisor at the Benjamin Franklin High School, Broad and Green streets.

TRANSFER, NOT PROMOTION

Spokesmen for the American Federation of Teachers, a liberal teachers' organization, which has been watching the results of Freelon's appointment as art supervisor in the public school system, pointed out that the Benjamin Franklin post was not a promotion, but rather a transfer. The Federation is said to feel that the situation is more vital than Allan Freelon, inasmuch as the principle of the right to advancement on sheer ability is at stake. They claim that all unbiased teachers of art in the system admit that the standards of the art department have been raised since Freelon's appointment.

WOULD MEAN LOSS

City-wide interest is being manifested in the outcome of the whole matter. Freelon's appointment was hailed with general satisfaction, and was interpreted as a forward step by the Board. However, his transfer to the staff of a senior high school, even though there is now not a single colored teacher in a local high school, would have meant the loss of a position of much more prestige, both to Freelon and to the group.

Individuals and organizations interested in the matter point out that there are many other colored teachers competent to teach in the senior high schools, without transferring Freelon.

THEORY TO BE TESTED

The TRIBUNE was informed months ago that one of the two women members of the Board of Education objected to Freelon as supervisor of art, because it brought him in contact with white women.

Judges Ponder Rights Of Dismissed Teacher

PHILADELPHIA (ANP) —Whether a school can fire a teacher, because of her color, while it continues to employ white teachers, is the question that three Pennsylvania judges are deliberating, in the light of the Teacher Tenure Law, following hearings in nearby Media last Friday.

The law declares that wherever a teacher is dropped because there is a lack of work for her, that whenever a school has openings again such dismissed teachers must get first choice.

The teacher in this case is Mrs. Nora Bragg, who taught for several years in the Swarthmore public school, albeit she taught only three grades composed entirely of Negroes. But she was a member of the faculty and protected by the tenure law. Now the Swarthmore school authorities have decided to merge white and Negro classes, but in the merger dropped Miss Bragg while employing white teachers.

As the law goes, the tenure act protects Mrs. Bragg even if the school board does not want her to "teach white children."

Race Promised Jobs In White Public Schools

Education Board Opens Maintenance Service Branches

The Educational Equality League, through one of its members, John Francis Williams, attorney, has been asked by Add B. Anderson, business manager and secretary of the Philadelphia Board of Public Education, to submit a list of colored men and women who desire to enter any branch of the custodian and maintenance service of the local schools sytsem.

The request came following a recent conference between Williams and Anderson during which the attorney pointed out the great inequalities of employment in these branches and the tendency to restrict colored employees to colored schools.

DISTRICT ENGINEERS KEY MEN

Anderson volunteered the information that employes in these branches of the school system, particularly the charwomen and others in the lower brackets, were usually recommended to the district engineers by the school visitors, who came in contact with people who needed that type of employment.

The list to be furnished by the Educational Equality League, with periodical additions, will be sent to all district engineers by Anderson, with the request that some of them be employed as vacancies occur.

URGED TO APPLY

"I feel certain," Williams told the TRIBUNE this week, "that Mr. Anderson's recommendations in this regard will certainly be heeded by the engineers, for he is their boss.

Persons desiring to qualify for position in the custodian and maintenance service of the local schools system are urged to send their names and addresses immediately to Mr. Williams at his office, 1900 Chestnut street; or Floyd Logan, president of the League, 25 north 40th street.

Decide Bragg Case Against Negro Teacher

Media Court's Decision Prevents Reinstatement To Post

MEDIA, Pa.—The fight of Mrs. Nona R. Bragg to be reinstated in the Swarthmore school system was given a setback Wednesday of last week, when Judge Albert Dutton McDade of the Delaware County Common Pleas Court handed down a decision dismissing a writ of alternative mandamus, through which Mrs. Bragg sought to compel the Swarthmore Board of Education to reinstate her.

The decision represented the unanimous decision of the entire court, which heard the argument on the writ. The other members are President Judge W. Roger Fronefield and Judge John M. Broomall, 3rd.

Mrs. Bragg was dismissed when her all-Negro class was distributed among the other grades in the school where she taught.

Claim Tenure Violation

She claimed that the Board had violated the recently-enacted Teacher Tenure law by dismissing her, instead of abiding by the law, which required that when it became necessary to dismiss a teacher, the teacher last employed should be discharged first.

"Plans are being made to appeal the decision to a higher court," Dr. William Bragg, the teacher's husband told the TRIBUNE on Monday.

Decision Far-Reaching

"The Pennsylvania Association of Teachers of Colored Children and other teachers' group, which are supporting Mrs. Bragg realize that the decision does not stop with Mrs. Bragg, but unndermines the security of every teacher in the State of Pennsylvania," Bragg, a West Philadelphia dentist, said.

"At a time when democratic principles are being questioned all over the world, the decision was a shock to Mrs. Bragg and her supporters," he continued. "But we are far from being discouraged. We believe that no efforts are wasted or lost while fighting for civil liberties."

BLACKSBURG TRUSTEES AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE SCHOOL BUILDING BONDS BY MEASURE STARTED IN ASSEMBLY

Issuance of $35,000 Worth of Bonds in District 9 Subject to the Vote of Electors.

MEETING OF CITIZENS SCHEDULED FOR FRIDAY

Propose to Construct New Buildings for White and Negro Students With Bonds.

Blacksburg, June 26.—A bill authorizing trustees to float $45,000 worth of bonds to repair and construct new school buildings in Blacksburg District No. 9 was started through the General Assembly last week by Senator George W. McKown.

Issuance of the bonds is subject to a vote of approval by the qualified electors of the district who will consider the project at a mass meeting here Friday night.

Present buildings, which house an elementary school for white students, an elementary high school for negroes and another negro grammar school, are inadequate for the requirements of the district and all in use are badly in need of repairs, education authorities declared yesterday.

It is understood that if the bond issue is approved a modern new grammar school for whites will be constructed and a combination high end grammar school for negro students will be built.

Schools new in use include the Blacksburg grammar school (for whites) the Blacksburg high and grammar school and the Little Hoke school for colored children.

Clemmons Will Speak.

A mass meeting of Blacksburg citizens (qualified electors of District No. 9) is scheduled at the town hall Friday night, beginning at 8 o'clock, when the school situation will be discussed by state and county education officials.

S. P. Clemmons, of Columbia, director of the division of school house planning of the South Carolina department of education, will be the guest speaker, it has been announced.

O. M. Mullinax, of Gaffney, county superintendent of education, will preside over the meeting and will speak on the condition of the buildings in the district.

Trustees of the district are M. W. Thomas, O. M. Rumfelt and W. H. Fayssoux. Richard Rice, former director of athletics at Boiling Springs, N. C., Junior College, is superintendent, having been elected to that post some time ago.

Following is a copy of the bill introduced:

Bonds Authorized.

"A Bill to provide for the issuance of bonds of Blacksburg School District No. 9, in Cherokee county, for the purpose of constructing, building and equipping new school buildings, and to provide for the payment of such bonds and interest thereon.

"Section 1. The school trustees of Blacksburg School District No. 9, in Cherokee county, together with the treasurer of said county, be, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to issue bonds of said school district for the purpose of repairing or constructing, building and equipping school buildings in said district not to exceed forty-five thousand ($45,000) dollars. That said bonds shall be either serial or otherwise, executed in such manner, and shall mature at such time or times and shall bear such rate of interest as the board of trustees of said school district and the county treasurer of Cherokee county may deem advisable.

"Section 2. That the full faith, credit and taxing power of said school district are hereby irrevocably pledged for the payment of such bonds and interest thereon.

"Section 3. That no bonds shall be issued under the provisions of this act until a majority of the qualified electors of said district voting at an election shall have voted in favor thereof. Such election shall be in accordance with the provisions of law.

"Section 4. The auditor of Cherokee county is hereby authorized, empowered and directed to levy a sufficient tax upon the taxable property in said school district as will pay the said bonds and interest thereon as same mature, and the treasurer of said county is authorized and directed to collect such tax so levied in like manner as other taxes are collected.

"Section 5. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

"Section 6. This act shall take effect upon its approval by the governor."

Figures And Facts Of Interest In Annual Report Of The Chester Schools

The statistical report which contains the enrollment and average attendance of all pupils, white and colored, in Court House District, No. 1, has just been completed and copies properly signed and given to the County Superintendent of Education for his annual report to the State Superintendent of Education. There are some interesting figures in connection with our report. There are 1,368 pupils enrolled from the first through the seventh grades. An interesting feature about the high school enrollment is that there are two hundred fifty-five boys and two hundred fifty-five girls, making a total of five hundred ten and a grand total of eighteen hundred seventy-eight pupils in the white schools.

In accordance with the size of our high school there are too many young people dropping out between the first and eighth grades. For example in this year's enrollment there are two hundred seventy-four children in the first grade and one hundred sixty-three in the seventh. That is a loss of one hundred eleven children from the first through the seventh grades. Our greatest loss comes between the eighth and tenth grades. We must encourage our young people to continue in school until they receive a high school diploma. Letters from college registrars and college presidents reveal the interesting fact that practically everyone of the thirty-one students who graduate in 1938 and went to college have passed their freshman work, many of them with distinction.

Colored Schools.

We have six hundred fifty-eight pupils enrolled from the first through the seventh grades and two hundred forty-eight in the high school. An interesting feature of our high school enrollment is that we have jumped from one hundred seventy-eight last session to two hundred forty-eight this session, an increase of seventy pupils. We have only eighty-seven boys in the Finley High School and one hundred sixty-one girls.

It is an interesting fact to note that we have twenty-seven hundred eighty-four enrolled in our white and colored schools in Court House School District of Chester. This accounts for the increase in cost of education in the Court House School District. Both the white and colored schools have increased 50 per cent in enrollment in the last fifteen years. This shows that more and more children of both races are continuing in the grades, and even those that are dropping out stop out of the higher grades.

The cost of education may seem high, but compared with that of crime the cost of education is very low. This nation spends about two and one-half billions of dollars each year for public and private schools and colleges, but look at the crime bill which amounts to fifteen billions of dollars a year.

In the language of Horace Mann —"If ever there was a cause, if ever there can be a cause, worthy to be upheld by all of toil or sacrifice that the human heart can endure, it is the cause of education."

Nearly 10,000 students are enrolled in Spartanburg city schools and colleges, according to figures reported by officials here yesterday.

L. W. Jenkins, superintendent of city schools, announced a total enrollment of 7,030 pupils in the local elementary and high schools.

The enrollments for the various schools are as follows:

In the Spartanburg city negro schools, 4.87- pupils have been enrolled to date, making the total enrollment of the city schools 7,030.

Converse college, which began its new session two weeks ago, yesterday had an enrollment to date of 360, according to reports received from the office of the registrar.

Dr. R. B. Burgess, president of Textile Industrial institute, yesterday announced a total enrollment of 316 for that institution for the current session. The freshman class, numbering 205, shows an increase of about 25 per cent over last year.

NYA Is Replacing Negro School Building Destroyed By Fire

In 1930 a group of negroes in the Bradley sectios pooled their slim finances and bought a tract of land for a school building. The building was erected by these ardent believers in a program of education for their race, and it stood there until Christmas of last year, housing their one-teacher school.

Last Christmas, however, during the festivities attendant on a hot supper at the school building, the structure caught fire in some manner, being destroyed in the flames. There was no insurance on the building, due to the ruling of the State Sinking Fund Commission which insures school buildings in this state, that no new insurance would be taken out on school buildings in which there was a swinging flue.

School was continued in a rented building and the term completed. This year another term was begun in one part of a house, the other part of which was occupied by a family.

Yesterday, however, work was begun by 25 Greenwood county National Youth Administration employes in rebuilding the structure which was destroyed in the Christmas fire. The NYA will furnish the labor and the roof for the building according to County Superintendent of Education R. C. Lominick, with the county supplying the remainder of the materials.

The building will be 22 by 30 feet in size, and will be constructed in such a manner that it can be insured with the Sinking Fund Commission. The building should be ready for occupancy in about six weeks, Mr. Lominick declared.

In explaining the ruling of the State Sinking Fund Commission in reference to the lack of insurance on the building burned last year, Mr. Lominick said that a fund is carried by the commission for this purpose. It formerly was one million dollars. If the surplus dropped below this figure, the schools were assessed to make up this amount. If the surplus became more than this figure, the schools were carried without charge until the figure adjusted itself again.

The insurance became so heavy, eventually, that the surplus had to be raised to two and a half million dollars, Mr. Lominick said, at which figure it stands today. The commission formerly insured school buildings with the old time swinging flue, but some time before 1930 abandoned this practice. Those buildings which had been insured before that time were carried, but no new buildings were added to the list.

Columbia, S. C. State

OF FIRST IMPORTANCE.

In the course of the 1926-27 scholastic year 49,217 white children enrolled in the first grade of South Carolina's public school system. Of this number 9,059 have been graduated from accredited high schools.

These figures, given by Dr. B. O. Williams of Clemson college in his recent Columbia address to public school officials, show that approximately four of every five white pupils drop out of school before completing high school courses.

Doctor Williams estimates that perhaps one in fourteen of the white children who began their schooling in 1926 subsequently enrolled for college training, and that of those entering college, not more than 40 or 50 per cent would be graduated. This, he said, means that approximately one in thirty-three of the white pupils beginning their studies in South Carolina's public school system continue studying until college degrees are obtained.

The educational status of Negro children is vastly worse than that of white children. According to Doctor Williams, only one in every 200 Negro pupils who entered the first grade in 1927 has since been graduated from an accredited high school.

These profoundly important facts suggest to Doctor Williams precisely the same thoughts they suggest to The State. "Our educational program should be designed for human living," he says, "and should be realistic and dynamic, changing as South Carolina changes. The curriculum is now based on college entrance requirements, whereas the big majority of pupils never go to college."

They do not enter college, but they do enter life. Therefore, as this newspaper has insisted scores of times, the curriculum should be designed to teach them how to perform the tasks of life in the communities where they are most likely to reside, which are their present communities. Functional education, somewhat localized, is the educational thesis of this newspaper. Teach the boys and girls of South Carolina, of all races, how livelihoods are earned in South Carolina, and how better ways of life might be developed here.

In this persistent insistence on the practical, The State is not overlooking the cultural, nor belittling it. On the contrary, The State wants South Carolina to build the kind of economic foundation that will support a strong and agreeable culture.

There cannot be much culture where there is so much poverty, and the most likely escape from the too general poverty, hence from too little culture, is to teach the boys and girls of South Carolina how to work effectively at the tasks available, how to live in health in this state, how to win for themselves the abundant life and enjoy a pleasing and hearty standard of living, by which The State does not mean a standard of money income and outgo only.

Various Forward Steps Are Cited; School Serves the District Admirably

Mt. Croghan, Jan. 4.—The Mt. Cro ghan school system employs ten whit teachers and two Negro teachers. Th white schools enroll at present 3 pupils. The Negro schools have en rolled 75 pupils.

S. H. Jones is the present superin endent of the system. He is a grad ate of Erskine college and for the ast three years nas been doing grad uate work at Duke university.

The Mt. Croghan high school has is its principal, I. Neal Rivers, who s a graduate of Clemson college. He s in his second years as principal. He s also head of the physical educa ion department.

The faculty of this school consist of the following teachers:

S. H. Jones, social science and superintendent; Miss Dorothy Kirby English and French; Miss Louise Oates, natural science; Miss Genevieve Shardon, sixth grade and girls athletic director; Miss Olivia Bishop, fifth grade and domestic arts; Miss Lucy Hendrick, fouth grade; Miss Eugenia M. Jones, third grade and rt; Miss Dasie Lee Moore, second rade; Mrs. Brevard Beck, first grade and public school music; Mrs. Mae Clark, music teacher.

The buildnigs consist of the grammar and high school building as one unit, a fine and itarium with a seating capacity of 500, and a field house with a beautiful athletic field and playground space of about six acres.

The school system is located in the Mt. Croghan school district directed by the local board of trustees consisting of: J. O. Taylor, chairman; W. J. Rayfield, secretary, and E. E. Rivers, clerk.

The fundamentals of education are still to be found here in the Mt. Croghan schools. The school believe in progressive education, but is not ultra-progressivist. Realizing that the school exists for society and not society for the school, the school is striving to teach boys and girls to be better members of the ever changing social order.

Some additions and improvements follow:

Improved athletic program which includes all pupils, clubs, special assemblies, great increase in enrolment, attendance and school spirit.

Enlarged library, careful planing for teaching by teachers, professoinal books and magazines in office available to teachers at all times.

A junior-senior high school with addition of seventh grade, enroled and very active in the high school league, splendidly organized and operated lunch room, teachers annually enrolled in South Carolina Education 100 per cent attendance at county teachers meetings, special activity period each day, National-Hororary Beta club, excellent athletic field house and field, work shop for junior high boys.

City schools have enrolled over 12,000

A. Burnet Rhett superintendent

Continuous study possible through co-operation of city's college

Charleston, Jan. 16.—The Charleston city public schools at the close of the last school year, June 30, 1938, had an enrolment of 12,394 pupils. Of these there were in the white high schools 2,191, white elementary schools 4,536, wihte evening schools 226, Negro high schools 475, Negro elementary schools 4,966.

The instructional force of the schools, including principals, supervisors and teachers was 221 white and 116 Negro. There are at present 12 buildings, two white high schools, one for boys, one for girls, a vocationa school for boys and girls, five white elementary schools, one Negro high school, which includes some of the upper elementary grades, and three Negro elementary schools. An additional building, a junior high school has just been completed but has not yet been furnished, equipped and occupied.

The cost of operating the school system during the past school year was $543,250 for ordinary current expenditures, $100,974 for capital outlays, $70,090 for debt service.

A tabulation made last year showed that in the white schools of 533 graduates from the elementary schools 505 entered the high schools and of 383 graduated from the high school 144 entered college. A similar study in the case of the Negro schools showed that of 253 graduates from the elementary schools 218 entered the high school and of 33 graduates from the high school five entered college.

It is proposed when the funds are available to develop two large junior high schools—one for the northern section of the city, the other for the southern section of the city, to develop a large co-educational high school and to continue the development of a co-educational vocational school. In the case of the Negro schools it is proposed to develop a large combination senior-junior high school and to limit the elementary schools to six grades each.

The realization that many of the Charleston school buildings were by present standards obsolescent lead to inviting Dr. N. L. Engelhardt of Columbia university to make a school building survey of the city during the summer of 1937. Doctor Engelhardt worked out and left with the school authorities a 15-year plan for developing the school building situation in Charleston.

The College of Charleston though not an integral part of the public school system works in close co-operation with the public school system so that a boy or girl in Charleston has the opportunity to secure an education at public expense from the first grade through a liberal arts college of high standards.

As this particular article is to be published on the date of Governor Maybank's inauguration it will probably not be amiss to state that Governor Maybank is a first honor graduate of the College of Charleston and has actively promoted the development and expansion of the college.

Some years ago with a view to developing properly trade and industrial education in the city an industrial survey of the city was made under the direction of Carlton B. Gibson, the then superintendent of the Savannah public schools. The main result of this survey was the establishment of the Murray Vocational school. This school takes boys who have completed the elementary school and gives them training in automobile mechanics, machine shop practice, drafting, blue print reading, radio, electricity and wood working. Girls and boys who take prevocational commercial work in the regular high schools are given at the Murray vocational shop two years of special vocational commercial training leading to positions as typists, accountants, machine operators, stenographers, secretaries and salespersons.

The high school of Charleston, which will celebrate this spring the 100th anniversary of its founding, looks back on a splendid record of preparing the young men of the city for college or for life. With the modern conception of the high school this school as well as the Memminger high school for girls, which celebrated its 75th anniversary a few years ago, has expanded far beyond the older conception of the high school as a college preparatory institution and now offers various subjects and courses to prepare those pupils who are not going to college to do their part in the life of the community.

The Memminger high school, formerly the Memminger Normal school, which was the first teacher training school established in this state, for more than two generations prepared for their work the great majority of the teachers in the city public schools.

The Burke high school, which is the high school for Negroes, includes college preparatory and ordinary high school work and in addition offers training for the boys in cabinet making, wood work, bricklaying and masonry and for the girls in cooking, sewing, millinery and laundry.

The schedule of night classes includes for the whites certain classes to enable pupils to make up deficiencies from their school days certain classes to enable aliens to become citizens and a number of vocational classes in trade and industry and in the field of commercial and distributive education. The WPA work in cooperation with the schools has certain evening classes for Negroes.

The figures quoted above showing the proportion of the elementary school graduates who enter the high schools is indicative of the work which the elementary schools of the city are doing.

During the past few years the College of Charleston has maintained under the auspices of the Progressive Education association a summer school for teachers in which the newer theories of education are taught to the teachers and demonstrated through groups of public school pupils. The public school system has worked in close co-operation with this summer school with an idea of bringing gradually a sane type of progressive education into the local schools. Considerable progress has been made in the introduction of these newer methods and theories, particularly into the elementary schools. An attempt has been made in the public school system generally to preserve the best of the old and to introduce gradually the best of the new following the advice of Pope:

"Be not the first by whom the new are tried Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

The progressive superintendent of schools is A. Burnet Rhett.

3 buildings in system; 376 pupils

H. B. Hair, superintendent

Auditorium-gymnasium constructed in 1935; 15 teachers on faculty

Ruby, Jan. 30.—The Ruby school system has grown rapidly since it was established in 1900. It began with two teachers and now has 13.

At the present the system consists of three buildings. These are: The primary building which was built in 1924, the elementary and high school building built in 1916, and the auditorium-gymnasium built in 1935. The enrolment in high school is 141 and in grammar school 190. The Negro school has an enrolment of 45 pupils. The faculty consists of 13 white teachers and two Negro teachers.

The Ruby school district was the first in Chesterfield county to transport pupils by bus. Today we have five districts feeding the high school. Fifty per cent. of the students of our high school enrolment are transported from these five districts.

In 1935, through the aid of the works progress administration an auditorium-gymnasium was begun. It was completed in 1937. It consists of a basketball court, a large stage, well equipped basement for classroom space, dressing rooms and seating capacity of 800 people.

Increased enrolment in high school necessitated more classroom space therefore, the old auditorium was cut up into classrooms, making a total of nine classrooms, study hall, library, and laboratory.

Our school is run on the 7-4 plan, offering the students in high school 28 courses.

The vocational courses are: Home economics, agriculture and commercial science. Commercial science and agriculture was added to the high school curriculum in 1923.

The agriculture department is under the direction of G. H. Rankin. This department consists of a newly equipped classroom and work shop. At present, it is in the basement of the new gymnasium, however, a work shop is now under construction and will be completed in the near future.

Much attention have been given this course in that the pupils have been given the opportunity to put their training into practical use.

Home economics was added to our curriculum this school year. Mrs. G. H. Rankin is at the head of this department. This course is being offered to the ninth and tenth grade students and next year will be offered to the 11th. The training in this course is proving most beneficial to the girls in our community.

The commercial department is in charge of Miss Alice Perry. It holds an important place in our school curriculum as it aids the boys and girls in preparation for the business world.

Much interest is given to athletics, especially basketball and baseball. The girls have lost only one game in basketball this season, winning the county championship last year. Good sportsmanship is stressed above everything else in athletics.

The students participate in extra-curricula activities, such as: Future Farmers of America, National Honorary Beta club, Junior Home Makers club, Science club and English club.

The Ruby school system is very fortunate in having a very progressive-minded board of trustees who are responsible for the growth and progressiveness of our school. They are: Dr. R. M. Newsome, chairman; Dr. G. D. McGill, secretary and J. F. Crawley.

The Faculty: Mrs. H. B. Hair, first grade and music; Mrs. Val Dyches, second grade; Miss Marie Johnson, third grade and girls basketball coach; Miss Cleo Griggs, fourth grade; Mrs. M. L. Raley, fifth grade; Miss Helen Kennedy, sixth grade; T. W. Duval, seventh grade.

High School: J. H. Morrell, principal, science, history and coach; Miss Alice Perry, commercial science; Miss Myrtle Wallace, English and French; Mrs. G. H. Rankin, home economics; G. H. Rankin, vocational agriculture; T. W. Duval, mathematics; H. B. Hair, superintendent.

GAFFNEY SCHOOLS ATTENDANCE GOOD

Average In County Institutions Increased From 82 To 84 Per Cent

GAFFNEY, June 22.—Average daily attendance in Cherokee county schools during the 1938-1939 session increased from 82 to 84 per cent for white students and from 79 to 82 for negroes, Mrs. Grace M. Thomas, county attendance officer announced yesterday.

According to figures recently compiled by Mrs. Thomas total enrollment in 50 white elementary and high schools of the county during the past session was 6,468 students with an average daily attendance of 5,420. Enrollment in this county's 35 negro high and elementary schools during this period was 2,368 while the average daily attendance was 1,944.

Increases in average daily attendance were made despite a drop in the enrollment for both negro and white schools, Mrs. Thomas' records reveal. Enrollment in white schools for the 1937-1938 term was 105 more than for the recently-closed session. The negro schools' enrollment this year was 160 less than for the previous school term.

Largest "losses" in enrollment were in the first grades, according to school records.

The 84 per cent average daily attendance for white schools during the past year represents an increase of 14 per cent since 1928, eight per cent since 1932 and five per cent since 1937. Daily attendance in negro schools of this county has increased 16 per cent since 1928, 13 per cent since 1932 and 10 per cent over 1937.

Figures listed were compiled by Mrs. Thomas for state education department headquarters at Columbia. Increases in average daily attendance have been the goal of county programs as well as the state for the past two school years.

O. M. Mullinax is superintendent of the Cherokee county school system which has 175 elementary and 41 high school white teachers and 64 elementary and eight high school negro teachers. C. B. Hanna is superintendent of the Blacksburg centralized district; L. F. Carson is head of the Gaffney schools and Richard Rice is superintendent of the Blacksburg grammar school district.

EDUCATION- 1939
COMMON SCHOOLS, CONDITION OF

SOUTH CAROLINA

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
February 14, 1939

Aspects of Humanitarianism

Of 14,563 teachers employed in the public schools of this state last year 9,291 were white. The white children in the schools were 264,800 and the negro children 223,949. In the high schools the negro youth were but 13,579 to 62,586 white.

Of the school property in the state, of a total value of $47,129,905, the investment in schools for whites was $40,935,857. The percentage of school attendance (school attendance is compulsory by law) for whites was 84 and for negroes 76, from which flows the inference that the law is enforced more rigidly for the white than for the colored people.

From these figures, they are from the report of Mr. James H. Hope, state superintendent of education, it is clear that, so far as the schooling of the negroes is concerned, inhumanitarianism is rampant in South Carolina. It long has been. The News and Courier is not now saying for the first time that the negroes are not fairly treated in the matter of education. The negroes are workers and consumers. The great burden of tax-paying falls on the consumers. "Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors." By far the greater part of the tax revenues of South Carolina are raised by indirect taxes, not taxes on property.

The general assembly is now providing "social security" for certain classes of the poor, the aged, the blind and the dependent children. All the people, white and black, will raise the millions for it by paying taxes. Of every twelve aged persons to be cared for in old age five will be negroes, seven to five being the roughly estimated proportion of whites to blacks.

Indeed, the proportion of dependent old persons will be larger in the colored than in the white race, poverty being more common among negroes.

The presumption is that as long as the federal government shall hold the whip handle in respect of this humanitarianism, the laws of distribution to certain classes of the needy and deserving will be administered impartially as between the races.

From this it appears that the white people of South Carolina are now resolved to practice humanitarianism toward the aged, the blind, the dependent children, white and black alike. That is as it should be. The general assembly seems to be prepared to tax the white people as much as it shall tax the colored for welfare.

An argument for federal assistance in maintaining the public schools would be that it would put an end to the inhumanitarianism practiced toward the negroes, a disclosed by the figures in Mr. Hope's report Federal assistance would be apportioned to the schools by the rules of apportionment to the aged and the blind.

It is instructive and interesting to observe that the general assembly has entered upon a policy of taxing for the welfare of both races without discrimination.

The News and Courier advocates just treatment of the negro schools with or without federal assistance.

Of course whatever money be granted by the federal government to South Carolina will be and is paid by the South Carolinians however they, or their "leaders" fool themselves to the contrary.

And More Additions Are Planned

J. B. Reynolds Superintendent

Curriculum Enriched, Physical Plant Enlarged to Meet City's Needs

Lancaster, Dec. 31.—For several years the Lancaster city schools have had a most unusual growth. The Chesterfield Avenue school and the Brooklyn Avenue school buildings were completed three years ago. At this time a large addition to the Lancaster training school, the Negro school, was added. Today the enrolment is 2,779 pupils. In the white schools 1 elementary teachers and five high school teachers have been added to the faculty within three years, and during this period three Negro teachers had increased the Negro faculty. The high school is over crowded with the locker rooms on the wings of each floor used for classrooms. Two high school classes meet in the auditorium daily. The Springs cotton mills have had a steady building program which brought about the growth of the city schools. September of this year saw a new building opened up for the pupils from the new development of the Springs cotton mills. This school is the new Irving Farm school. To see Lancaster grow one has only to drive through town and out into the new development one week and then wait until the following week to find several new homes completed. Eight buildings house the city schools.

To provide for this added growth the high school will begin a building program the early part of the new year. Plans have been completed to add ten classrooms, an agriculture shop, a manual training shop, a textile shop, a larger commercial department and home economics department.

The faculty of these schools is as follows:

Brooklyn Avenue School: H. P. Bennett, principal; Mrs. Talmadge Ferguson, sixth grade; Miss Frances Anderson, fifth grade; Mrs. Louise Bowers, fourth grade; Mrs. Minnie Carothers, third grade; Miss Emily Harrison, third grade; Mrs. P. M. Lathan, second grade, and Miss Jesse Glenn, first grade.

Central School: J. P. Richards, Jr., principal; Miss Ethel McDuffie, sixth grade; Miss Eloise Young, sixth grade; Miss Haynesworth Pendergrass, fifth grade; Miss Theo Humphries, fifth grade; Mrs. A. C. Carnes, fourth grade; Mrs. Ned Gregory, fourth grade; Mrs. K. C. Billings, third grade; Mrs. Alma Askings, second grade; Mrs. J. P. Richards, Jr., second grade; Mrs. T. C. Hicks, first grade, and Miss Ruby Clyburn, first grade.

Chesterfield Avenue School: C. D. Williams, principal; Miss Elenora Gladden, sixth grade; J. K. Connors, fifth grade; Mrs. A. B. Tennant, fourth grade; Miss Charlotte Jones, third grade; Miss Vandiver Wilson, third grade; Miss Ethel Revil, second grade; Miss Eugenia Adams, first grade, and Miss Martha Thompson, first grade.

Irving Farm school: Mrs. T. K. Cunningham, principal; Miss Christine Perry, third grade; Mrs. Jay Boyd, second grade, and Miss Nancy Graham, first grade.

Springs School: E. R. Fickling, principal; Miss Rosella Ranking, sixth grade; Mrs. Tom Wilson, fifth grade; Mrs. Charlton Jones, fourth grade; Mrs. Joe Coulbourne, fourth grade; Miss Macie Sistare, third grade; Miss Mildred Billings, second grade; Miss Sara Tickner, second grade; Miss Lucy Witherspoon, second grade; Mrs. E. R. Fickling, first grade; Mrs. T. M. Belk, first grade, and Miss Nell Hiton, first grade.

The High School: L. D. Golson, principal: Miss Maude Moore, dean and English; Miss Sara Craig, biology; Miss Elizabeth Kirk, mathematics; Miss Margaret Robinson, history; O. W. Pipkins, history; Mrs. George Huntley, history; C. A. Nelson, science; Miss Catherine Lyon, French; Mrs. Caroline Jackson, library science; C. B. Alexander, agriculture; Mrs. Martha Ann Dowling Bell, Latin; Miss Dorothy Rogers, English; Miss Catherine Davenport, English; Miss Crystal Rae Sansbury, commercial subjects; Miss Dorothy Griggs, commercial subjects; A. B. Edwards, mathematics; Mrs. W. B. Sowell, home economics; Miss Louise Clyburn, home economics.

Special Teachers: Miss Dorothy Meiggs, public school music; Miss Gladys Sanders, public school music; Miss Helen Robinson, piano; J. W. Proctor, band and orchestra; Mrs. H. K. Floyd, seventh grade.

J. B. Reynolds is superintendent of the schools.

The curriculum of all the schools has been enriched considerably within the past three years. In the high school typewriting, shorthand, bookkeeping, salesmanship, commercial law, business science, problems of democracy, two years glee club, band, orchestra, agriculture, agriculture shop work, library science and a guidance course have been added. Seniors are taught library science and given a guidance course. Plans are being formulated to extend these courses to the entire student body. The curriculum of the elementary schools has been enriched in several ways. Three years ago the faculty of Brooklyn Avenue school began a study of progressive education. Under the guidance of Dr. James Tippett a curriculum was set up. Last year the teachers of all the elementary school entered into a special curriculum study. This year each teacher is conscious of curriculum enrichment and abundance of evidences may be seen in the improvement of instructions.

One of the best audio-visual education programs is being carried on daily in each school. The teacheres have made a careful study for three years the use of the sound motion pictures in the classrooms. During each period of the day some teacher is using sound films to correlate with her work. Whenever a child can see, hear and read his subject matter it is easy to comprehend. The schools are well equipped with projectors. These projectors were bought through a fee of ten cents a month per pupil paid in last year.

There are many extra-curricula activities within the schools. The student bodies of the schools publish monthly The Spotlight. This is an excellent student paper which reflects the activities of the schools. The elementary schools maintain an excellent school safety patrol. This patrol guides and safeguards students in traffic and other places where order and safety must be carried on. Last May the business men and clubs gave the students of the patrol a free trip to Washington as a reward for the excellent work during the year. Their record was a perfect score in preventing accidents. The athletics of the schools are designed and maintained to develop and promote character and clean and healthy bodies. Clean, fair sports are carried on at all times. Plans are being made to give special emphasis on physical education as soon as the new high school gymnasium has been completed next year. This part of the building program will be started first. There are several clubs in the high school. The Beta club, an honor club, has the largest enrolment.

While the white schools were growing with an enriched curriculum the Negro schools were keeping pace. A Kelsey library of 7,000 volumes of books was dedicated this year. The schools have an efficient shop and home economics department. The county library board through the leadership of Mrs. H. R. Rice, employed a full-time library science teacher. Twenty teachers are employed in the Lancaster Training schools, the Negro schools.

Lancaster county is very fortunate in having a county board of education that believes in good schools. The city schools are a part of the efficient county unit of schools. Since the county unit of schools has been inaugurated, each high school of the county has been well equipped in every respect. The personnel of the county board of education consists of G. M. Faile, chairman and county superintendent of education; H. R. Rice, R. B. Robinson, Sr., H. Claude Thompson and Q. A. Williford.

Linked with the county board of education is the local board of trustees. The superintendent and teachers owe directly the splendid success of the schools to wholehearted support of the local board of trustees. These men are prominent business and professional men of the city. R. S. Stewart, chairman, is one of the prominent lawyers and leaders of the state; John Poag, secretary, is cashier of the Bank of Lancaster; C. C. Brigman is one of the Springs Cotton mills' superintendents; E. W. Sistare is a farmer and business man; Dr. J. Reese Funderburke is a retired dentist and senator-elect of the county. These men of vision make school progress.

The county has good county-wide library that serves all the schools. Plenty of good reading material may be seen in every school of the county, supplied by this library system. Both the white and Negro schools are served.

The city schools are striving to meet the needs of the part time students. Night commercial classes for the business girls and boys are taught by two commercial teachers of the day schools. As soon as the general shops and textile shops have been constructed special classes will be organized for the part time students who cannot attend the day schools.

The Parent-Teacher association is very active. Under the leadership of Mrs. Dewey Parr for the past two years the membership increased from around 25 members to 150 members. The association has co-operated well with the schools and many improvements have been added. This year under the leadership of Mrs. Butters the association will continue to contribute to the welfare of the schools.

The Lancaster city schools are composed of 90 teachers and rank equal to other schools of like size within the state. With the rapid growth of the Springs Cotton mills, Lancaster will soon be one of the largest cities of industry. The schools are striving to keep pace with the growing needs of the community.

7,310 ENROLLED IN CITY SCHOOLS

Boys More Numerous Than Girls in White Schools, Supt. Jenkins Says

A total of 7,310 students, both white and negro, last year attended Spartanburg public schools, according to a report made yesterday by Superintendent L. W. Jenkins.

Of this number, 4,971 were white children and 2,339 were negroes.

Boys Lead Girls

An interesting feature is the fact that more boys were registered in the white schools than girls, an unusual fact. Mr. Jenkins stated that such a case is rare, more girls usually being registered than boys. During the past year, however, 153 more boys attended local schools than girls.

A total of 1,088 boys and 1,251 girls were registered at the negro schools here.

The local high school which has 331 graduates, had 1,850 students with 953 boys and 897 girls.

Fremont Largest

Fremont had the largest enrollment of any of the city grammar schools, with 963 attending classes there. A total of 486 boys and 497 girls were registered, this being the only white school in the city with more girls than boys.

Registration at other schools in the city system follow: Oakland, 478 total, 248 boys, 230 girls; Pine street 530 total, 273 boys, 257 girls; Southside, 703 total, 369 boys, 334 girls, and West End, 447 total, 233 boys, 214 girls.

RENTAL TEXTBOOK DATA HERE GIVEN

System Handles Over $2,000 in First Year's Fees with $18.67 Loss

The rental textbook system in Charleston county, which has finished its first year of operation, has been almost self-supporting and indications are that the record in future years will be even better, it was said yesterday at the office of H. H. McCarley, county superintendent of education.

A loss of $18.67 was recorded for the year. About $2,100 was collected in rentals on books which have a value of about $6,300.

Charles W. Jenkins, Jr., county textbook director, wrote Mr. McCarley as follows:

"During the last school year, the total loss incurred by the Charleston county rental textbook system is $18.67. The primary causes which explain this matter are as follows: Children moving away with the rental books to unannounced localities, apparent inability to pay, impossibility of collection.

"I understand that this loss compared very favorably with the other counties of the state. In Charleston county more than $2,000 was collected in rentals, which means over $6,300 worth of books in value. $74.37 was collected in damages."

Education officials pointed out that this year presented problems of initial expense which should not be present in future. Also, early closing of schools presented an additional difficulty.

Seventy-four schools were in the system, fifty-six negro and eighteen white. Teachers and principals, commended by Mr. Jenkins for their aid to the system, were said to favor it because of elimination of time lost through delay by some children in securing the necessary texts.

Parent-teacher associations, which formerly bought books for underprivileged children, now can help three times as many children with the same amount of money, as rental is one third of the cost of the books.

Books for the first grade students rent for an average of thirty-five to forty cents, varying slightly in the several schools. The high school average is about $1.75.

The North Charleston and city school districts are not included in the county rental system.

Most of the books were returned in excellent condition, Mr. Jenkins said.

Earmark Funds For Purchase Of Books For Negroes

City Council Acts On Recommendation Of Library Board; To Foreclose Morris Property And Use For Negro Playground.

Gastonia's city council in special session Friday OK'd a plan under which $1,000 of this year's $11,000 city-county appropriation to Gaston County Public Library will be earmarked for the purchase of books to be circulated among the Negro population.

Representatives of the library board informed the council of this plan recently and yesterday's action stamped it with city approval. County approval is expected from the Gaston county commissioners, who appropriate $7,500 of the money. The city appropriates $3,500.

Four Negro schools will be used under the plan as bookstations and the new books purchased will be fed into the libraries in these schools, to be circulated by competent librarians to Negro readers.

Wiping other routine matters off its slate, the council:

1. OK'd several tax releases.
2. Turned down with "no action" a request for a free license for a riding divice sponsored by a local organization.
3. Authorized joint foreclosure with the county of nine acres of the property of the Morris estate in the Negro section for city and county taxes. Acting on a Gastonia Chamber of Commerce recommendation, the city plans to turn this into a Negro playground.
4. Authorized an "ad interim" appropriation to take care of city bills from July 1, when the present city budget runs out, until August, when the new budget will be definitely adopted.

NEGRO SCHOOL SITE SIZE IS REDUCED

Council Committee Refuses Plea to Change Location Of New Structure

The city council school committee Thursday afternoon approved a reduction in the size of the site for the new Carter-Lawrence School from one block to a lot 285 by 300 feet.

The location of the site, however, was left unchanged despite strong protests from Negro religious and P.-T. A. organizations in the area, and a petition signed by 1,000 Negro citizens.

The council committee approved elimination of the northern portion of the site along Olympic Avenue, and the eastern portion along Eleventh Avenue, South.

GROUND

The resolution in the size of the site was made with the approval of the consulting committee of the board of education, who explained that the portion to the north was solid rock useless for a playground and the other portion contained several valuable pieces of property.

Assistant City Attorney Charles G. Blackard was instructed by Mayor Cummings and City Waterworks Commissioner J. W. Bauman and the council committee to file condemnation proceedings against the portion 285 by 300 feet situated at the corner of Twelfth and Edgehill.

The Rev. J. T. Brown, chairman of the committee of Negro leaders opposing the Twelfth and Edgehill site, Thursday issued a statement attacking it as "a rock pile."

WANTED ANOTHER SITE

Brown supported the site originally recommended by the school board at Stephens and Hawkins.

"It would be a standing tragedy to establish this school away from the relative center of the territory which it serves," Brown insists in his letter.

The Stephens and Hawkins Street site was advocated before the City Council by Dr. Ray L. Hamon, technical consultant for the school board and the council. He warned the council at the time it selected the other site that it would be much more costly to erect a building on it.

Brown's full statement of protest follows:

"Booker T. Washington taught the Southern Negro to 'let down his bucket where he is,' because the Negro's best friend is in the South. This has become a slogan for the progressive Southern Negro. As a citizen of South Nashville, I am asking the interference and influence of the entire white population of Nashville to come to our rescue in our effort to have the Carter-Lawrence School located in the most sensible and convenient place where it will do the greatest good to th greatest number at Stephens and Hawkins Streets.

"Our councilman, Hon. L. A. Morrisey, insists upon locating the school on a rock pile at Twelfth Avenue and Edgehill because a few Negroes, living in the neighborhood of the selected site and who have small businesses which they desire to enhance in value. He was clearly misled, and this has been shown by a petition of over 1,000 names, which has been laid upon the mayor's desk. We have petitioned the council, and they once decided aright, but upon the insistence of the councilman, the council reconsidered and overrode the will, not only of the majority, but practically of all the Negroes.

"It would be a standing tragedy to establish this school away from the relative center of the territory which it serves.

"It seems that the 'right of petition' where a councilman disagrees with the will of the people has no bearing. We are now appealing to the fair and considerate white citizens who wish the Negro children to have the advantage of the public school for which they are paying to help us.

"Is the will of the people to have no say in such controversial matters?

"Is the City Council bigger or better than the people who elect them?

"We have the people's interests in our minds; what are we to do when, despite reasons, wisdom and necessity the 'powers that be' refuse to be convinced by facts? Please let us have the help or advice of the considerate Christian sentiment. It is not too late, as some would have us believe. Our mayor seems helpless and so are we."

Education Board Of City Will Bow To Will Of Councilmen

Protests Fail And Carter-Lawrence School Will Be Erected On Old Site, Member Says

Oct. 13-39

Members of the Nashville City Board of Education say what is said to be an overwhelming majority of the patrons of Lawrence, Carter and Cameron schools seemed certain of being compelled to bow to the will of the City Council in the matter of locating the new school for the pupils of the three schools, according to report coming from the Board of education this week.

It was the decision of a majority of the citizens of the area served by the three schools to have the new building erected on a site between Hawkins and Stevens Streets and blue prints of the project had been prepared by the architects, it is reported. However the City Council, in a surprise move, on December 30, took the school building matter out of the hands of the Board of Education and ordered that the new school be erected on the Carter School site, a place that was ruled by experts of the Bachman Survey some seven years ago as being unsuitable for a school building.

A member of the Board of Education this week advised patrons of the school, according to information received by the Globe, that they would be compelled to go ahead and build the school on the Carter Site but that they were doing so under protest. They were still of the opinion that an injustice was being done the pupils and the patrons of the schools in not building on a more convenient site.

If the school is built on the Carter site, it is held, the little tots who go to Cameron school will be "left out in the cold," so to speak. They will not be allowed to go to the new Cameron School which is to be built on the old Meharry campus, and the school on the Carter site will be too far away for them to attend it.

There is an "understanding" offered by city councilmen that the little tots of Cameron will be taken care of but it is believed this will mean the retention of a part of the present Cameron "eyesore" to house them.

Appeals, petitions and prayers by a reported large majority of the patrons of the schools have failed to move the "City Fathers" who have gone ahead, ordered the condemnation of property near Carter School and, it is believed the work on the new building will start and at an early date. It is conceded that the building to be erected will be an improvement over the facilities the children now have, but experts hold that the school will become more inadequate and inconvenient as time goes on.

The school will benefit children who live in the immediate neighborhood, and be beneficial to other interests, but as far as doing the "greatest good for the greatest number," it is not pretended that this important phase of the matter has been considered.

That the ignoring of the wishes of the Board of Education and the pleas of petitioners will figure prominently in the coming election for city councilmen is a foregone conclusion. Many of the irate leaders of the movement to have the school taken from the Carter site are openly pledging opposition to the city councilmen who gave a deaf ear to the plea they have made for the larger interests of the children.

No blame is held against Mayor Thomas L. Cummings as the Mayor pleaded with the councilmen to let the Board of Education have full sway in building the schools and thus let the whole job be completed in an expert manner.

There is a feeling that the City Councilmen may interpose other restrictions upon other schools to be built, however it is known that many of the members are not happy over the rumpus that their hasty action has caused.

Colored Schools To Show Work

Exhibits for the annual demonstration of art work by Montgomery County's fifteen hundred Negro school children, were being arranged in the quarterly court room on the second floor of the courthouse today.

Susie A. Brown, Jeanes supervisor, who is in charge of the event, said one of the best exhibitions the school had ever held, would be held Friday and Saturday. All thirty-three colored schools are taking part, with outstanding work done by pupils in each institution being shown.

Samples of cooking done by the children in domestic science classes will be put on display Saturday only.

The supervisor extended an invitation to the public to visit the exhibition on both days.

The program will come to a climax at noon Saturday when the the teachers will entertain members of the county board of education and some special guests at luncheon.

NEGROES TO HOLD ANNUAL FIELD DAY

Blue Ribbon Health Parade Features Program Today At Fair Grounds

Annual Field Day of the Negro schools of the Davidson County system will be held today at the State Fair Grounds, with the Blue Ribbon health program as chief feature.

Every Negro school in the county will participate both in the Blue Ribbon demonstration and in the athletic events and other features on the schedule. A silver loving cup will be presented to each school whose every room has its every pupil a Blue Ribboner, and each individual room whose pupils are 100 per cent Blue Ribboners will also receive a cup.

The exercises open at 9:30 o'clock this morning, and will continue well into the afternoon. In addition to the Blue Ribbon Program health parade and the presentation of the trophies, special distinction will be given the Honor Roll pupils—those who have made exceptionally fine grades in their school work. About 100 children have attained a place in this group.

Dr. J. J. Lentz, county health officer, will speak in behalf of the county health department; and Supt. W. C. Dodson will represent the county board of education. Several other prominent speakers are on the program.

These schools have had an unusually successful term, and are closing with the highest number of Blue Ribbon members and the best school record in their history, county officials said.

Five Hundred Benefited By Free Textbooks

Approximately 370 white and 200 Negro children entering the first three grades in Murfreesboro schools were being provided today with free basal text books for the first time in the history of the city school system.

J. C. Mitchell ,superintendent of city schools, said that 250 children at Crichlow Grammar School and 200 at Bradley Negro school would receive free textbooks as provided by the General Assembly in a measure passed at its last session. The books provided include basal readers and all books used in the first two grades, except writing materials, while third grade children received all but language,health and music books.

Supt. Mitchell estimated that the saving to parents would be from $3 to $3.50.

Frank E. Bass, director of the State Teachers College Training School, said that 120 pupils would come under the provisions of the "free textbook aw." "While we will take advantage of all free textbooks offered," he added, "there is a much wider selection of books used in the Training School than the basal textbooks."

CITY SCHOOLS, AUSTIN PEAY BEGIN SESSIONS

Rural Institutions Will Open Term On Friday

The back-to-school movement after a summer vacation became the vogue for students of Clarksville public schools, the joint high school and Austin Peay Normal today with rural students, some 3,000 strong, to "take off" by bus and afoot to their schoolhouses tomorrow.

The Austin Peay Normal, which began classes today after a two-day enrollment, has a student body of more than 300, according to Dean Halbert Harvill. He expects approximately 100 more to enroll for the fall term. He pronounced the number enrolled as "highly gratifying."

Clarksville High School's first day's enrollment was reported at 698. This is expected to be increased some when rural students now busy on the farm, report. The enrollment there at last year's first day was 725. The decrease was caused by addition of the eighth grade to the city school system.

Howell School's exact enrollment was not known early this afternoon, but it is expected to be about 950, an increase of some half a hundred over last year's first day's attendance. This is due to the extra grade being added to the school.

The colored elementary school reported an enrollment of 635 while 189 enrolled at Burt High School.

Students today were notified what books to buy and lessons were assigned. School was dismissed after a brief session and regular lessons will begin tomorrow.

Some 3,000 rural students are expected to begin their school work tomorrow. The enrollment is expected to be fully as large if not greater than last year's.

Enrollment At Night Schools At High Mark

Best Expectations, Betts Asserts

With 350 already registered, it looks as if enrollment in Knoxville's night schools will exceed expectations, Hugh J. Betts, city supervisor of adult education, said yesterday.

Classes at Knoxville High Night School will begin tonight; those at Green and Beardsley Schools for Negro adults began last night, and classes at Stair Technical School will begin Oct. 2.

Betts said classes in typewriting and shorthand are already filled and new ones are being opened. New classes in personality, everyday law, nutrition and party planning and general etiquette—all of them carrying high school credit—also are proving popular, he said.

More than 700 were enrolled in the first session of night school last year, Betts said, but since adult night schools permit pupils to enroll at any time and since pre-registration has never been attempted here before, the largest graduation class in the history of the 16-year-old school is expected.

Although few adults have been enrolled in the grade school department, Betts said more than 100 probably will do so. He told of one case where a daughter is going to high school and her father is working for his grade school certificate in night classes.

Classes range from such subjects as civic opera taught at the high school, through oxy-acetylene at Stair Technical and barbering at Beardsley and Green Negro schools to first grade spelling.

Classes at Knoxville High School will be held Tuesday and Thursday from 6:30 to 9:30 p. m. Students may take two subjects for 18 weeks at a cost of $5.

Negroes will attend classes at their schools on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 9 p. m. The fee is $1 for three subjects.

SCHOOL TO AID NEGROES IN GROWING VEGETABLES

Negroes of Hamilton county are asked to co-operate with the agricultural department of Booker T. Washington High school in raising fall and winter gardens to furnish vegetables and produce for the family table and lessen the applications for relief which may result from the increase in prices of staple commodities.

A statement was issued yesterday by Prof. T. D. Upshaw, Jr., Washington school principal, after a visit of Walter F. Davis, Negro supervisor of agriculture for state and county schools. Davis was here for several hours yesterday and spoke at the chapel exercises of the Washington school. He maintains headquarters at the Tennessee State A. and I. School for Negroes at Nashville.

Prof. Upshaw stated that his program of help to relieve the "Negroes of the county that must have foodstuffs for their families will be centered around agricultural, garden and canning activities."

We will insist that families can and preserve everything edible from their fall and winter garden production," he declared.

Says Halifax County Like Greedy Cur Dog

Afro-American 7-1-39

Steals $72,000 from Colored Instruction Funds Each Year

How Halifax Co. Robs Teachers

[EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the twenty-second of a series of articles comparing facilities for white and colored pupils in Virginia. The figures are from the 1937-1938 report of the Virginia superintendent of public instruction.]

By NAT TURNER

Have you ever seen the spectacle of a greedy hound dog, with a nice, juicy bone of its own, going out of its way to take away from another dog the bone that it clutches between its teeth, and watched the resulting fight?

Well, the same spirit of greed that motivates the greedy hound to take away from another that which rightfully belongs to him is running rampant in Halifax County.

The Halifax County dog takes the bone just as the common greedy cur does, but, unfortunately no fight has as yet resulted from his depredations.

No Colored High

Halifax County has never built a high school for the colored children of that county without outside aid from some source. The Halifax County Training School was built by a religious denomination, I am informed, and was later taken over by the county. The Booker T. Washington High School was built with the aid of the town of South Boston.

The county, therefore, is placed in the position of having put almost all of its eggs into one basket. It has built nine high schools for the use of its white children and provides two for the use of the colored children.

In spite of the scarcity of high schools for colored children, Halifax provides free bus transportation for white children, while colored children must pay for their transportation, when such is available. Only a few buses are used in the transportation of colored children and these are not furnished by the county.

Steals $72,000 Yearly

Halifax County steals from the instruction funds appropriated for the use of colored children, $72,297.90, each year and uses it for the education of white children. It has also stolen from them $184,819.27 in buildings.

Colored children constitute 49 per cent of the school population of the county and should have the use of $112,547.36 worth of the county's instruction funds. Instead, $40,249.46 is expended on their education, an annual loss of $72,297.90.

The county has $738.123 invested in school buildings, of which $361,680.27 should be used by colored children. Instead, they have the use of only $176.861 worth of these buildings, the other $184,819.27 worth being used by white children.

Sixty-eight school buildings are used by colored children of the county, sixty-six of them being elementary schools.

Thirty-nine of the buildings are one-room huts, twenty-two are two-room buildings, four are three-room buildings, and there are three of more than three rooms. Two of the buildings are brick—the high schools.

Buildings Classified

Of the fifty-one buildings used by white children, twenty-five are one-room huts, ten are two-room buildings, five are three-room structures, and there are eleven of more than three rooms. Eight of the buildings are brick.

Halifax County provides 48 high school classrooms for the white 51% of the school population and thirteen for the colored 49 per cent.

It provides 118 classrooms and 118 teachers for the white elementary pupils and 105 classrooms and 105 teachers for the colored. The school term is 163 days for colored, 167 for white.

According to the census reports, there are 7,855 colored children in the county of school age, 8,104 whites; 5,499 colored children are enrolled in school, 5,458 whites; 4,444 of the colored children are in actual attendance, and 4,568 whites.

Teachers Fare Common

Colored teachers fare common in Halifax County. Maximum salaries for high school teachers are: Colored males, $1284; white, $2,002; colored females, $650; white, $1100; elementary: colored males, $400; white, $640; colored females, $540; white, $846. (See tables for other salaries.)

Such is the salary scale in Halifax County, in spite of the fact that the teacher-load for colored teachers averages thirty-eight pupils while the white average is only twenty-nine.

Thus, the colored teacher does much more work, but draws decidedly less pay. Such is democracy in Halifax County.

Negro School Plans Drafted

Will Be Sent Soon to PWA Office; Work Slated to Begin in August

Architects plans for the new elementary, high and vocational school to be located on Water street, Salem, and to cost approximately $135,000 are about complete and will be sent off to PWA headquarters in Atlanta within a few days. Bids will be advertised some time after the middle of July.

In the meantime, work on the foundation, which was let under special contract to the Trinkle and Dobbins construction company of Pulaski, is about complete. Work on the foundation, a $6,270 job, was begun about the middle of May.

Actual construction will likely not be begun on the superstructure until well toward the middle of August as bids must be advertised for two weeks before they are closed. The docket calls for the completion of the work by the first of the year.

Twelve Classrooms

The building will be of red brick, like the Andrew Lewis high school, and will have 12 classrooms, 6 for elementary grades and 6 for high school grades. In addition it will include a combination auditorium and gymnasium; a complete home-economics department with a model living room, dining room, kitchen, bedroom and bath; a kitchen and cafeteria; a vocational training shop; a principal's office, separate showers and locker rooms for boys and girls; a library; and miscellaneous rooms for storage, rest roms, books and so forth.

The present project also calls for sufficient grading of the land south of the proposed building to make an athletic field.

A fireproof building, the proposed structure will have floors and roof of structural concrete slab. Corridors will be terrazzo and the floors of classrooms will be of wood.

Class rooms will be 22x30 feet. The six elementary rooms will be located on the first floor, the six high school rooms on the second. One of the high school rooms will be used as a laboratory and will have a storage room.

The auditorium-gynasium will be 58x79 feet and will have a stage about 17 feet deep and 3 and 1-2 feet above the floor level. Located at the side of the stage will be the gym instructor's office.

On stage level and in the rear of it will be the home economics department, the cafeteria and kitchen. The cafeteria will be 27x35 feet.

In the Basement

In the basement will be located the general shop, 24x52, with its adjoining lumber room, instructor's office and finishing room. Also in the basement will be the boys' locker room and showers, a coal room and a boiler room. Only the east side of the building will have a basement floor.

On the second floor will be located, besides the 6 class rooms, a teachers' rest room, the library 22x40, and the girls' locker and shower room.

The main entrance to the building will be on the north from Fourth street. There will be two entrances on the west on Water street at each end of the building. On the south side of the building there will be an outside entrance to the shop which can also be used by boys and girls going to the athletic field.

Class rooms will have unit ventilators but other parts of the building will have radiators. Plans call for a boiler providing 10,000 square feet of steam radiation, or radiator surface.

Steel lockers in the corridors for the high school students and built in metal wardrobes for the smaller students are included in the present plans. Windows in the auditorium will be of translucent glass block.

Provision is made for expansion in the future toward the south, both from the west wing which contains the class rooms on two floors, and the east wing which contains the economic department and the shop.

Prosecutor Raises Issue At Hearing

Bares Proposal To Separate City From County

(Staff Correspondence)

HAMPTON, Va.—How the education of colored children in Hampton woud be provided for should the city separate from Elizabeth City County, was unexpectedly brought out into the open last Friday night by Commonwealth Attorney Roland D. Cook at a public meeting of Hampton voters in the city hall, called by Mayor James V. Bickford to enlighten them on the issues at stake in the proposed change of government.

SPECIAL ELECTION

Hampton voters went to the polls at press time (Tuesday) to express their wishes whether Hampton should remain a magisterial district of Elizabeth City County, or become a city of the second class and operate under the provisions of State law governing such matters.

The City Council requested Judge John Weymouth of Circuit Court to call the referendum and set the date of November 21 for the purpose. Information relative to the election was given out to qualified voters in pamphlet form.

NEGRO EDUCATION

Prosecutor Cook, in the course of his remarks, in which he stated definitely that both the county and city would suffer through separation, paused to inquire of those advocating separation had considered what certain additional governmental obligations by the city would mean to taxpayers. "It might be a revelation to most of you here to know," said the speaker, "that Hampton has no school for a single colored child; Negro children of Hampton are being educated in county schools."

In reply to Cook's assertion, City Manager, J. B. Sinclair, Jr., stated that the reason there are no schools for Negro children in the city is because Hampton has an agreement with the county to take white students at Hampton High School, while Negro students go to George P. Phenix Training School, and to the Union elementary school. But the City Manager did not intimate what Hampton would do should the city and county separate and the latter ends its agreement for the education of Negro children.

The meeting was attended by 110 white voters and 3 Negroes. There are approximately 500 Negro qualified voters in Hampton and the county, 300 in the city. The Civic League, an organization of Negro voters in Hampton and the county considered the pro and con of the proposed separation at a special meeting Sunday afternoon at the Masonic Hall. Paul Williams, president, presided.

MAYOR WANTS UNITY

At the meeting Friday night, Mayor Bickford told the taxpayers it was up to them as to the course they desired. He proposed, and said he was willing to be party, that members of the councils of Phoebus and Hampton resign along with members of the board of supervisors and that a new form of government be instituted for the whole county that would be efficient economic, and for advancement. He said he stands for a unity county and would like to see only one government for the entire area.

H. Clark Thompson, presided The legal aspects of the proposal were outlined by J. Wilton Hope city attorney.

REVIEWS PROBLEMS

The city manager reviewed the financial problems involved, pointing out that under 45 cents per hundred valuation tax, such as imposed, the city will be able to save more than $8,000 annually, with which to finance bonds. Otherwise, an increase in the city levy may be necessary to care for these improvements.

L. M. von Schilling submitted a list of pertinent questions, answered by the city manager and declared in a statement read at his request that dismemberment would be detrimental. The meeting lasted three hours during which political rivalries, municipal fears, and provincial clannishness were much in evidence.

Many School Busses Unsafe; Safe-Driving Classes Proposal Wins Interest of Governor

A plan establishing State safe-driving schools won the active interest of Governor Price and other high Virginia officials attending the State-wide Safety Conference here yesterday, at the same time that D. M. Baldwin, Division of Motor Vehicles Safety engineer, pronounced 39 per cent of Virginia's school busses "unsafe."

A State police survey during February and March, Mr. Baldwin said, gave 883 busses a "C" rating, denoting they were "in unsafe condition" to carry school children.

Of the total of 2,252 busses inspected, only 130, or 5.8 per cent, were rated "A," indicating that both chassis and body were in first-class condition. A total of 1,239, or 55 per cent, were rated "B," their condition being passable.

Mr. Baldwin, who addressed the home and child safety section of the conference, said school superintendents in most instances knew of the situation but lacked necessary funds to remedy it. He described faulty brake performance as the most serious defect, with light and tire defects also common. Overloading also was termed a major problem.

Overloading Reported

The survey showed, Mr. Baldwin said, that one bus carried 104 passengers, another 101 and some 90 children each, while the capacity of the vehicits was around 80.

Pointing to the practice of some rural school bus operators in using the vehicles for odd jobs around the farm, thus accentuating wear and tear and endangering safe performance, he said:

"One driver—and this is not such an isolated example as we would like to think—actually hauled a load of cattle in a school bus during spare hours."

Improvements Suggested

He suggested the following vital improvements:

Replacement of present obsolete equipment; repair of all equipment possible; a plan for for regular replacement of old units; adequate provision for maintenance, adoption of specifications for minimum requirements for new vehicles, and an inspection program by some outside agency.

Mr. Baldwin

The "keen interest" expressed by Governor Price in the possibility of setting up adult driving schools throughout the State with the aid of WPA funds was attested by Colonel LeRoy Hodges, State comptroller, who substituted for Colonel Marion S. Battle, head of the Division of Motor Vehicles, at the conference yesterday.

At the Governor's request, Colonel Hodges said, he has had multigraphed copies of an outline of the training setup in use in Pennsylvania, for distribution and study by Virginia officials. The plan was developed and presented by Admiral Percy W. Foote, former director of Pennsylvania State police, and resulted in a sharp decline in the number of accident "repeaters" who were classed as of low mentality and definite traffic hazards.

Training Cuts Accidents

In Pennsylvania, Admiral Foote said, 200 teachers were employed and as of April 8 the 4,072 graduates of the driving schools had had only 15 accidents, of which they were held responsible for only eight. He said of his plan, on the basis of Pennsylvania reduction figures:

"If this system were established in every State in the Union the deaths should be reduced to about 10,000 per year instead of 40,000."

Colonel Hodges said the Virginia officials would study the scheme carefully and "see what our people want." From Colonel Charles B. Borland, Norfolk city manager and chairman of the conference street and highway section, came assurances that his division would present a resolution to the Governor advocating the plan for Virginia.

Drivers' training as a regular high school course was described by John E. Martin, Suffolk schools superintendent.

Pupils take the course, he said, in one semester and receive half a credit. Their final examination includes theory and "road work." There has been no accident by Suffolk's trained student drivers in two years, Mr. Martin said.

State's Record Commended

Virginia's safety record was praised by D. C. Fenner, vice-president of the Mack Brothers Motor Car Company, New York, in a speech before the law enforcement section, which was attended largely by trial justices and enforcement officers.

The State's traffic efforts during 1938, he said, "resulted in an accident rate reduced by one-fourth to 15 per 100,000,000 vehicle miles, or a saving of 118 lives."

The cost of accidents in the United States in 1937 was estimated at $4,000,000,000, almost as much as the Federal Government spent that year for relief, J. S. Massey, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company Employees' Mutual Benefit Association, Huntington, W. Va., told the railroad section. But, he added, chances of workers being accidentally hurt while away from the job "are 15 times greater" than while actually engaged on the job.

"Beware of Curves"

"Beware of curves" was the theme developed by Giles M. Robertson, safety engineer of the State Highway Department, in an address before the public utilities section.

Mr. Robertson said the ratio of accidents on curves to total accidents is one to 2.6, while the ratio of mileage of curves on State highways to total primary mileage is one to 26.2.

He also called on utilities officials to locate telephone and power line poles firmly and at a safe distance from roadways instead of leaving some of them sitting in a mound of dirt, from all appearances in an unstable and dangerous condition."

During the year ended June 30, 1938, he continued, 141 accidents occurred on rural primary highways in which motor vehicles collided with power poles. In those accidents 157 persons were injured, and 34.75 per cent of the collisions happened—on curves.

Red Cross Influence

Barricades protecting excavations and other safety factors were discussed by Richard F. Wagner, Lynchburg public utilities director, in a paper on "Installation and Maintenance of Water Distribution Systems." Caveins constitute a menace in the Tidewater area unless sheet piling is used, E. H. Herbert, superintendent of the Norfolk Water Department, said.

The influence of the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., safety councils, the American Legion and public utilities on safety was the subject of a symposium at yesterday afternoon's home and child safety gathering. Fairfax County schools have incorporated formal safety instruction in their revised curriculum, Mrs. Florence Jodzies, secretary of the Fairfax Chamber of Commerce, reported.

Thomas B. Morton, State commissioner of labor and industry, in an address before the mine section, called for "competent and constant supervision of mining operations" and a mine safety education program. Mr. Morton also told the delegates the 1940 Legislature should pass a law specifically empowering his department to mediate industrial disputes. He urged an appropriation for two fulltime labor mediators.

"How Safe Is the Home?"

In a speech on "How Safe Is the Home?" Kenneth N. Beadle of the National Conservation Bureau, New York, said he believed there were many more serious home accidents than available statistics show.

"When we find 32,500 home accidents fatalities in a year, there must be a reason." Mr. Beadle then listed repairs which can be made in most homes to insure safer housekeeping.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, pledged the interest and support of his department in the aims of the conference.

"Times Have Changed"

Negro teachers and school officials yesterday afternoon had a special safety program in the Armstrong High School. Dr. W. R. Miller, chairman of the school board, was a principal speaker.

At a banquet of the 1,600 delegates in the Hotel Jefferson last night, Dr. John L. Davis of New York gave an after-dinner speech on "Times Have Changed."

Colonel William M. Myers, managing director of the Richmond Safety Council and executive secretary of the conference, said the attendance was the greatest ever recorded by the Virginia group. Closing sessions will start at 9 A. M. today.

Enrollment In Local Schools Shows Reduction Among White Pupils, Increase In Negroes

Variation May Change as Term Progresses, Saunders Points Out; First Day's Registration, 6,232

Enrollment figures for the first day of the fall semester yesterday indicated a gradual reduction in white and corresponding increase in Negro attendance at Newport News schools.

Although the figure is expected to be somewhat increased today, and throughout the school year, yesterday's total for white and Negro schools was 6,232, according to Superintendent Joseph H. Saunders, 33 less than was enrolled the first day last year.

In an effort to show how the figure is likely to increase as the term progresses, Saunders pointed out that last September there were 6,265 students registered the first day. This figure rocketed to 7,201 by the end of the school year in June.

Students remained at school yesterday just long enough to register and be assigned classes. Schools will be operated until 12 noon today, with books to be distributed, lessons assigned and other organization work attended to in order that activity might begin in earnest Monday.

This afternoon and tomorrow, local teachers will canvass the city, seeking information on children of school age who are not enrolled in either school. The law requires that children from 7 to 15 attend school. Those found violating the law will be reported to the juvenile officer for action, Saunders said.

There were 1,250 children enrolled at the high school yesterday; 2,199 in the white elementary schools, making a total of 3,449 registered in all the white schools.

At the Negro high school 436 were enrolled; 2,297 were enrolled in the Negro elementary schools, making a total of 2,783 Negro students in the city the first day.

Discusses Variations

In discussing variations Saunders reported the first day's enrollment at the white high school showed a drop of 66 as compared with the first day's figures of last year. A combined decrease of 45 was noted in the white elementary schools.

In contrast, there was a combined increase of 78 Negro students in the high and three elementary schools, including eight in the high school and 70 in the elementary institutions. Saunders commented that the Negro enrollment has increased steadily the past three years.

A breakdown of the registration for white schools shows that there was an increase of 13 at John W. Daniel; an increase of two at Magruder; and decrease of 25 at Jefferson; ten at Walter Reed; and two at Stonewall Jackson. George Washington school, located in the 800 block of Twenty-eighth street, has been closed this year and the two teachers who taught small classes there were transferred to Walter Reed.

Saunders announced that for the first time since he became local superintendent, there were no new teacher selections necessary in the white elementary schools. There are five new teachers in the white high school; two new instructors in Huntington high (Negro) and five new teachers in the Negro elementary schools.

New facilities in the two wings at the high school which were recently completed will be available for use immediately. Included in the improvements are: a gymnasium in the south wing; and library, home economics, and class room facilities in the north wing. A new heating plant has also been installed at the white high school. Although the new gym can also be used as an auditorium, the present auditorium in the center of the old building, on the second floor, will be used by students during the year.

Signs For Protection

In connection with the school opening, it was announced yesterday by the police department that four signs will be given tests at two schools immediately, with the probability that they may be employed at other schools later.

The signs are a little over five feet in height and designed to resemble a man wearing a blue uniform with a white Sam Brown belt. "School Zone—Speed 15 Miles an Hour" is contained on the sign on the front of the figure.

Chief of Police W. E. Mahone said the signs will be placed at John Marshall and Walter Reed schools to replace the wooden signs used there last school year. They will be placed in the center of the street during the time children are coming to and going home from school.

A plea to assume an objective attitude in class room discussion of the European war situation and "in all teaching try to distinguish between fact and propaganda," was made to the teachers by Saunders.

The superintendent spoke at the first teachers' institute of the new session, which was held in the auditorium of the John W. Daniel school. "More than ever, we should try this year to inculcate in our students the principles and the philosophy of democracy and teach them to carry out those principles in their daily living," Mr. Saunders said.

The superintendent read a brief letter from Mrs. Norman Rose, who was formerly Miss Harriett Cutler of the Newport News high school faculty. Mrs. Rose said she had been so preoccupied with the war that she had been unable to write from England a promised report on her observations of the English educational system, gained last year when she taught in Sunderland, England.

Hampton Children Without School As City Withdraws From County

HAMPTON, Va., Dec. 1—When the city of Hampton voted Tuesday to withdraw from Elizabeth City county as a magisterial district, the problem of where Race children living here are to be educated, arose.

To date no solution has been offered. This city has no school for Race children. Under an agreement between Hampton institute and the city, some have been reiving instructions at George P. Phenix training school which is a part of Hampton institute.

Others have been attending Elizabeth City county training school.

The result of the election makes city children ineligible for enrollment in the county school, and the agreement under which they are educated at Hampton expires Jan. 1.

Two alternatives, therefore, are facing the local administration: (1) renewing the contract with Hampton institute or (2) providing new facilities for Race children.

Since the latter involves a large expenditure, it is believed that renewal of contract with Hampton institute is more likely.

As far as is known, however, no steps in this direction have been taken and unless some action is forthcoming soon, children living in this city will be denied their schooling unless parents have funds with which to pay Hampton institute to do the job.

FOR BETTER CITIZENS

The campaign which is under way in Elizabeth City county to raise the standard of the Five-Point Negro children and increase the number with Five-Point ratings is one which should have the support of all citizens, white as well as colored. Representatives of the Negro schools of the county, the Association of Parent-Teacher Groups, and the State Health Department discussed the problem at a conference last week, during which time it was brought out that now only 38 per cent of the Negro school children in the county can qualify as Five-Pointers, whereas the percentage a year ago was 52.

From these figures it is obvious that many of the Negro children are not receiving the medical attention which they need. Just what is responsible for this we do not know. But the matter is one which cannot be lightly dismissed for the health of the Negro population has an important bearing on the health of the white population in this community, this in addition to the humanitarian aspect of the problem.

Patrons of the Negro schools are somewhat alarmed over conditions to which they called attention. So must be the white people who give the matter serious consideration. Slight physical defects in a child may mean serious physical defects in an adult. And serious physical defects in an adult mean higher taxes for those who are unable to care for themselves must be looked after by the body politic.

NAACP To Probe Alleged Unfairness In Covington

Hold Elections On Location White School; Negro Protests Ignored; Site Undesirable

(Special to Journal and Guide)

COVINGTON, Va.—In spite of the fact that the Alleghany County School Board has held two public elections to determine what site should be selected for the erection of a white school in Covington, and how much could be paid for it, the loud protests of the patrons of the Watson Training School that the site selected for the proposed new colored school was undesirable were completely ignored.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been requested to look into the matter and Attorney J. Thomas Hewin of Richmond has been asked to make a preliminary investigation.

The site at the end of Pine Street with no street paving, no sewers, and electric lights, though far removed from the center of Negro puopulation, was purchased at a cost of $1,500. A school building which will have no auditorium, office or library space and which will have no facilities for home economics or manual arts, will be erected on this site.

Funds for the construction of the white and colored schools were raised partly by bond issue and partly by federal PWA grant.

The PTA of the local Watson Training School, which is to be replaced by the new plant, urged the school board to select a more desirable site, or rebuild on the present site. Their pleas fell on deaf ears.

HOLD ELECTIONS

When the machine shop property, located in East End, was selected by the school board for the white school, white patrons objected. The board then held an election January 7, to find out which of three sites was favored and the voters chose the Nettleton lot. No site for the colored school was included on the ballot.

On January 10, another election was held to determine if the people were willing to pay $40,000 for the site for the white school. The citizens voted to pay that figure, while only $1,500 was spent on a site for the Negro school.

In November, the city hastily erected a tool house and began excavation on the Pine Street site for the Negro school so that it could save the PWA grant which would have been lost had not work begun by November 12. Prolonged discussion on the site for the schools had delayed the start of the work.

WHITES JOIN RACE

Many white people have joined with the colored patrons of the Watson school in protesting against the placement of the new building. The PTA committee investigating the affair declared this week that they considered the action of refusing to allow Negro citizens to vote on their school site a denial of the rights guaranteed the race under the constitution.

State Senator George Layman of Craig County, made an eloquent plea before the school board showing the disadvantage of placing the colored school in a remote and flooded section up against a mountain as was proposed. This appeal like others was ignored.

reported that a Federal grant of $122,576 and a bond issue of $150,000 made possible funds for the two schools.

In Flood Area

A site at the end of Pine Street, outside the city and subject to floods, was purchased by the Alleghany County School Board for colored people.

The school board was informed by PWA officials that unless work was started on the projects on or before November 28, 1938, it would be difficult to continue the grant. On that date a tool house was built and excavation started on Pine Street.

Vote on White Site

After long protests by white and colored citizens who were not satisfied with prospective sites, an election was held on January 7 to select one of three properties for the white school. Colored citizens voted in the election, but there has been no election to determine a colored site.

Members of the P-TA committee leading the fight against this condition are Forrest A. Harvey, chairman; Mrs. Laura Bush and Mrs. Loretta Watson.

Vote on White School Site, but Not on Colored

COVINGTON, Va. — Colored citizens here are voicing disapproval because the school board permitted whites to vote on selection for a site for a new high school and failed to extend the right of voting for a colored consolidated school site.

Augusta County Held Glutton in Thievery

This is the eighth of a series of articles comparing facilities for white and colored pupils in Virginia. The figures are from the report of the Virginia superintendent of public instruction.

By NAT TURNER

Have you ever seen an individual of a gluttonous or avaricious nature who appears to be afraid someone else will eat all the food from the table before he can get around to the job?

That is, apparently, the kind of gangster with which I shall deal this week. Although, there are few colored children in Augusta County, it is one of the most ruthless in the State in its raids on the educational funds of colored children. Its colored teachers fare badly.

Lose Huge Sums

Augusta County steals $560 from each of its male elementary teachers; $540 from the females; and $450 from each of its two male high school teachers. The maximum salaries for white teachers in the county are $1,000 for males; $1,125 for females; $440 for colored males, $585 for females, in the elementary schools.

In the high schools the schedules are $1,350 for white males; $1,035 for females; $900 for colored males with no females employed. Minimums in the high schools are $600 for white males; $675 for colored, and $520 for white females. The elementary minimum schedules are $520 for white males, $400 for colored; $480 for white females, and $397 for colored.

Instruction Fund Thefts

From the funds that should go toward the instruction of colored children, the county steals annually the sum of $16,847; while it has stolen from them buildings valued at $60,170. Augusta County owns fifty-six school buildings —fourteen for colored children, forty-two for whites.

It provides twelve high school buildings for white children, none for colored; has sixteen one-room structures, eight for whites and eight for colored; nine two-room buildings, six for white, three for colored; four three-room buildings, three for white, one for colored and twenty-seven buildings of more than three rooms, twenty-five for whites and two for colored.

The county employs two colored high school teachers who teach alleged high school subjects in elementary schools, there being no high school in the county for colored children.

It has only one building of brick, stone or concrete construction for colored children, thirty-five for whites; one building for colored children with sanitary heat and ventilation, with thirty-one for whites.

Teachers, Principals

Augusta County employs twelve white high school principals, no colored; thirty-three white male high school teachers, two colored; thirty-seven female high school teachers, no colored; three white supervisors, no colored;

Thirteen white male elementary teachers, three coolred; 173 female white teachers, and eighteen colored: a total of 256 white teachers and twenty-three colored.

A total of $913,700 is invested in school buildings in the county; $82,500 being invested in furniture and fixtures in white schools; $4,200 in colored; $800,000 in buildings for whites, and $27,000 for colored.

Per Cent Children in School

Of the colored children in the county—1,090—60 per cent of them are enrolled in school, while 83 per cent of the whites are enrolled. Colored children constitute 10 per cent of the county's total school population.

Seventy-one classrooms are provided for white high school children, two for colored; 194 classrooms for white elementary children, twenty-one for colored. There are no colored supervising principals in the county, according to the report to the superintendent of public instruction.

Only 568 of 1,700 Qualified Express Choice

Norfolk, Va.

(Staff Correspondence)

HAMPTON, Va.—Hampton's 31-year history as a magisterial district of Elizabeth City County came to a dreary close last week when 467 of her 1,700 qualified white and colored voters decreed in a special referendum to accept the responsibilities of a city of the second class. The negative vote was 101.

The total votes cast, 568, reflect the sharp division of opinion which the proposal hastened when City Councilmen, irked by the increase of the general tax fund levy from 35 to 45 cents this year—which they alleged was unwarranted—requested Judge John Weymouth of the County Circuit Court to arrange for the referendum.

At a public meeting of all qualified voters, called by Mayor James V. Bickford four days prior to the election, at which city officials explained the purpose of the referendum, the air was filled with charges and counter-charges from the pros and cons many county and city voters warning that separation between the two would end in disaster for both. The meeting lasted three hours, attended by 110 white voters and 3 colored. On the eve of the referendum, the City Council publicly urged the voters to vote for separation from the county, pledging to reduce the taxes for next year by 10 cents on the $100 assessed valuation.

EFFECTIVE JAN. 1

Hampton will begin its new status on January 1, 1940. Plans for separation of the city and county will be worked out between the councilmen and county supervisors at a series of conferences.

Under the new set-up, the city council will have sole power to levy and disburse the city's taxpayers money, and Hampton voters will no longer participate in the functioning of the offices of county treasurer and county commissioner of revenue. But, under the terms of the general law, the city will participate in the operation of the offices of clerk of court, sheriff and Commonwealth Attorney, and Judge of the Circuit Court—for whose services Hampton will pay in proportion for its share of population to that of the county's on a per capita basis.

The referendum was made possible under an enabling act passed by the General Assembly in 1936 empowering the voters to decree separation from the county as a magisterial district, effective December 31 of the same year. Of the 300 Negro voters in Hampton less than half of them expressed any choice in the matter.

Why Some General Averages Are Low

THE other day Norfolk's City Council commended our school board chairman because Norfolk's per pupil outlay for education in the public schools is $54 as compared with the average of $101.48 for 31 other American cities.

Mr. Foreman is entitled to any comfort he may derive from the accolade.

Journal & Guide
12-9-39
Norfolk, Va.

We wonder if members of City Council are concerned about how this average was arrived at. While none of them are educators, all of them know their arithmetic. They are all good business men, even if they are not concerned, in some cases, with social causes and effects. If they are as keen to having Norfolk make the best possible showing in education as in other respects they will look into the arithmetic of this low per pupil outlay.

They are aware, we take it, that the per pupil outlay for white children is $60.44, and that the per pupil outlay for Negro children is $37.41. There we have two sets of average costs per pupil—one is almost 100 per cent higher than the other.

Thus when the 16,000 white children and the 8,000 colored children are lumped together and the arithmetic applied we get the low average outlay of $54 per pupil.

That looks like economical management of the schools in the eyes of City Council. Perhaps it is. But the economy is achieved by maintaining a double standard of public school education, depriving one group of a fair chance while giving the other group a fairly good break.

Gentlemen of Council, per pupil cost as figured, fails to give you a true picture of administrative methods. Likewise, it fails to afford you a true picture of what you are receiving in return for the people's money.

1938-39 Fiscal Report Made By School Board

Statement Shows Indebtedness $160,915.00 at Close of Year. $31,185.10 Received in Federal Grants for Capital Outlays. Per Capita Cost of Instruction was $35.07.

TEACHERS SALARIES AVERAGE OF $701.19

The financial report of the County School Board and Division Superintendent of Schools of Southampton County for the year 1938-39, published in this issue, shows all receipts, disbursements and balances of the County School Fund, all district school funds, including the Town of Franklin which is a separate school district, and the P. W. A. building fund. The County School Fund is the general operating fund and from which all current operating expenditures for public school purposes are made, except such current operating expenditures as made from the Franklin Town School Fund for the Franklin schools. All district school funds, except the Town of Franklin, are used only for capital outlay and the retirement of district school indebtedness, including district school bonds, loans from the Literary Fund of Virginia and interest on same.

During the year all indebtedness, county and district, has been paid when due, and district levies are providing sufficient funds to retire district bonds and loans as they mature.

Total disbursements for the year including both County and District School Funds, were distributed as follows:

Administration	2.06
Instruction	48.94
Other Instructional Costs	1.91
Transportation	6.23
Other Auxiliary Agencies	.56
Operation of school plants	3.45
Fixed charges	.78
Maintenance of School Plants	3.14
Capital Outlay	26.06
Debt Service	6.87

The total indebtedness at the close of the year was $160,915.00, an increase of $32,593.00 over the previous year, due to the erection of new school buildings during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939. During the year the county received $31,185.10 from the Federal Government, a grant to be applied to the erection of new buildings.

During the session all schools operated for a term of nine months. There were enrolled in the nine white schools a total of 2,084 pupils, 1,447 in the grades and 637 in the seven high school departments, with a total average daily attendance of 1,959. There were enrolled in the 54 Negro schools a total of 4,120 pupils, 3,845 in the grades and 275 in the high school department, with a total average daily attendance of 3,154. This gives a total enrollment in both white and Negro schools of 6,204 pupils with a total average daily attendance of 5,113. When compared with the previous session, 1937-38, there is shown a decrease in total enrollment of 194; in average daily attendance an increase of 10 in the white schools, and a decrease in enrollment of 26, and an increase in average daily attendance of 252 in the Negro schools, or a total decrease in total enrollment in all schools of 220 and an increase in average daily attendance in all schools of 262.

During session 1938-39 there were employed a total of 192 teachers; 91 white teachers, 40 high school and 51 grade teachers, and 101 Negro teachers, 10 high school and 91 grade teachers. The average annual salary of all teachers, white and Negro, high and elementary, was $701.19. When the average annual salary of all teachers is considered on a twelve months basis, we find it to be $58.43 per month.

The per capita cost of instruction for all high school pupils during session 1938-39 on enrollment was $55.61, all elementary pupils $19.69, with a total per capita cost of instruction of $24.98 on enrollment. The total per capita cost of education, all costs except capital outlay and debt service, was $35.07, or approximately 19c per pupil per school day.

There were operated 38 school buses during session 1938-39, operating a total of 211,356 miles, or 7,608,816 pupil miles, transporting 1,577 pupils to the nine white schools at a cost of 7c per pupil per day, based on average daily attendance, including the cost of all new buses purchased during the year.

Va. School Bus Accident Rating

According to the annual reports of division superintendents of schools in the State of Virginia for the school year 1938-39, there were operated 2,373 motor vehicles transporting 153,884 pupils a distance of 12,644,180 vehicle miles or a total of 410,935,850 passenger miles. With this tremendous amount of transportation only 59 accidents were reported for the year, which resulted in the death of two pupils and one other person. Twelve pupils were reported as being seriously injured and 50 pupils as receiving minor injuries.

Accident Facts, 1939 edition, published by the National Safety Council, Chicago, Illinois, for the year July, 1937, to June, 1938, for commercial passenger travel on 48 inter-city fleets operating a total of 2,256 busses reported 1.19 accidents per 100,000 bus miles, whereas the 2,373 school busses reported 59 accidents for 12,644,180 bus miles or .47 accidents per 100,000 bus miles. The commercial bus rate of accidents as reported above is, therefore, more than two and one-half times as great as the school bus rate of accidents reported for the school year 1938-39.

Computed on a mileage basis, only one school bus accident occurred for each 214,308 bus miles operated, and only one person injured for each 6,322,090 passenger miles operated.

During the past ten years there has been a tremendous increase in both the number of pupils transported to the public schools in the State and the number and type of motor vehicles in operation. For the school year 1928-29 there were transported 50,088 pupils with 1,361 vehicles in operation, many of which were wagons and school busses of small type equipped with factory built and homemade wood bodies. During the school year 1938-39 there were transported 153,884 pupils with 2,373 motor vehicles in operation, practically all of which were equipped with the regular factory built school bus bodies of the larger and more substantial wood and all steel types. An increase is therefore shown for the ten year period of 103,776 pupils transported, and 1,012 vehicles in operation.

REFUSE TO NAME RACE TEACHERS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 15 — (ANP) — The school board committee on appointments refused Wednesday night to appoint Negro teachers in the Galena and Ninth Street schools which have predominantly Negro pupils. The committee said a new policy would achieve the result.

William Kelley, Urban League secretary, said he would prefer the whole system being thrown open to colored applicants but since there was no hope of that, appointment in the two schools would be satisfactory. The board said the new policy of making substitute appointments from restricted lists of qualified teachers would result in "some appointments" of Negro teachers who qualified

Another free Grant Payment of $2,-134.50 is to be received at once by the City of Opelika as part of the $9,606.00 Grant given by the Public Works Administration toward the cost of the new colored school now nearing completion. This is a part of the P. W. A. policy of furnishing 45 per cent of the cost of approved projects, several of which have been built in this county.

The program is not only a help to the community by creating much business activity and payrolls but makes it possible for the people to have many useful and permanent public buildings and improvements. This piece of construction has created work for many men employed for months and has made a market for thousands of dollars worth of building materials and supplies.

The new addition to the Opelika Public School for colored children on East street will be completed this month and ready for occupancy. It is a brick structure matching the architecture of the existing building and consists of a large auditorium and three class rooms, all of fireproof construction. The total cost of the project will amount to $22,000.00.

Another P. W. A. project which has just been completed in Opelika is the modern Sewerage Disposal Plant for the City at a cost of $57,400.00. The total of the P. W. A. free grants for the two projects will amount to over $35,000.00 showing how the people's money comes back to the people.

LOAN OF MILLION TO AID SCHOOLS

Birmingham Age-Herald 11-22-39

Funds To Enable Local Boards To Meet Obligations

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 21—(AP)—The Alabama Public Schools Corporation Tuesday borrowed $1,-000,000 for distribution among local school boards to enable them to meet obligations before their principal revenues accrue in December and January.

A. R. Forsyth, state finance director and corporation president, said $600,000 was obtained from the Birmingham Trust & Savings Company, and $400,000 from the First National Bank of Birmingham.

The loan was made at the suggestion of Dr. A. H. Collins, state superintendent of education, who also proposed that $1,000,000 be borrowed April 23, 1940, and an additional $500,000 be obtained May 23 1940, all to be repaid as regular revenues accrue.

Dr. Collins estimated state and local tax receipts which would be available for schools as follows:

Oct. 23, 1939, $391,050 (all local). Nov. 23, $2,180,631; Dec. 23, $3,252,-511; Jan. 16, 1940, $6,063,437; Feb. 23, $880,621; March 23, $877,621; April 23, $972,010; May 23, $862,189; June 23, $876,313; July 23, $839,337; Aug. 23, $717,491; Sept. 30, $1,323,805.

In his letter to Forsyth recommending the loans be made, Collins listed total amounts ranging from $50,000 to $2,600,000 which he said local school boards would have to borrow from month to month "if they meet their pay rolls on time without the assistance of the Public Schools Corporation."

The corporation, set up by the 1939 Legislature, borrowed $2,000,-000 earlier this year. Forsyth said the interest rate on each loan was 1 per cent per Annum, and the money was distributed to local boards at the same rate.

Collins said the loans he recommended "will not be sufficient to relieve local boards of education of all necessary borrowing in order to meet pay rolls on time" . . .. but that the proposed borrowing schedule "will eliminate most of the necessity for local boards to secure current loans on their own resources."

City Seeking Site For Negro School

Bidding For Government Property On Fairview

Mayor Gunter said yesterday the city was endeavoring to acquire the Government's land on Fairview Avenue near the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad tracks for a negro high school, playground and an athletic field. The matter, he said, had been presented to authorities in Washington.

Montgomery has long needed a high school for negroes, Mr. Gunter pointed out. He expressed the hope the Government would permit the Board of Education to erect a building on the Fairview Avenue site. The city will be glad to assist in providing the playground facilities, Mr. Gunter asserted.

The land was purchased by a Government agency a few years ago as a subsistence homestead project which never materialized.

DeLand To Improve Its Negro School

DELAND, Jan. 12—E. K. Jones of DeLand today submitted a low bid of $10,447 for an improvement project of the local negro school on Euclid avenue. H. G. Schlegelmilch of Daytona Beach was the only other contractor to make an offer, $13,368, at a special meeting of the county school board.

By unanimous vote the low bid was approved subject to receipt of necessary funds within the 30-day period designated in Jones' offer for the letting of a contract. Superintendent George Marks informed the board that the DeLand district, sponsor of the project, would have "somewhere in the neighborhood of $12,000," for the work as soon as $9,000 in school bonds are delivered to the Barnett National bank here.

The local banking institution recently purchased the nine bonds at par but will not accept delivery of the certificates until after the PWA accepts a bloc of 91 other bonds. Marks, Chairman Hubert Talton and Attorney J. U. Gillespie were authorized to consummate the contract when the funds are available.

Jones agreed to furnish materials and labor and is expected to utilize a portion of lumber and other salvaged materials from the old junior high school building, torn down recently to make way for a new junior high structure.

Medwin Peek, architect for all local school projects now "in the fire," returned today from Atlanta where he obtained approval of the WPA on a list of equipment to be purchased by the local schools.

The board today voted to start advertisements for this equipment and will convene in special session on January 25 to open bids. Peek informed the board that the WPA requires that a contract on this unit of the project be let prior to February 1.

All bidders on equipment must furnish samples of their merchandise and these will be placed in a gymnasium here on the bid date for the inspection and approval of WPA officials and the school board.

Authoritative sources today informed The Evening News that among the equipment items to be purchased are approximately 800 new seats for the high school auditorium which is being renovated and improved under a section of the WPA project.

Talton said he was not familiar with the exact figures of the specifications but that it was his understanding the auditorium will seat more than 750 persons or approximately 200 more than the present seating capacity. Peek could not be reached early this afternoon for definite specifications on this item.

The enlarged auditorium was hailed by civic leaders as an answer to the public demand of recent years for a municipal auditorium. The school has donated use of its stage and seating arrangements for public gatherings in the past.

PLAN REPAIRS TO NEGRO SCHOOL

The county school board at a brief special meeting in the office of Superintendent G. V. Fuguitt, awarded a $346.92 contract to the Grounds Lumber and Mill Work Company of St. Petersburg for material and labor for repairs to the Davis Elementary School (negro) of St. Petersburg.

The work to be done includes the installation of new window frames in the school to take the place of old one which have rotted out. Thirtytwo rolls of roofing were also ordered, as Charles H. Teeter, board chairman, said that much of the under-roofing had to be replaced.

Supt. Fuguitt said that the window frame and roof repairs were the first of approximately $1000 in repair work to be done at the school.

Attending the meeting were Mr. Fuguitt, Chairman Teeter and E. Pasco Morris. S. R. McIntosh, St. Petersburg member of the board, is still recuperating from a streptococcus leg infection.

Negro Schools May Be Given National Aid

Education Official Makes Inspection

Investigation which may lead to aid for Knoxville's Negro educational program was conducted here yesterday by Dr. W. E. Armstrong, American Council of Education, Washington, D. C.

At an informal gathering at the Schools Administration building last night, Dr. Armstrong said he was helping conduct a national survey for the AC of E to find 15 colleges which are giving teachers opportunity to better themselves after they begin teaching, and 15 communities which have progressive Negro school systems.

"Our organization," Armstrong said, "is prepared to aid these progressive communities and schools."

Supt. Harry Clark said work was being done here to differ Negro education from white. Three trade courses at Austin High School, such as the cafeteria instruction, were pointed out.

DEDICATING DICKERSON SCHOOL

Editor, The Journal: It was my pleasure and privilege to visit friends at Vidalia, Ga., on March 31, and attend the dedication of Dickerson Training School for negro boys and girls. I had heard that Vidalia was the fastest growing city in southeast Georgia. Surely, in some ways, it is entitled to this laudable claim, and the Dickerson Training School deserves classification with Vidalia's worth.

The school was dedicated with a befitting and interesting program, with Principal James D. Dickerson presiding. Odee A. Wilson gave the address of welcome; A. L. Duren delivered a message from negro Parent-Teacher Associations, and A. J. P. Robeson reviewed the history of this school. All of these are negroes who are deeply interested in Dickerson Training School. Mayor D. C. Harris represented the City of Vidalia and paid tribute to and appreciation of James D. Dickerson and his wife, Gussie Pearl Hart Dickerson, inasmuch as the school is named for both. Mayor Harris did not fail to recognize in the audience one Rube Tolbert and took that occasion to appoint him mayor of the colored citizens of Vidalia. It seems that Rube Tolbert is a five-job man in Vidalia and has thereby made a great contribution in his own way.

A negro who was born in Hancock County delivered the dedicatory address. I refer to Benjamin F. Hubert, president of State College, at Savannah. I never heard Booker T. Washington, but it was my guess, as Hubert spoke, that here is a man of "same faith and order" as Booker T. Washington. Hubert's remarks were in the main directed to his own people. Among other things, he raised the question: Of what value is education unless it is practical and has its fruition in worthwhile accomplishment?

I was told that Dickerson and his wife have given about thirty-five years of service in the field of training negro youth in Vidalia. Not many years ago the citizens of Vidalia pinned a medal on Principal Dickerson for his valuable services.

PWA Nears Completion of $180,000 School Project

Sandersville Negro and Harrison White Schools Finished, District Institution 99 Per Cent Complete; 1940 is Deadline.

The Public Works Administration will wind up its activity on $180,000 worth of construction work on three schools in Washington county not later than November 11, if present building schedules prevail, WPA Engineer Walker said today.

Status of construction on these projects is as follows: 100 per cent completion on the Harrison school, 100 per cent completion on the Sandersville Negro school, 99 per cent completion on the Sandersville white school at this time, with a deadline to put the entire project in use by November 11.

Completion dates are well in advance of the time specified by Congress in the act under which PWA construction was authorized. The law specifies June 30, 1940, as the day when a $1,600,000,000 program must be finished over the nation. All of this construction will be in use on or before that time, Engineer Walker said.

Projects in Washington county provided 68,092 man hours of local labor. Two and one half times that many hours of work were required in industry supplying the materials for this construction, according to a survey conducted by the Bureau of Labor statistics.

There is still a vast program of public construction ready to be undertaken, and such a program is capable of taking up any slack in construction industries and building trades.

In Washington county alone, local authorities have indicated a public need for a number of additions to present facilities, which are undoubtedly of vital importance to the community.

VIDALIA DEDICATES NEGROES' SCHOOL

$50,000 Building Is Named for Veteran Educator.

VIDALIA, Ga., March 31.—(AP) A negro educator's dream of 35 years' standing had a happy ending here today with the dedication of a new $50,000 school building for negroes.

Built of brick, and modern in every detail, the building has been named "The Dickerson Training School" in honor of James D. Dickerson, whose faith and tenacity made it possible.

Dickerson, born in this section, returned 35 years ago after a bit of schooling in Atlanta with one main objective—a school for his native people.

Four years ago he was presented a gold medal from the citizens of Vidalia in recognition of his faithful service to Vidalia and Toombs county.

Benjamin F. Hubert, president of the Georgia State College at Savannah and president of the Georgia Teachers and Educational Association, emphasized in a dedicatorial address what negroes may do to help themselves in a tangible way.

Colored School Now Completed

The addition of six class rooms to the Thos. J. Elder High and Industrial School, located in west Sandersville, with other conveniences, has been completed, inspected, and accepted, and the keys have been turned over to W. A. Bell, secretary of the district board of education.

This enlargement was necessary in order to provide sufficient accommodation for the increased attendance.

This school has been under the management of Thos. J. Elder for half a century. A few years ago, at one of the commencement exercises, Hermann Bashinsky made the suggestion that inasmuch as the superintendent had given such eminent satisfaction in the management of the school, and in recognition of his fine character as a citizen, that the school should be named for him, and this was done by unanimous consent of those in authority.

The closing exercises of this school are now taking place and the advancement of the pupils has veen most satisfactory. It is one of the best schools in Georgia for the education of the colored people. Many of them have been most successful in the various vocations which they have chosen, which is a distinct credit to the precepts and influence of the superintendent. Efforts have been made by other communities to secure his services, but he has declined all offers to take charge of other schools, saying that he is well satisfied in Sandersville and expects to spend the balance of his days here with the people with whom he has been associated since 1899, fifty years ago

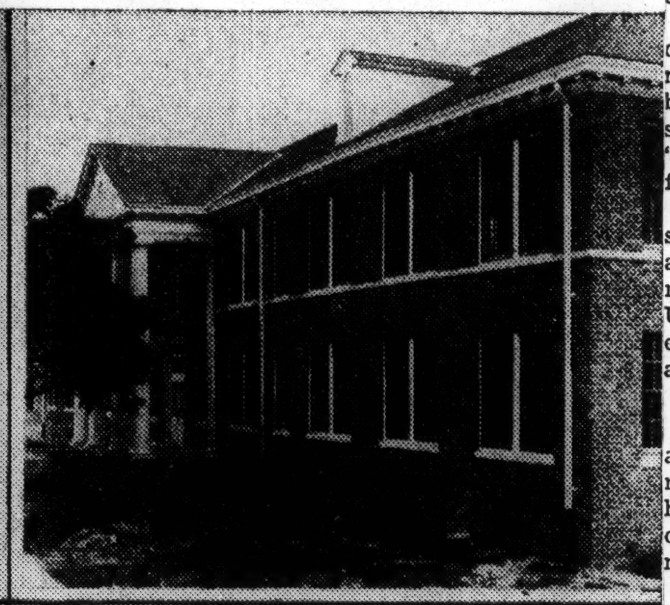
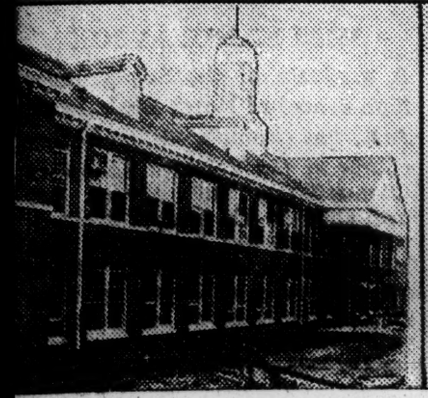
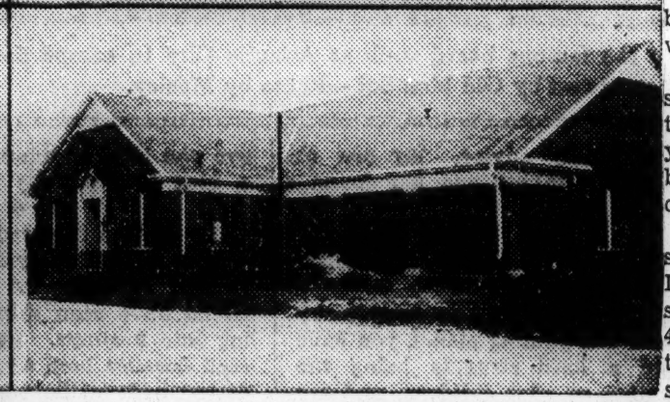
Lousianans Are Saying: 'They Have Something There,' As State Rural Normal's $400,000 Building Program Nears Completion







Pictured above are new buildings almost completed at the Louisiana State Rural Normal school for Negroes at Grambling, near Ruston, La. The state board of education and the PWA have collaborated in providing bout $400,000 for the construction program, which virtually results in an entirely new school for the higher education of Negro students. The photos are: Upper left, library building; upper right, girls' dormitory; lower left, classroom building; lower center, combined gymnasium and auditorium, and lower right, dining hall.

By K. F. HEWINS

RUSTON, La., Aug. 4—Visitors are joining in the chorus with residents at Grambling to assert "they've got something there." They mean buildings and appurtenances thereto, which "must be seen to be appreciated."

Grambling is the seat of Louisiana's state Rural Normal school for Negroes, located about six miles west of Ruston. Since last December, the state board of education and the PWA practically have rebuilt the Grambling school at a cost of $400,000, and the WPA will cover up the few remaining rough spots to beautify the grounds.

The construction program includes a large classroom building costing $129,000; a girl's dormitory, $64,000; a gymnasium-auditorium, $40,000; library building, $34,000; a dining hall, $36,000, and a home for the president, the latter having been erected from an allotment of $6,000, which included funds for some of the landscaping of the campus.

An additional $31,000 has been provided for a water and sewage-disposal system and a sum of $23,000 for furnishings to equip the new buildings.

Plan Dedication

All of the new structures are expected to be ready for use with the opening of the fall term in September, according to the president, Ralph W. E. Jones.

Plans are being made for a formal dedication of the new buildings about the middle of November, at which time persons who have gained distinction in education and in other endeavors will participate, President Jones said.

Preliminary work has started on the building of a hard-surfaced black-top highway leading a mile and a half from the Shreveport highway to Grambling.

All of the new buildings are of red brick and of colonial design. They face a large quadrangle, which will be landscaped and made into a beauty spot.

Fixtures in the new structures attract considerable favorable comment from visitors and are said to be drawing more than local interest.

There are no gold faucets in the bathrooms but what is there is ornamental as well as useful. Gray marble walls separate showers, which are equipped with marble corner seats.

The gymnasium-auditorium is outstanding in its novel appointments. Along the side of the basketball court are some new-fangled seats that can be folded up and "shelved" out of the way when the floor is desired for dancing.

In one wing of the building is a smaller auditorium and stage suitable for play-rehearsing and surrounded by music practice rooms. Under the main stage, at the other end of the auditorium, are lockers and towers.

To Offer 3 Year Course

Massive white columns add to the attractiveness of the new girls' dormitory. Rooms in that building have hardwood floors and hallways are covered with an inlaid composition material.

In brief, everything in every building is considered as "the last word" in modern conveniences.

Such is the status of the state's school at Grambling, which is getting in shape to become a three-year college, perhaps this September, it is said. The school at present operates as a two-year institution.

Grambling is the center for Race schools in other parts of the state. It has an enrollment of about 600 students in regular terms and about 400 in summer sessions, although the new facilities are expected to swell the number of students. The teaching staff at present totals 32 members.

The Grambling president, Jones, was a teacher at Grambling for 11 years before succeeding Charles P. Adams as head of the institution about three years ago.

President Jones is a graduate of Southern university, holds the master's degree from Columbia university in New York City, and has done some work toward the doctor's degree.

His accomplishments at Grambling are said to draw attention in various parts of the country, with the school being visited frequently by people interested in education, particularly the field of rural education.

Founded in 1903

Grambling was founded about 36 years ago as the result of a squabble that "split the ranks." The school, at first sponsored for the most part by church funds, was established at a place called Allen Greene, only a short distance from the present site of Grambling.

Allen Greene, as well as Grambling, was located on the Illinois Central railroad. When some differences arose the school was moved to Grambling, which at the time included little more than one sawmill. It was some time before the Grambling faction succeeded in getting the trains to stop at their place, the trains continuing to stop at Allen Greene.

Eventually, however, the railroad depot was placed at Grambling. Several years later, in 1929, the Grambling school was given state aid for maintenance.

Today, the place has a postoffice, operated by a Race postmaster, three stores and several churches and homes besides the buildings on the school campus.

Thus, a new day has dawned for the all-Race community which got its start through dissension. But there's no grumbling at Grambling today—not with all those fine new buildings.

T. MILLER TO BUILD NEGRO SCHOOL HOUSE

Low Bid Of $26,246 Wins Contract, PWA Contributes $15,000

T. Miller and Son, Lake Charles contractors, were yesterday awarded the contract for the construction of the new negro trade school in Jennings with a low bid of $26, 246, L. L. Kilgore, parish superintendent of schools, announced.

This is the thirteenth project in the parish under the building program for parish schools to be aided by PWA. The government's contribution to the negro building was $15,000.

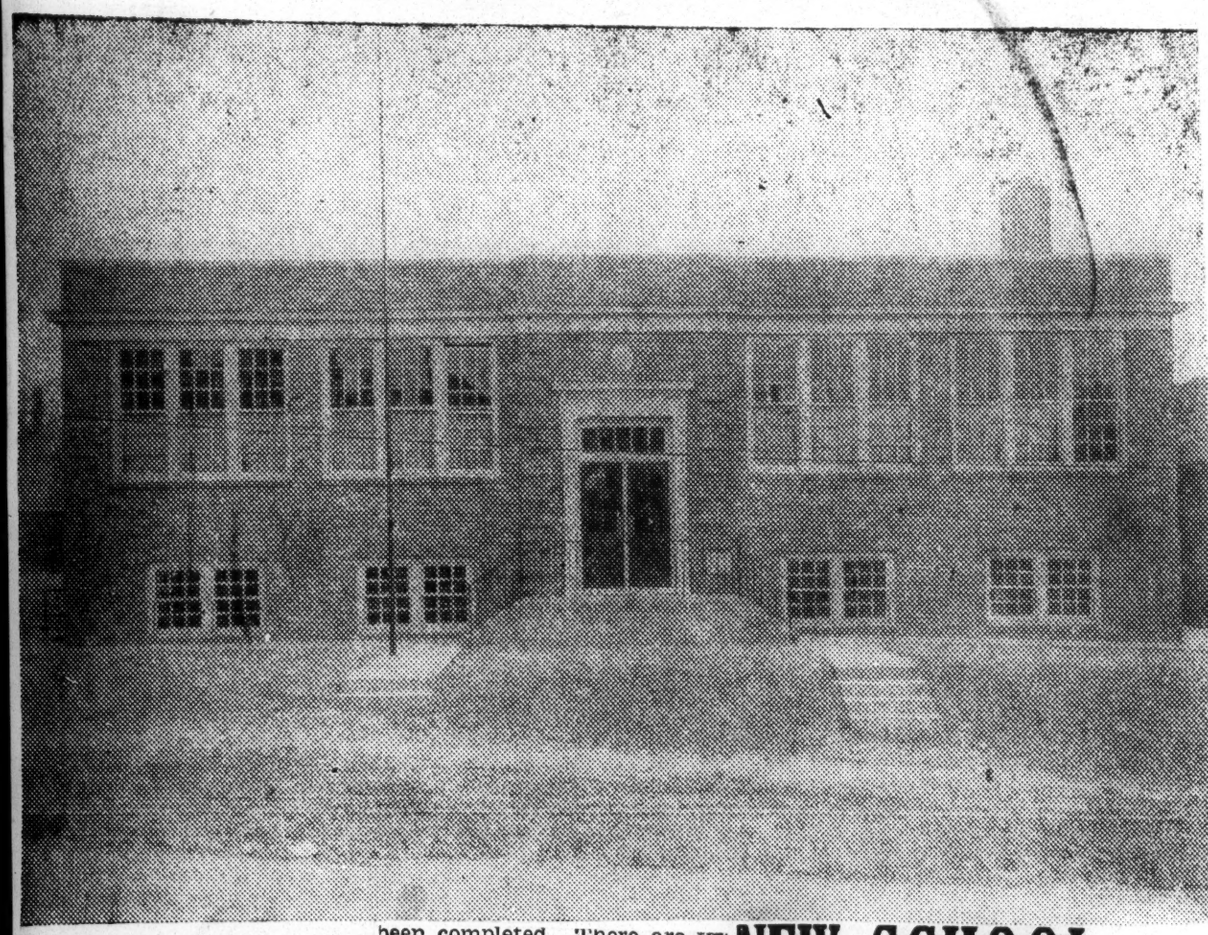
Work will be started next week on the project which will be completed in time for the fall term opening in September. The building which is on South Cutting Avenue, will be of frame construction and will be equipped with numerous class rooms and all facilities for handling classes in manuel arts.

NEGRO HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING DEDICATED

Benton, La., Sept. 25.—R. V. Kerr, superintendent of Bossier parish schools; S. J. Smith, member of the school board, and T. J. Jordan, state farm demonstration agent, were the principal speakers at dedication exercises of negro high schools held here. Professor L. F. McDaniels was master of ceremonies.

Superintendent Kerr stated that the school was erected at a cost of $25,000 and it will be equipped for the teaching of home economics and manual training. The speaker said that during the past year 18 one- and two-room negro schools had been erected in the parish at a cost of $45,000 and that several other schools had been erected, bringing the tota cost of new buildings up to $85,000. The PWA contributed 45 per cent of the school building program. The principal of self-help in education was stressed by Eliza Bryant, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, which raised money for the lot on which the new high school was erected.

For the Uplift of the Negro Child



About 150 pupils, residents of Wellston, Mo., are sharing with smiling faces the new advantages of the new DuBois elementary, eighth-grade school, which was dedicated Sunday afternoon, December 10, in the presence of many Wellstonians. Most prominent among the organizations leading in the construction of this attractive building was the Wellston Community Welfare association, Lawrence Carrol, president; Bertha Rose, vice-president. When it became evident that the old building, which stood more than a score of years, was fast becoming a liability, the organization, after contacting proper WPA authorities, brought the matter of education to the Negro child to the Wellston school board. Its 50-odd members cooperated in the fullest to secure the best in training for the Negro child in Wellston. As a result, this four-room modern structure, facing on Minerva, has been completed. There are two playrooms, four rooms, a modern stoker - supplied heating plant, with facilities for about 150 pupils. J. T. Waters was program chairman. Mrs. Katie Tuggle is principal, and Mrs. Adele Hamilton and Bertrand Novel, teachers. Mr. Millard Hatler is superintendent of schools. Much credit has been given the Rev. William H. Lacey, former pastor of Bethel A.M.E. church, for his untiring efforts. —Photo courtesy Commercial Photo Co.

NEW SCHOOL IS DEDICATED IN WELLSTON

DuBois Building Result of Long Fight by Community

WELLSTON, Mo. — Negro mothers and fathers of this community who have fought so long that their children might enjoy proper educational facilities, filled the auditorium of the Du Bois school at 3119 Minerva avenue, Sunday afternoon, December 10, as educational leaders came in to help dedicate the new building.

The parents and their children heard members of the Wellston board of education praise them for the long fight in making the way possible for the new school by turning out to the polls a year ago to pass the necessary bond issue.

Many Leaders Present

On the speaker's platform, in the fire-proof school that already has a pupil enrollment of 76 boys and girls representing 41 families, sat the Wellston board of education members, the Wellston superintendent of instruction, ministers of Wellston and St. Louis, a St. Louis high school principal and representatives of the Wellston and state-wide Parent Teachers' association.

Bertrand N. Novel, representing the Wellston Community Welfare association that had charge of the dedication program, as master of ceremonies introduced Mrs. Henry Rhetta, treasurer of the Missouri State Parent Teachers' association, following the singing of "Lift Every Voice and Sing," invocation by the Rev. Earl Bagsby, pastor of the Wellston Bethel A. M. E. church, and the Du Bois trio singing "Holy Night."

Mothers Should Help

Speaking on the work of the organization she represents, Mrs. Rhetta, a well known mother and educational leader of St. Louis said that mothers should not try to run the school, but through their Parent Teachers' organization, attempt to gain that which is best for the school and pupils by cooperating with teachers and school board authorities. She said the organization must never indulge in politics or other controversial matters that do not have direct relations with the parent, the teacher and the school.

Mrs. Rhetta appealed to the mothers to join their forces and fight that the many children in rural districts of the state who are not receiving an education because there are not enough Negroes in certain rural districts for the establishment of schools, may in time have proper school facilities.

Fred Gossom, president of the Wellston board of education, lauded the Negro citizens for the fine way they had aided him in passing the bond issue that made the school possible. He said Negro citizens realize that as all of the people become educated they come closer together and are better able to see both sides of questions.

"Just a fine building alone does not make a good school," Gossom said. "There must also be good teachers and full cooperation on the part of mothers and fathers whose children are being taught."

Frederick Higgins, alumnus of the old frame building that was known as Du Bois school, was called back for an encore after his bass rendition of Miss Marion Anderson's famous number, "Honor, Honor."

In a very fine address, Frank L. Williams, principal of the Vashon high school in St. Louis, went deep into the duties of a school and of his philosophy of education.

"This is a fine time to dedicate a school," he said. "While other lands are pitted against each other, no better time could be chosen for the citizens of America to dedicate schools for teaching boys and girls the right way of living."

Prof. Williams said that the school must do more than give out information to boys and girls. "The school must help to set up in the child ideals that will persuade him to have the proper attitude toward life, causing him to act in a constructive way," he said.

Others Take Part

The dedicatory prayer was offered by the Rev. Herman Gore, pastor of the Southern Mission Baptist church of St. Louis. The Rev. Henry Douglass Sr. introduced several old citizens of Wellston who led the long fight for the new school.

Remarks were made by Mrs. Cora Washington, president of the Wellston Parent Teachers' association, by Lawrence Carrol, president of the Wellston Community Welfare association and by members of the Wellston board and other school officials. Benediction was given by the Rev. J. F. DeClue, pastor of the Ebenezer Baptist church of Wellston.

PUBLIC SCHOOL PROGRESS IN TENNESSEE

Tennessee Public Schools See Vast Improvement in Quarter Century School Plants and Equipment, Teachers' Training, Salaries, Libraries, Transportation—All Share in Forward Move.

By ANDY HOLT

Executive Secretary Tennessee Education Association.

(Written especially for Bedford County Times)

One probably can best appreciate Tennessee's public school system by comparing its present status with that of twenty-five years ago. The past quarter of a century has seen wonderful progress in consolidation, transportation, supervision, libraries, higher education, teacher training, teachers' salaries and school term.

Tennessee's public school system now consists of 5,764 elementary schools, 602 high schools, the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, the University of Tennessee Junior College at Martin, State Teachers College at Memphis, Murfreesboro and Johnson City, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute at Cookeville, Austin Peay Normal at Clarksville, Agricultural and Industrial College for Negroes at Nashville, Alvin C. York Institute at Jamestown, Tennessee Industrial School and Tennessee School for the Blind at Nashville, and Tennessee School for the Deaf at Knoxville. These institutions last year had a combined enrollment of over 650,000 students.

The annual report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction in 1914 indicates that 5,179 of the county elementary schools were of the "one-teacher" variety. An effective program of consolidation throughout the years has reduced this number to 2,084 during the past school year.

From Wagons to All-Steel Buses

In 1914 an average of 1,626 students were transported to school daily in 88 "public wagons." Last year 122,039 students were transported daily to our elementary and high schools, most of them in modern, steel-bodied school buses. A law enacted by the recent legislature provides that by 1943 all-steel-body buses must be used exclusively for transportation of children.

A quarter of a century ago only a few of the state's largest cities had elementary school supervisors. Last year over half of the counties employed elementary school supervisors of superior training and experience, and present indications are that it will not be long before every county will have access to the valuabe services of these "master teachers."

State Superintendent Sam Thompson in 1914 pointed with justifiable pride to the fact that elementary and high school libraries of Tennessee included a total of 187,398 volumes. At the present time public school libraries contain over 500,000 volumes. At the present time public school libraries contain over 500,000 volumes of books adapted to the interest and ability of elementary and high school students.

Total enrollment in all of the state's institutions of higher learning in 1914 was approximately 3,000; last year enrollment in all of these institutions exceeded 10,000 students.

It seems hard to realize that within the brief span of twenty-five years the number of elementary teachers in the state with more than two years of college work to their credit increased from 591 to 4,924, or 562%. In 1914, 8,460 of our teachers had only high school graduation or less; last year this number had decreased to 1,077.

Teachers Salaries Increase

We rightfully deplore the fact that the average salary of women teaching in the county elementary schools last year was only $620.00, but this sum seems fabulous when compared to the average of $239.00 received by the same teacher in 1914.

The average length of the elementary school term twenty-five years ago was 110 days; last year the average term was 159, an increase of almost 50%.

Similar progress has been made in the curriculum, equipment and buildings of our public school system, and today Tennessee's public schools rank among the best in the entire South.

the temperature readings in the lowlands drop from 10 to 20 degrees at night and in the hill and mountainous sections of the state the drop is from 15 to 25 degrees as the twilight comes on.

Variety in Tennessee is further expressed in the fact that some 200 species of trees can be found in the state ranging from southern hardwoods in the valleys and basins to northern conifers on the mountains. Shrubs and flowering plants are also found in extraordinary variety.

In some sections of Tennessee because of inaccessibility and slow transportation, groups of settlers in the early times, became detached and marooned living practically alone in mountain coves and on mountain sides. Here an indigenous craft and culture with its own language, music, art, and architecture; and also with its own morays, folkways, and folklore sprang up.

Paradoxically as it may seem, these secluded mountain regions are now rarest treasure houses for tourists, sightseers and research students. In these communties one hears rare and interesting words, phrases, and forms of expression which reach back even to the period of Elizabethan English. They definitely and truly speak "old English."

In Tennessee the spirit and habits of three centuries, 18th, 19th and 20th wind back and forth among old handcraft shops and modern factories. Paths of red men, white men, and black men criss-cross as the three go about their daily chores. Some are attending the spindles of most modern factories—the last word in technical skill—while others are harvesting their crops with a cradle, hauling their fuel on a "slide," grinding their sorghum in the old fashioned way and replenishing their larders with fish and game.

The physiography of Tennessee would be deprived of half its significance were one to overlook the fact that two important river systems—the Tennessee and the Cumberland with their tributaries—drain water sheds in general structure parallel to each other and both parallel with the east-west axis of the state.

The Tennessee River and its tributaries is now being developed for a potential navigation of 752 miles. When present projects are finished the navigable surface of this river with 9 different impounding dams will constitute immense flat water areas which someone has called "The Great Lakes of the South."

The Cumberland River has a possible 9 foot channel for 516 miles, most of which is in Tennessee. The Mississippi River constituting the western border of the state presents a water front of 191 miles. It is believed that a new era of navigation in Tennessee is possible and that river service in form and extent yet undreamed of may break current wastage and find absolutely new practical uses for the flowing stream. Tennessee is the leading producer of pyrites; holds second place in the national production of three very important products, viz., ball clay, phosphate rock, and aluminum ore. Tennessee holds third place in the production of zinc ores and sulphuric acid. Tennessee holds fourth place in the production of barite and silica. In mineral resources Tennessee ranks high in the nation's economic brackets.

Tennessee has twenty-six billion tons of coal in reserve; she has eight hundred twenty-five million tons of iron ore in reserve; she has eight hundred twenty-five million tons of phosphate in reserve; she has over a billion kilowatt hours of electric energy available. And lastly, Tennessee has an estimated army of four hundred thousand persons as a labor reserve available at any time.

Tennessee has some of the finest quail shooting territory in the South. Tennessee's wild boar hunt is one of the most thrilling sports in America. Tennessee has miles and miles of good fishing streams. Tennessee has exceptionally fine fishing lakes. Tennessee is noted for her fox hunts. Tennessee has two federal and two state fish hatcheries. Tennessee has the largest state-operated quail hatchery in the world. Tennessee is one of the most charming and complete recreational areas in the South and is, in fact, the identical playground which nature fitted out for the future.

New Building Dedicated To Negro Education

With County Superintendent Joe Brown presiding, dedicatory exercises were held Sunday afternoon in the auditorium of the new building of the Bedford County Training School for the purpose of dedicating this building to Negro education.

Attesting their interest, a large group of white people were present to join in extending congratulations to the Negro citizens of Shelbyville upon the acquisition of such a splendid building for their use as a school and community center.

State Commissioner of Education B. O. Duggan, a native Bedford Countian, born and reared near Unionville, gave the principal address, speaking upon the power, privilege and responsibility of citizens in a democracy, and stressing the theme that education was vitally necessary to save the nation from the insidious threat of dictatorship.

Two musical numbers "Travelin' On" and "Ezekiel Saw the Wheel" were presented by a mixed chorus.

Rev. N. J. Warren gave the Scripture reading and prayer; R. R. Vance, State High School Supervisor, spoke briefly on the responsibility of citizens to so co-operate with teachers in their efforts to present the curricular activities to the pupils in an efficient manner to make the building of the best service to the community.

Ed Turner, supervisor of Negro Education, outlined the state's program for the development of Negro education.

Frank McCall, resident engineer for the PWA, expressed appreciation of the splendid co-operation of all concerned in the construction of the building.

Mayor G. H. Hulan extended congratulations upon the completion of this structure and expressed appreciation for the hearty co-operation of everyone who had a part in the project.

Representing the Bedford County Court, John B. Hall and W. E. Gant, stated their pleasure in having had a part toward consummating the project.

W. J. McGill, chairman of the City Board of Education, made a brief resume of the history of getting the project started and the many steps necessary to bring the project to completion.

W. L. Parker, chairman of the County Board of Education, reviewed the progress of education in the county, praised the building program and paid a tribute to the high attainment of Prof. B. O. Duggan in the educational field.

Representing the Negro citizens of Shelbyville, Dr. Stanley Davis, feelingly expressed the deep appreciation of the race in receiving recognition of their needs by the city and county and gave assurance that their gratitude would be shown in improved conditions, both educationally and morally, in striving to attain a higher standard in keeping with the material facilities placed in their charge.

S. J. Green, principal of the Murfreesboro Colored High School, expressively spoke upon the inter-racial relations of the races in cooperating to produce better citizens and better living conditions.

Mose McKissick, of McKissick and McKissick, architects, in a genial and pleasant manner gave reminiscences of his boyhood relations with young white men and how such friendships with these and other white people had aided him in his career as an architect.

Bain Stewart, State Director of Personnel, representing the governor, summarized the great advantages of education for both races in harmonizing their relations toward each other and in the development of the community and the state for better citizenship.

Supt. Joe Brown spoke of the advancement of education in the county and presented the building into the care and keeping of the principal, S. W. Harris, who accepted, with the assurance that both teachers and pupils would strive to prove themselves worthy of such consideration by the white citizens of the county.

National Educator Speaks At Jacks Creek Dedication

"It's not the school building alone, but what teachers themselves do with it after it is built that is the important thing," Dr. Arthur G. Wright, president of the Southern Education Foundation, Washington, D. C., declared in the principal address at the dedication of the new Jacks Creek colored school last Friday.

Dr. Wright added that from what he had learned of the colored teaching force and patrons of Chester County, he had little doubt that the progress and influence of the school would be in keeping with the new building. He praised especially the enterprise of the Jacks Creek colored patrons in raising $600 in the past year to further education.

Of this amount, $400 went to purchase the school lot. The building itself cost approximately $2,500, excessive of labor, which was furnished by the NYA. The Anna T. Jeanes Fund for the advancement of colored education contributed $500 through Dr. Wright and the Southern Foundation.

Other guest speakers included W. E. Turner and Dudley S. Tanner, directors of negro education for the State Education Department. County Superintendent of Schools R. E. Henson traced the progressive strides made by the colored race in the county, and Superintendents Kit Parker of Madison and Ira Powers of Henderson County also spoke briefly.

Miss Shelley T. Northcutt, special Jeanes Fund supervisor for 15 Southern states and former colored school supervisor here, presided at the meeting. Jeanes Fund supervisors from Madison, Haywood, Lauderdale and Chester counties were in attendance, as was also Director Clay of the state's negro school planning division. Mrs. Carrie Mae Denny, Jeanes Fund supervisor for Chester and Henderson counties, assisted in planning the occasion.

Entertainment features included songs by the Lane College Glee Club, a chorus by the Gibson-Rosenwald school pupils, and a solo by H. B. Nolen, Gibson-Rosenwald principal. All colored schools were dismissed at noon to permit teachers and pupils to attend the exercises.

Barnes Lumber Corporation Submits Low Bid For Construction; Plumbing Contract To Waynesboro Firm; Electrical Work to Omohundro

The City School Board, in special session yesterday afternoon at the McGuffey School building, awarded contracts for construction, plumbing and heating and electric work for the addition to the Jefferson High School (colored), known as PWA Docket Va. 1287-F; extended by one day the holiday recess in the public schools of the city; and adopted a resolution authorizing the building committee of the board, with the approval of the architects, to appoint a clerk or clerks of work for both the white and colored school projects.

The Barnes Lumber Corporation, submitting a low bid of $46,869, was awarded the contract for construction of the addition to the colored high school. The contract for plumbing and heating went to Harry H. Brown, of Waynesboro, who submitted a low bid of $10,250, while the contract for electrical work was awarded the Omohundro Electric Company of this city, which submitted a low bid of $1,945.

Sealed proposals from ten were submitted and opened at yesterday's board meeting. Five turned in bids for construction, plumbing and heating and electric work, as follows: Barnes Lumber Corporatoin, $59,557; Charlottesville Lumber Company, $61,545; R. L. Deal Construction Company, High Point, N. C., $72,350; Failes & Martin, this city, $66,155; the Wilson Company, this city, $63,336.

The bids for construction work only were as follows: Barnes Lumber Company, $46,869; Charlottesville Lumber Company, $48,650; R. L. Deal Construction Company, $59,400; Failes & Martin, $52,735; the Wilson Company, $50,756.

Plumbing and heating bids submitted were: W. M. Bailey, this city, $10,638; Barnes Lumber Corporation, $10,660; Harry H. Brown, $10,250; Failes & Martin, $11,275; W. L. Lacy, this city, $11,875.

Bidders for electrical work only were: Barnes Lumber Corporation, $2,028; Failes & Martin, $2,145; Omohundro Electric Company, $1,945; Ritchie Electric Company, $2,216.

A petition, signed by two-thirds of the pupils at Lane High School asking that the Christmas holiday recess be extended one day, was read and the request granted. The schools will close this afternoon and reopen on Tuesday morning January 3.

The chairman of the board read a letter from Jesse B. Wilson, co-chairman of the general committee planning for celebration of the President's birthday here, to raise funds to combat and treat infantile paralysis, requesting that permission be granted to ask every school child to give one penny. The board went on record as willing to have the cause presented to the school children, but decided that contributions should only be voluntary.

A hint by Dr. A. G. A. Balz that the funds appropraited for the new white high school would not be sufficient for the erection of a gymnasium, created some surprise among board members, and brought forth a vigorous retort from W. Towles Dettor and Harry Robinson, who declared that the gymnasium was an essential part of the project and should not be abandoned.

W. Allan Perkins, chairman, presided at yesterday's meeting Other members present were: Randolph H. Perry, R. A. Watson, W. Towles Dettor, W. V. Johnson, Harry Robinson, W. H. Snyder, Hope Gleason, Dr. A. G. A. Balz, and Lee Hawkins.

A. M. E. BISHOPS TELL HOW QUICK ACTION SAVED WILBERFORCE

By G. James Fleming

PHILADELPHIA. — (ANP) —How Wilberforce university came near being seriously crippled or wiped out was revealed for the first time last week, as Bishop D. H. Sims was commended by his A.M.E. colleagues for having saved the Ohio university by quick thinking and action.

What the threat was and how it was stalled was told on Tuesday when the executive committee of the bishops' council received newspapermen in interview. The bishops present were S. L. Greene, Little Rock, and W. A. Fountain, Atlanta, in addition to Bishop Sims.

It was just a few weeks ago. Wilberforce had submitted its needs. In the legislature everything seemed to say that the over half a million dollars needed for the next two years would be appropriated and approved by the governor.

State Assemblyman Chester K. Gillespie had attacked Wilberforce's president, Dr. D. Ormonde Walker, but nothing had come of his efforts. Many friends had risen up in the university's defense, and the North Central association had admitted the institution to grade "A" rating.

Hear of Proposed Slash

Out of the clear, rumblings began to be heard to the effect that Governor Bricker was going to slash the proposed appropriation. It was not just a rumor; the governor had decided to cut the Wilberforce money to the bone—so much so that Wilberforce could not have functioned, it is said.

Whatever would have been the official reason given, the real motive lies deep in the past political activities of the governor and the university president. They are on different sides of the fence politically, and Dr. Walker has been outspoken against the things that the governor holds dear and vice versa, it is stated.

Word came to Bishop Sims of the slash. So serious was the whole business and such was the need for speed that the bishop had to get audience immediately with the governor. His words and plea alone were not enough, so he had to turn to Pennsylvania's Governor Arthur H. James as an intercessor.

Governor James induced the Ohio executive to give audience to the A. M. E. bishop, who was accompanied by Bishop Greene, "but all the credit is due to Bishop Sims," Bishop Greene declared.

What Bishop Sims said and what arguments he gave, only those present know, but Governor Bricker was won over and the $550,000 for Wilberforce left in the appropriation bill and the bill signed.

If Wilberforce had not received this money, its entire educational program would have been deeply shattered, to the extent that it would have undoubtedly lost its "A" rating. Thus, Bishop Sims is also being praised for saving the rating of the school.

Defend Dr. Walker

When questioned as to the fitness of Dr. Walker, who formerly pastored St. James Episcopal church, Cleveland, and about the recent dismissal of six professors at Wilberforce, the bishops were united in warmly defending the Wilberforce head.

They said: (1) Dr. Walker is a capable administrator and his efficiency has been noted by the North Central association which rated Wilberforce. No evidence that Wilberforce suffers for having a clergyman as president.

(2) Dr. Walker is putting all his talents into Wilberforce and is not using the presidency as a stepping stone to the bishopric. Indeed, Dr. Walker has declared in public that he is not a candidate, and does not intend being a candidate for the episcopacy.

(3) Of the faculty dropped, only one man—Dean F. H. McGinnis—was dismissed. The other five were given leaves with pay as high as $1,000 to study in the fields in which they were teaching. These are eligible for re-employment when they have brought up to date.

(4) For the men giving leaves there was, and is, no idea of penalizing them. Rather, they are the men who were pointed out in the North Central report as teaching subjects for which they were not prepared, instead of the subjects in which they had majored. The bishops agreed that this was not the men's fault, but the fault of past administrations, with for instance, a man who specialized in sociology, teaching nothing but philosophy.

Board in Authority

Despite a strike at Wilberforce during the past year, this threat to its appropriation and the dismissal of six teachers, the bishops' council did not take any official action on this school, since only the board of directors has authority over the institution.

Wilberforce is the premier educational center of the African Methodist Episcopal church, but its major support comes from the state of Ohio, which the school serves through certain departments. For years this division of sponsorship and support has been evident at the school where "the state side" has come to mean the campus, departments and teachers which are in the best connection are the most well equipped and are the best paid.

Whether the men dropped from Wilberforce will bring suit or take any other legal action is not yet known, but there was general feeling here that the bishops—and especially Bishop Sims—will be able to steer the ship of state out of all troubled waters. The ex-Wilberforce teachers involved, in addition to Dean McGinnis, are George F. David, head, department of sociology; M. L. Kiser, head, department of Latin; Lindell C. Ridley, head, department of philosophy; Harry B. Baker and Mary Pyrtle, both of the music department.

MANCE, TWO-FACED, PROMISED Bishop's Friends One Thing, Does Another

Journal

Reporter Finds Bishop Williams, Kicked McGill Out, Garrett And Miles Befriended Late Prexy.

4-2-39

Dr. Miles Refuses To Comment

Savannah Ga.

(BY STAFF CORRESPONDENT)

Columbia, S. C.; The strike at Allen University has ended, but the group responsible for the strike are still at work trying to rule the AME church in South Carolina or ruin it.

I was sent to Columbia incognito by the Publisher of these papers to get at the bottom of the Allen University situation; to write the truth no matter who it might involve. I shall endeavor to carry out instructions to the letter.

Just who started the Allen University strike, and how and why was it started?

I shall endeavor to answer these questions fully. However, before doing so I shall have to make cursory excursions into the realms of history.

My first digression will start with Dr. E. H. McGill. As pastor of Emmanuel in Charleston Bishop Noah Williams ended his annual conference leaving Dr. McGill without an appointment. We are not necessarily concerned here with the motive back of the Bishop's overt act. However, Dr. McGill was in a ough spot, and he went to Columbia to confer with two men whom he considered his friend—Dr. T. J. Miles and C. G. Garrett. While there vere others in South Carolina who claimed his friendship Dr. McGill went to the men whom are now catalogued as his enemies.

Journal

Dr. Miles and Garrett contacted Bishop Davis, and personally took Dr. McGill to North Carolina where he was made Presiding Elder over the Greensboro District.

Sometime later. Dr. McGill, dissatisfied with his work in Greensboro and a little homesick, returned to Columbia. He went direct to the Miles home. He was a sick man. He poured out his troubles to Miles and Garrett. "I want to come back home," he told them.

The two friends called in Bishop Flipper; they told of Dr. McGill's desire to return to South Carolina—the Bishop was adamant, but Miles and Garrett pleaded. McGill was brought back and made presiding Elder over the Greenwood District.

Savannah, Ga

While presiding over this district new ties were made and those ties were made by the very Negroes, pastors and preiding elders, who helped to end his usefulness in South Carolina under Bishop Williams. Now the reason these wolves in sheep clothing wanted the friendship of McGill was because of his known academic attainments They were members of a clique of church politicians who have always opposed Miles, Garrett and their friends.

The reason that they suddenly developed a love for McGill was prompted by their desire to dictate the policies and control Allen University. McGill was presidential material and they were confident that their nefarious desires would be realized if they succeeded in getting McGill elected which they did.

Dr. Miles and Mr. Garret, at first, were inclined to get on the McGill band waggon despite the fact that Dr. McGill was supported by their enemies. However, being loyal administration men they supported the candidate favored by the Bishop but they went to Dr. McGill and explained their position

When Dr. McGill took sick and was rushed to John Hopkins hospital Baltimore all of the presiding Elders were called for a council meeting. Bisohp Flipper knew of the serious financial condition of Allen University; he knew that a business genius would have to be installed immediately in order to be able to keep the school open until June.

The Presiding lders, themsleves, aware of the seriousness of the situation, made the motion seconded it and Dr. Dent was elected acting president.

Now, who started the strike and why? Some of those presiding elders—the group that supported McGill got busy. The election of Dent meant the end of the group who put McGill in office. But that was not all. Several men in South Carolina aspire to the Bishopric. Adams. Penbow, Spears etc. would like to be elevated. But there is not a man in the state who can be elected from South Carolina as long as Dr. T. J Miles is a candidate.

The Allen University strike was a direct slap at the Miles candidacy. Dr. Miles is chairman of the Executive Board and upon his shoulders rest the future of Allen University. A good strike at Allen would have far reaching consequences and would so the agitators figured, eliminate Dr. Miles from the Bishopric picture—this would give Adams the foremost candidate of the opposing faction, clean sailing.

To accomplish this wild dream, Dr. R. W. Mance, a physician of Columbia, a Rev. Clark four members of the school faculty and the opposing Presiding Elders and Lay members employed schemes that the devil himself would not have thought of.

Certain students were contacted and agreed to stage the strike using their love for the late prexy as the basis for the demonstration against Dr. Dent serving the school. Every kind of lie was concocted and disseminated about Dr. Dent to the extent that the city police refused to interfare. These schemers used Dr. McGill's death to capture the sympathy of the public and while the public was shedding crocodile tears, the Adams faction, supported by the faculty spurred the students on until no sane adjustments could be made.

All kinds of statements were issued to the newspapers, but Dr. Miles the direct object of attack, refused to issue one statement for publication Dr. Mance issued damaging statements about both Miles and Garrett, but they said not one word in self defense.

The strike was not initiated out of respect for McGill, or because Dent was not capable but it was agitated to elimintae Miles as a candidate for the Bishopsic and at the same time keep certain facts from the public concerning illegal borrowing and spending of money at Allen University.

At one clip $4,000 was borrowed and spent without the executive Board and trustees knowing about it. Bishop Flipper paid this $4000 back to the Victory Savings without even a murmur.

The Executive Board met last Monday and Dr. Dent resigned. O. Daniel, the dean whom it is said just joined the AME church. a few days ago. is now presidetn, he is alleged to have dismissed the classes—declared a holiday out of respect for Dr. McGill without as much as mentioning it to Dr. Dent, who was acting president.

After the meeting Monday a little band of strike agitators assembled at the home of Adams to report that the dirty work had succeeded. It is the aim of this faction to rule or ruin—they just about ruined the AME church in South Carolina.

Allen University Educates Negroes

The establishment of Allen university at Columbia in 1880, marked the first attempt on the part of the negroes of South Carolina to maintain an institution of higher leraning. The school was named in honor of Bishop Richard Allen, founder of the African Methodist Episcopal church, the first church in America controlled and supported by negroes.

Under its first two presidents, J. C. Waters and J. W. Morris, the school made rapid progress. These men had studied law at the University of South Carolina, and established a law school at Allen. The first law class was graduated in 1884. Between this period and 1890 fourteen students were graduated with the LL. B. degree.

Graduates of Allen university are to be found throughout the United States. Two who chose the ministry were elevated to the highest post in the denomination of their choice. The late Bishop William David Chappelle, and Bishop Monroe Hortensius Davis, of the African Methodist Episcopal church, are both numbered among the university alumni.

Three men have gone from the presidency of Allen university to the A. M. E. bishopric. They were Bishop William David Chappelle, Bishop William Wesley Beckett, and Bishop David Henry Sims.

Since its establishment in 1880 eleven men have served in the presidency. Two of these were graduated from the school, William David Chappelle, who served 1897-1899 and 1904-1908, and Eugene Howard McGill, the incumbent. The president of the board of trustees is Bishop Joseph Simeon Flipper, of Atlanta. Bishop Flipper is senior bishop of the A. M. E. church.

Allen's present enrolment is slightly more than 300.

Allen library to cost $30,000

Plans for the erection of a $30,000 library building on the Allen university campus this summer are underway, it was announced yesterday. Alumni of the Negro institution will be asked to raise ~~$5,000~~ of the money.

The executive committee of the alumni association will be held today for the formulation of plans for the alumni drive. J. T. Mims of Clinton is president of the association.

Presiding elders and ministers of the A. M. E. churches have arranged to collect stipulated amounts in their spring budgets for the library fund, it was announced.

Ground for the bulding will probably be broken in June and the drive for funds will continue over a period of two years.

MORRIS BROWN COLLEGE IS AN EXAMPLE OF WHAT THE NEGRO CAN DO FOR HIMSELF

2-3-39 Globe

Morris Brown College, Atlanta, Georgia, is a striking example of what the Negro can do for himself, if he will only try. With faith in God and confidence in himself he can do almost anything that other people can do for themselves. The men at the head of this institution, have discovered what is on the inside of the Negro, and are addressing themselves to the development of their discovery. They have thought through civilization back to the creation of mankind; and found that all men were created free and equal, and that it is up to men and races to find their places in the world of human achievements. That white men have forced themselves to the top, because they had spiritual vision, faith in God, and confidence in their own ability to reach what they visioned. You cannot beat the combination of faith in God and confidence in self. This spirit is invincible and will make the impossible, possible.

In reading the State auditor's report to Georgia General Assembly, we find that the State of Georgia appropriated in the last fiscal year, for the higher education of the Negro, the tremendous sum of $120,541.00. This sum was allocated to the three Negro schools neither of which ranks as an accredited junior college. These schools are located at Albany, Savannah and Forsyth, Georgia, and their combined student enrollment is around 650 boys and girls; and for the support of these three schools the State allocates only $120,541 annually. Whereas, the AME Church in Georgia budgets for Morris Brown College $100,000.00 more or less annually. This sum or budget is raised under the leadership of Bishop William A. Fountain, Sr., of the diocese of Georgia out of 92,000 members of his church in the State. This church raised for the year 1937-1938, $101,301.67. If 90,000 Negro Methodists can raise $100,000.00 annually for the support of one accredited college, what could the 500,000 Negro Baptists in the State under similar leadership raise for Christian education? What the Negroes in Georgia and elsewhere need to do, is to organize under consecrated leadership t oraise money for Christian education and the promotion of the kingdom of Christ on earth. Negroes fail because of the lack of honest and intelligent leadership. Morris Brown College under its present leadership is a clear and forcible example of what Negroes can do for themselves with proper organization and consecrated leadership.

It takes union and brains, faith in God and confidence in self to do a job like Morris Brown College. Morris Brown of course has received help from white sources because white people discovered that Morris Brown could take care of itself without their assistance, and good men like their Creator are always willing to help those who stenuously pray and work to help themselves. The Negro of Georgia could force the law officers to give them what they are entitled to for the education of their children, if they had organization and the courage to use the brains and foresight God created them with. But Negroes seem to have neither. They take whatever the white man hands to them laying down, much or little and show no fight. So far as our information goes, Georgia hasn't an accredited high school or junior college for the education of the Negro. But have nine accredited junior high schools for the whites at a cost of $750,000.00 annually, and there is not one Negro teacher in the service of the State with guts enought in his belly to call the attention of the public to the outrage. No physical training is provided for the Negro at the tax payer's expenses in the State, whereas the State spends more money for the two athletic associations at the Tech in Atlanta and the University in Athens, for the physical development of the white boys than it spends for the higher education of the Negro in the State.

The white man is not able to educate his children as he would have them educated, and calls on the state to educate them in every line of education except religious education. The Negro is less able to educate his children than the white man is to educate his; but he sits idly by, deaf and dumb and fails to enter protest against the white man taking 90 per cent of the money appropriated for higher education and giving the Negro youth only 10 per cent. He makes no effort to get his rights. He doesn't even let the white man know that he knows that his children are being robbed of their birthrights.

The State makes no provision for the legal and medical education of the Negro. It provides both these branches for the education of the white youths and various other branches of education are open to the white youth at the tax payer's expense and denied the Negro youth. These conditions will always obtained if the Negro does not raise up in manly righteous indignation and stop it. Of course it takes votes to do it, but much of it can be done without the ballot, because all the white folks do not stand for the outrages the politicians and grafters are inflicting upon a helpless law abiding people.

BISHOP'S BOARD VOTES FOR BIG FOUNDER'S FETE

Celebration Scheduled For Salisbury, S.C., On February 10

By JAMES CLAIR TAYLOR

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 10 —Reports revealing more than $135,000 raised by the several departments of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion church during the six months ending December 1, 1938 were made to the winter meeting of the Board of Bishops, convening in Warner Temple last week.

The bishops voted to make the Founder's day celebration at Livingstone college, Salisbury, N. C., February 10 more effective than last year when $59,000 of debt was cancelled on the college.

News of the death of Dr. William Harvey Goler, president-emeritus of Livingstone college, saddened the council, which in addition to the Board of Bishops comprises the Boards of Christian Education, Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Commissioners on Pension Plan and the Ministers and Laymen's association.

Bishop Joseph C. Martin of the Colored Methodist Episcopal church, with residence in Memphis, delivered an inspiring address on home missions.

Bishop William Walter Matthews of Little Rock, Ark., presided and Bishop Lynwood Westinghouse Kyles of Winston-Salem, N. C., was the secretary of the board.

The retiring chairman, Bishop Cameron Chesterfield Alleyne of Philadelphia, delivered the sermon. He spoke to the subject of "Modern Discipleship."

Other prelates in attendance of the meeting were Bishops John Wesley Wood, Indianapolis, Ind.; Paris Arthus Wallace, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Benjamin Garland Shaw, Birmingham, Ala.; William Jacob Walls and John William Martin, Chicago; Elijah Lovette Madison, Pittsburgh, Pa., and William Cornelius Brown, Los Angeles, Calif.

The board will meet in Detroit, Mich., August 9 to 11, 1939.

Morris Brown's Founders

Eugene L. Perkins, left; James R. Stroud, seated; and William E. Lane, right, were the first students to enter Morris Brown College when the liberal arts course was offered in 1894. During the year Perkins dropped out and went to work in New York City, where he died. Stroud and Lane completed the college course in 1898 as the first college graduating class. Both went to Howard University Medical College.

Shortly after completing the medical course, Dr. Lane returned to Atlanta to practice and later moved to his native home, Columbus, Georgia. He died in 1907. Dr. Stroud passed the New York Medical Board in 1908 and settled in Jersey City, New Jersey. He now enjoys an elaborate practice, being the sole survivor of that epoch-making freshman triumvirate of 1894. He returns to his alma mater this week and Thursday morning at 10 o'clock will deliver the 54th Founder's Day address.

Thursday night at 8 o'clock, the Department of Music, using the College Symphonic Ensemble, radio-famed quartet, women and men's glee clubs, a capella choir, and individual soloists, will present a musical extravaganza titled "Wings of Songs", under the direction of Earl A. Starling and E. Wayman Hathcock.

The prgram to be staged at Big Bethel A. M. E. church is one of the greatest such presentations in the illustrious history of the institution's music department.

10,000 Floridians Cheer As They Watch Historic Ceremony

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(ANP)—A crowd estimated at more than 10,000 persons, including leaders of Florida's clergy and laity as well as hundreds of visitors from other states, swarmed over the campus of Edward Waters' college to attend the recent mortgage-burning ceremony at the college, and to honor Bishop Henry Y. Tookes, presiding prelate of the Florida diocese, under whose leadership the institution has become debt-free.

Following the tragic death in an auto crash of the late Bishop R. A. Grant, Bishop Tookes was assigned to the Florida diocese and at once set himself to the task of liquidating all bonded indebtedness of the college. With his 29 presiding elders and 800 pastors, the entire state was organized and all efforts centered on the work at hand. Their big task was completed on October 3.

DR. LEE SPEAKS

Outstanding speakers were heard throughout the day-long celebration, among them being Dr. D. E. Williams, State agent for Negro education, President J. R. E. Lee, President Florida A. and M. college, and many others.

The feature of the mortgage-burning celebration was the torchlight parade, with Bishops Tookes and Gregg leading, which took in the business sections of the city, the music being furnished by the Florida A. and M. college 35-piece band.

The mortgage burning program was held in Durkey stadium, one of the finest in the southland. The principal address was by Bishop J. A. Gregg of Chicago. Other speakers on the program were former Governor Martin, Drs. George Singleton and John Clayborn.

HONOR BISHOP TOOKES

Music for the occasion was furnished by the chorus of 200 under the direction of Mrs. Lillian Sutton. Several musical numbers were also given by the band from the ate college, directed by Prof. Cortez.

Florida AME church leaders paid high tribute to the leadership of Bishop Tookes and his accomplishments at Edward Waters. During the celebration, the bishop said he is planning for the building of additional dormitories that will be in keeping with this growing school.

Realizing it will be impossible for Bishop Tookes to reach his goal by the next general conference, many declared it is the desire of the people of Florida, led by the delegates, that he be returned to this diocese for another four years. institution. Dr. C. S. Long, Jr., is president of the college.

WATERS COLLEGE BURNS BONDS

Success of the management and trustees of Edward Waters College, Jacksonville's institution of higher learning for members of the negro race, in progressing to the point where they were able recently to burn a million dollars worth of bonds is worthy of the attention and commendation of the people of this city and section. Burning of the bonds was made the occasion for a fitting celebration that brought distinguished members of the race here from many distant places to share in the joy the event afforded students, alumni, faculty, officials and supporters of the college.

Needless to say the White people of Jacksonville and Florida likewise derive pleasure from the knowledge that the leaders of the negroes have succeeded so well with this educational institution in which the youth of that race may fit themselves for the greater responsibilities and higher things of life. They see in Edward Waters College the training ground for potential leaders among the negroes who have gained such eminence as Dr. George Washington Carver of Tuskegee, Dr. Robert R. Moton who succeeded Booker T. Washington, the founder, in the presidency of Tuskegee; Dr. J. R. E. Lee, head of the Florida A. & M. College at Tallahassee, and others who have brought such great distinction to themselves and members of their race.

The outstanding traits of these men has been the ideals of service to their people. No people ever had leaders more sincere in their purposes than were Booker Washington and Dr. Moton. They devoted their lives to efforts to educate negro youth, and to bring about a better understanding between the white people of the South and the Nation and the negroes. That they achieved much is evident from the successes and high places in negro affairs that have come to the graduates of Tuskeegee.

As much may be said of Dr. Lee of Florida A. & M. A fact not generally known about him is that when he came to Florida some 15 years ago to assume the post he has so ably filled since, he gave up a position that paid him considerably more than he received here. He did so because he saw the greater opportunity that was open here for service to his people. That his dream has been fulfilled is attested by the magnificent successes that have attended his administration of the affairs of the State insitution.

So it was with teachers and leaders wherever negro institutions of higher learning are functioning. It is true of Bethune-Cookman at Daytona Beach, Edward Waters College here, and all others. Virtually all of them operate under difficulties, but they are making headway. They are teaching negro youth to become better citizens, to take their places as leaders of their people, and to assume their full share of responsibilities wherever life's future activities may take them.

And every negro youth should find inspiration in the outstanding achievements made by Dr. Carver of Tuskegee. They should understand that his record attests the fact that the people of the United States pay tribute to those to whom honors are due, regardless of race, creed or color.

Dr. Carver has just been awarded one of the Roosevelt Medals for 1939 as a recognition of his achievements as a scientist. Here is a man born of slave parents, and who once was bartered for a race horse, who saw a vision of service to his people. He educated himself, returned to Tuskegee, where he has been for more than 40 years, and has gained world-wide fame for the spectacular achievements he has made in his laboratory. With the lowly peanut and sweet potato he has created nearly 400 useful products which have found everyday use. Yet he has many time refused financial profit to himself from his discoveries and inventions. In reply to such offers he says that they belong to mankind.

The Roosevelt Medals are given each year in fields associated with the career of the late Theodore Roosevelt, who was a great friend of Booker Washington. People of the South, who are familiar with Dr. Carver's work, feel that the award this year was fittingly bestowed. They feel that Dr. Carver is a great American, but above all else a great Southerner. They see in his record an example of service for every negro youth to strive to emulate.

A.M.E. Zion Ministerial Alliance To Inquire Into Livingstone College Situation

By CLEVELAND G. ALLEN

The AME Zion Ministerial Alliance of New York and vicinity which meets every Monday morning at the Mother Zion AME Church, Rev. B. C. Robeson, pastor, at its meeting held Monday, Feb. 21, voted to make an investigation of the complaints that students are making against the administration at Livingstone College. Speakers at the meeting declared that the situation at Livingstone College is becoming grave, and that the attitude of the students towards the administration is one that requires immediate attention to ascertain the real cause of the lack of interest and indifference on the part of the alumni of Livingstone. The ministers of the Alliance stated that something is wrong with the administration at the institution that would produce such a bitter reaction on the part of the alumui towards the institution. It was stated that the alumni of Livingstone are very indifferent toward appeals that are made in the churches for the institution, and show no loyalty for their Alma Mater.

Rev. B. C. Robeson pastor of the Mother Zion Church who has a number of graduates of Livingstone College in his church, stated that students of the institution had come to him complaining of the autocratic attitude of the administration, and that their credits and diplomas are withheld. if they have not fully paid all of their debts, when the students about to be graduated are not allowed to make any arrangements with the faculty to meet these obligations. This attitude on the part of the faculty according to the alumni handicaps former students of Livingstone from entering other colleges to continue their education, as they have no statement from the institution, showing that they were students at Livingstone. Rev. Robeson said that this attitude on the part of the alumni and students is hurting the influence of Livingstone College. Rev. R S. Oden, an alumnus of Livingstone and pastor of the St. Catherine AME Zion Church in New Rochelle, defended the policy of Livingstone and said that the administration had always been co-operative with the students by helping them to complete their education. He said that he felt that the complaints that were being made by the alumni were not justifiable. He said that he was in favor of an inquiry being made to get the real facts in the case. Rev. P. K. Fonvielle, pastor of the Centennial AME Zion Church, in Mt. Vernon, and whose brother wrote the Livingstone Alma Mater song, said that an investigation should be made and a study of the situation gone into with a view of knowing the real facts in the case. He felt that a misunderstanding has come about between the alumni and the institution which could be adjusted if the matter was gone into carefully.

Rev. B. J. McClellan. pastor of the Hood Memorial, AME Zion Church, said that he received many complaints from the students and the alumni of Livingstone against the administration, which had made it difficult for him to get support from them when appeals were made on behalf of the institution. Rev. Naomi Fisher also spoke of the disgruntled attitude of the alumni which was bringing about an unpleasant situation. Rev. W. O. Carrington, president of the Alliance, and former Dean of the Theological Department, said that the Ministerial Alliance was greatly interested in the problem that has arisen at Livingstone College, and would make an effort to get the real facts in the situation. Rev. J. G. Collins, pastor of the AME Zion Church in Williamburg said that the matter which has come up regarding Livingstone College should be gone into carefully. The Alliance plans to hold hearings on the matter, and the alumni and members of the faculty are invited to communicate with Rev. W. O. Carrington, president of the Alliance. and pastor of the First A ME Zion Church in Brooklyn. According to the information which has come to the writer the religious influence at Livingstone is not being emphasized, and that the institution is not preparing the leadership to carry forward the program of the church. The report that the matter is of grave concern to the connection is the opinion of ministers here.

Kentucky Ministers Hear Bishop Walls Pledge To Support Educational Plans of the Denomination —Bishop Says Ignorance Will Not Run the Church of Today.

By WILLIAM H. FERRIS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 4—Over a score of ministers of the Louisville and Madisonville districts of the Kentucky A.M.E. Zion conference met April 17th, in the Stoner Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church, Rev. E. R. Michael, pastor. The purpose of the meeting was to make reports of Easter Day general claim offering, and perfect plans for the Youth Council and Ministers institute.

Bishop Walls made a powerful appeal for the Youth Council and the Ministers Institute. He stated that modern preaching is sometime so superficial and vague that it cannot really reach the people. He thought that a live Ministers Institute would breathe a breath of a new spiritual life into the people. He said: "You cannot run the church now unless you meet to study."

The Bishop stated that the Youth's Council and the Ministers Institute will meet July 11th to the 14th in Madisonville. The Bishop said, that "youth needs a social outlet."

And then Bishop Walls electrified the brethren as he said: "Some people believe that civilization means shrinking and that progress means individuality and disorganization.

"Some statesmen in democracies are not thinking about the great questions, which are agitating the world today but are thinking about getting elected or re-elected. If the dictator nations believed that the American people have not lost the rugged courage of the early days and will stand behind their leaders in a crisis they would be slow to offend her."

Then speaking of Livingstone College, Bishop Walls said: 'Livingstone College is in the soul of the A. M. E. Zion church. The cultural soul of the A. M. E. Zion and the cultural objectives are centered in Livingstone College.

"Great nations have institutions, which are shrines that were created by their money, their services and their blood.

"I am not working for Livingstone College because I want glory. I am working because I cannot help myself. If other denominations build Wilberforce, Shaw and other universities and the A. M. E. Zion church permits Livingstone College to die, a century from now there will be no A. M. E. Zion church.

"Ida Wells Barnett was ignored while she lived but now a splendid apartment is named in her honor. The reason Livingstone College will live is because J. C. Price lived, worked and died for her and as long as his spirit hovers in the skies and the sturdy oaks of Salisbury, N. C., Livingstone will live."

Rev. Daniel J. Hughlett, said, that Bishop Walls was not a bishop who desired money, for he was born in Zion, made sacrifices for Zion and was instilling his spirit into Kentucky. Rev. Hughlett's speech was warmly applauded and was endorsed by Presiding Elders R. A. Carroll and B. N. Henning ham and Rev. J. L. White and the brethren, who to a man expressed their confidence in Bishop Walls.

Fairview School To Be Baptist Seminary

COLORED BAPTISTS MOVE TO ESTABLISH RELIGIOUS SCHOOL FOR THEOLOGICAL STUDENTS HERE.

Definite steps were taken here Thursday at a meeting of colored Baptist leaders hel dat Shiloh Baptist churel for transferring title to the Fairview property of the G. S. & W. High school to the General Missionary Baptist convention and the conversion of the plant into a Theological seminary. Col. D. E. Griffin was employed as local counsel to arrange the legal matters of the enterprise and clear up the titles to the property and effect the transfer.

Plans were made for holding a four weeks training school with the present facilities which include a dormitory and academic building, to begin about April 1. Future plans call for the construction of a new building to replace the one destroyed by fire several years ago and to construct an adequate road running from the vicinity of the colored high school to the school property south of the AB&C railroad.

The seminary will be available to young ministers, missionaries and church and Sunday School leaders.

Dr. L. A. Pinkston ,of Augusta, president of the convention, presided at the meeting and after a brief address named trustees for the new institution which includes fifteen from the state at large and ten from as many counties in the vicinity of Fitzgerald. Dr. D. D. Crawford, executive secretary of Atlanta and Rev. J. H. Gadson, educational secretary, of Macon, made keynote addresses.

Other prominent church dignitaries present included Revs. J. W. Mapson, Bainbridge; J. T. Saxon, Macon; J. P. Pearson, Waycross; J. M. Benton, Dublin; G. P. Haynes, Albany; W. M. Davis, Douglas; and Sarah L. Fluker, of Waycross, president of the Woman's convention.

Colored religious leaders foresee a spiritual and social awakening for colored people throughout the state as a result of the activities of this new institution.

The Shiloh Baptist church and its pastor, Rev. L. T. Sanders, were hosts to the convention. This meeting resulted from the offer of the site here and its acceptance at a meeting of the general convention last November.

Former Hampton Star Athlete Rises To Presidency Of Georgia Baptist College

By J. B. DAVIS

MACON, Ga., Feb. 10 — Down in Macon, the city that lies only six miles from the geographical center of the state of Georgia, Hiawatha R. Harris, a former son of Hampton Institute is carving a name for himself in the educational hall of fame.

He went to Macon and became a member of the faculty of Georgia Baptist college in 1935.

He was highly recommended by his alma mater for his ability to do the right thing, the right way, at the right time. What better recommendation could anyone ask? We will turn back the pages of time to 1929 and allow you to see him as a student.

"Hi," as he was known while wearing No. 29 jersey on the football field, became a star when his school, Hampton, met Lincoln university one afternoon in New York City.

During the four years that he played under Coach "Gid" Smith, he starred as a halfback, quarterback, and was captain of the "Big Blue and White."

In one particular game his antics with the ball were so spectacular, one sports scribe said that he did more tricks with the football than a monkey could do with a mile of rope.

His athletic activity included baseball and basketball, at each of which he was equally good. The Hampton Script, a student publication of the school said this of him on the evening of his graduation: "Hi's graduating may not be mourned, but certainly his years here will be remembered."

One of his prize possessions that he has among his souvenirs is a photograph of Marshall Petain of France, General John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the United States army during the World war; Arthur Howe, president of Hampton Institute and himself dressed in military uniform.

We will leave Virginia and go down in Georgia where he has laid aside that No. 29 jersey and the name of "Hi" which is an abbreviation of his given name, Hiawatha, and is known throughout the state as Prof. H. R. Harris, business manager and acting president of Georgia Baptist college of Macon.

While serving as football and basketball coach under Rev. J. H. Gadson, who was president of the school, he taught practical mathematics and English his first two years at the college. His football teams lost only two games during the two seasons and his basketball teams lost only three games during the same period. In 1936 he became general administrator of the school. In 1937, he designed, superintended and completed Comer's cottage and Porter building.

The snowball of his success has continued to roll until it has reached huge proportions. Through his efforts the school now receive the aid of state funds for home economics and agriculture. One of his greatest achievements since being in Georgia was securing the assistance of Mercer university.

Mercer instructors help with the summer courses. This has saved teachers who have to take extension work, approximately $12,000 within the space of three years.

Harris has traveled more than 100,000 miles back and forth over the state working for the school. He is very active, a member of Mt. Moriah Baptist church in Macon, one of the members of the planning committee of the State Teachers association, speaker on the Georgia Public Forum project of the NYA, and treasurer of the Committee of Macon Hospitalization.

BAPTISTS PRESENT BONDS TO INSTITUTE

The Chicago Baptist Ministers' conference at a meeting held Monday at Progressive Baptist church, presented two bonds to Dean H. M. Smith of the Chicago Baptist Institute, toward the purchase of a new home at 3816 South Michigan avenue. Nearly 300 ministers were present for the occasion and to hear St. Clair Drake in a discussion on local organizations. Rev. E. J. Cole, president of the conference, is shown making the presentation to Dean Smith, who stands at left.

Nannie Burroughs Eulogized !

HER SCHOOL A RACE MAKER, A PREJUDICE BREAKER !

In our nation's capital, on a picturesque site known as Lincoln Heights, there is a monument dedicated to the task of developing Negro girls, not just to exist, but to live in accordance with their aspirations, desires and abilities.

Standing at the helm of this great institution is its President, Miss Nannie Helen Burroughs, who said to us, "Girls you are in a race. Don't let them leave you. The greatest handicap the Negro has is himself and no race will rise above its women. Remember fashion is eating the very heart of intellect from us. Talents must not wither! Genius must find a place! Virtue must remain! Girls, Jesus realized if His kingdom would ever be established, if the standards of righteousness and morality would prevail, women must play a very important part. So you are chosen. Your place in the sphere of human activities has always been underestimated. Serve! Your race needs you!"

About 25 years has passed since we were privileged to sit in the Chapel room and feast on such lectures. I am married now and my oldest daughter is nearing 23, but the memories of this character building institution are as though they happened yesterday.

The National Baptist Training School gives not only a thorough training and teaches such courses as music, commercial, dress making, millinery, domestic science, beauty culture and etc., but it aims to build a life around your chosen field that will automatically demand respect. Miss Burroughs says, "the Negro has talents second to none, and in many instances he excells others, but as a race we have failed to accept a few facts. Thus, the hope of any people depends upon willingness to accept the Bible as a guide. Our personal appearances should be born of bodily cleanliness. Our homes sanctified by sanitation. An example we must be for those we desire to lift. We have men and women of our group that are on a par with those of any respected group, but they are in the minority It takes the majority to win."

Miss Burroughs, when you said: "We have something on Lincoln Heights too sacred to be desecrated by confusion and too valuable to be thrown away by differences of opinion," you put it far too mildly.

We have there a school that tends to develop the highest, best and noblest aspirations obtainable for true womanhood. Here the Negro girl can get every essential necessary for the elimination of the ambulance down in the valley. When its Faculty places its stamp of approval upon you, you are not only prepared to build that necessary fence at the top of the cliff, but you build it. As a product of this institution, I invite your criticism, may you be friend, foe, next door, or distant neighbor. I have tried to prove that building a fence at the top of the cliff is best and surest.

Interested readers, and would be contributors, is there a nobler contribution than to place women in the fields of service, who truly can, and do live lives that prove a blessing at home and abroad? After all, these are the only contributions that are eternal.

Name Bi-Racial Board At Burroughs' School

By DANIEL W. CHASE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(S N S)—At a special meeting held at the National Trade and Professional School for Women and Girls, Miss Nannie H. Burroughs, president, a bi-racial board of northern and southern white women was named. This new board will cooperate with the colored trustees in the expansion of the work of the institution.

The following white women, all nationally known and prominently identified with religious and educational work, were named to the board of trustees: Mrs. Orrin R. Judd, president of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society; Miss Alice W. S. Brimson, Executive Secretary of the Woman's American Home Mission Society; Mrs. Taul B. White, of the University of North Carolina; Miss Blanche Sydnor White, Corresponding Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Union Baptist General Association of Virginia; Mrs. Eugene Leering, Baltimore, Maryland, who is particularly interested in the education of women and girls in the useful arts; Mrs. William McMurray, of Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. George A. Ross and Mrs. O. E. Howe, both of Washington, D. C.

The institution has for the past twenty-five years of its existence had a board of all colored trustees. Miss Burroughs states that the change is being made in keeping with Christian ideals of cooperation that are receiving new emphasis in missionary and education work on the part of both white and colored Christian workers through the North and South.

INDEBTEDNESS TO BE WIPED OUT

The program of the new board of trustees calls for the wiping out of the entire indebtedness of the institution, and a new dormitory to accommodate one hundred more students, and the creation of a scholarship fund which will offer partial aid to fifty girls.

The program further calls for modernizing the curriculum so as to meet the definite needs of colored women and girls for training in Christian useful service, professionalized household management and business. Those making substantial contributions will have their names enrolled in a "Book of Gold."

Miss Burroughs has made the founding of this institution and the carrying it on to successful ends, her life work. It has never been a side issue with her; she has never sought salary, either from the Government or other sources for employment, but has stuck religiously to 'fitting women and girls for the service that means most.' She believes in work, and believes in vital character life—living the correct life here and now. With a determination seldom witnessed, she carries on, with this thought foremost—"THIS ONE THING I DO!"

In the matter of aid to students, Miss Burroughs expresses the belief that students should not be helped fully, but should be given partial aid and encouraged to further help themselves. "By helping an individual too much," says Miss Burroughs, "you very often help him to become helpless." It is thought that the 50-50 basis will in a measure help to develop one's initiative.

$700 Fund is Sought For Voorhees School

Negroes Trained for Trades at Episcopal Institution Located at Denmark

A campaign to raise $700 to supplement student tuition fees at the Voorhees school for negroes in Denmark, founded in 1897, is now under way.

The school academic work meets requirements of the state education department of South Carolina and the National Rating Association of Southern Colleges and Secondary schools. It has held ratings in these associations for many years.

In the high school, the program of half a day for trades and half a day for academic work is designed to make young people self-supporting now rather than for attendance at college. Cooking, sewing, carpentry, masonry, general shop and agricultural training are taught.

Three years ago, the principal of Voorhees made a survey of the school graduates and a careful check showed that not a single graduate was on relief in the state.

SHEPARD AWARDED $10,000 LAW FEE

Fort Valley Lawyer to Be Paid for Professional Services for Negro School

Judge Malcolm D. Jones of superior court today awarded C. Leighton Shepard, Fort Valley attorney, a fee of $10,000 for professional services rendered the Fort Valley Normal and Industrial school, Negro college operated by the Episcopal church.

Mr. Shepard sought a fee of $10,000 for legal advice which he contended might have been instrumental in saving the school many thousands of dollars. At a hearing before Judge Jones a half dozen Macon lawyers were asked to state what they thought the services was worth. Opinions ranged from $350 to $15,000.

'Hire' by School

Mr. Shepard was employed by the school as counsel in a transaction in which the church will turn the school over to the state for operation as a part of the university system.

Mr. Shepard was represented by Harry S. Strozier of Macon, and George Culpepper of Fort Valley. Gen. Walter A. Harris, of the firm of Harris, Harris, Russell and Weaver represented the church's interests.

Board Says That Brainerd Institute Closing Is Final

The following letter from Miss Edna R. Voss, Secretary Unit of Educational and Medical Work, Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A., to Mr. James I. Hardin, President of the Chamber of Commerce, seems to indicate that the die is cast in connection with the closing of Brainerd Institute, as announced in Thursday's Reporter, and the Board sees no possible chance to continue the school:

This is to acknowledge your telegram of May 20 from the Chester Chamber of Commerce in regard to the closing of Brainerd Institute.

In the name of the Board of National Missions and of this Unit, I wish to express our sincere appreciation for this message which shows so clearly the fine backing which the community of Chester has given Brainerd and the place which the school has won for itself through its service to Negro boys and girls.

Because of our feeling of appreciation it is doubly hard for me to have to write that it will not be possible for the Board to re-consider its decision to close Brainerd at the end of the present school year. Actually the closing of Brainerd is only one of a number of adjustments which the Board is being forced to make as a result of its financial situation. The Board closed the last fiscal year on April 1 with a substantial deficit due to a falling off in contributions from its supporting constituency. Because of general world conditions it was not felt that any substantial increase in gifts could be expected during the new year and that a reduction in services was, therefore, a necessity. As a result the Board voted to close three of its schools, of which Brainerd is one, and to reduce its program at a number of other stations. The action on these retrenchments was taken with deep regret and only after thorough discussion showed that no other course was possible.

May I ask you to express to the members of the Chamber of Commerce the appreciation of the Board of National Missions for their message and the deep regret of the Board that its services in Chester through Brainerd Institute can not be continued.

Negro School May Be Kept By State

CHESTER, June 4.—A committee, composed of John E. Nunnery, Chester county superintendent of education, Prof. Myron E. Brockman, superintendent of the Chester public schools, James I. Hardin, president of the Chester chamber of commerce, Dr. John McSween, pastor of Purity Presbyterian church of Chester, and Angus H. Macaulay, attorney, were in Columbia Friday to discuss with James H. Hope, state superintendent of education the possibilities of operating Brainerd Institute, prominent negro institute of Chester, as a part of the public school system of the state, provided the consent of the board of missions of the Presbyterian church in the United States to use the property can be obtained. It is believed that the consent can be had to operate the school in this manner, if a suitable plan can be worked out with the authorities at Columbia. A committee of negro citizens likewise went to Columbia Friday. It was decided at the meeting at the Chester chamber of commerce to send a representative to the meeting of the board in New York city this month at which final decision is to be made regarding the closing of Brainerd Institute, which has been in operation since 1868

Adventist Schools Produce Many Noted Negroes

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12—(ANP)—The recent case of segregation in the dining hall of the Emanuel Missionary college of Michigan has served to call attention to the unique product of Seventh-Day Adventist schools where they concern the American Negro.

Despite small numbers, the schools have sent forth an astounding number of nationally known Negroes. Though most of these are no longer connected with the denomination, they owe their education more or less to their former connection with this religious group.

In the field of popular music, the names of Percival "Tiny" Parham and of Arthur Wetsel are best known. Among the stage and screen figures are Midge Williams and Connie Harris. In literature, Anna Bontemps and Richard Wright are prominent. In education, there are Dr. Wilfred Nathan of Atlanta university and Dr. Eva Dykes of Howard. While in the labor movement, there is Henry "Hank" Johnson of the CIO. They are also prominent in medicine.

Also recalled by the recent segregation is the fact that the first white Adventist preachers in the South sometimes had to flee hidebound communities because their teachings were so progressive where the Negro was concerned that they aroused the ire of the natives. Members say that the experiences of Pioneer Edson E. White in these fields reveal a character whose zeal for racial tolerance was on a plane with that of the most zealous Quaker.

The denomination also traditionally opposes war.

Adventists Deny J. C.

President Klooster Says Emanuel College Practices No Discrimination

BERRIEN SPRINGS, Mich.—Reports that discrimination exists at the Emanuel Missionary College of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church were emphatically denied by J. Klooster, white president, in a recent letter to Miss Gladys L. Wilson, 3764 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, although it was admitted that colored students eat at the same table.

Professor Klooster said, in part:

"Our colored students have their own tables in our dining room, but as far as all other public services are concerned, they are at liberty to sit anywhere they choose. . . . I must state emphatically that there is no race prejudice against colored in this institution. . . . Had there been such prejudices, it would have been a simple matter to exclude colored from the campus."

Blames Race Itself

Regarding the president's letter Miss Wilson said, in part:

"Usually, colored people take the initiative in segregating themselves," said Miss Wilson, "and are quick to shower abuse when others follow in their wake. In my personal experience, this has been observed repeatedly in public schools, colleges, and universities. . . .

"We like our own company," she continued. "This is evidenced by the fact that the pale, Nordic-appearing members of the race who, because of economic advantages, work as white, instead of living entirely among the other group, continuously risk their sole means of support to 'come home to their own.'"

Adventist Group Hits Jim Crow Segregation In SDA College Deplored

CHICAGO—(ANP)—General disapproval of Emanuel Missionary college's (Berrien Springs. Mich.) segregation policy and the "little Munich accord" by Oakwood Junior college (Huntsville, Ala.) head, was voiced by Adventist churchmen and former constituents last week.

The Associated Negro Press also contacted those involved in the controversy—President H. J. Klooster of Emanuel college (white), who reputedly defended his segregation policy in the dining hall of the school; Prof. J. L. Moran (colored) president Oakwood Junior college, who reputedly furthered the segregation plan at Emanuel, and the Rev. Thomas H. Allison, pastor, Shiloh SDA church, Chicago, whose reported comment on the matter was: 'It seems to be characteristic of the 'New Negro' to talk much and do little."

Adventist constituents who have protested the jimcrow policy at Emanuel regarded it as significant that neither President Klooster nor Rev. Allison answered ANP's request for a statement. Seeking "more light" on the subject, President Moran's letter to ANP stated in part: "Since we work with all races and peoples, we cannot be drawn into the side lines to issue statements or answer questions without having more information... For instance, it would be necessary to have a copy of the letter which you received from President H. J. Klooster; letters or direct statements from alleged denominational constituents who claim to have obtained information from H. J. Klooster; the name of the individual alleged to have sent you the copy of the story which you so kindly sent to me. Also, if possible, a copy of the original story. . ."

Requests for statements were also [illegible] H. Lawrence of [illegible]napolis, W. D. Forde, Battle [illegible]k, L. H. Bland, Detroit and [illegible] Jarreau, Milwaukee, concerning discrimination at Emanuel college, but no replies have been received.

These ministers all preside in the district over which Rev. Allison has supervision.

Prominent Chicago Adventists issued the following statements:

Arna Bontemps, author and Rosenwald fellow: "In some quarters race relations seem to improve with time. In others they tend to grow worse. No effort has been spared to consolidate gains, however, and segregation and kindred evils, even in so small a group as Seventh-Day Adventists, should not be passed unnoticed. Nothing like the present Michigan situation ever occurred in the Angwin, California, school which I attended. I sympathize with Negro students at Emanuel. The part played by Negro leaders in the affair is, of course, embarrassing. I apologize for them. A public explanation, on their part, would seem to be appropriate."

Rev. Philip A. Jonnson, Elder First SDA church Evanston, Ill.: "The Northern Negro youth of today will never submit to such treatment without a challenge. It is incompatible with, inconsistent with and greatly at conflict with the teachings of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, upon whom this, denomination is founded."

Rev. Owen A. Troy, former pastor Shiloh SDA church, Chicago, now working on his doctor's degree at University of Chicago: "It is extremely unfortunate that our youth have had to submit to the soul-embittering effects of prejudice and segregation. While not seeking to defend either the reported discrimination practiced at our Michigan denominational college or the dictatorial agreement entered into by the Oakwood Junior college president and Northern white college presidents, I can say from experience that these evils will be corrected when brought to the attention of our world conference officials at Washington."

Georgians Seeking Full Educational Benefits Under Lloyd Gaines Ruling

Say There Should Be No Compromise With High Court's Ruling

ATLANTA, March 2. (ANP)—There should be no compromise with the Supreme Court decision in the Gaines' case and Negroes should receive full benefits under the ruling either through admission to the state university system or by having built for them a separate but equal educational system, Negro members of the special committee on education of the Georgia Interracial Committee declared in special meeting Tuesday.

Just what will be recommended by the committee will not be known until after a meeting on March [illegible].

Three Negroes Write For Educational Journal

NEW YORK (C)—Three colored scholars have articles in the current Journal of Educational Sociology, 26 Washington Place, adjacent to New York University. The writers are Dr. Charles S. Johnson of Fisk University, who is editor of the special (January) issue under the general head of "The Education of an American Minority"; Dean Horace Mann Bond of Dillard University, and Dr. Fred D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute. Dr. Johnson writes on "The Social Setting of Negro Education"; Dean Bond writes on "Education and Guidance for the Negro." Dr. Fred McCuistion, white, of the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, writes on "The Support of Public Education in the United States, with Special Reference to Negro Schools."

Writes Open Letter To A. U. President

To the Editor:

Please public this open letter to President Rufus E. Clement, Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga.:

My dear Sir:

On February 21, 1939 before an Educational Committee, congregated by the Interracial Commission of Georgia, I listened to your six point plan by which you thought the 17 Southern States might carry out the decision of the United State Supreme Court recently handed down in the famous Lloyd Gaines case in the state of Missouri.

Mr. Charles Evans Hughes Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, wrote that decision which was plain, even to the wayfaring man. He said, in that famous decision, in substance, that states, which maintain separate Educational Systems, were allowed only two alternatives . . . (1) Admit Negro students to the State University Systems, as they now exist, or (2) Bring the Negro schools up to a plane of equality, in every particular, with the White schools as they now exist.

Concurring with Chief Justice Hughes, in this decision, were six Associate Supreme Court Judges, among whom was Mr. Justice Hugo Black, a native of Alabama and a former United States Senator from that state. Mr. Black is quite familiar with racial and living conditions in Alabama and the Southland.

Notwithstanding the fact, that these seven erudite Supreme Court Judges, with every available kind of information at their finger tips; and, after very careful and deliberate consideration of every point and aspect involved, both immediate and remote, left the 17 Southern States with but two roads to travel; you rush forward with six different possible avenues of escape from the justice involved in this decision.

You say in your first point, "That the Southern States may admit the Negro to their universities;" but, in the same breath, you qualify that statement by saying, "That will probably not happen in your time and mine." When asked to clarify that statement, you said, "In our lifetime."

When you make the statement, President Clement, that Negroes will not be admitted to graduate schools in Southern State Universities in our lifetime, you simply say what no Negro leader or Educator should ever express, even if he thinks it . . .

Atlanta University Sir, has given to the world men and women like James Weldon Johnson, Walter and George White and Lieut. Flipper, Henry Lincoln Johnson, Richard R. Wright, Miss Lucy Laney, and many other illustrious leaders. These men and women had high ideals instilled into them everyday. They were taught to expect and look for the rights guaranteed them by the Federal Constitution and its Amendments.

This Supreme Court decision has nothing whatever to do with social equality. No sensible colored man is concerned about that. Booker Washington, in his famous Atlanta speech of 1895, holding high his hand, paved an avenue for us to travel along that line, when he said, "In our social engagements we can remain as separate as the fingers." There is absolutely nothing social about a Negro's riding in a Pullman car. He is simply seeking first-class travel and the opportunity to rest at night. You ask for that privilege and get it, do you not? Negro boys are not asking to eat and sleep at these state universities. They are simply asking for the opportunity to get an equal type of education now denied them. Some want to be Doctors and a few would like to be lawyers and Civil Engineers without the penalty of being forced to go North to do so.

Very truly yours,

John Wesley Dobbs, President, Atlanta Civic-Political League, Atlanta, Georgia.

Educational Inequalities

By WALTER WHITE

Secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

THE success attained to date in the fight against educational inequalities is far greater than we dared hope for when the campaign began. But it is more evident each day that we have merely scratched the surface. Equally apparent is it that enormous gains can be made if only courage, militancy, intelligence and funds are put into the struggle which may conceivably do more than any other thing towards determining the future status of the Negro in America.

We Negroes have known since the Civil War how we have been robbed not only of our just share of public state funds for education but also of federal moneys sent into the states for educational purposes. Most of us have been content to "talk at the big gate" about these thefts.

But we have seen during recent months that, as in the case of the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the University of Missouri case, we can win and, to the amazement of most of us, get a remarkable degree of support from the enlightened South.

MAIN BURDEN RESTS UPON THE NEGRO

It becomes increasingly evident, however, that ninety-four per cent of this fight must be made by Negroes themselves. The big educational foundations are reluctant to make a frontal attack on this system or to be associated in any fashion with it.

In the meantime, private philanthropy which made possible the establishment and maintenance of schools like Hampton, Fisk, Atlanta, Tuskegee, Talladega, Dillard and other schools, both white and colored, is slowly but surely drying up.

What, then, faces the Negro in his search for an education? Like other Americans he has got to depend in the main on securing his education from tax-supported institutions. Unless the present gross inequality is wiped out or materially lessened it will mean inevitably that the Negro in the future is going to be even less well prepared than he is now for the increasingly competitive life of an industrial civilization.

PRESENT EFFORTS TO BE VIGOROUSLY FOLLOWED UP

The NAACP's program has been clearly defined and seems to be well understood. In the matter of teachers' salaries we shall continue action in courts of law and of public opinion wherever there are differentials in the salaries paid white and colored teachers and wherever individual teachers have the courage to serve as litigants.

Especially gratifying has been the growing determination on the part of state teachers associations, as in Virginia, Alabama, and Maryland, not only to make an uncompromising fight but also to furnish the funds for legal action and for other expenses.

It is quite distressing to hear that one or two of the states, among them North Carolina, have not followed suit but have been willing only to "appeal" to state educational authorities to reduce the differential.

ANXIOUS TO BROADEN SCOPE OF CAMPAIGN

But the fight typified by the University of Missouri and the University of Maryland cases for equal and the same educational opportunity on professional and graduate levels for Negroes as for whites will be vigorously followed up.

But we of the NAACP are anxious to carry the fight into other fields such as equalization of school buildings, textbooks, bus transportation, and length of school terms. The United States Supreme Court has said that there is no violation of the Fourteenth Amendment if separate but equal accommodations are provided for the two races.

Our position is that, if the South in its poverty, is determined to maintain an expensive dual system of education, then it will have to pay for it. We have the courts of the land with us; we have a growing body of public opinion on our side. If those who are to benefit from this struggle will supply the means to make the struggle, we can within the next few years revolutionize the educational system of the South so far as the Negro is concerned.

This will benefit not only the Negro but the South and the country as a whole. There must not and there will not be any compromise. Unless the children of the race can have the very same educational opportunity given anyone else we are going to be in an even more deplorable and disadvantaged situation than we are in today.

TEACHING TEACHERS

By A. H. GORDON, A. M., Litt. D.

Here in Atlanta and at many other centers of "higher learning," white and colored, all over the United States teachers are gathering to begin a period of study in "Summer Sessions."

Uppermost in the minds of most of these teachers, whether they are enrolled at Harvard University or some small and comparatively unknown school of the "Deep South," is the gathering of additional "credit hours" so as to present a record of "formal education" and professional training which will improve the grade of certificates they hold and consequently put them in position to apply for a more satisfactory position or get better pay in the position they already occupy.

The atmosphere of the summer school is therefore shot through with the spirit of commercialism. Teachers are out to get the maximum value in credit hours for the money and time they spend in school. The tragic thing about the matter is that the majority of these teachers seem to care little or nothing about whether they learn anything of value or not since they get the "credits."

These teachers who are gathered are neither worse nor better than others who are not in summer school. Many who are not in summer school are not enrolled because they have reached the top or the highest point professionally they can aspire to.

Some are not in Summer Sessions because they have not the money to go to some large and expensive University attendance at which would add to their "prestige" even if nothing of any particular use is added to their knowledge or professional skill.

The point is, most of those at home are not less selfish and commercially minded than those in school.

Then, too, those who instruct the teachers who are pupils are, for the most part, "on the job" because such service is required of them on their regular pay or because they can by this additional service over-time work as it were, increase their small annual income.

We have in our summer schools a situation in which teachers whose primary aim is to make some additional money trying to instruct other teachers whose primary purpose is also to get in position to make some more money. It seems that "Education" would be an unwelcome visitor in these summer schools for teachers. This is in many instances, perhaps the majority of cases, the unvarnished truth about the matter.

But some education does take place in Summer Sessions. It happens because it is impossible for active minds to come into association with other active and better informed minds without absorbing something of value. If one gets out in the rain he will inevitably get wet.

Then, too, when great teachers face classes they forget for the time being at least, that their main personal problems hinge around economics and, caught up by the inspiration of the hour assisted by some careful preparation carried out sometime in the past, these teachers touch the minds of these other teachers and together their minds "go places, see things, gather wisdom."

The Summer School, then, is like any other school, merely a situation created by the social order in which it is possible for active minds to educate themselves in spite of the distractions and difficulties of every day life before and after school hours.

Leaders Should 'Harmonize' With High Court Ruling--Thomas

Atlanta World - Atlanta, Ga.
2-5-39

Urges Youths To Continue Applying For Admittance

"Individual Negroes who are qualified and have a desire to do so, should continue to make application for admission to universities in all the southern states where equal provision is not made for them to secure training in the state otherwise," Jesse O. Thomas, Southern Field Secretary of the National Urban League, said Saturday.

"If refused admission, suits should be instituted with sufficient frequency," he added.

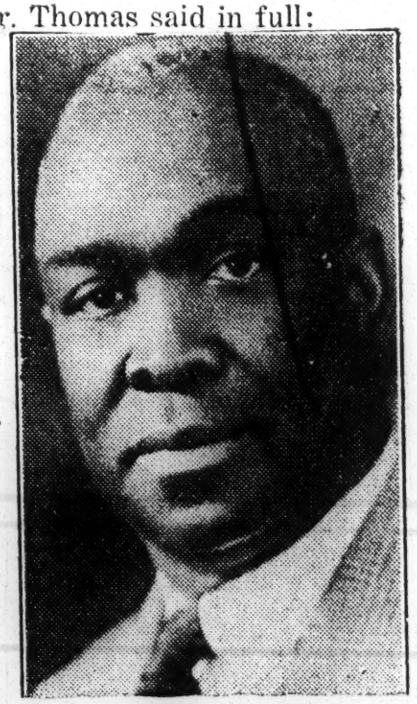
Directing his comment to the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of the state of Missouri versus Lloyd Gaines, Mr. Thomas said in full:

"Perhaps no single majority opinion of a tribunal where the welfare status of Negroes formed the basis of consideration has been fraught with more far-reaching significance for the millions of Negroes living in the separate school zones than the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of the State of Missouri versus Lloyd Gaines.

TRAVELED THRU SOUTH

"Since this decision was rendered, the writer has traveled in several southern states and has been very much interested in the anxiety expressed by white citizens, especially those connected with State Departments of Education relative to how the mandate of the Supreme Court shall be met in these several states.

"In Kentucky, Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma, Negroes have been asked to appear before white committees or to associate themselves with interested white persons where an attempt is being made to work out a program acceptable to Negroes and agreeable to the white people in the light of "separate but equal" educational opportunities for the former.



JESSE O. THOMAS

The acute significance of this situation imposes upon Negroes a responsibility and offers them an opportunity which Negroes have not had perhaps since the days of Reconstruction, certainly not since the middle Nineties. Most of the decisions Negroes have been called upon to make in the past half century have dealt with local situations and involved the welfare staus of Negroes in a municipality, county or state.

MUST FORMULATE PROGRAM

"For the first time in a great many years we are now called upon to formulate a program or adopt a policy calculated to condition the educational fortunes of Negro children in seventeen southern states indefinitely. Because whatever is accepted by Negroes in one state is apt to become the pattern for other states. On this account, it is important that Negro leadership shall harmonize its position with the decision of the Supreme Court and what it contemplates.

"Already it has been reported that some Negroes have gone into these conferences and led off by saying, "We realize that the University of Mississippi or of Texas or of Georgia is not going to admit Negroes to their graduate and professional schools. Any Negro who knows this KNOWS TOO MUCH. It may actually work out that this might be true, for the moment, but NO NEGRO has any business knowing it in advance.

"Frequently, I have similar experiences with red caps at railroad stations. I asked the red cap to take my suit case or hand bag—he knows "I belong in a Jim Crow Car," and so with the speed of Jesse Owens, like a Martin to his gourd, he makes a leap toward the Jim Crow Car. Any red cap who knows where the Negro passenger belongs, like the Negro leader, KNOWS TOO MUCH.

SHOULD PROTEST

"If the officials of the State Departments of Education steadfastly refuse to admit Negroes to do graduate work in those state universities, the Negroes may have to accept this decision momentarily, in which event it should be done over his protest.

"A lot of changes are taking place in the mass culture today, in the light of what is going on in the world about us. Negroes and white people in Maryland prophesied interracial disaster when Murray was insisting upon being admitted to the Law Department of the University of Maryland. Mr. Sidney Holland, a very prominent white citizen there, told me of the nervousness and anxiety expressed to him by a number of his white friends, who were sure that an interracial tragedy would result if Murray insisted on complying with the decision of the Supreme Court of Maryland, in his case. Murray entered the University of Maryland's Law School and not only didn't meet any hostile attitude on the part of the students, but soon became one of the most popular students on the campus.

"We have talked a good deal in the past about the extent to which ignorance has been responsible for interracial misunderstanding. We could prove that if we get the element of the two races on a graduate level to demonstrate how their education had lifted them above the underbrush of littleness and antagonism. There would be relatively so few Negroes applying for admission to the different State Universities and they could be so completely absorbed that their presence would scarcely be observed.

DECISION IS CLEAR

"Fortunately the Supreme Court's decision in the case of Missouri versus Gaines made it clear that Gaines was seeking his personal rights in the premises. This is significant.

"Negro leaders, then, going into these conferences ought to make it clear that whatever opinion they may register is their personal opinion and they have no authority or right to commit the race to any decision they may make. Individual Negroes who are qualified and have a desire to do so, should continue to make application for admission to universities in all the southern states where equal provision is not made for them to secure training in the state otherwise. If refused admission, suits should be instituted with sufficient frequency as to make commitments by these Negroes who KNOW TOO MUCH, ineffective and non-operative.

"In justice to the children of the on-marching generation, both white and colored, there is only one logical position for Negro leaders and that is to make it clear to these interracially-minded white friends that the Supreme Court has made its decison and they are standing by the decision of the Supreme Court. If the white citizens insist on circumventing the decision of the Court and Negroes find themselves helpless to do anything about it, they could at least have their records clear, and though feebly, make a protest.

WOULD BE INSPIRATION

"It would be an inspiration to the grandchildren of tomorrow to read the records that their grandfathers voted to stand by the Supreme Court's decision and accept anything to the contrary with protest. To do otherwise, it would hang like a weight of humiliation over the heads of their grandchildren to discover that their grandfathers, when called into interracial conferences opened the discussion by evidencing their superior knowledge of what could or could not be done.

"No member of the group can do quite the irreparable injury to the race today as the one who comes into interracial conferences KNOWING TOO MUCH."

Student Revenue Goes Up as Endowments Fall.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Financial trends in higher education, indicating a decided shift in the base of support and a more restricted field for the privately endowed universities and colleges, were outlined yesterday in a report by Trevor Arnett, retiring president of the General Education board and a trustee of the University of Chicago.

Trevor Arnett.

With endowment income as well as additions to capital markedly curtailed by the trend of economic conditions since 1930, the cost of education in privately controlled higher institutions presents new problems, the report shows, with respect to the division of this cost between the student and the social groups which sponsor the programs of higher learning.

Study Presents Statistics.

The study presents statistics covering 47 state institutions, 39 private universities, and 107 private colleges. The chief trend to date is for revenue from students to go up and revenue from endowments to go down. There is still a gap to be filled if the peculiar American institution, the private college, is to continue. This problem is being met by a militant effort to broaden the base of gifts, by special alumni drives, church support stimulation, and appeals to the average American pocketbook.

Universities and colleges all over the country are taking stock of their resources and prospects, determined not to yield before the increasing state and federal subsidies to education, which, they feel, would ultimately bring the threat of political control over education.

This situation has resulted in many colleges having "salesman," or student counselor representatives, on the road and branch offices in the big cities, with competition for students growing keener.

The University of Chicago, which started in 1891 with a budget under half a million dollars a year, now spends in excess of ten millions a year. Its endowment of 70 millions has increased, according to Harvey Daines, controller, but the interest rate has been reduced 20 per cent, from 6.1 per cent to about 4 per cent. The experience of the University of Chicago indicates that the day of large gifts is on the decline.

Survey Covers Ten Years.

The period covered by the Arnett report is from 1927 to 1937. The depression peak was not reached in the colleges and universities until 1933-1934.

"Enrollment at first increased, then decreased and later increased," the report states. "The proportion of students attending state institutions continually increased, a fact of especial significance to the endowed institutions. In a few instances student fees were reduced because of the depression, but the trend was toward increased fees. At the close of the period, for example, fees in the state institutions were on the average 20.6 per cent higher, in the endowed universities 10.9 per cent higher, and in the endowed colleges 11.8 per cent higher than they were at the beginning. The largest absolute increases were made by the endowed institutions."

Student fees, the report shows, totaled $190,570,000 for state institutions; $441,472,000 for private universities, and $184,838,000 for private colleges. The percentage to current receipts is 16.9 for state institutions, 45 per cent for private universities, and 53.4 per cent for private colleges.

Federal Aid Increased.

An interesting section of the report shows that federal appropriations to these institutions increased from $5,747,000 in 1927-'28 to $12,912,000 in 1936-'37.

Endowment income, which ranks next to student fees in private institutions, is analyzed as follows:

"The trend was upward for the institutions as a whole through 1930-'31. Then the composite effect of the diminishing rate of income received on investments and other unfavorable facts of the financial depression reduced income year after year through 1933-'34, notwithstanding the large additions made to endowment.

"In 1930-'31 the total endowment income received by the three types of institutions amounted to $48,441,000. By 1933-'34 it had dropped to $41,741,000, a shrinkage of 13.8 per cent. Thereafter the effect of additions to endowment and of improved productivity helped to offset the diminishing income, and the amounts received increased. In 1936-'37 the total obtained was $47,408,000, but this was still 2.1 per cent below that of 1930-'31."

Gift Figures Compared.

Gifts to state institutions for 1930-'31 were $2,877,000; to private universities, $9,596,000, and to private colleges, $2,265,000. In 1936-'37 gifts totaled $2,973,000 to state universities, $8,405,000 to private universities, and $2,219,000 to private colleges.

That the shrinkage was not greater, Dr. Arnett says, testifies to the great regard in which the public holds higher education. Recovery was most uniform among private colleges.

"Whether there will be any improvement in return on investments in the near future is problematical," the report states, "but there is some reason to be encouraged with respect to additions to capital, for in 1936-'37 the total amount added to both types of institutions was more than double that of 1933-'34.

"However, the indications are that such institutions will have to be financed more largely than heretofore by receipts from other sources, or their scale of expenditures will have to be reduced."

Lawyer Attacks Graduates Of Mixed Schools

Never Saw One Amount To Anything, He Says; Favors Separation

JACKSON, Tenn., Nov. (ANP) — There is at least one Negro in Tennessee who objects to the recent suits filed by colored students for entrance into the state university in accordance with the Gaines decision. That Negro is P. L. Harden, well known local attorney.

Not only is Harden opposed to these suits but also he objects to "mixed" schools and declares he has never seen a graduate of such an institution amount to anything. He is against the NAACP spending funds in the Tennessee fight.

"I think we ought to have educational facilities equal to those of any other citizens, but we must realize we have two separate and distinct races in this country with the Negro a special subject," the barrister told the Associated Negro Press.

The Negro In Education

The never-ending fight for equal educational opportunity by Negroes in Southern States moves forward on two fronts with most encouraging results.

With the great increase in Negro high schools in the south and the thousands of graduates from these schools within the past decade together with the hundreds of graduates from colleges over this area it was inevitable that Negroes everywhere should demand the opportunity for graduate schools in their own states, with excellent universities operated, of course, with public funds.

Even before the successful Supreme Court decision in the Gaines-University of Missouri case, other efforts, notably in Maryland, had been made in this direction. That educational authorities in the South, where so great emphasis is laid upon Christianity, should so woefully neglect and disregard this simple and just demand is, indeed, a very sad reflection on their sense of fair play.

Equally glaring in its utter disregard of the common decencies of democracy has been the practice of paying Negro teachers only 50 to 60 percent of the salaries paid white teachers for the same certified qualifications and work. In a decision by Judge W. Calvin Chestnut of the United States District Court of Maryland the Anne Arundel county board of education has been restrained from paying lower salaries to colored teachers than to whites. Walter Mills, of Camp Parole, who brought the suit, is to be commended for his courageous step in the face of the fact that a Negro teacher who attempted to fight this discriminatory practice in Norfolk, Va., had been dismissed, even thought the case was lost.

This determined fight now aggressively prosecuted on all sides indicates that Negroes are definitely committed to the task of breaking down the barriers to higher education in the state universities of the South and that the discriminations in the matter of pay shall also cease.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is to be highly commended for its championing of these causes and we rejoice in the fuller victories which undoubtedly shall be achieved.

DISCUSSION

Written by P. L. Harden, Tennessee Lawyer, Articl Said, 'No Negro who Finished from Mixed School Amounts to Anything'—Mixed School Graduate Don't Like It.

A storm of controversy has arisen over an article published in The Courier by P. L. Harden, a colored lawyer of Jackson, Tenn., protesting the efforts of the N. A. A. C. P. to get Negroes in mixed schools in southern and borderline states.

Mr. Harden apparently believes that colored people should go to colored schools, but what brought on the thunder clouds was his statement "No Negro who finished from mixed schools amounts to anything."

H. Wendell Winslow, Gary, Ind., member of the International Writer's League and the American Poetry Circle, writes argumentatively. A fellow lawyer, Joseph N. Birch, II, Flint, Michigan, blasts and Eugene Woodson, Springfield Illinois business man, mildly rebukes.

The letters in their entirety follow.

To the Editor:

I am writing in regards to the article in the December 2 issue in which Attorney P. L. Harden so bitterly objects to the recent suits filed by colored students for entrance into the State University.

I agree with Mr. Harden that we should have educational facilities equal to those of any other citizen, but I think Mr. Harden is very inconsiderate in making such an assertion on mixed schools.

Regardless of where or how we receive our education, we only get what we go after in a legitimate way. If Mr. Harden will read some of the many books on the Negro's life during his leisure time. I am sure he can find some worthwhile Negro who received his education in mixed schools.

As a business man and a member of the N. A. A. C. P., I want to see my race get justice in all of its undertakings.

Yours truly,
Eugene Woodson
Springfield, Ill.

To the Editor:

With much disgust, I read the article concerning one Attorney Harden of Tennessee. Being an attorney, it surprised me to know that there is one in our chosen profession who possesses so little knowledge. If Mr. Harden is an example of the average colored lawyer in the South, I can understand why our people fare so badly in the courts in that section.

It is evident that the Tennessee lawyer has chosen the wrong profession and as a graduate of both a white and a colored university, I must take an exception to the statement that Negro products of white colleges are all failures. Should Mr. Harden come to Michigan, I will gladly introduce him to many successful colored graduates of white colleges. In the meantime I would suggest that the Jackson, Tennessee lawyer dispose of his law books and get a banjo as it is evident that he is "the ghost of Uncle Tom."

Very truly yours,
Joseph N. Birch

To the Editor:

An open letter to P. L. Harden of Jackson, Tenn.

Being a graduate from the primary and high schools (white) Logansport, Ind., Barnes college (white), Chicago, Ill., and being a member of the International Writer's League and the American Poetry Circle (white), I modestly resent the morose statement, viz.: "No Negro who finished mixed schools amounts to anything," made by a P. L. Harden, a lawyer of Jackson, Tenn.

Such a statement is unfair, biased and entirely untrue and proves, beyond a doubt, that the lawyer's knowledge and information is sadly limited. Such a person is a detriment to true democracy; a menace to the race and a stumbling block in the pathway of the progress of the N. A. A. C. P. whose efforts, fights and victories are inimitable.

The time has come when black Americans should stop striving to become a distinctive group in America. America is composed of many races, hence all laws which pertain to the general welfare of Americans, includes black Americans. The chief duty of black Americans is to put forth more time and energy to become CONSTRUCTIVE and PRODUCTIVE and to know what they want; be prepared to receive that which they want and be able to hold that which they receive.

Obviously, my distinguished lawyer friend does not know the meaning of democracy. Democracy is a government OF the people, BY the people and FOR the people. The whole is great in proportion to the greatness of ALL of its parts. It is impossible to have a true democracy when a part of the people are denied their DIVINE and CONSTITUTIONAL rights.

Democracy is that government in which are inscribed the PRINCIPLES and RIGHTS which have been divinely bequeathed to ALL mankind and who preserves, in the fullest possible measure, those principles and rights.

Democracy is that government whose goal is UNITY of purpose; UNITY of efforts, UNITY of thought and all efforts are put forth and all advantages are taken to achieve that goal.

Mr. Harden might be five years ahead in law but he is 40 years back in his black American history. Space will not permit my giving names and addresses of black Americans who are graduates of mixed schools and who are known from coast to coast. If it is not too expensive, Mr. Harden might make a trip to Nashville, Tenn., and have the honor of meeting Dr. Garnett, Dean of the Theological Seminary of that city and to prepare you for the shock, I might add, that Dr. Garnet is a graduate of Oberlin colege (white) Oberlin, Ohio.

Sincerely,
H. Wendell Winslow

Minister Says College Graduate Fail In Solving Race Prob

By SADYE BROWN

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 8—Choosing as his subject, "The State, the Church, the University and the Future," Rev. James H. Robinson, pastor of the Church of the Master, where the Federation of Negro College clubs was holding its first annual college clubs' day last Sunday, blasted the Race intelligentsia for its lack of sincerity in helping to solve the many problems facing the masses of our group.

Reverend Robinson, who is president of the local Lincoln university club which is affiliated with the Federation, congratulated the member-clubs on their purpose of mutual betterment and active participation in community affairs.

He said that the Federation would bring about a long felt need of a closer understanding of and larger activity in various problems facing the Race.

Offer Criticism

Representatives of 16 affiliated clubs appeared on the program in various speaking, musical and other numbers. The invocation was given by Rev. S. Joel Loyd, representing Benedict club, followed by opening remarks by Ashton Kitchens New York-Tuskegee club, who served as master of ceremonies Sylvester Yates, New York-Hampton club, gave a brief history of the work done by his club in laying down the ground work of the Federation.

ing WPA jobs and emphasized the

Leslie Furlong, Shaw club, criticized the vicious discrimination of the Race by the local WPA administration, pointed to the necessity of united and concerted efforts on the part of Harlem to preserve remainneed of greater demands for supervisory representation comparable to our population and training.

Dr. A. C. Miler, president of Virginia seminary club, answered the question of "Why A Federation?" by pointing out need of such an organization in helping to solve social, civic, economic, and political problems facing the Negro locally and nationally. He said that while studying in Edinburgh, several years ago, he attended a meeting of the Federation of Scottish Universities graduates. and decided at that time that there ought to be a similar Race organization in the United States, and that knowledge of the recent organization of this Federation answered that need.

Work Summarized

E. L. Dimitry, president of the Federation, summarized the work of the organization in the closing remarks, outlined its six point 1939-40 program, and pointed out that two important scheduled events: the presidents' get-together, and the Negro College Clubs' day, on this occasion, had been carried out.

The remaining calendar include: 1, a cooperative scholarship dance participated in by affiliated clubs; 2, a high school seniors' conference, during May, not only to persuade high school graduates to attend college, but attend Negro colleges; 3, a summer teachers educational conference, open to summer students at local colleges and universities, during July; 4, a Federation day at the New York World's Fair during August, pla[illegible] or which include the appearance of the college presidents of several affiliated clubs; 5, a closer participation in all community activities for racial progress; and 6, a series of joint recitals, concerts, debates and forums, sponsored by the Federation and using talent from member-clubs.

Education, as It Affects Negro, Described in Speech

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — An interesting word-picture of American education as it affects Negroes, North and South, was given recently by Doxey A. Wilkerson the address being part of the American Teachers Association observance of education week.

Wilkerson, well informed on the subject of education is a member of the faculty of Howard university, is now engaged in a study of "The Negro in America" under auspices of the Carnegie Corporation of New York and has recently completed a study for President Roosevelt's advisory committee on education. Excerpts from the Wilkerson radio speech:

Three-Fold Process

"The theme for this week's national observance is "Education for the American Way of Life." What does this theme imply for the Negro in American education? Attention is here called to three important considerations. They relate to the education of Negroes in the South, the education of Negroes in the North, and the education of white Americans, about Negroes throughout the United States.

"First, with regard to the education of the 9 million Negroes who constitute one-fourth of the population of the South. Some 2,500,000 Negro youth are enrolled in schools in the southern states. They are required by law to attend segregated Negro schools. For the most part these schools are ramshackle, outmoded structures which are sorely in need of replacement. Public elementary and secondary schools are kept open for terms that are from one to two months shorter than those for white schools in the same communities. Teachers in these schools are greatly over-loaded.

20,000 Teachers Needed

"Some 20,000 additional Negro teachers would have to be employed to reduce the pupil-teacher loads in Negro schools to the level for white schools in the same communities. The salaries of Negro public school teachers average about $500 per year, just about one-half as much as the average salaries of white teachers. In many communities with sizeable Negro population, there are no public high school facilities for Negro pupils; and there are practically no public facilites for the graduate and professional education of Negroes in the entire South. On the elementary and secondary school level, the Southern states spend approximately $50 per year for white pupils in average daily attendance, as compared with $20 per year for the average Negro pupil.

"Second, regarding the education of Negroes in the North. Approximately 500,000 Negroes go to school in the Northern States. For the most part they attend mixed schools. In some sections, however, —for example, certain communities of Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania and New Jersey,—Negroes in the North are required to attend separate schools. Further, there is a tendency in some sections of the North toward the spread of school segregation. Educational opportunities for Negroes in the Northern states are by far more adequate than in the South. Yet, even here one observes practices which are hardily in accord with what we like to think is "the American way of life."

Northern Problems

"To check the spread of school segregation, with its implications of social-civic "inferiority," and the division between white and black Americans which it tends to perpetuate and extend; to eliminate the subtle and unwholesome distinctions which are commonly made in the curricular programs of white and Negro youth; and to further the integration of Negro children into the full life of the school—these are among the requirements of our democratic ideal for the education of Negroes in the North.

"Finally, for white and black Americans in the schools of our nation at large, there is pressing need for instruction which bears a definite social orientation towards interracial understanding and good-will. Negroes, themselves, learn very little in school about the role of their people in American life. White youths learn even less; and, what is worse, their schools often help them to acquire clearly un-American attitudes of racial intolerance.

"Organized efforts toward interracial understanding and good-will within our schools and without, is a requirement of enlightened self-interest for all Americans, regardless of race. Every success toward this end is an important blow at reaction which, even in America, severely threatens to undermine the civil liberties and the representative political institutons of us all.

"As our Nation observes American Education Week of 1939 let us bear in mind that these considerations, regarding education for and about Negroes, are vital to The American Way of Life."

THE WPA IN EDUCATION.

The policy of the WPA is, and has been, to respect local determinations; to co-operate with, and not to supersede, local self government. The WPA has had money, and has announced from time to time conditions under which the available money would be allotted, but it has not originated projects, and will not.

Local officials, representatives of their communities, decide for what purposes the WPA money will be used, their decisions limited, of course, by the general congressional and WPA definitions of appropriate projects. If the sponsor—a unit of government or a public institution—asks for a leaf raking or weed cutting project, if there is no other work requested, and if WPA is due to hire a number of relief workers in that sponsor's community, a leaf raking or weed cutting project may be carried out. But if the sponsor asks for some kind of work that has enduring value, and if the kind of work desired comes within WPA's specifications, the more useful project will be approved. It is the policy of the WPA to favor the socially useful projects of enduring value.

All of that explanation is a preliminary to a compliment to South Carolina's sponsors of WPA projects. There have been projects of only temporary value in this state. Local sponsors have not always manifested good judgment. But figures for the state as a whole and for the nation as a whole, show that South Carolina's sponsors have requested and received more dollars for educational purposes, in proportion to total WPA grants, than have the sponsors of the nation at large. Over the nation, one dollar in every sixteen expended by the WPA has gone for educational aims; but in South Carolina one dollar in every six has been used for educational aims.

In South Carolina the WPA has participated in the erection of 409 new school buildings, in making additions to 71 school buildings, and in repairing 947—a total of 1,427. At the moment, with WPA assistance, 205 new school buildings are being erected, additions are being made to 34, and repairs to 402—a total of 641 current educational building projects. The WPA contribution to all these projects has cared for and is caring for the major part of the cost.

The WPA also has been busy in phases of educational work not directly associated with construction. For example, teachers employed by the WPA have taught 23,423 white persons and 29,331 Negroes to read and write. That is a total of 52,754. The number of white persons taught to read and write is equal to about three-fifths of the white illiterates of 1930; and the number of Negroes is approximately one-fifth the Negro illiterates in 1930, when the latest census was taken.

Other phases of the WPA's activities in the field of education include the serving of hot lunches to undernourished school children, traveling libraries, vocational education, agricultural education, general adult education, homemaking and parent education, workers' education and first aid education.

All this work has taken one dollar in every six, or approximately $9,500,000 of the more than $53,500,000 spent by the WPA in South Carolina since the inception of its program in August, 1935, and through September, 1939. Approximately half of the money spent for educational purposes has gone for new buildings or for improvements to existing buildings.

The State presents these comments and facts for the information of the general public, and for special consideration of those who claim that WPA has been only a money scatterer without regard for values. It is clear to The State that blame for "fool projects" must be accepted, or at the least shared by local sponsors.

P. S. The WPA is likely to continue its work for years to come. There will be hundreds and thousands of new projects. What will your community get out of this program? The answer, with some qualifications, is this: It will get what it asks for.

DISCUSSION

Problem Takes Cool Head To Handle

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—The recent flare-up on Howard university campus, during which co-eds charged that Mrs. Alida P. Banks, acting dean of women, demanded that they stay out of two popular eating shops—the University and Hollywood Grills—has served to focus nationwide attention on the trials and tribulations that beset college deans both men and women.

It is generally accepted that the problem faced by administrative officials of colleges and universities in the matter of disciplining students is growing daily in significance and is a matter that should claim the thoughtful attention of parents interested in the welfare of their children while away from home.

Crux of the situation at Howard stems in the fact that of the women's student enrollment of 932, only 258 reside in dormitories. This, according to Dean of Women Banks, means that the other 674 women are primarily not subject to the rigid rules of the dormitory girls, because they are living with parents or close relatives who are responsible for their conduct outside classrooms.

Dean Banks said that the welfare of the young women under her supervision was her prime consideration, that she felt it her duty to "guide them right, that they might live right."

She was attempting, she said, to set up a worthwhile social and educational program in the university dormitories, but that a few, who had no knowledge of dormitory life, were inciting others against her regulations. Referring to the eating places mentioned, she said she had not banned them, had merely suggested to the students to be more careful of the eating places they patronize.

Negro Youth Group Will Hold Meeting

The negro youth council will hold its regular meeting tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Phillis Wheatley library. The subject for discussion will be "Vocational Opportunities of Negro Youth."

Local persons representing various professions will be present to discuss requirements in their fields. Attention will be called to the books on vocations which have been placed on special display at the library.

Games will be played during the meeting and refreshments will be served.

Social and Economic Status of 28,000 Pupils Cited In Survey

Points Out Need of Vocations In Upper Class Rooms

THE Office of Education, United States Department of the Interior, has just reported to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes on the first national survey ever made of vocational education and guidance opportunities for Negroes in the United States. Five hundred "white collar" workers on the relief rolls participated in the survey in addition to approximately 40 professional workers.

John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, reports some of the significant facts revealed by this survey, which was conducted in 200 communities of 33 States and the District of Columbia.

In an endeavor to learn the occupational interests of Negro high-school pupils and factors which influenced their occupational choices, the social and economic backgrounds of 28,000 pupils were studied. Specific investigations were made to discover how many Negroes are participating in Federally aided vocational education programs, what they want to study, and what they are studying to prepare themselves for employment.

The survey report indicates that "approximately 55 per cent of the total number of Negroes, ten years old and over gainfully employed are engaged in occupations requiring little or no skill." It points out, however, that "it is well for Negro students, teachers, and counselors to know that Negroes are engaged in many highly skilled occupations, generally with success."

VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE

More than half of the Negroes in the United States live in rural areas. The study of vocational education in agriculture for Negroes shows decided enrollment increases. In evening classes in agriculture, there was an increase in the number of men enrolled of from 5,200 to 15,000 over a six year period. The enrollment of women in these classes increased from 500 to 3,100.

The study indicates that vocational agriculture is offered in a limited number of Negro schools. This is due to a lack of funds and in some instances a lack of adequate demand for classes. It is reported that in one State 80,000 Negro youth settled on farms after completing the sixth grade without any formal training in agriculture. The study reveals also that the majority of Negro children do not have access to vocational education opportunities in high school.

It is recommended, as a temporary measure, that vocational guidance and preparation be introduced in the upper grades of elementary schools for Negroes in order to benefit over-age pupils who drop out of school early, and in order to provide vocational preparation for pupils who otherwise would not receive it.

HOME ECONOMICS

There was an increase over a six-year period of more than 300 per cent in the number of vocational education classes in home economics for Negroes. This is significant, the Office of Education study concludes, "because the training that Negroes received in these classes can be put to immediate use in their homes." "Home making education for Negroes is of special importance. Its need is shown by the prevalence of poor health, inadequate housing, early marriage, gainfully employed mothers and infant mortality among Negroes."

Comparatively few Negroes however, study child care, nursing, hygiene and parent education. Few boys are enrolled in home economics courses, although large numbers of Negro men are engaged in occupations related to home making. More than 62 per cent of all gainfully employed Negro women are in domestic and personal service, as are 12 per cent of the gainfully employed Negro men.

The number of Federally aided courses in trades and industries offered in high schools for Negroes is limited in comparison with the total number of courses offered, and many of these offered relatively few Negroes are enrolled.

Among the courses attracting the largest number of Negro students in trade and industrial pursuits are auto mechanics, carpentry and wood work masonry, mining, shoe making and repairing, tailoring, industrial arts and mechanical drawing.

Relatively few students are registered in trade and industrial education classes in colleges. The possibility of increasing the opportunities for Negroes to receive vocational education in trades and industries should be explored.

TEACHERS

The Negro survey disclosed that many of the Negro teachers of vocational education are inadequately prepared and that the handicaps which their inadequate preparation places upon pupils may result in serious consequences for the individuals concerned.

Approximately one-fourth of the Negro teachers in public high schools had two years or less of college education. Salaries of Negro teachers of vocational education range from $1,060 to $1,871 per year, the lowest salaries being received by teachers of agriculture in rural areas.

GUIDANCE

The survey points out that the kind of home and its upkeep, the opportunities for study and healthful sleep and recreation, quality and number of books, magazines and newspapers available have a bearing on the pupil's ability to profit by the educational program provided.

This is shown by the fact that principals of high schools and university specialists in high school education ranked home conditions second in importance for guidance purposes in a list of eighteen items concerned with pupils' background.

In this connection, the survey indicates that slightly more than one third of the parents of Negro pupils included in this study owned or were buying their homes. Twenty-two per cent of the homes of pupils did not have electricity, 38 per cent had no bathtub, 26 per cent had no toilet, 53 per cent were without a piano and 32 per cent did not have a radio. Seven per cent of the homes did not subscribe to a newspaper.

Of the 28,000 pupils included in the social and economic background phase of the survey, approximately two-thirds supported themselves in part or entirely.

The survey report, prepared by Ambrose Caliver, Office of Education Specialist in the Education of Negroes, who directed the survey with the assistance of Harold L. Trigg, state supervisor of Negro high schools for North Carolina answers many other questions such as the following:

What happens to Negroes who graduate from high school and those who drop out before graduation? What occupational adjustments do they make? What relation is there between school and occupational adjustment? What are pupils' interests and in what activities do they engage?

RECOMMENDATIONS

Some significant recommendations made as the result of survey findings are as follows:

1. That Negro land-grant colleges take a more active leadership in promoting the occupational adjustment of Negroes;

2. That citizens in each community inform themselves concerning the vocational education needs of Negroes, acquaint themselves with the provisions of all Federal aid programs for education, and take the necessary steps to insure that Negroes receive equitable benefits from such programs;

3. That schools for Negroes institute programs of guidance for youth, and extension programs for the re-education of adults;

4. "That individuals and groups interested in the improvement of educational facilities for Negroes continue and increase their efforts to promote equality of educational opportunity and equitable distribution of funds without regard to race or color, especially with respect to Federal and State funds alloted to education."

The report gives detailed facts and statistics concerning vocational education and guidance of Negroes in high schools throughout the United States and in the following institutions of higher education and States:

NEGRO STUDENTS HEAR EDUCATOR

National Training School Head Urges Negroes To Go Forward With Ideas

"Do something, be somebody, and go somewhere," was the novel interpretation of the philosophy of Jesus made yesterday at Shaw University by President Nannie H. Burroughs of the National Training School for Women and Girls of Washington, D. C., as she addressed 500 student representatives and friends at the vesper session of the College Students Christian Conference, which convened at the local school yesterday.

The school head's address was the concluding event of the conference, which began yesterday morning with addresses by Dr. Sherwood Eddy and Assistant Chaplain J. Oscar Lee of Hampton Institute and continued in the afternoon with four group sessions, led by President J. W. Seabrook of Fayetteville State Teachers College, Dr. O. S. Bullock of Raleigh and W. J. Kennedy of Durham.

The vespers speaker informed the audience in the outset that she would make no apology for the Negro on the basis of the fact that he was a minority group, for "minorities rule the world and have continued to do so since civilization began."

Urging the students to have faith in their ability to provide new ideas and new ideals, the speaker declared that, "only after you have become imbued with the faith of the religion of Jesus Christ shall you have a humanity glorified, and a social justice in a world now beset by prejudices, bickerings, and economic and political hazards, caused by people who lack faith."

Using Mahatma Gandhi and Jesus Christ as examples, the educator insisted that "the men who are prepared through their religion to face the hardships and tragedies of life are the men whose philosophies change the ways of civilization."

Vincent Tibbs, a senior at Shaw, presided over the conference. Prayers were offered by Dean John L. Tilley and the Rev. John H. Clanton. Music was furnished by the Shaw University Choral Society, under Director Dorcas Boddie.

Institutions represented included: Palmer Memorial Institute, Sedalia; Fayetteville State Teachers College; Bennett College, Greensboro; North Carolina College for Negroes, Durham; Shaw University; St. Augustine College; Winston-Salem State Teachers College; Johnson Smith University, Charlotte, and Livingstone College, Salisbury.

National Training School Head Urges Negroes To Go Forward With Ideas

4-3-39

"Do something, be somebody, and go somewhere," was the novel interpretation of the philosophy of Jesus made yesterday at Shaw University by President Nannie H. Burroughs of the National Training School for Women and Girls of Washington, D. C., as she addressed 500 student representatives and friends at the vesper session of the College Students Christian Conference, which convened at the local school yesterday.

The school head's address was the concluding event of the conference, which began yesterday morning with addresses by Dr. Sherwood Eddy and Assistant Chaplain J. Oscar Lee of Hampton Institute and continued in the afternoon with four group sessions, led by President J. W. Seabrook of Fayetteville State Teachers College, Dr. O. S. Bullock of Raleigh and W. J. Kennedy of Durham.

The vespers speaker informed the audience in the outset that she would make no apology for the Negro on the basis of the fact that he was a minority group, for "minorities rule the world and have continued to do so since civilization began."

Urging the students to have faith in their ability to provide new ideas and new ideals, the speaker declared that, "only after you have become imbued with the faith of the religion of Jesus Christ shall you have a humanity glorified, and a social justice in a world now beset by prejudices, bickerings, and economic and political hazards, caused by people who lack faith."

Negroes In Need Of Help To Gain Education, Plea

A plea for the people of the Tri-Cities and Muscle Shoals area to do whatever they can toward helping negro children attend school, either by providing aid for the children or employment for their parents, was sounded today by Rev. J. S. Benn, pastor of the negro Bethel A. M. E. church, Sheffield, speaking for the negro ministers of the district.

Rev. Benn called attention to the "Domestic Servants Training Agency" being sponsored by the negro churches of the district, phone 446, Sheffield, where persons having help in the form of employment or otherwise are requested to call.

"From my personal observation the white people in the Tri-Cities and the Tennessee Valley have a deeper sympathy and a more brotherly fellowship toward their colored brother than is to be found in many sections of our state," he said.

"The historic eugenics of the difference in spirits in the several sections of the same state should be interesting for one to read.

"The impression from my observation has provoked an interest and an untiring effort on my part, to seek the historic background of the people of the Tri-Cities and the Tennessee Valley that more of my group might make their contribution in furthering that fine spirit of fellowship which permeates the white people in the Northern section of the state of Alabama.

"So, often, a state stagmi misrepresents many sections of that state; it is also true with races and nations. What may be true of the part may not be true of the whole.

"Less than two weeks ago, an evangelist whose home is in the state of New York, came to Florence to conduct a revival meeting; arriving in Sheffield in the early morning by train, she took the bus for Florence and told the driver the address she wanted to locate. This driver was kind enough to go out of his way to locate the address for this stranger. When I saw her, she told the story of her recent experience and said, 'I didn't know we had such nice white people in Alabama.' A few days later she had reason to visit the business section of Florence and said that the business courtesy was unbelievable. This person has not ceased to praise the good people of the valley while here.

"Now the above named incident and hundreds of similar acts se to be the natural characteristic of many of our white people of the valley.

"In many sections of this state, as well as in many southern states, we read of race differences, misunderstandings and the like; but, seldom do I hear or read of such troubles affecting the races in the Tri-Cities or this section of the state. I believe that this condition can be attributed, for the most part, to that deeper sympathetic spirit, interest and fellowship on the part of many of the white people for their colored brethren.

"School bells all over the nation will soon peel out for students of all grades to return to their class rooms and resume their work in preparing themselves for citizenship in this great commonwealth. Some of these students have no earthly means of entering school this winter except through the white people making jobs for them. Some of these boys and girls are willing to work to help themselves through school if they can get something to do. The negro new thought movement is appealing to the many 'big-hearted' white friends in the Tri-Cities and the Tennessee Valley for jobs for these student negroes and their parents that they might at least have a chance to become good citizens. Every day they are asking the Domestic Servant Training Agency to find jobs for them that they might pursue their education. Call 446 Sheffield and help them," he concluded.

B. T. Washington, W. E. B. Du Bois Educational Philosophies Rapped

Morris Brown Theological Dean Says Ideal Doctrine Would Be Happy Medium between Other Two

By LUCIUS JONES

Unveiling futile aspects of the respective educationa philosophies of the late Booker T. Washington, historic founder of Tuskegee Institute, and of Dr. William E. Burghardt DuBois, erstwhile militant editor of the CRISIS magazine, advocates of the outstanding schools of Negro thought, which he declared as diametrically opposite views, Dr. Charles Leander Hill, deep-browed, erudite, and eloquent dean of Turner Theological Seminary at Morris Brown College, held a capacity throng at the First Congregational church spellbound Sunday afternoon, January 1, as he delivered the annual Emancipation Day address for the Atlanta Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

MAGNIFICENT SPEAKER

The scholarly gentleman, following in the wake of such illustrious public speakers as Howard W Thurman, [illegible] Henderson, Marshall L. Sheppard, and William Holmes Borders, predecessors who likewise scaled oratorical heights in heaping grandeur upon an august occasion, rightfully assumes his place among the foremost orators of Atlanta history. His Emancipation Day message was strictly a masterpiece.

If anything, Dr. Hill, Sunday was a component of the chief speaking virtues of all his predecessors. He plumbed the philosophical depths of Thurman, courted with the proverbial outspokenism which was Henderson, tempered his philosophy with the practical approach of Sheppard, and dovetailed with Borders in the view that all of us have a relative part in the "flying of the kite".

RINGING OVATION

Following the masterful address he brought after a fitting introduction by Prof. E. Luther Brookes, president of the Atlanta NAACP Branch and presiding officer of the occasion, rightfully assumes his sustained ovation of fully 20 seconds, another almost as long and equally as genuine as the first — a response matching Thurman at his best.

It is significant that it was in Atlanta that both Washington and Du Bois sounded the educational philosophies which, in years to come, were to place them at the helm of the race as founders of its two outstanding schools of thought. Washington's great 1895 speech, which has come to be known as the "Atlanta Compromise", and Du Bois' famous address of 1912 here were the bases by which their respective educational views later received international attention.

WASHINGTON'S PHILOSOPHY

"The philosophy of Mr. Washington", said Dean Hill, "may be described as advocating three things: 1, industrial education; 2, conciliatory measures to court the favor of the southern white man; and, finally, submission and silence and soft-pedalling as to civil and political rights".

"It was a common sense philosophy", the speaker went on. "The Negro, he said, must concentrate with his hands upon the cultivation of the useful arts; for what advantage is there in knowing the glowing hexameters of Homer or Vergil the Antigone of Sophocles, the philosophy of Plato and Parmenides, if one is confronted with the problem of biological survival? . . . Thus Mr Washington reasoned: let us advocate industrial education; let us make friends with the Southern Whites and court the favors of the north, even though such action may be interpreted as submission and silence".

MUST NOT BE PERPETUATED

Washington's philosophy was sound for the time in which he lived, opined the modern scholar, but "it cannot and must not be made a philosophy which is to be perpetuated by us, nor one which is to be regarded as the way out of the blind alley and cul de sac of our present Twentieth Century dilemma in America. The Negro must do more than work, eat, and save money. In this respect, Mr. Washington's philosophy is too narrow For I may have a job, eat regularly, and have money in the bank and still be a slave". (The statement received a heavy applause).

DU BOIS' CHALLENGE

Approaching his treatise on Du Bois' views, Dean Hill said, "If Mr Washington's philosophy was one of compromise and submission, then Mr. Du Bois' philosophy is one of challenge".

"The new philosophy of challenge", Dr. Hill expounded, "was dynamic and provocative. In it Mr. Du Bois criticized and condemned the philosophy of Mr Washington. Instead of submission, Du Bois advocates challenge in place of gentle acquiescence, he advocates resistance. Instead of seeing our salvation in industrial education, Du Bois advocates cultural education. Instead of begging and overworking philanthropy, Du Bois favors fighting for our rights, but fighting within the framework of our present economic system". Continuing, the speaker said, "The type of education advocated by him is that education which will enable the Negro 'to rise above the smoke and dim blue air'. It is not enough to foster industrial education alone, as Mr. Washington has done, for that, Mr. Du Bois thinks, banishes the Negro to a servile realm. He recognizes the value of industrial education as a method for a close knitting of the Negro to the great industrial possibilities of the south" but reasons that "it is unsound to induce Negroes to believe that if their stomachs are full, it does not matter about their brains."

PEACEFUL FIGHT

"Moreover", reasons by Mr. Du Bois as quoted by Dean Hill, "as the Negro relates to the economic order, he is to fight for his full rights, but must be careful to see that his methods are peaceful and within the framework of our present economic system".

CONDITIONED PHILOSOPHY

"But," criticized the scholarly NAACP guest speaker, "as was the case with Mr. Washington, so with Mr. Du Bois: his philosophy is largely conditioned by his New England culture and background. If his is so, the approach which these two men have made to the problem has been largely sectional and subjectivistic".

Dean Hill considered it out of the question to submit with Washington and not enough to fight within the framework of our present economic system with Du Bois. He suggests that America must transvaluate its values and that if the economic system is wrong, it is up to us to right it. "We must", in the quest for a correct and just economic system where men, regardless of race, creed, or color get for their work what they are entitled to, "be mindful of the fact that we must continue to hammer against the present system until it crumbles", asserted the speaker.

CONCEPT OR PROGRESS

In constructing the fabric for his masterful address on "The Idea of Progress and the Negro in America", Dean Hill shelved rhetoric and empty oratory to draw a vivid concept of progress according to the social philosopher. He paraded the viewpoints of St. Simon, Fourier, Godwin, Lacombe, Condorcet, Lessing, Hegel, and the more familiar Herbert Spencer—chief among the social philosophers—and such psychological sociologists as Dilthey, Windelband, Rickert, Simmel, Troeltsch, and Croce.

It was pointed out that to properly conceive progress, it would be necessary to adequately define civilization. He defined it and cited an array of figures showing the Negro's material worth in 1866 over against his material worth in 1936 to weigh what progress had been made. He admitted that, in the light of the imposing statistics, the Negro had come a long way, but warned that there is much yet to be done.

PRESENT SYSTEM DEHUMANIZES

"True progress", he asserted "even in the material sense, cannot be achieved as long as any industrial system exists which dehumanizes man for the sake of turning out material possessions".

"27" CLUB AWARD

The occasion was amplified by fine music by the Liberty Baptist Church Choir No. 2, the presentation of the "27" Club award to Henry David Dodson by Atty. T W. Holmes, a glowing summary of the work which the NAACP has done and praise for those nationally and locally who made it possible by President Brookes, a successful financial appeal by Atty. A. T. Walden in which the record-breaking sum of $203.73 was raised, a reading of the Emancipation Proclamation by Raphael McIver, and organ offertories by Lawrence C. Mann, director of the Liberty Singers.

Invocation was raised by the Rev. D. T. Babcock, while benediction was made by the Rev. W. W. Stephens. At intervals, the audience sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and the National Negro Anthem.

GAVE GOD THE CREDIT

Mr. Dodson received a great hand for his response to the honorary plaque presentation. He attributed his success to "God's guidance".

Forrester B. Washington, retired president of the Atlanta NAACP Branch, among others, was lauded by Mr. Brookes in his remarks of appreciation to the audience for its strong physical response to the program. From the assembly, Mr Washington received a big hand.

In Rural Alabama

By THOMAS JEFFERSON FLANAGAN

CHRISTMAS DAY dawned beautifully upon this writer in the black hills of rural Alabama. Here is the wreckage of a poor school system, in many instances poorly taught and lasting only a few months in the year. We find here the remnants of that old time religion, the happy-go-lucky banjo pickers around the country stores where the people come into buy the necessities of life with their hard money accompanied by little "tokens" that represent so many mills of taxes on each sale.

We find here as in our native Georgia, wide spaces of depopulated areas, once the scenes of good farms and peaceful homes. There are on every hand those uninviting features which saw service in depopulating our farms. The resettlement and homestead plan might work well here.

These people have not had as good school facilities as we have enjoyed in the State of Georgia. The community leaders in many sections we have visited have passed, leaving behind them no young men to take their places.

The impression is left that something must be done for the whole of our rural South. While in the biting cold we do not find Miss Perkins problem of inducing the people to wear shoes, there is on every hand a task for our leaders.

The people still hover around the depression complex. It will be some time before thy can be induced to leave the old flesh pots of panic that wilted their souls and humbled their pride.

The people in our rural areas must be reclaimed. We cannot fool ourselves into realizing a strong comeback with our rural people forgotten.

The next generation will take for a special study the salvation of our rural areas. Our rural people have furnished the foundation of the republic, the sinews of our commerce—they are the salt of the earth.

The best teachers and preachers obtainable should be sent to such sections as this to reclaim our people, who on the majority are slowly plodding along in the old horse and buggy ruts.

School Board To Consider Equality Issue

By James Free

The delicate question of what is to be done with Negro students who, encouraged by the United States Supreme Court's recent decision that a State must provide "equality" in educational privileges to white and Negro law students, might seek to enter Virginia State colleges, will come before the State Board of Education when it meets here January 26, it was learned yesterday.

While no action may be taken, it is possible that some form of general policy for State institutions to follow will be adopted, reliable authorities said.

Most educational authorities here believe that the simplest solution to the problem lies in establishment of the required graduate and professional instruction at the State College for Negroes in Petersburg.

Whether such a school exclusively for Negroes would offer "equality" in educational advantages, as compared with State colleges and universities for whites, is problematical, officials admit.

Seen As Compromise

As complicated as the problem of Negro college applicants might become, Southern educators consider it simple in comparison with the confusion that would arise should Negroes, following the "equality in education" principles to other fields, take to the courts the matter of unequal per capita costs for Negro and white children and unequal salaries for Negro and white teachers.

This would pinch virtually all States having more than a smattering of Negro population. Few, if any, States pay Negro teachers as much as white teachers performing similar tasks.

Virginia's position in this respect is better than most Southern States. Negro teachers averaged $537 as against $847 paid to the average white teacher in Virginia public schools in the 1936-37 school year, according to the annual report of the State Board of Education. Per capita educational costs, on the same comparative basis, were $14.12 for Negro students and $28.58 for white pupils.

Norfolk Teacher Sues

A Negro teacher in a Norfolk elementary school has filed a suit in Circuit Court there, seeking to force local educational authorities to pay her as much as white elementary school teachers receive. The case is still pending, thus indicating that a general legal battle over unequal teacher salaries and per capita educational expenditures is not beyond the realm of possibility.

Until the recent Supreme Court decision, Virginia educators thought that the matter of Negro applicants for State colleges had been settled by the Alice Jackson case in 1935. She applied to the University of Virginia for the right to take its post-graduate modern language course. Her application was refused, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced that it would fight the issue in court. When the State authorized financial aid for Negroes to go North to school, the case was dropped.

Dr. J M. Tinsley, president of the N. A. A. C. P., announced recently that the organization plans to fight further for equal opportunities for Negro students at some future time, but is occupied at present with other business.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court in Washington yesterday refused to reconsider its decision that a State must give equal educational advantages to white and Negro students.

Reconsideration was sought by the University of Missouri, which, under the decision, must admit Lloyd L. Gaines, St. Louis Negro, to the University of Missouri Law School or provide equal advantages at a Negro school.

Southern Educators Gather For Meeting

Government officials and foremost educators from all over the south will attend the sessions of the Council on Rural Education to be held at the Administration Building of the University of Atlanta, Atlanta, Ga., today and tomorrow. The Council is sponsored by the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

The morning of the first day will be devoted to reports on the state of education in the South by Drs. Charles S. Johnson, director of the department of social science at Fisk University; J. E Brewton of George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn and Horace Mann Bond, Fisk University.

A discussion of teachers colleges is expected to occupy the afternoon of the first day. All of Saturday will be devoted to a discussion of ways and means of improving the teachers college and the rural school, and through them the quality of life in the rural South.

During the past four years the Julius Rosenwald Fund has appropriated $450,000 for rural education, chiefly for building up a few centers for the preparation of rural teachers, two state colleges for white teachers at Statesboro and Carrollton, Ga.; a state college for Negro teachers at Grambling, La.; Tuskegee Institute for Negro teachers in Alabama; and two institutions of Southwide influence, Peabody College for teachers (white) and Fisk University (negro) at Nashville, Tenn.

The biennial report of the Fund recently published, criticized at length the methods and facilities in the United States for educating teachers.

"The preparation of the rural teacher," said the report, "should take into account the peculiar problems he is to face. His education should include studies in rural life and intensive experience with country children under —rural conditions, and some acquaintance with agriculture, handicrafts, and health.

Office of Education Reports on National Survey of Vocational Education and Guidance of Negroes

Washington, D. C., Feb. 14 (Special) The Office of Education, United States Department of the Interior, has just reported to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes on the first national survey ever made of vocational education and guidance opportunities for Negroes in the United States. Five hundred "white collar" workers on the relief roll participated in the survey in addition to approximately 100 professional workers.

John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, today reported some of the significant facts revealed by this survey, which was conducted in 261 communities of 33 states and the District of Columbia.

In an endeavor to learn the occupational interests of Negro high school pupils and factors which influenced their occupational choices, the aptitudes and economic backgrounds of 28,000 pupils were studied. Specific investigations were made to discover how many Negroes are participating in Federally aided vocational education programs, what they want to study, and what they are studying to prepare themselves for employment. The survey reports indicates that "approximately 55 per cent of the total number of Negroes, ten years old and over gainfully employed are engaged in occupations requiring little or no skill." It points out however, that it is well for Negro students, teachers, and counselors to know that Negroes are engaged in many highly skilled occupations, generally with success."

Vocational Agriculture

More than half of the Negroes in the United States live in rural areas. The study of vocational education in agriculture for Negroes shows decided enrollment increases in evening classes in agriculture there was an increase in the number of men enrolled of from 5,200 to 15,030 over a six year period. The enrollment of women in these classes increased from 500 to 3,400. The study indicates that vocational agriculture is offered in a limited number of Negro schools. This is due to a lack of funds and in some instances a lack of adequate demand for classes. It is reported that in one state 80,000 Negro youth settled on farms after completing the sixth grade without any formal training in agriculture. The study reveals also that the majority of Negro children do not have access to vocational opportunities in high school. It is recommended, as a temporary measure that vocational guidance and preparation be introduced in the upper grades of elementary schools for Negroes in order to benefit over-age pupils who drop out of school early, and in order to provide vocational preparation for pupils who otherwise would not receive it.

Home Economics

There was an increase over a six year period of more than 300 per cent in the number of vocational education classes in home economics for Negroes. This is significant. The Office of Education study concludes, "because the training that Negroes received in these classes can be put to immediate use in their homes." "Home making education for Negroes is of special importance. Its need is shown by the prevalence of poor health, inadequate housing, early marriage, gainfully employed mothers and infant mortality among Negroes." Comparatively few Negroes, however, study child care, nursing, hygiene and parent education. Few boys are enrolled in home economics courses although large numbers of Negro men are engaged in occupations related to home making. More than 72 per cent of all gainfully employed Negro women are in domestic and personal service, as are 12 per cent of the gainfully employed Negro men. "Since so large a percentage of Negro workers are employed in these occupations, and since the demands in personal service occupations are increasing in number and complexity, the school, through some egonomics instruction or some other ageney, should definitely address itself to the task of preparing persons for effective adjustments in these occupations," it is suggested.

Trades and Industries

The number of Federally aided nurses in trades and industries of ged in high schools for Negroes i mited in comparison with the tota number of courses offered, in many of those offered relatively few Negroes are enrolled. Among the courses attracting the largest number of Negro students in trade and industrial pursuits are auto mechanics, carpentry and woodwork, shoemaking and repairing, tailoring, industrial arts and mechanical drawing. Relatively few students are registered in trade and industrial education classes in colleges. The possibility of increasing the opportunities for Negroes to receive vocational education in trades and industries should be explored.

Teachers

The Negro survey disclosed that many of the Negro teachers of vocational education are inadquately prepared and that the handicaps which their inadequate preparation places upon pupils may result in serious consequences for the individuals concerned. Approximately one-fourth of the Negro teachers in public high schools had two years or less of college education. Salaries of Negro teachers of vocational education range from $1,067 to $1,871 per year, the lowest salaries being received by teachers of agriculture in rural areas.

Guidance

The survey points out that the kind of home and its upkeep, the opportunity for study and healthin sleep and recreation, quality an number of books, magazines an newspapers available have a bearing on the pupils' ability to profi by the educational program provided. This is shown by the fact that principals of high schools and university specialists in high school education ranked home conditions second in importance for guidance purposes in a list of eighteen items concerned with pupils' background. In this connection, the survey indicates that slightly more than one-third of the parents of Negro pupils included in this study owned or were buying their homes. Twenty-two per cent of the homes of pupils did not have electricity, 38 per cent had no bathtub, 20 per cent had no toilet, 53 per cent were without a piano and 32 per cent did not have a radio. Seven per cent of the homes did not subscribe to a newspaper.

Of the 28,000 pupils included in the social and economic background phase of the survey, approximately two-thirds supported themselves in part or entirely. The survey report, prepared by Ambrose Caliver, Office of Education Specialist in the Education of Negroes, who directed the survey with assistance of Harold L. Trigg, State Supervisor of Negro High Schools for North Carolina, answers many other questions such as the following: What happens to Negroes who graduate from high school and those who drop out before graduation? What occupational adjustments do they make? hWat relation is there between school and occupational adjustment? What are pupil's interests and in what activities do they engage?

Some significant recommendations made as the result of survey findings are as follows: 1. That Negro land-grant colleges take a more active leadership in promoting the occupational adjustment of Negroes; 2. That citizens in each community inform themselves concerning the vocational education needs of Negroes, acquaint themselves with the provisions of all Federal aid programs for education, and takes the necessary steps to insure that Negroes receive equitable benefits from such programs; 3. That schools for Negroes institute programs of guidance for youth, and extension programs for the re-education of adults; 4. "That individual and groups interested in the improvement of educational facilities for Negroes continue and increase their efforts to promote equality of educational opportunity and equitable distribution of funds without regard to race or color, especially with respect to Federal and State funds allotted to education."

The report gives detailed facts and statistics concerning vocaitonal education and guidance of Negroes in high schools throughout the United States and in the following institutions of higher education and States:

Benedict College, Columbia, South Carolina; Bennett College, Greensboro, Nrth Caolina; Claflin College, Orangeburg, South Carolina; Virginia Union University, Richmond, Virginia; Howard University, Washington, District of Columbia; Morgan College, Baltimore, Maryland; Shaw University, Raleigh, North Carolina; St. Paul Normal and Industrial School, Lawrenceville, Virginia; Morris Brown College, Atlanta, Georgia; Selma University, Selma, Alabama; Simmons Universitq, Louisville, Kentucky; Howe-Roger-Williams Institute, Memphis, Tennessee; Oakwood College, Huntsville, Alabama; Le-Moyne College, Memphis, Tennessee; Clark University, Atlanta, Georgia; Lane College, Jackson, Tennesee; Miles Memorial College, Birmingham, Alabama; Bishop Tuttle Training School, Raleigh, North Carolina; Atlanta School for Social Work, Atlanta, Georgia; Prairi View State College, Prairie View, Texas.

Should Public Schools Seek To Provide Vocational Training Or Broad Culture?

BY M. P. GRAY
Executive Secretary, Department of English Teachers, Alabama Education Association

WHAT would you have your boy or girl know after leaving school?

Is it better for him to have sufficient vocational training to step right into a job, or to have a broad, general knowledge and culture that will make him pretty much at home wherever he lands?

While this question is raging among the pedagogs, it is necessary that parents take sides, too. In a democracy they have the final say-so.

On a recent program of the Town Meeting of the Air, Dr. Mortimer J. Adler, champion of the cultural viewpoint from the University of Chicago, came to grips with Dr. L. H. Gulick, advocate of the vocational side from Columbia University. At least some members of the audience of school administrators meeting in Cleveland swung in behind Dr. Gulick to bombard Dr. Adler with questions designed to show that the chief aim of education should be to prepare for a vocation.

It is quite natural and customary, after some rapid advance in any field, for the leaders to reconnoiter and see just what they have gained. And many times the different wings of thought will accuse each other, if there be any deficiencies.

This reconnoitering and accusing are going on in the field of education. There is no need for alarm, but there is strong need for careful measuring and orienting.

Those who are seeking to attach purposes and aims to education are pretty well divided into two camps: (1) those who want education to have a utility value; and (2) those who want it to have a cultural value. The first group would have the student step out of school and be ready to grab a job (if the job is there), to be thoroughly acclimated socially, and be politically grounded in the democratic form of government. The second group would have the stuent at graduation be well informed on the chief literature, philosophies and history of the world, and have a broad knowledge of the natural sciences.

The utility group believes that a graduate of our schools should be trained for the present, since he has to live in the present. The cultural group maintains that a student who is acquainted with the trials and aspirations of the past will be a better citizen of the present; that, since no education can train specifically for the unpredictable future—economically or socially—it is therefore best for the student to have an all-round training.

Recently the New York State Board of Regents, headed by Owen D. Young, conducted a sweeping inquiry into the status of their school system. Their report, just off the press, is causing widespread comment. Dr. Gulick was director of the inquiry. It is pretty generally recognized that New York schools are among the best in the nation; yet the committee found much to criticize. While the committee seems to be imbued with the utility idea—that the school should prepare for making a living, rather than living fully—the report declares that training for a particular job does not assure the job. On Page 17 of the summary of the report, the committee says:

"This gap (between graduation and employment) is often two or three years long. During this period most of the special skill, learned with such effort in school, disappears. Even the best stenographer gets rusty in six or eight months, and in other trades the loss of skill is often more noticeable. Under these conditions, would it not be better to spend less school time on the skills and dexterities and more on the general scientific, elementary technical, and economic knowledge and understanding which would be of value in the vocation, and then to concentrate on the skills by doing special work just before taking a job, or just after finding a job?"

Pursuing the same idea, the report says on Page 22:

"Under such a plan, no time will be wasted on elaborate skills to be forgotten before a job is available, and much faster learning will result, since the boy will know better what he wants and for what purpose he wants it.

When viewed in all of its aspects, the problem becomes serious. An ambitious pupil prepares himself in the modern high school to step into a certain job. He is told this is an age of specialization; so he specializes. But, after graduation, he finds there is no opening in his trade. He shops around and finds an opening in some other trade, but he is not trained for it. He is pretty short on general knowledge and culture and, as a result, he finds it difficult to adjust himself to new conditions. If anyone doubts this being the usual experience of the high school graduate, let him investigate a little.

Is the graduate with the cultural training any better off? It would seem so. He has a broader base of knowledge and, therefore, is better prepared to "pick up" where he finds an opening.

But has it been established that the chief aim of life is making a living? All philosophy and all religion claim the contrary. Getting food and shelter, while plenty necessary, cannot be as important as the richness of the living. Consequently, the student of the cultural training will be better able to enjoy and judge literature, governments, philosophies of life, the arts, the social trends and all that make for the rich life of leadership.

Vocational education lends itself to good publicity for the school system. It is physical; pictures can be made of it. It is not so easy to photograph a class learning the beginning of trial by jury in the Roman government, or the early struggles of science against ignorance and bigotry. But it would be mighty important just now if all of our citizens knew well the history of our governmental and scientific progress. They would then be more likely to keep what we have attained.

Vocational education is, moreover, expensive. The small classes that are usually necessary and the expensive machinery add much to the total cost. It is true that the national government bears much of the load, but the expense is there still.

Shall we tear down our vocational schools? Nay, verily. But we must use them purposefully. The great vocational school in Denver has been showing the way for several years. Birmingham's vocational school at Paul Hayne is showing the way—train them as apprentices. There is no lost motion and forgetting skills before a job is found, if it is ever found. How wasteful it is for regular high schools to take the lion's share of a pupil's time during four years, denying him his heritage of cultural knowledge, then dump him out on a glutted labor market as a stenographer, bookkeeper, machinist! Every graduation-time sees hundreds of them walking the streets trying to find work.

Every employer knows that there is much about his business that he would like for his stenographer to know beside shorthand and typing. Would he not be willing to apprentice a girl with a good general education, pay her a small salary for six months or a year while she spends part of the day learning about his business and the rest of the day learning shorthand and typing at the vocational school? It would work likewise in the other vocations. This is what the New York regents recommend. Students can then stay in the general schools until they land an apprenticeship which has some guarantee to lead to a regular job.

How often have we heard employers say, "Send me a graduate who knows how to read and write and think straight; I'll teach him the few details about my business!"

This program is possible at less expense to the school and to the pupil. Its operation would assure less criticism about the failure of our American schools. And the graduates would be better able to adjust themselves in the aesthetic, social and political world around them.

Mania For Education Hits Colored Students Throughout United States

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Enrollment in colored colleges and universities in 1938 shows an increase of 5 per cent over 1937, according to a survey by Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, of Howard University. Dr. Jenkins' report includes the statistics of enrollment of 99 undergraduate institutions and seven graduate schools.

Ninety-nine institutions report a total undergraduate enrollment of 35,438 students as of October 1938. When this figure is corrected by including institutions for which figures for the present year are not available, it appears that approximately 36,400 undergraduate resident students were enrolled in Negro colleges and universities during the fall term 1938-39. This represents an increase of 5 per cent over the previous school year. More women than men are in attendance, the female enrollment constituting 57 per cent of the total.

4,458 GRADUATE

The 32 publicly controlled institutions report an enrollment of 16,138 students and 67 privately controlled institutions an enrollment of 19,302 students. A total of 4,458 graduates from four year courses is reported for the school year 1937-38, an increase of nine per cent over 1936-37. Sixty per cent of the graduates are women.

Seven Negro institutions of higher learning are now offering work leading to the master's degree. During the fall term, 1937-38, these institutions enrolled 478 students, an increase of 20 per cent over the preceding year. These institutions conferred 117 master's degrees during the school year 1937-38. Women students constitute 54 per cent of both the enrollment and the number of graduates.

EXPECT LARGER ENROLLMENT

The largest institution has fewer than 1400 undergraduate students and only four other institutions report a total undergraduate enrollment of more than 1000 students.

In the report, attention is called to the fact that enrollments for the entire year will be much larger than those reported here, since the survey covers only enrollment during the first semester of the 1938-39 school year. Further, approximately 3000 Negro students attend northern colleges and universities whose enrollment includes both whites and Negroes.

Unequaled Educational Opportunity For Negroes Shown By WPA Research Index

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The second volume of Index of Research Projects issued by the Works Progress Administration, in cooperation with the National Resources Committee and State Planning Agencies, includes the situation of the Negro as shown in the educational surveys made by State Planning Agencies in several Southern States.

Many of these research activities have been made possible by the assistance of WPA research projects employing trained white-collar workers taken from the relief rolls.

"The ratio of population to teachers in 1934-35 was 25.5 for white and 29.2 for Negro," the WPA Index reveals in its digest of the report of the Florida School Code Committee. Within the Everglade State the average monthly salaries for Negro teachers during the 1934-35 period was $51.44 a month, as against the monthly salary of $104.14 paid to white teachers.

Surveys in North Carolina completed in 1936 by the Department of Conservation and Development strike a more encouraging note in Negro educational welfare, according to the WPA Index. The number of accredited Negro high schools in the State increased from eleven in 1920, with an enrollment of 1,500 to 120 in 1934-35, with 25,000 enrolled. During the 1920-35 period the enrollment of five institutions of higher learning for Negroes increased from less than 100 to more than 2,000. The State of North Carolina maintains two standard four-year colleges for Negro students, in addition to three normal schools for Negroes, the Index points out.

South Carolina presented a less favorable picture for Negroes in the realm of education. Summarizing the findings of the South Carolina State Department of Education completed in 1937, the Index states:

"Overcrowding was found in 1,417 or 22.5 percent, of the white classrooms, and in 2,209, or 71.8 percent of Negro classrooms. The median age for public school buildings for whites was 14 years; that for Negroes was 16.5 years. Sixty buildings for whites and 204 for Negroes were at least 40 years old. The average number of classrooms per building for whites was five and that for Negroes two. Facilities for school lunches were found in 518 white and 319 Negro Schools. Oil lamps were found in approximately one thousand classrooms. Thirty-seven white and 1,327 Negro schools were using homemade benches, 153 white and 372 Negro schools homemade desks."

The Building Survey Report for the South Carolina State Department of Education also indicates that no heating facilities were found in 99 Negro schools. Steam or hot water heat was reported in 29 percent of white schools and in 45 percent of Negro schools.

The reports of these research projects contain many facts of general interest on the whole school situation. It is clear that in a good many States the educational facilities are inadequate for both white and Negro children. And it is where there are poor provisions for all children that Negro children suffer most from lack of educational opportunity.

An important feature of recent educational history is the construction, repair and modernization of school buildings by the WPA. In the last three years WPA workers have constructed over 2,200 new school buildings and have extensively improved and repaired over 22,000 more throughout the country. The picture given above of South Carolina conditions can be supplemented by the report of the United States Community Appraisal Committee in South Carolina, which says:

"Many who considered our educational future hopeless from the standpoint of physical facilities are now beginning devotely to hope that with Works Progress assistance every child in the State may, at not too distant date, have the opportunity of attending school in a publicly owned building that is comfortable, safe and adequate. To this end much has been done in the past two and a half years, but much remains to be done — particularly among Negro schools."

In addition to listing and summarizing the educational situation of the Negro in various States, the Index is a guide to information about the conditions of the Negro contained in the Planning Agency Project reports on health, institutional care, housing, farm management, population and migration, social problems and crime. In most instances the WPA Index points to the Negro as an integral part of the important problems awaiting social and legislative solution in the South.

OTHER PAPERS SAY—

INDICTMENT OF NEGRO EDUCATION
(From The Washington Tribune)

"Unfortunately there has been little or no original thinking in Negro education since the days of the famous Tuskegean."

These words from the pen of Kelly Miller are an indictment of Negro educators similar to that earlier one to which Carter Woodson devoted a volume, "The Miseducation of the Negro."

Both based their charges upon the findings familiar to the average high school graduate—the disparity between the educational program and the life into which he is graduated.

It was with this in mind that the Washington Tribune published an editorial in February, "Why the Diamond Jubilee?" The mere fact that Negroes in the District had received public schooling for seventy-five years hardly merited that elaborate and long-drawn-out celebration. As one teacher aptly put it, there may have been cause to celebrate seventy-five years ago. But today in consideration of the shortcomings of the system and its product we found nothing to warrant jubilation.

The celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the establishment of public schools for Negroes in the District ended in a financial deficit for which some teachers suffered a seventy-cent tax.

There is, however, a greater deficit which only the school officers themselves can make up. A new course must be charted. The task is theirs. The inadequacy of education is a national problem. But reform or improvement must be effected locally.

The first step should insure proper disciplinary control in the classroom and the thoroughness of instruction now woefully lacking.

Without the formation of some constructive program for specific improvement, no matter how limited its scope, the Diamond Jubilee has been in vain.

Education a Means to An End

The next few days will find thousands of Negro boys and girls emerging from high school and college, and it is to them the Black Dispatch desires to talk. We fear that far too many of this number will wander out into life with the wrong conception of what they have achieved, and what they possess. In other words we feel that a vast number of this group will start out from the classroom under the faulty assumption that what they have received in the classroom is an end within itself. Formal training received in schools and colleges is a means towards an end, and unless this philosophy and outlook is transmitted to students they are embarking upon the sea of life illusioned.

Schools offer short cuts to knowledge. Thousands of people of renown who never saw a college have reached higher intellectual levels than the average university graduate. If this were more generally known it would perhaps take the stiffening out of the back of many people who falsely assume that the ability to talk well positively identifies one as being well educated, or perhaps a dignified poise and a well chosen taste for fine clothing is coincident with brains.

Some one has said that education is that influence which brings to the fore the best that is within us. Another suggests that education prepares us for complete living, and teaches us comprehension of real values.

Dr. George Washington Carver, the famed scientist at Tuskegee, says that education is understanding relations. In other words, one's capacity and ability to comprehend the related value which one thing sustains to another, evidences to Dr. Carver the actual cultural norm one has obtained or achieved.

All of the above definitions of education, in the judgment of the Black Dispatch enter into that composite something which identifies a developing process in the individual. Justification for existence rests first in personal discipline and secondly in making of one's self a useful unit in the social order where he finds himself.

The individual should first develop ethical and moral standards. By this yardstick, one of the fundamental props to our actual education depends upon the training in the home. Envy, spite, hate and prejudice are forms of ignorance. A man's first expression of intelligence and education is shown in his behavior. Education is that something which restrains people from accesses and intemperance. The man who has fully and completely disciplined himself will lead a normal life. It is entirely impossible to develop this sort of restraint outside of the school room, and the young boys and girls who are budding into womanhood should observe the control their parents have over their habits and daily living. We talked with a young man recently who said he could not stop smoking, although it was undermining his health. The young man a little later started talking about what he wanted to do in life. He wanted, he said, to be a great leader of men, but it apparently never occurred to him that during the course of human existence our first evidence of real leadership rests in our ability to control ourselves.

The most pitable person in the world is the young person who stands about and says "I can't resist this temptation or that." It doesn't make much difference what school you come from or how many letters are hung behind your name, if you have lost control of yourself in youth, you are no more in actuality than the driftwood sweeping downstream at flood tide. Education first of all will teach you how to control yourself.

After one has learned to control himself he is ready to approach the other problems of life, which Dr. Carver refers to when he discusses related values. Let us take the student back again to father and mother. Perhaps you laugh sometimes at your parents' inability to speak good English. They stumble over their words, and do many other things which you considers quaint and out-of-date. But that same father and mother, who you feel embarrasses you at times, has, without formal training in the school room developed enough knowledge regarding effective living and related values to provide the home in which you live, the clothes you wear, and the opportunity you have had to attend school.

Now, the young man or woman leaving school this week, who has not learned something about the methods his father and mother have acquired regarding sustained existence, is ignorant as compared to his parents. Even the lower animals learn how to feed and shelter themselves. It is therefore of primary importance that in the school room we learn about the fundamental economy of life—food, clothing and shelter.

The Black Dispatch believes that in every community one may find the picture we desire to draw for students coming from high school and college. Think for a moment: Do you not know some man in your community who has a lot of titles tied to his name, but who, so long as you have known him, has been as poor as a church mouse? Do you not know also in your town some man practically illiterate, but whose home is a model, who always has money and gets alone well.

The man with the titles can talk well, but he does not do well. The unlettered man has the capacity to comprehend related values in his community. Study well the two individuals we have described above. Usually the fellow who has the false notion about education has allowed himself to become haughty and vain. He thinks what he received in the school room is an end within itself, so he withdraws himself from his community, and like the church mouse, lives to himself alone.

But the other fellow is first of all an ideal social creature. People seek his companionship, because even though illiterate he knows that success in life is vested in making oneself a center; in being a centripital force, rather than a centrifugal influence. That old fellow you laugh at every day because of his broken English understands the difference between life in the abstract and life in the concrete.

Education then, is that something which gives direction and objectivity to existence. It clarifies one vision as to the way of life and living. If Negro youth comes this week from the school without knowledge of how, and what to do, to sustain existence, then Negro youth is proportionately ignorant. We say this in full knowledge that the majority of black boys and girls are today looking upon life with the thought that all of the frontiers of opportunity are gone. We realize that many assume because youth of other races are barricaded behind known values, there is no chance for them. Education should teach that the horizon of opportunity is only limited by the mind.

For example one hundred years ago railroad stock was more gilt-edged securty than government bonds. But the mind of man produced the automobile and paved highways, thus confiscating the value in railroads. Today we ride in airships and the moment some individual conquers the law of gravitation, all humanity will ride in the air, and we will abandon highways and automobiles.

The Negro boy and girl who leaves school with a job complex is in a measure poorly educated. Why should someone else make a job for you? Why should you not go out in life and make a job for someone else? Why can you not make two blades of grass grow where one grew before?

Finally, in the last analysis education is that something which teaches man to work. No man or race can reach idealistic heights without great labor. Education is self-discipline, it is patience, perseverance and the will to struggle; it is knowledge of real values and the vision which clarifies and solves the mysteries of life.

EDUCATION - 1939
DISCUSSION

Education: Is It A Luxury Or An Economic Necessity?

"But why educate more Negroes when people are already standing in line trying to get jobs?"

The question was overheard as the audience left the Birmingham-Southern College commencement exercises at which Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, was the principal speaker.

In the course of his address on the future of the South, Mr. Embree had discussed the fuller development of the Negro's economic potentialities as one of the steps to be taken.

The doubt implied in the question quoted above is held by many, not only in its application to the Negro, but to all groups. It arises from surface thinking—an impression that education is a luxury and that a community or state is able to provide opportunities for a fixed number of educated people.

Actually education is a necessity. It is not a racial problem, but a human problem. However, since it is often discussed in its racial aspects it might be well to consider here whether Alabama can "afford" a drastic increase in its educated Negro population.

Suppose for an instant that every Negro within a radius of 50 miles of Birmingham was equipped to produce, or earn, 30 per cent more than he or she is now producing. This would mean that every factory worker was 30 per cent more efficient than he is now. It would mean that every service employe was 30 per cent more efficient in performing his job. It would mean that every Negro school teacher and professional worker was that much better equipped to do his or her job.

In addition it would mean that every cook, maid or nurse was equipped to do her job more effectively. Could Birmingham use more Negro cooks and maids who have a knowledge of sanitation, who know how to prepare better meals more economically, who know more about caring for children?

When we say "earn" 30 per cent more, we do not mean merely receiving that much additional wages, but being worth 30 per cent more to their employers or as independent workers because they are adding that much additional to the world's wealth or contributing it in improved services. Basically, that is the only way the sum total of our wealth is increased—in the producing or processing of additional products or in providing services for those engaged in such tasks.

In considering what it would mean to this district if the approximately 350,000 Negroes within a radius of 50 miles of Birmingham produced 30 per cent more, it is easy to see the important role of education. It is impossible to educate the mass without preparing leaders in college.

Education should fit the individual not only to be of more service to himself, but of greater service to society. Unless it does the latter, it is not education. Furthermore, every man is either an economic liability or he is an economic asset—regardless of his race, creed or color.

Education should develop imagination and initiative. It should be preparing men and women to use our human and natural resources more effectively. The educated man does not become a drone in society. Consider any one of scores of Alabama industrialists who were educated in the state and have provided employment opportunities for others. They represent investments on the part of the public.

There is one plot of ground in Alabama which is less than six acres, but which today provides a livelihood for 238 people who are engaged directly in growing, processing and selling the products from that ground. Elsewhere in Alabama there are thousands of families who are living in poverty on 40 acres of land which is basically just as rich as the six acres.

In Mobile County, some of the most successful and largest nurseries are owned by Japanese. They are adding to the wealth of Alabama. From Baldwin County, several hundred thousand dollars worth of gladioli are shipped annually to Eastern and Midwestern cities.

Ability and imagination can utilize resources available in Alabama which otherwise would be worthless, or nearly so. Formal education is society's most effective technique for developing ability and imagination. As such, it is not a luxury but a necessity, regardless of race.

THE FUTURE OF OUR GRADUATES

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES throughout the country are having their graduation exercises and many Negroes are numbered among those who will receive diplomas or degrees. Some will specialize and take post-graduate work in some profession but the greater number will be seeking employment as teachers, clerks, bookkeepers, social service workers, etc.

Disappointment awaits many for despite the optimism of the New Deal, opportunity for the youth has not increased during the past decade. Their greatest opportunity, it seems to us, is in the Civil Service where bureauracy has increased the number of jobs ten-fold. A few racial insurance companies and newspapers will be able to absorb some but otherwise our own group will be unable to do very little for them.

In all large centers of Negro population little encouragement is offered them to enter business for themselves. Negroes eat and sleep and wear clothes and do all the things that other racial groups do, but these necessary services are supplied for them by others. There is a crying need for more race consciousness in these large centers and pioneers in the field of business among our group.

Is it not time for us to give serious thought to the fact that largely the solving of our own economic problems are up to us? Pride, confidence and a belief in our own capacity are essential elements. Spending millions with other races, without developing something of our own along the same lines, is a reflection on our own intelligence.

The press, the church and fraternal organizations should unite to provide a better place for our youth coming out of schools today. A living program is more essential with the young than a dying program.

BETTER NEGRO SCHOOLS GIVEN

Five States Improve Facilities For Higher Education

ATLANTA, May 25 (AP) — The Commission on Interracial Cooperation was informed today the Gaines decision had prompted five states to take steps looking to the improvement of their facilities for higher education for negroes.

In the Gaines decision, the Supreme court last December held in effect that, unless a state provided equal opportunities for graduate and professional work in separate schools, a negro student had a right to attend a state university.

Reporting on a study he had made, Dr. Arthur Raper, director of research, told the commission at its annual meeting:

"In response to this decision, the North Carolina Legislature has just arranged to begin graduate work for negroes at the Negro State Teachers College at Durham, and at the Negro Agricultural and Technological College at Greensboro. The graduate faculties of the University of North Carolina and Duke University will assist in this work. xxx

"In Missouri, where the Gaines decision was handed down, the Legislature recently voted an expenditure of $200,000 to Lincoln university, the negro state school; in South Carolina, the Legislature has discussed the establishment of a 'chair of law' in the negro state college; while in Tennessee and Kentucky, official committees have been named to study the situation and make recommendations to the state legislatures."

Outlining the situation at the time of the decision, Dr. Raper said "nearly half of the negro students in the United States pursuing graduate work are in Southern graduate schools, largest of which are Howard, Atlanta and Fisk universities, and Mecharry medical school in Nashville."

"During this scholastic year," he continued, "some negro graduate work is also being offered at the negro land-grant colleges of Virginia and Texas, while Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia, through legislative action, have provided scholarship aid to negro students to pursue graduate work in universities outside of these states.

"No graduate school or scholarship aid are available in Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and the Carolinas. But in North Carolina and Georgia, recognized committees have studied the situation, and have recommended scholarship aid."

Question for Educators

The prevailing opinion among white men is that their race is superior to the negro race, that white men are decidedly more capable than negroes. The News and Courier shares in that opinion, however it is not so unintelligent as to deny that there are negroes of exceptional abilities and attainments.

With this in mind The News and Courier is puzzled by a recent statement of Mr. Pinckney, the director of the WPA for South Carolina. He said, we believe, that of 47,000 persons on WPA work rolls were about 30,000 whites and about 17,000 negroes.

By the last census the whites in the state were 944,000 and the negroes were 793,000. Thus it appears that the ratio of whites to negroes depending on government for help was about three to two.

How about that? Why are fewer negroes than whites, in proportion to numbers, on relief?

The question should interest and concern our educators, Always the whites have enjoyed incomparably better schools than the negroes have been given. The people are mighty proud of the white schools. The negro schools and colleges have been starved—there is no doubt about that. Yet the educators have before them the disconcerting fact that a much larger proportion of the negroes than of the whites in South Carolina are taking care of themselves.

What does this indicate as to the results of ~~white school and college~~ education? To answer that the whites are shrewder, more adept, in getting on relief rolls would be to find the most damning verdict against the white schools and colleges that one could think of.

Surely it will not be said that getting on relief rolls is an aim of white education in South Carolina.

Liberal Arts Course at A. and T. College Should Be Retained To Serve Double Purpose, Correspondent Feels

Editor, Journal and Guide: We note that the question of changes in the curriculum of A. and T. College, Greensboro, N. C. removing the arts and sciences from that institution, has been referred to a sub-committee to "confer with educators on the feasibility of the change." But after all, the question should be referred to the patrons and friends whose support and sacrifices have made it the largest Negro institution in this commonwealth.

Excerpts from the annual report of Dr. F. D. Bluford as published in your last issue, clearly discloses the reasons underlying this suggested change; and an intelligent public should refuse to be hoodwinked in this matter. I would not have sent my son to A. and T. to learn to lay brick only, for I wanted him to be college-trained.

Some years ago there were any number of parochial and eleemosynary schools of high school level in North Carolina giving trades. The state absorbed most of these with its support on certain requirements for accreditment and most of the technical features were lost. Because of a student's inability to get trade work in high school it is an advantage if one can get this training while advancing in the field of higher education.

This can be done now at A. and T. which more than compensates for any form of duplication, for with limited opportunities, every Negro finishing college should have some form of manual training.

Several hundred parents, perhaps like me, await anxiously the report of that sub-committee praying that its report will permit A. and T. to continue giving its double service. Instead of such a course as suggested helping some other North Carolina College, it probably would send hundreds of students out of the state to school offering this same advantage. A. and T. is not duplicated in North Carolina.

DR. SHEPARD AND HIS N. C. COLLEGE

The North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham will, this fall, inaugurate graduate courses in its liberal arts division. Duke university and the University of North Carolina are jointly cooperating in the development of this new phase.

The enlargement of the educational service of the institution was made possible by an act of the North Carolina legislature. This must be very gratifying to Dr. James E. Shepard, president of the college, who fought for years to get adequate financial support from his state legislature. For twenty years his plea for state funds commensurate with the needs of his college was given no appreciable consideration. The opposition to his program was strengthened by the clandestine demarche of jealous administrators of institutions whose academic program was at variance with their claim and charter.
